Now, about that Rhode Island game. If you haven't already heard, it wasn't much of a contest. The Minutemen got on the board first and never did trail although the Rams made a comeback attempt after UMass had taken a 14-0 lead in the first half.

What the first half amounted to, scoring-wise, was Paul Metallo running the ball over for six points from different distances. Metallo scored the first three UMass touchdowns and had a fourth, a beautiful 55 yard run with a screen pass called back because of a clip. The three TD's gave Metallo ten on the season. He's far and away the team leader in scoring with 60 points.

The URI score came on a Paul Ryan to Danny Weed TD pass in the second quarter and which cut the lead to just one touchdown. But Peil Pennington engineered a classic "two-minute offense" at the end of the half to put the Minutemen back in command, 21-7.

Ryan, the Rhode Island quarterback, is a sophomore from Haverhill who made his first varsity start against the Minutemen. He was starting in place of Kim Purcell, the regular Ram quarterback, who hadn't been playing very well in previous games. Purcell never did get into the game.

The second half belonged to people not used to getting their name in print.

Tim Berra, who played very well, scored his first touchdown of the season on a pass from Pennington early in the third period.

Jim Mahaney swept in from the eight with his first TD, also in the third quarter.

And Ed Hajdusek scored his second touchdown of the year in the fourth period as he ran over about three URI defenders after taking a Mark Tripucka pass.

The UMass offense wasn't as spectacular as against BU, but it was just as effective. The option play was used twice, once the conventional Metallo to Berra route, and it worked, making Metallo five for six in the passing department on the season. The other option fell into the "variation of the week" category. This one was from flanker Berra to split end Steve Schubert. It was incomplete.

The UMass defense kept up its record of not allowing a point in the fourth quarter this season, and combined with the special teams to keep

So, it's UMass vs. UConn at Alumni Stadium Saturday for the Yankee Conference title. It will also be for first place in the all-time YanCon football standings. As of today UMass has a slim lead over the Huskies with an all-time record of 64-33-4, while UConn stands at 63-33-8.

UMASS FLANKER TIM PERRA is on the receiving end of a 23 yard scoring toss from QB Peil Pennington. The score came with 2 minutes left in the third period and put the game out of reach, 28-7, at the time. (MDC Photo by Kenny Sulin)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Marty Kelley

The Discipline of Football

Yankee Peddler Motor Lodge, Kingston, R.I.—When you stop and think about academic disciplines, what usually comes to mind are the likes of sociology, psychology, maybe some chemistry, and what not...But have you ever thought about considering college football as such. Well about the time thoughts of a pivotal football game should be running through my head, I didn't take the time to worry about the contest that was some thirty miles and fourteen hours away. Instead a wise old professor of football convinced me to take a broader stand on the academics of the art of college football.

The professor was coach Bob Lord. In his diversified career, he's been a faculty man as well as a head football coach. He came to Massachusetts as a successor to Ken Conaster and his duties no longer were grouped with administration, but now Professor Lord was in charge of the likes of Clarence Brooks, Tom Mullen, Kevin Moran, Bruce Pinto, Dennis Cunningham, John Hawkins and the rest of the offensive line. Those were his pupils now.

And as the coach and I spent a leisurely hour late at the Yankee Peddler Motor Lodge in Warwick, I knew there was a lot to the measure of the man and to his devotion to this college football team that he prepare weekly as well as daily for the rigors of the arena.

"Coach," said I rather slowly over a draft, "I'm really scared about tomorrow. I know this one is so pivotal and with it in our pocket there's just no telling how far or where we can go from here." Now you better believe that coaches play them one at a time because I was just about set to discuss my Bowl theories with Coach Lord but he was rather quick to inform me that that's a word we won't associate with UMass football. OK, Coach, I won't talk about it NOW.

Then the discussion that permeated the beer, his ginger ale and the rather decadent surroundings of the Motor Lounge that resembled a Mafia Convention, turned abruptly to the classroom.

"Marty, football is the one and only one discipline on the campus that has weekly examinations in front of thousands of people, hours of homework that must be done, and more day to day anxiety than any other subject."

Well, Coach, you're right. When you really think about it most football players put in more time and mental energy into their subculture than most of us do in retrospect to any three pass-fail courses that you might have taken.

Well, Coach, if these students are putting in this much time, should they get paid? "I don't think so, but priorities today in college put a lot of pressure on the individual."

And like all gargantuous wrap sessions, they have to come to an end. But my theories on college football were only reinforced by my visit with Coach Lord. It is disciplined. It is precise. School never gets out for the football team.

And it pays off.

And whether you want to measure success in the light that Metallo followed the course you designed for him, or Peil and Steve got six because Pennington read the blitz that you told him was coming, or just maybe the right return policy was the reason why Berra took a punt all the way...Well this is called the beauty of execution and to win you've got to have that and the discipline from those teachers that have one of the toughest classroom assignments on campus.

And the credit that the combatants get by no means is academic. The reward is aesthetic and that spells out the intrinsic joy of being a 5-0 football team.

And your makeup exam is those ever presence of those game films. The next time Kevin Moran tells me that he only got a 93 on his weekly line test, I can only tell him honestly, knowing how disciplined the game is, that it's those seven points that you're going to have to account for when you see those films on Sunday night, admission is free.

Toast The Champion A's

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 33 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1972

TV and movie critic Judith Crist told the audience last night that the arrival of sex in the cinema has had quite an impact. " 'Hump the Hostess' came at us in stereophonic sound," she told them. (MDC Photo by Al Jagoda)

Thieu Wants Ceasefire Throughout Indochina

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that Hanoi has requested a cease-fire and one could come soon, but he stood firm on his demand that any truce must cover all Indochina and be internationally guaranteed.

Thieu also rejected a tripartite coalition government for South Vietnam, as proposed by the Communists. He said his country's political future could be negotiated only between Saigon and the Communist-led National Liberation Front, known as the Viet Cong, based on free elections.

"There may be a cease-fire in the near future because the Communists have requested it." he told his countrymen in a broadcast. "They agree to it, and even beg for it, because they are weak militarily."

He said the Communists had implored the United States for a cease-fire agreement in order to keep territory they have recently captured.

Thieu asserted the North Vietnamese want the cease-fire ahead of the Nov. 7 presidential election because President Nixon might be tougher to deal with if re-elected.

His two-hour national radio and television speech shed some light on his five days of intensive talks with Henry A. Kissinger.

It coincided with the disclosure that the United States had cut back on its bombing of North Vietnam in what sources called "a sign of good will." Thieu, who has steadfastly opposed a bombing reduction, did not comment on this.

He said his talks with Kissinger had been exploratory and that no formal agreements had been reached. At another point he called them "very clear and useful discussions."

In Washington, White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler claimed "some progress has been made at achieving a negotiated settlement of the Vietnam conflict." He spoke after Kissinger had briefed Nixon on the meetings with Thieu.

Thieu's speech, typically not announced in advance, was essentially a reiteration of his long-standing positions on a cease-fire and political solution, and contained these major points:

The Communist peace proposals are "dark schemes aimed at taking over Vietnam."

The 1954 Geneva records, which provided for international supervision of the truce, should be used by both sides as the basis for an agreement.

Any cease-fire acceptable to Saigon must encompass all Indochina, including Cambodia and Laos, and must be guaranteed internationally. The North Vietnamese must pull all troops and equipment back to North Vietnam.

A tripartite government consisting of Saigon, the Viet Cong and a third neutral element is unacceptable.

He said a political solution, based on free elections, can be worked out only by the South Vietnamese government and the Viet Cong.

South Vietnam will not be forced into any agreement which it does not want.

Break The Movie Syndrome -Judith Crist

By MARK VOGLER

Citing the movie audience as "just people on the receiving end who are sitting and swallowing", television and movie critic Judith Crist urged people to "break the movie syndrome and start making their own decisions instead of relying on the critic."

Ms. Crist conveyed this message to the 200 people who attended her Distinguished Visitors Program lecture last night in the Student Union Ballroom. Her topic of discussion was "Every Man His Own Critic."

"We've seem to have gone film nutty in recent years," Ms. Crist told the audience. "We've taken movies too seriously and have tried to conform in our own film tastes.

"We've gone from the TV syndrome, where we sit and say 'Give me my culture' to the age of the movie critic, where we meet a new breed and say 'tell me what I'm supposed to think of my culture."

Ms. Crist said that just as this has become the age of film, it has also become the age of the critic. She argued that as the movies have reached an age of respectability, the critics have achieved a power which is ill deserved.

"What has happened in the last 30 years to bring movies to the height of something called respectability, has been something called TV. It took over as the mass entertainer.

"Instead of going out to the movies, one now sits at home and turns on the nob. As a result, movies have had to become something else. We have tended to think of them as something ultra special."

The guest speaker remarked that the appearance of sex on the screen didn't occur until 1960, but when it did, it was a boom to the film industry.

According to Ms. Crist, "We began to see two people in bed with each other. Even more extraordinary than that, they didn't have clothes on, which naturally blew our minds.

"'Hump the Hostess' came at us in sterephonic sound. The illusion that everybody had of Mr. Hardy reaching over the partition to shake hands with his wife in another bed, was exposed.

"It was not so much a technical advancement that upgraded movies, but rather 'let us give sex and violence in place of something that we can't get at home and for free."

Ms. Crist said that because modern movies are so intimate, we as viewers are less articulate about our own actions and judgements concerning their quality.

"When you come out of a theatre after seeing a movie that most people are praising, are you going to be the one who says 'This is the most utter piece of trash that I've ever seen'?

"Indeed not. We're going along with what the group thinks. And we are, in effect, apologizing for what we didn't get."

Ms. Crist discussed the problem of the audience relying too heavily on the critic. She said that most critics see themselves as "the embodiment of the only living truth." Her solution to this was "you have to become your own critic."

"Articulation has to become more universal," Ms. Crist continued. Movies are the only products that you buy and approve of before you've seen or have tested it."

Ms. Crist cautioned the audience to the fact that film makers do not care about the tastes of the people who pay admission to see the movies.

"They don't know whether you had the time of your life. They don't care whether you threw up. They don't care whether you left in the middle of the film.

"Because you all voted in favor of it, there'll be another one just like it. There will be seven more "Godfathers" before they're through with "Godfather II."

"This is an election year. But there is an election time every time you go to the movies. Think about that. Because we are sheep, everybody goes to see "The Godfather".

In the question and answer period that followed, Ms. Crist stated that she handles all reviews for various publications in the same manner.

"I'd be dishonest if I did treat TV guide readers any different than New York Magazine readers."

The renoun American movie critic said many of the letters she receives in regard to a harsh critique of a sexy movie come from "old ladies in tennis shoes who thank me for standing up against obsenity."

Then she asks "Where are all the people who do not think that the sight of a naked breast is not going to pervert their children's senses for life? Those people are the silent majority."

Asked as to how the battle between TV and the media is going to be decided, Ms. Crist responded: "The ultimate battle could be prognosticated if anybody knew why people go to the movies."

"In large, people go to the movies because it's somewhere to go, it's an escape, it's a means of getting out of the house. That's why they don't even read the marquee. They don't have to like it."

On The Inside:

•CASIAC Expands

see page two

•Bitch Day

see page three

•Peace Talks Progress

see page four

If your roommate is complaining about the smell of your feet, perhaps this is the best solution? (MDC Photo by Al Jagoda)

Birth Control Booklets Available

By SUSAN HUBBARD

Birth control handbooks were made available to students this week by the Women's Committee of the Student Senate. Approximately 50 booklets were placed in the lounge of each dorm and copies are still available in the Campus Center and Student Union, next to the Collegian newstands.

Other projects upon which the committee is currently working include setting up Women's centers in the various residential areas on campus, publishing a Women's directory, compiling an original birth control handbook, and raising funds for the legal defense of a suit against the California Feminist Women's Health Center.

Chairperson of the Women's Committee, Mari Earnest, commented that the recently distributed handbooks were the same ones that were given out last year, with some revisions. Committee members decided over the summer that this booklet, which is published in Canada, was the best available and funds were provided for the purchase of the handbooks by SATF (Student Activities Tax).

It was hoped that the recent booklet distribution would reach freshmen and transfer students who had not previously received copies. An insert informing students of the Health Services program at UMass was also contained in the handbook.

Concerning other committee projects, Women's centers have been set up in Southwest and Orchard Hill, with plans being made for other such centers in Central and Northeast. A special center for commuters is being looked into. The purpose of these centers is to disperse information to as large a segment of the female community as possible and aid in the coordination of Women's activities.

A comprehensive list of women who are active in the Women's movement locally, is another project which the committee has undertaken. This type of directory would serve as a guide enabling a student to contact the proper persons for any specific problem or information.

Formed from members of the Senate Women's Committee, a special subcommittee is also working on the accumulation of material for a new birth control handbook to be published at UMass. "We hope that such a booklet could be distributed at registration, next fall," stated Chairperson Earnest.

Bitch Day Schedule

The following is a list of administrative representatives and the times they will be available at the "Bitch Day" tables to answer students' questions. The tables will be set up on the Concourse level of the Campus Center today from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

FOOD SERVICES
Marie Cappadona, Marketing	10 a.m. to 12 p.m.
Arthur Warren, Assistant Director	12 p.m. to 2 p.m.
Joel Stoneham, Director	2 p.m. to 4 p.m.
ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES
Thomas Campion, Vice Chancellor	11 a.m. to 12 p.m.
George Norton, Physical Plant	afternoon
CAMPUS CENTER
Richard Darris, Management	10 a.m. on ATHLETIC DEPT.
Francis McInerney, Director	11 a.m. on
OMBUDSMAN
Jay Saveriid, Ombudsman	10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
Michael West, Assistant to the Dean	1 p.m. to 2 p.m.
PARKING OFFICE
Pat Suprenant, Staff	1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.
HOUSING
Robert Campbell	10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Ed Pacosha, Business Manager	10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Glenn Edwards, Business Manager	10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
COMMUTER PROBLEMS
Tom Merluzzi, Commuter Assembly	2:15 3:15 p.m.
Paul Doran, Commuter Assembly	12 p.m. to 1 p.m.
WOMEN'S COMMITTEE
Mari Earnest, Chairwoman	1:30 2:30 p.m.
STUDENT MATTERS COMMITTEE
Elliot Sherman, Chairman	afternoon

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

CASIAC Expanding Service

By AVIS YUNI

In its attempt to help the University students in as many ways as possible, CASIAC (College of Arts and Sciences Information Advising Council) is trying to establish a hotline and faculty advisors in the dorms at night.

CASIAC, located at E20 Machmer Hall, is trying to establish a hot-line; to sort of staff the office on a 24 hour basis, stated Assistant Dean George Sulzner, so that students could call in and have their questions answered whenever they wished. However, this idea is still in the air, he said.

Starting in November there is going to be a faculty advisor in the Academic Affairs Office of John Quincy Adams in Southwest Monday through Thursday, 7:30-9:30 p.m. There will also be an advisor in Cashin in Sylvan and in Orchard Hill one night a week. Arrangements still need to be made for advisors in Northeast and Central, however.

CASIAC already offers numerous services to students from 9:00-4:30, Monday through Friday. There are 13 faculty members, 5 Deans and student counselors who work to advise the students in the various areas. Regular academic advising is offered and advising for people who have not yet chosen a departmental major. The Deans in the office handle academic matters such as the addition and dropping of courses, petitions for exemptions to requirements, and interviews for people withdrawing from or applying for admission.

There is a counselling given for special programs. While help can be sought at any time, special times have been set up for advising in these areas. They are Pre-Law every morning until noon, Pre-Medical Tuesdays 1:00-3:00, Pre-Nursing Tuesdays 10:00-12:00 and Fridays 9:00-11:00, and Pre-Social Work Thursday 1:30-3:00.

CASIAC handles the counseling for large sections of the student body. They are responsible for counseling swing-shifters and veterans (special times - Mondays and Tuesdays 1:00-3:00 have been set aside in addition to regular hours). Freshmen entering the College of Arts and Sciences receive summer counseling and mid-year counseing from CASIAC. They also co-ordinate the advising for transfer students.

Besides this, CASIAC runs a tutorial service for those who wish it. Student counselors are trained by them to give academic advise in the residential dorms. They sponsor freshmen seminar courses, and have prepared a majors offered and their requirements for undergraduates and can be obtained free of charge in the E20 Machmer office.

During the November 13th-17th dates set aside for advising students in their selection of courses for next Semester, there will be 15 undergraduate advisors in the office as well as faculty members.

Assistant Dean Sulzner stated that they are having a teaching associate assigned to the office who would research where UMass graduates go after leaving college, the sort of jobs they get, etc.

The Deans associated with CASIAC are involved in committees around campus and in social services according to Sulzner. They meet bi-weekly with Associate and Asst. Deans of the other schools within the University to discuss such matters as to how better communicate with the students.

CASIAC, Sulzner stated, in a sense evaluates current policies and makes recommendations on them if they feel they should be changed. "We do try to evaluate policies and practices and try to improve them. We also try to cut down the red tape and allow students to explore various paths with degrees," he stated, and related that CASIAC has the intervening authority to cut through red tape.

"We would like to move more away from a policeman roll to a counseling one," Sulzner stated and he believes the other Deans feel the same way. He said that CASIAC members want to talk with the students about their future, their goals and orientations. They are trying to produce an environment which will encourage students to come and talk, and to co-ordinate their counseling with the advising given in other departments and programs.

The Ass't Dean said that CASIAC had a fairly close coperation with the Counseling Center and the Mental Health Service. If they see that the academic problems a student comes in with are tied in with are tied in with his health and other such problems CASIAC can try to refer him to these organizations for help.

Usually, stated Ass't Dean Sulzner, academic problems are not related to academic possibilities but to health and such. "Most students in the University have a capacity to graduate."

The fact that students don't know about CASIAC and don't contact them is what Asst. Dean Sulzner feels is wrong. He feels that not enough students are using the services so they're now trying to take them to the dorms where the students are.

A.A. Group Starting on Campus

By MDC STAFF

A group of students who have experienced problems with alcoholism in the past are starting a young people's Alcoholics Anonymous Group on campus this week.

Named the Campus Center A.A. Group, it will meet Thursdays at 8:00 p.m. in Rooms 811-815 Campus Center. The office of Attorney for Students Richard Howland states that this service is a response by students and professionals: members of A.A.

All students and members of the University community are invited to attend any meeting whether or not they feel that they have a particular problem with alcohol; or if they know someone who has.

Alcoholics Anonymous is an organization that addresses the problems of alcohol for alcoholics. Its members are alcoholics that seek to deal with their illness by sharing their problems and their help with each other. There are no requirements for attendance or membership except, perhaps, the pursuit of help. No questions are asked of any person; no dues are required although a quarter is usually contributed to defray the cost of coffee and doughnuts.

Persons who are interested in learning more about this group or Alcoholics Anonymous may attend this meeting or may call Room To Move (5-0400).

All inquiries and meetings are treated confidentially and absolutely anonymously.

Landlord Closes Bar, Opens Church

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla (AP) - The tables down at Smitty's where the old-timers dwelt are on their way out. The beer-stained bar will soon be replaced bv an altar.

On Dec. 1, Smitty's Riverside Bar, long a favorite haunt of beer drinkers, will become a haven of another sort-the Jerusalem Baptist Temple

The transformation might disturb some of Smitty's old regulars, now cur off from their place of gossip, solace and familar recollections, but it doesn't bother the Rev. Oscar Garcis that his new church was once a bar.

"I like the idea, turning things upside down," says the Rev. Mr. Garcia, a Bay of Pigs veteran who was among the prisoners President Kennedy paid $50,000 to have released from a Fidel Castro jail.

Betty Smith, a Fort Lauderdale widow who ran the bar for 12 years, says it was "a quiet place where the elderly could come and havsa drink of beer or wine in peace."

Mrs. Smith closed the bar Sept. 1 after owner Hortensio Delgado refused to renew her lease.

Delgado's wife saidher husband decided to turn the bar into a church after he met the Rev. Mr. Garcia and "the divine lightning" struck him.

The rev. Mr. Garcia, 47, says he discovered religion while in a Cuban jail when another prisoner gave him a copy of the New Testament.

BOSTON in less than ... 2 hrs.
Special weekend buses direct to and from the campus and Boston take only 1 hr. & 55 mins. That's convenience.
Peter Pan
STUDENT UNION BUILDING
Tel. 545-2084 or 548-2328

High Ed. Board Recommends Law Center Cut From Budget

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

The proposed law center was delivered a severe jolt when the Board of Higher Education recommended that the necessary appropriation be struck from the UMass requested fiscal 1974 budget.

Board Chancellor Patrick McCarthy reported yesterday that the board Friday recommended a "hold the line policy on scholarship aid" meaning only increases consistent with increases in tuition would be recommended. He said the board recommended a total of $5 million in cuts.

McCarthy said the board will seek funds from a private foundation in order to make an objective study of the impact and appropriateness of the proposed law center. He said to appropriate the necessary $120,000 for studying purposes at this time would have involved the commitment of the state on a long-range basis.

A UMass committee reported that the center would have an enrollment of about 600 and a budget of $2-3 million when it reaches full size in its ninth operating year.

UMass had requested a $3.9 million increase in scholarship aid, but McCarthy said only increases consistent with tuition increases would be recommended "until the full implication of the 1972 Higher Education Amendment and their provisions for federally-supported student financial aid are better understood." He said the board threw its full support behind programs of financial aid for disadvantaged students.

More gains, he said, should be made in the future in regards to financial aid on a statewide basis, but they should be more in tune with the national scene.

Another request turned down by the board was an attempt by the UMass Amherst campus to transfer fifteen Continuing Education positions to state support.

The chancellor said the transfer was not recommended because it also has long run policy implications which are as yet unresolved. The positions are presently funded by the participants that take part in the continuing Ed program.

McCarthy said in a telephone interview that the board will make its recommendations to Gov. Francis W. Sargent Nov. 1 and to the legislature on Nov. 22.

"The board made a rigorous review of the budget," he said and decided that the budget was a "bare bones budget that should not be cut further."

Frank Philips, UMass vice-president of financial affairs, said the university has asked state Educational Affairs Secretary Joseph M. Cronin to arrange final review hearings on the budget in such a manner that the process would be wrapped up in one set of hearings. He said he expects these hearings to get underway in early November.

UMass is basing its request for a $26 million or 37 per cent increase over this year's appropriation ($72 million) on the opening of the new campus at Columbia Point, the move into the Basic and Clinical Science Building and steam plant at the UMass Worcester campus and the first graduating class of the medical school.

The university is planning also for a seven per cent jump in enrollment at its three campuses: 860 additional students at Amherst, 1,000 at Boston and 40 at Worcester.

Bitch Today At Campus Center

(Editors Note: See Bitch Day Schedule On Page 2)

The Day of Wrath, popularly known as Bitch Day, will take place tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Concourse level of the Campus Center.

Students will be given the opportunity to air their complaints and offer their suggestions to representatives from the "upper echelons" of various UMass offices and organizations. Bitch Day is sponsored by the Student Senate Services Committee.

According to Robert McGrath, Services Committee chairman, Bitch Day is a constructive way of permitting students (1) to "bitch" about just about anything on campus and (2) to make proposals for improving University services and programs.

McGrath believes that a collective student response can successfully effect change. "When a student in the past confronted the administration, he was often told that he was the only one complaining," he said.

Groups to be represented at the Bitch Day proceedings include: the Administration, Food Services, the Parking Office, Housing, the Physical Plant, the Campus Center, the Ombudsman's office and Athletics.

A representative of the Commuters Assembly will also appear. The commuter budget for this year is $15,000, and suggestions on how to spend it can be made.

A Women's Committee spokesperson will try to discover problems encountered by the UMass female community and cases of discrimination.

According to McGrath, the complaints will be divided into broad categories, and a priority of complaints will be developed. Each member of the Services Committee will be assisnged an area of specialization and will see to it that a response is made to complaints in that area.

Complaint forms will be easy to fill out, and signature will be strictly voluntary, McGrath said. But students who sign can expect an eventual follow-up letter concerning their complaints.

Smaller problems may be resolved without a delay by direct consultation with the appropriate representative, McGrath added.

Bitch Day has existed for the past two years and will continue to be held every semester. Last year, however, the program was handicapped by a "poor student response" and a bad location, McGrath said. This year he expects a more enthusiastic response from the student body.

Campus Vets Office Expands Services

By A.J. BASTARACHE

If, during the past half-year,, you've been paying close attention to every rumor concerning a raise in funds meted out by the G.I. Bill, you are probably a veteran, or the relative of one. If you are a veteran on the UMass campus, your self-proclaimed most ambitious source of information on veterans' affairs is the Veterans Affairs Office at Whitmore Hall.

This year, funds which would normally pay a Director of Veterans Affairs are unavailable. Direction of the office will be maintained by two co-equal Special Assistants for Veterans Affairs, Frank Cotter and Art Shelley, both undergraduates.

When a Collegian interview was suggested, Cotter and Shelley were enthusiastic and anxious to have an opportunity to publicize the changes the office is experiencing and planning to experience.

Cotter and Shelley mentioned individually that the office previously performed a passive function by being available to process the veterans' paperwork. The two Assistants that now during a period of flux and growth, an expanded personnel force will be able to perform a more active function by researching state and federal laws for available funds, providing counseling opportunities for veterans with special problems, and by personally seeking suggestions by individual veterans and various veterans' groups.

On request, Art Shelley produced a rough draft of twenty programs he is researching to determine practicality. An example of some of those proposals would be a suggested tutorial program. A veteran having scholastic difficulties with a subject could gain Veterans Administration funds to pay a tutor. The tutor could be recruited from a Veterans Job Bank list. In this way, the same funds could aid both veterans receiving and providing tutoring.

Other proposed programs range from special summer orientation programs for vets, on to housing consideration (Cotter mentions that most vets attending college are married, many with children.)

Cotter says the office hopes to hire student veterans through a work/study program in order to offer employment, and because the office needs the manpower.

Art Shelley had worked for approximately two years as a counsellor for disabled veterans at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C. He still has special interest in the problems of handicapped veterans and states that one of his main concerns is "to get more handicapped veterans of the Viet Nam era into the University."

Currently Cotter is concentrating on an effort to gain a visible center of communications in a location less administration-connected than Whitmore Hall, while continuing to have the Whitmore office as its official headquarters. He has suggested a more public, informal site such as a desk in the Commuter's Lounge in the old Student Union.

Cotter and Shelley said that Dianne Hubbard, the office secretary had been performing the bulk of the paperwork duties for the past two years. Ms. Hubbard has been the most visible member of the office, receiving and processing the "eligibility certificate" eafh veteran must hand in after registering in order to receive G.I. Bill payments.

If you are one of the approximate 10% minotiry of UMass undergraduates composed by ex-G.I.'s, the Veterans affairs office at Whitmore is publicizing its concern to hear your problems and suggestions, and to demonstrate its interest and effectiveness. Frank Cotter says "Our office is not an admissions office, or a financial aid office, but we can open doors to these offices. We're aware of exceptions and can advise them."

Industry Jobs Must Double To Abate Unemployment

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - One new manufacturing job will have to be created for every two that now exist, if Massachusetts is to decrease unemployment to a respectable rate of 4 per cent by 1975, House Minority Leader Francis W. Hatch Jr., R—Beverly Farms, said here Tuesday.

Hatch charged a public hearing in front of a group of GOP legislators who were seeking the help of business and labor leaders in order to draft 1973 legislation to restore health to a "floundering state economy."

"We want to know what would cause you to build a new plant, to invest in a new venture, or to rehire people who have have been laid off," Hatch told the assembled businessmen.

Herbert P. Almgren, president of the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce, outlined several proposals, and attacked the state's stringent air pollution regulations. He said the low-sulfur content requirement for fuel oil has increased fuel costs for three Springfield area firms by $800,000 in one year, and hiked their electric power bills by $600,000.

He also criticized the high cost of unemployment compensation that must be borne by employers.

Marden suggested creation of a special legislative commission to study the unemployment compensation problem. He also suggested that all future legislative proposals be accompanied by an economic impact statement, similar to the environmental impact statement now required.

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the Student Special 99¢

Youth Well Spent
WED. NITE
OCT. 25
AT THE BLUEWALL

SWAP

APPLICATIONS DATE HAS BEEN EXTENDED TO FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27

R.S.O. OFFICE

RM. 305

Campus Center

ATTENTION!!

In The Nation And The World

Boggs Still Missing; 3 Sightings Made

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)-Searchers identified as jetsam a patch of debris spotted in the Gulf of Alaska Tuesday near the flight path of a missing plane that carried House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs, another "possible sighting" that turned into a dead end.

"It's the way they've all turned out, and there's been many, many of them," a Coast Guard spokesman said of the latest dead-end lead in the eight-day-old search for Boggs and three others aboard the plane.

The crew of a Coast Guard helicopter reported that "pieces of something" sighted about 30 miles offshore near Yakutat, midway between Anchorage and Juneau, were logs, cardboard boxes and cargo pallets, apparently discarded by a passing ship.

The chopper had been sent to the area late Tuesday after an Air Force C130 reported spotting the debris, part of it orange. The report created momentary excitement because the missing twin-engine plane was white and orange in color.

Searchers have checked out several other reports of wreckage during the hunt, but none of the reports led to the missing plane.

Major John Stocker, search coordinator, said the three possible sightings all were reported within 75 miles of Anchorage. They included a rock slide that could have been touched off by an airplane, a discoloration of a glacier and a flashing red light, he said.

Stocker said officials had followed up more than 40 sightings during the exhaustive search, but none of them gave a clue as to the whereabouts of the twin-engine plane that also carried Rep. Nick Begich, 40, Alaska's lone U.S. representative; Russell Brown, 37, an aide to Begich, and the pilot, Don E. Jonz, 38, of Fairbanks.

Weather cleared along about one-third of the 560-mile search route along Alaska's rugged southeastern coastline, but continued to hamper flights near Juneau.

Searching Tuesday were about 20 aircraft, a reduction of the fleet that ranged to more than 50 planes last week, the Air Force said.

The search fleet included two supersonic RF4C electronic reconnissance jets from Bergstrom Air Force Base, Tex., that were criss-crossing the region taking high-altitude photographs.

In Juneau, the Coast Guard said two cutters and four of its planes would continue combing the southern portion of the search route. However, two other cutters were removed from the search because of "new rescue cases and pressing law enforcement duties," a spokesman said.

British Soldier Shot To Death In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)-A British soldier was shot dead in the Roman Catholic Falls Road district of Belfast Tuesday. The killing raised Northern Ireland's fatality toll to 618 in three years of sectarian strife.

The soldier was struck in the heart by a single bullet as he patrolled the area around Naples Street and Grosvenor Road. No further details of the incident were immediately available. He was the 94th army victim this year.

Earlier police charged two men with the murder of Gordon Harron, a policeman shot in a gun battle in Belfast last week. One of the men, Trevor Harrison, 26, was charged in a hospital where he is recovering from gunshot wounds. The other man, Albert Edward Browne, 38, was charged in court.

Britain's chief administrator for Northern Ireland told the House of Commons in London the government will publish a special report on its recent talks with representatives of Northern Ireland's Protestant-based Unionist party, the moderate Alliance Party and the Northern Ireland Labor party.

Administrator William Whitelaw said the report would set out "the options and basic problems as defined by this conference."

Vietnam Talks Progress

WASHINGTON (AP)-The White House Tuesday reported "some progress" in Vietnam peace efforts but seemed to discourage any notion that the war will end in the next week or two.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler held a news conference shortly after Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, reported for an hour to Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

Kissinger, returning here Tuesday night after six conferences in five days in Saigon with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu had said himself: "We made some progress."

The new note from Ziegler involved a statement by the press secretary to reporters that he would "caution you against excessive speculation."

Both Kissinger's and Ziegler's remarks fitted neatly with a theory that the United States and Hanoi are close to accord on a cease-fire while further back-and-forth talks may be necessary to win Thieu's agreement to a war settlement.

The South Vietnamese president, in a speech to his nation Wednesday, declared no one could impose a settlement on South Vietnam, adding that a cease-fire might soon be declared.

Thieu rejected the idea of a tripartite or coalition government-reportedly a key to a possible agreement negotiated by Kissinger and Hanoi representatives-and spoke of Communist-designed "dark schemes aimed at taking over South Vietnam."

Kissinger remained unavailable to newsmen but, said Ziegler, might emerge Thursday or Friday to brief reporters on late develop-

Ziegler was asked about a question posed during the day by Nixon's Democratic opponent, George McGovern, who speculated aloud at a campaign appearance that Nixon might be preparing to settle the Vietnam war on terms he could have gotten four years ago.

Ziegler said he was aware of this inquiry from the opposition camp but declared, "it's preposterous" to suggest the administration would proceed with intricate and serious negotiations with one eye on the election-season calendar.

SAIGON — KISSINGER LEAVES SAIGON-- Presidential Adviser Henry A. Kissinger, left, shakes hands with Nguyen Phy Duc, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's special adviser, Monday before leaving Saigon for the U.S. Kissinger was winding up five days of meetings in Indochina discussing a possible peace settlement. (AP Wirephoto by Radio from Saigon)

British Pound Drops To All-Time Low

LONDON (AP)-The pound sterling fell to an all-time low against the dollar Tuesday.

It sank sharply under heavy selling pressure in other key foreign exchange markets including Zurich, Paris and New York, and reached its lowest level since World War II in Milan, Italy.

One dealer here called the market "chaotic." Selling was heavy. By midafternoon the pound had dropped more than a cent and a half to $2.37575, which the Bank of England confirmed as a record low.

The pound has been floating down outside fixed exchange rates since June, when it was last set at $2.60. The British government had been expected to return eventually to a new fixed exchange rate of around $2.40.

Dealers attributed the day's drop partly to speculation that the pound may have to be set substantially lower than that.

One report from Germany predicted the rate for the pound could be anywhere between $2.25 and $2.40. Dealers here said selling was particularly strong from Germany. In Frankfurt, however, financial sources called the market "thin" and said the pound was being "talked down."

Other factors prominently mentioned here for the pound's weakness were persistent British inflation and other economic problems and renewed dollar strength from Vietnam peace moves.

In Brief...

Sen. Kennedy's Boat Found

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP)-A hectic search for a sailing boat manned by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., ended Tuesday with the Coast Guard locating the 54-foot boar in a harbor hear here.

All members of the boat were safe and never were in danger, the Coast Guard said.

Pregnant Air Force Woman Granted Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Supreme Court Tuesday granted a hearing to an Air Force woman who faced discharge for having a baby.

The appeal by Capt. Susan Struck, the 28-year-old career officer, could lead to a major ruling by the justices on the rights of military personnel.

Miss Struck became pregnant in Vietnam and gave birth in 1970. The baby girl was given up for adoption. Miss Struck said her Roman Catholic religion prevented an abortion which would have allowed her to remain in the service.

You say you got some musical ability and some time to spare on Halloween? Huh? . . . Well J.O.E. really needs a band or a bunch of people to play at a party for the kids of Westfield Detention Center please call or leave message at J.O.E. RSO 122, 545-0438

Can you think of a better way to spend Halloween?

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.

They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____

(Signature) _____ (Date) _____

Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Thursday	October 19	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	October 25	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	October 26	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

Charges Against Levelle Dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force Tuesday dismissed court-martial charges against Maj. Gen. John D. Lavelle who was relieved of command, demoted and retired after ordering illegal bombing strikes against North Vietnam.

In a brief statement, the Air Force said Secretary Robert Seamans Jr. ordered the charges dismissed "after thorough investigation and review of all facts and material in connection with the matter."

The statement said Lavelle's relief from command of the 7th Air Force in Indochina was sufficient punishment and therefore, "the Air Force plans no further action in this case."

The charges that Lavelle had "willfully disobeyed lawful orders and falsified official documents" were made in a complaint submitted to Seamans by 1st Lt. Delbert R. Terrill Jr., 24, an Air Force Academy graduate.

Terrill filed those charges in June after the Air Force had said it planned no further disciplinary action against the general for the 28 unauthorized bombing raids carried out between Nov. 1971 and last March. Lavelle had told congressional hearings that he falsely reported a strike as "protective reaction" in response to enemy fire.

Most of the latest missions are flown below the 20th Parallel in North Vietnam 80 miles south of Hanoi similar to President Lyndon B. Johnson's partial bombing of North Vietnam usually is affected by monsoon rains at this time of the year, but they said the weather was not severe enough to warrant a 50 per cent curtailment.

In Washington, the Pentagon declined to comment on the report that raids onNorth Vietnam had been curtailed.

There has been no bombing cutback in South Vietnam. Military sources said B52 Stratofortresses are flying saturation strikes to break the Communist command's hold on certain areas before a possible cease fire.

More than 100 of the eight-jet bombers flew 36 missions over enemy-held terrain in the South on Tuesday, the largest number of raids in South Vietnam for any one day of the war. The previous high was 35 strikes on July 28.

The air action coincided with field reports of a stepped-up Viet Cong propaganda effort, countered by an intensified government campaign aimed at showing widespread public support for President Nguyen Van Thieu's opposition to Communist peace proposals.

A document captured in Binh Dinh Province ordered Viet Cong cadre to "prepare for a critical period of transition and make your presence highly visible."

It told agents to stockpile Viet Cong flags, loudspeakers and whitewash to obliterate Saigon government flags painted on walls and houses.

Baseball World Mourns Death Of Jackie Robinson

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Jackie Robinson, silver-haired and nearly blind, died Tuesday from heart disease and was mourned by the baseball world that grudgingly accepted him 25 years ago.

Although a dazzling all-around athlete, Robinson will be remembered as the man who broke the major leagues' racial barrier with the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

The 53-year-old Hall of Famer suffered an early morning attack at his 14-room home in this suburb of New York City.

At 7:10 a.m., he was pronounced dead on arrival at Stamford Hospital.

Robinson's ailments were no secrets - the heart problems which felled him briefly in 1968; the diabetes which had impaired his eyesight.

Still, death came as a shock to those who recalled him as a daring baserunner, clutch hitter and the guy who opened the big league gates to Negroes.

Roy Campanella, a black catcher who followed Robinson to the Dodgers, sat stunned in his wheel chair when told of Robinson's death. Campanella was crippled 14 years ago in an auto accident.

"He was a great man who accomplished so much in his lifetime," said Campanella. "On and off the field, Jackie could do it all. He had to do it all. What more can I say?"

President Nixon said in Washington, "This nation to which he gave so much in his lifetime will miss Jackie Robinson, but his example will continue to inspire us for years to come."

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Robinson was unsurpassed in his contribution to sports. "His entire life was courage. Courage as the black pioneer of the game. Courage as a player. Courage in the way he fought for what he believed."

Robinson, a brilliant football-basketball-track performer at Pasadena Junior College and UCLA, was given his major league chance by the late Branch Rickey, whose front office genius built the Dodgers into a powerhouse.

In 1947, Robinson - with stern advice from Rickey to harness his feelings and not fight back - broke in with Brooklyn as a first baseman and helped lead the Dodgers to the pennant. He was named National League Rookie of the Year.

Robinson's greatness made it a bit easier. He answered taunts and racial slurs from fans and white players with base hits, stolen bases and fielding gems that helped the Dodgers win games.

He played 10 seasons, batting .311 as a five-time All-Star and as the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1949. Six years after his retirement in 1956, Robinson became the first black to be elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

When his baseball career ended, Robinson took a job as vice president of Chock Full O'Nuts, concerning himself mainly with the restaurant chain's minority programs. He became increasingly active in civil rights, community and political activities.

He supported Nixon in the 1960 presidential race and Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964.

It was in 1964 that Robinson left Chock Full O'Nuts to launch his own business career, becoming a founder of the Freedom National Bank in Harlem. He also organized his own insurance firm.

Robinson was born Jan. 31, 1919, in Cairo, Ga. His father deserted the five children and Jackie's mother in 1920 and they moved to Pasadena, Calif.

Although not a scholar, he went to Pasadena Junior College and on to UCLA as a sensational athlete. He averaged 12 yards a carry one season for the Bruin football team and was named All-American. He set a Pacific Coast Conference long jump record and let the league in basketball scoring.

But baseball was to be his lasting game. After playing semipro football with the Los Angeles Bulldogs in 1941 and serving three World War II years as a cavalry lieutenant, Robinson turned to the diamond.

He played one season with the Kansas City Monarchs in the all-black league. Then came the call from Rickey, who wanted to discuss his idea of chopping down the color ine in the majors. He warned of the verbal battering that would come with such an experiment.

Robinson accepted the challege and baseball opened a new chapter that now contains such magic names as Willie Mays, Larry Doby, Roberto Clemente, Bob Gibson and Henry Aaron.

A quarter of a decade since his controversial debut, Robinson was lauded in death by the principals who dominated the baseball world then and now.

TERMPAPERS UNLIMITED, INC.

295 Huntington Ave. Boston, MA 02115

(617) 267-3000

Complete Educational Research!

Most Extensive Reprint Library Anywhere

Research and Reference. Only!

20% DISCOUNT

CELEBRATE HOMECOMING WITH "FLIGHT"

9:00pm - 1:00AM

AT THE TOP of the CAMPUS

DINNER 5:30-9:30 FRI. + SAT.

For U. Mass. Students and their Guests

Judge Releases Newsman

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Newsman Peter Bridge was released from jail Tuesday after serving 21 days for refusing to answer a grand jury's questions about a story he wrote.

Bridge, the first newsman jailed since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled journalists may not withhold information from grand juries, was unconditionally released at 4 p.m. EDT by New Jersey Superior Court Judge James R. Guiliano.

Under the terms of his sentence, Bridge was to be released at the expiration of the term of the Essex County grand jury Wednesday, but said, "Mr. Bridge is released now, so he won't have to stay in jail overnight."

At the same time, Guiliano released a presentment handed up by the grand jury 10 days ago-its findings in an investigation of a dispute involving the Newark Housing Authority.

Bridge said, "It feels very good to be out, but I'd do it again if I had to.

"They didn't yield and I didn't yield," he said. "They won in court, I won in the end; we won in the end."

"They don't seem to believe in freedom of the press," he said of the Essex County prosecutor's office.

Bridge entered the Essex County jail on Oct. 4, after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to overturn his contempt citation. Bridge had written a story last May in the now defunct Evening News of Newark, quoting Housing Authority Commissioner Pearl Beatty as saying she was offered a bribe to influence her vote for the authority's new executive director.

Bridge claimed many of the questions posed by the grand jury in its investigation of the alleged bribe went beyond the scope of his article and would compromise his freedom of speech.

In a presentment handed up at the time of Bridge's release, the grand jury said Bridge's failure to answer the questions hindered the investigation.

Bridge asserted the investigation scrutinized only statements by public officials and articles by reporters. He said no real detective work was done by the prosecutor's office.

CARL ANDERSON'S

RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE

Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013

BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.

WEDNESDAY - Luncheon Special

2 for 1

Open Hot Rib Eye of Heavy Western Beef Sandwich, natural gravy, potato, vegetable, rolls & butter.

$2.50 per couple

Served 11:30 - 2 p.m.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

IS STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER

NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar Included. $3.75

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY NIGHT -

Roast Beef Night

Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar Included. $3.95

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

Democratic Presidential candidate Sen. George McGovern expresses his views during Sunday's appearance on ABC's "Issues and Answers" from Washington. (AP)

McG Raps Nixon On War

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)-Sen. George McGovern said Tuesday any pre-election settlement of the Vietnam war would mean President Nixon has let it run on unnecessarily for four years "purely to avoid criticism from the right-wing war hawks back home."

McGovern said in a series of appearances in New York and Ohio that Nixon could have ended the war four years ago on the same terms available now.

Rather than destroy his presidential candidacy which stemmed from an antiwar stance, McGovern told an interviewer that any settlement now "would destroy Mr. Nixon. I can't imagine anybody voting for him in view of what he's done the last four years."

Listing a series of questions he said he would ask Nixon if the President agrees to debate him, McGovern noted that 20,000 Americans have died in Vietnam and that $60 billion has been spent there since the start of the Nixon administration.

"Did you make all these sacrifices to save your own political face from right-wing criticism?" he asked of Nixon.

McGovern made the same point in three television and radio interviews in New York and to a chilled crowd of several thousand gathered in a drizzle to hear him speak from the courthouse steps in Dayton.

He told the Dayton crowd Nixon promised in 1968 to end the war and that "with just two weeks before the election on Nov. 7, they're telling us they're going to end the war again.

"Why not four years ago?" he asked to cheers from the crowd.

Asked about indications the North Vietnamese might now be willing to include South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in a coalition government, McGovern said the Communists have always indicated they would accept elements of the Thieu regime. "It's a very minor point to say which personalities they would accept."

In a television interview in Dayton McGovern was asked what he would do if Thieu balked at a settlement under the terms currently being discussed.

"I'd just cut off his water," McGovern replied. "He's been blackmailing the United States for about five years now. Congress first lost control of foreign policy to the President, now the President has lost control of it to General Thieu...We ought to terminate any further relationship with this dictator instead of letting him dictate American foreign policy."

McGovern continued to express confidence he will win the Nov. 7 election despite public opinion polls that show him trailing.

"I've got great faith in the American people," he said in an interview on New York radio station WOR. "I don't think they're going to be fooled by Mr. Nixon's posing as a peacemaker when continuing the war for four more years.

Campaigns Run Into Millions

WASHINGTON (AP) Committees set up to finance President Nixon's re-election campaign have spent at least $22 million since April, almost double the amount spent for Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern.

New reports filed with the General Accounting Office showed Tuesday that while the chief Nixon finance committee was slightly in debt earlier this month, its numerous satellites had a minimum of $4.7 million going into the final two weeks of the campaign.

McGovern's key campaign committee, McGovern for President, Inc., of Washington, D.C. showed a cash deficit of $107,000 and debts of $2.86 million. But contributions appeared to be flowing in at a greater rate than those for the President.

The expenditures of the two presidential candidates were culled from more than 1,000 pages of reports from dozens of committees.

The reports cover the period Sept. 1-Oct. 16, but also include cumulative totals going back to April 7 when a new federal elections law went into effect requiring disclosure quarterly and on the 15th and 5th days before a primary or general election.

Because of a delay caused by the federal government's observance of the Veteran's Day holiday Monday, when the reports were due, the GAO had processed only a few of the hundreds of reports on hand.

Those available included six major Washington-based Nixon committees and 2 state committees. Only cumulative totals were available for McGovern for President, Inc., and the GAO said it would be another day before the full 2,100-page report was processed.

The largest listed contributor to Nixon during the Sept. 1-Oct. 16 period was John J. Louis Jr., chairman of the board of Combined Communications Inc. of Chicago. Louis gave $82,819, dividing it up in $5,521 chunks among various committees. He was listed in the last spending reports on Sept. 10 as giving $37,593.

Contributors of $100 or more accounted for $2.08 million of the $4.4 million in contributions taken in by the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President, the lead Nixon committee, between Sept. 1-Oct. 16.

Shriver Knocks Nixon In K.C.

KANSAS CITY (AP)-Sargent Shriver, Democratic vice presidential nominee, had a quip for every criticism of the Nixon administration at a brief reception for party faithful Tuesday.

To start with, he said, "I want to thank whoever is responsible for getting all these microphones out in front here. We Democrats don't get to see all the microphones we talk into these days."

The crowd responded with a roar and Shriver, speaking without notes, launched into his attack.

He said the McGovern-Shriver ticket has one great asset: "Our opponent."

Shriver said Nixon may dress, walk, talk, fly and live like a president "but let us never forget we're running against Tricky Dick Nixon."

He then turned to the Vietnam war. "Four years ago Nixon had a secret plan to end the war," Shriver said, "and four years later he still has a secret plan to end the war.

"History will record Nixon as the president who dropped the most bombs of anyone."

Referring to rumors of peace in Vietnam, Shriver said, "What we have to ask is: 'What is better about the peace now than one four years ago?"

NATIONAL BLACK THEATRE
- Sat., Oct. 28/8 p.m.
Present "REVIVAL" Student Union Ballroom

FINE ARTS QUARTET
Frank Glazer, Pianist
Thurs., Nov. 2
Perform Brahms Piano Quintet in F and Works by Haydn and Ginastera. Tickets $1.50 UM Undergrads/Others $3.00.

A H K: Performing Arts of Korea
Friday, Nov. 3.
Classical Courts and Chamber Music, Military, Religious and Folk Music and dances of Korea.....Tickets $1 UM Undergrads/Others $1.50.

FINE ARTS COUNCIL TICKET OFFICE
125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0202

Tonite at 9
CLEAN LIVING
Rusty Nail Inn
Rte. 47, Sunderland

Some "How comes?" about shaving, answered:

How come I can't get a close shave? — Maybe you should take your clothes off first. Showering before you shave will soften your beard even more. Lots of hot water and soap is the key to a better shave.

How come my chin and upper lip are harder to shave? — That's where whiskers grow the most. Always shave there last. The longer lather is on whiskers, the softer they become.

How come I get a lot of irritation and nicks? — Every stroke of your razor scrapes away skin cells. So use gentle strokes (and as few as possible) in the direction your beard grows. Never press too hard with your razor.

Whatever bugs you about shaving.
ENGLISH LEATHER POWER FOAM SHAVE CREAM can help de-bug it. We know shaving won't ever be fun. But at least we can help make it a little nicer to face the day.
English Leather.

Television Tonight

7:00 (4) NBC Nightly News: John
(40) The ABC Evening News: Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith
(3) What In The World: Bermuda
(10) Action News
(22) Big News 90. Part 3: Local
(30) Early News Report
(38) Hogan's Heroes
7:30 (4) Doctor In The House
(8) Five By 5 - The Investigators: Investigative reports on local issues
(24) Book Beat: A stubborn Case by George Frankel. A novel about the American college campus
(27) The Reporters
(40) Dragnet
(3) The New Price Is Right
(10) To Tell The Truth
(22) Wait Till Your Father Gets Home
(30) Circus
(38) The Andy Griffith Show
8:00 (4,22,38) Adam-12
(8,40) The Paul Lynde Show
(10,27) A Public Affair-Election '72: The Media Feedback
(3,30) Carol Burnett: Guests: Peggy Lee, Stiller and Meara
(38) Boston Bruins Hockey: At Buffalo Sabres
8:30 (4,22,38) NBC Mystery Movie: Cool Million. James Farentino
(8,40) Wednesday Movie Of The Week: Family Flight. Rod Taylor, Dina Merrill
(24) The Jazz Set: Roy Haynes, The Hip Ensemble
(27) All About Welfare: The Resolution of Mossie Wax. A vivid portrayal of the plight of the elderly poor
(27) The Comedy Of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy: Kidnapped
9:00 (24) The State Of Connecticut Special: Children's Television
(27) Jim Nabors As Gomer Pyle
(3,10) Medical Center: Guests: Diana Muldaur, Paul Burke
9:30 (27) Twilight Zone
10:00 (4,22,38) Search
(8,40) The Julie Andrews Hour: Guests: Dinhaan Carroll, Phyllis Diller
(24) The State of Connecticut: News
(27) Martin Agronsky: Evening Edition
(27) Newshour
(3,10) Cannon: Guest: Rosemary Murphy
10:30 (24) Martin Agronsky: Evening Edition
(27) En Espanol
(27) The Big Action Movie: The Unknown Terror (1957) John Howard, Mala Powers
(38) Boston Bruins Wrap-Up
10:45 (38) Film Festival: Murder By Two (1966) Mel Ferrer, Danielle Darrieux
11:00 (4) Eyewitness News, Weather
(8) Late News, Sports, Weather
(40) Newsbeat News
(3) News
(10) Action News
(22) The Big News
(30) Late News Report
11:15 (40) Newsbeat Weather
11:20 (40) Newsbeat Sports
(3) Weather
11:35 (3) Sports
11:30 (4,22,38) The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson
(8,40) The Dick Cavett Show
(3) Starlight Movie: The Pad (And How To Use It) Brian Bedford, Julie Sommars
(10) Perry Mason
12:15 (10) Late News
12:30 (10) Call Of The West
1:00 (4) Eyewitness News Summary
(8) News Final
(40) USAF Religious Film
(30) Sign Off News Report
1:05 (4) Boston Movietime: Werewolf In A Girls Dormitory (1957) Barbara Lass
(8) Medical Call: Health-science series

Woman's Institute Becomes Everywoman's Free U

A group of women met again last Thursday at the Everywoman's Center to further discuss the idea of the Woman's Institute. It was decided at that time to change the name to Everywoman's Free University. The work groups involved in the development and implementation of the event are: Art Show and Festival Activities, Courses and Workshops, Dorms for Student Women to Stay In, Speakers, Films, Location, Media and Publicity, Released Time for Staff, and Audio-Visual Help.

They welcome women to plug into any group they find interesting and/or to share information that would be helpful in any of the areas. There will be another meeting this Thursday at 12:00 at the Everywoman's Center in Munson Hall.

New Bill Increases Aid For Student Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon signed into law Tuesday a bill boosting GI Bill college and high school payments by 25.7 per cent for an unmarried veteran and 29 per cent for a married veterans with one child.

For those taking on-the-job or vocational training, the increases are 48 per cent.

Nixon said the best way America can repay veterans for their sacrifices "is to build a lasting peace in the world."

"We've made great, great progress" toward that goal, Nixon said and he pledged to work unceasingly to achieve "a generation without war for all Americans."

About 200 Vietnam veterans, representatives of veterans organizations and government officials were on hand for the White House ceremony. Nixon told them although some people disagree about the Vietnam war "millions who have chosen to serve our country should be honored for their service."

Nixon also signed a $525 million authorization aimed at expanding the Veterans Administration medical services by providing educational facilities to beef up hospital staffs. Included is authority for helping state universities establish up to eight new schools at VA hospitals at a cost $175 million over seven years.

The bill authorizes the VA to make grants to medical schools affiliated with the VA, with priority to those which give preference to Vietnam era veterans, especially those disabled.

Infirmary
(In An Emergency)
5-2671

Interested in S.U.G. Board Graduate Appointments?

The Graduate Student Senate is accepting applications for four appointments to the newly revised Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors. Applications must reach the Graduate Senate Office (CC-110) by Oct. 27, 1972.

Central Area Council Meeting

By SHELLEY BAKST

Despite the fact (or in some cases excuse) that this past weekened was a three day weekend, the Central Area Council Meeting on Monday night proved the most costly of the year.

Several weeks ago, Wheeler House proposed a Halloween-Homecoming party sponsored by the council and coordinated by The New African House and Wheeler. According to Wheeler's $750 proposal, there are two objectives: (1) "to provide a social activity for Central Area residents in celebration of Homecoming weekend." (2) "to improve the relationship now existing between the New African House and the residents of Central." Because the New African House will not be available on homecoming weekend, the council voted in favor of postponing the concert and refreshments until November 17th. The two bands, one black and one white, are presently being screened.

Brooks House proposed that the council sponsor a $600.00 concert on November 4th or 10th performed by Mance Libscomb and Joseph Spense. The Orchard Hill Jazz Committee has offered to donate up to $100.00 and if Orchard Hill itself would sponsor half of the remaining cost, the Central Area Council voted to spring for the other half. There will be an admission charge for this concert, as there was for the Gary Burton concert.

Homecoming plans for Central Area were also made at the Council Meeting. Chadbourne House proposed that the council fund their coffee house on Friday, October 27, 1972. Anyone interested in performing may get in touch with Mike Athas at 6-4725.

Socrates, a color, 120-minute film directed by Rossellini, depicts Plato's dialogues and the dialectical teaching of Socrates. Baker House requested that money be allocated to show the movie without charge to the area residents. The council voted in favor of it.

The last vote was in favor of allocating $91.00 for two delegates from the area to attend the Associated Collegiate Press Conference held November 2nd, 3rd, and 4th in New York.

All the Central Area Council Meetings are open and are held on Monday nights at seven in the Baker basement.

Area Students Protest Exit Tax On Russian Jews

Monday morning at 6:15 a group of approximately 30 Five College Area students boarded a bus for New York City and specifically the Soviet Mission, the office of Aeroflot (the Soviet Airline/Tourist office), and the Isaiah wall opposite the United Nations building. The local group, Concerned Jewish Students, met first with the parent group, Students Struggle for Soviet Jews, in New York. They were traveling to protest the exit taxes which are levied against those Jews wishing to leave the Soviet Union. The group felt that Russia's token release of 139 families left much to be desired as there are 3,000,000 Jews still in Russia.

Upon their arrival at the Soviet Mission at 11 A.M. the group was told that a court order would allow only 12 demonstrators to picket-the rest of the group handed out leaflets and spoke with passers-by on the next block.

As several members of the mission exited they answered only "NO COMMENT", to such questions as "Why do mission members pretend to ignore the demonstrators?" and "What, if any instructions were you given as to how to react to protestation, and questions from the press?"

At 1 P.M. the group arrived at the Aeroflot office which closed down for the day immediately. The group stood in front chanting "Let My People Go" and "Peace" - in Russian.

From there it was to the Isaiah Wall on which reads the famous quote "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation neither shall they learn war anymore".

This concluded the days activities and the tired but satisfied group of students returned to their bus to hear the outcome of other similar protestations; Gavrial Shapiro, who had been married to an American girl only one day before being arrested by the Soviets, Roman Ruthman, and Michael Klichaan-it was announced-were all to be released by the Soviet government, and without the payment of an exit tax.

THURSDAY, NOV. 2 AT 8:30 P.M.
AMHERST COLLEGE
ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE
WILL PRESENT
JR. WELLS and BUDDY GUY
IN A DANCE CONCERT
IN THE
AMHERST COLLEGE GYMNASIUM
TICKETS $2.00
Available Starting Oct. 23
at The Listening Post
Amherst & Northampton
And at the door.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

"I have become convinced that Nat Reed, our candidate, is a man that should be elected to represent our district in Boston"
Congressman Silvio O. Conte
October 1, 1972

"Nat Reed will bring unusual qualifications and experience to the post of State Representative. We need men like Nat Reed at the State House"
Senator Edward Brooke
October 15, 1972

"We need men like Nat Reed in Boston to preserve the 2 party system in Massachusetts."
Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight
October 11, 1972

Vote For nat reed
For State Representative
in the 2nd Hampshire District.
Amherst, Belchertown, Hadley, Pelham, Granby, So. Hadley, Ware
Donald Maynard, Strong St., Amherst

Olver Asks Elderly Aid

State Representative John W. Olver, candidate for State Senate in the Franklin Hampshire District, has issued a broad statement, dealing with problems and proposals for the elderly. This is the second in a series of position papers to be issued by Rep. Olver.

Olver said, "citizens now in retirement who have worked and contributed to society all their lives, often are faced with confinement, poverty and inadequate care. We must be more imaginative in our efforts to assure dignified and productive retirement."

He listed several specific pieces of legislation he has helped sponsor, and would again help to refile. Among these was a bill, signed into law, that permits recipients of old age assistance to benefit from increases in social security payments. This measure went into effect this past summer.

Olver also sponsored bills to require reduced utility rates for elderly persons of low income and to speed up civil court cases involving elderly. Both these measures did not gain passage in the legislature last year, and Rep. Olver intends to refile them for next session.

Rep. Olver went on to present his proposals in four specific areas of concern to elderly citizens.

A first is providing adequate transportation for older citizens. "Many people over the age of 65 cannot afford to continue to operate their cars or may not feel confident driving in today's heavy traffic conditions. Taxis are too expensive." Olver added, "Our elderly citizens are left immobile in an increasingly mobile society."

Rep. Olver said, "We must develop appropriate kinds of public transportation. One suggestion in less populated areas would be minibuses, six to ten passenger vehicles, which could be dispatched like taxis by telephone. They would have flexible routes, serving the needs of the people who want them."

Another area of concern is nutritional services. Rep. Olver proposes, "We should be developing nutritional services in all parts of the Commonwealth. Some communities already have hot meal programs, but often only one or two days a week. These programs should be provided daily through the auspices of the Council on Aging or directly through the school system."

"Many of the elderly find preparing balanced meals for one or two people expensive and inconvenient. Inadequate diet inevitably leads to more serious medical problems."

State Rep. John W. Olver, D-Amherst, is attempting to unseat John Barrus, R-Goshen, for the State Senate in the Franklin-Hampshire District.

Rep. Olver added that adequate public transportation is vital to the success of such a hot meal program. He commented, "It would be time-consuming and costly to try to bring hot lunches to each individual elder citizen. Meals served at a central location provide the opportunity for meeting and getting together with others."

Olver went on to discuss HOME CARE SERVICE. He said, "We need to develop 'home care services' whereby nurses, social workers, or paramedics visit the homes of older citizens regularly. Such services which could include physical therapy as well as routine medical checkups, could prevent the development of serious medical problems and avoid the costs of long term hospitalization."

Rep. Olver stressed the need for better HOUSING for the elderly. "We must provide public assistance in housing to all older citizens who need it. Public housing for elder citizens should be located near needed community services rather than isolated".

"It is important that no elder person pays more than 25% of his income to provide for housing regardless of where he lives. Anything more makes it impossible to meet all the other expenses one has."

Olver described a MODEL PROGRAM in Amherst. He said, "One of the most exciting proposals recently in this part of the state is that by the Redevelopment Authority in Amherst which calls for a full-service center for elder citizens located in the center of Amherst within a block of the town hall, the post office, shopping, the town common, and several churches. Housing for elder citizens would be developed for those of all incomes in conjunction with continuing educational, medical, and recreational programs."

"In the same Center, outreach facilities would provide hot lunches and transportation to other elder citizens in the town. This kind of center could be duplicated in many other parts of the state."

Rep. Olver concluded, "Similar facilities should be available in Orange, Montague, Greenfield, Shelburne Falls, Williamsburg, Northampton, Easthampton, and Great Barrington as the major service centers for the population of this area."

Candidates Debate

The four candidates competing for the two seats in the 2nd Hampshire District will meet tonight in debate in the Colonial Lounge at the Student Union.

Democrats James Collins of Amherst and the incumbent James Nolen of Ware will meet Republicans Nat Reed of Amherst and Gerry Whitlock of Belchertown.

The four men will be questioned by a student panel representing various groups, including the Coalition for Environmental Quality (CEQ), and the Western Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (WMPIRG). Also on the student panel will be Skip Casper, a student senator, Bob Medeiros of the Daily Collegian, and Gladys Abraham, a member of the University and State Communications Council (USCC).

Reed On Redistricting Plans

Nat Reed, candidate for State Representative from the Second Hampshire District, offers the following information and comments on redistricting.

The General Court in its next session will divide the present two-member Second Hampshire District into two single-member districts. None of us in the district wants to see any of the seven towns split in the process. It would be unfortunate if a town now unified in name, under local government, by a sense of community and in many other ways, were divided between two state representatives serving two different districts. But as we discuss ways to prevent this from happening, we must keep the facts in mind, and a dearth of facts has characterized the discussion so far.

The Special Joint Legislative Committee on Redistricting (6 Senators and 15 Representatives) has been given the task by the General Court of presenting a plan for redistricting in the next legislative session which will eliminate multi-member districts and will embody the U.S. Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" ruling. This means that the 47 present double districts and 9 triple districts will be divided and that each district will contain the same population. There are now 119 single-member districts.

In redrawing district lines, the redistricting committee has tried to preserve as much as possible the boundaries of the present single-member districts in order to preserve established unity. I gather that incumbent state representatives agree with this approach for political reasons. The redistricting committee has taken the same approach in dividing the double and triple-member districts. It has tried to make up the new districts as much as possible out of the parts of the old ones rather than scrapping all old district lines and starting from scratch. In this way as many towns as possible which were associated in the old multi-member districts would continue to be associated in the new single-member districts.

WEDNESDAY TONIGHT WEDNESDAY
JES DANDY
The English Pub
9:00 - 1:00 50c cover

adidas

are now at
Mathews SHOE STORE
39 South Pleasant St., Amherst
BA-CARD MASTER CHARGE

Bad News?
- Good News?
(you decide)

There are five OTHER audio shops in the Amherst-Northampton area. Not ONE of them is like us. We're TRIPOD AUDIO. Let us tell you a little about ourselves. We're new. Our sound studio is located at 219 Main Street in Northampton. It's on the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop.

We'll tell you right away — if you're looking for a COMPLETE stereo system for $199.95, we CAN'T help you. Now that's a pretty direct statement — but we hope you'll understand that we aim to be honest with you. We DON'T carry junk — we like music too much to do that. ALL of our equipment has stood the test of time and is well-known for its quality and reliability — equipment by Klipsch, Sony, Teac, Bang & Olufsen, Thorens, PE, and Watts. And we back up our stock with a sales force that knows what they're talking about. You may not like what we tell you, but we'll tell you the TRUTH.

Considering the quality of the equipment we carry, our prices are DAMN competitive. And we've provided a quiet and relaxing place to listen carefully and compare equipment without being hassled. You're also welcome to bring your own records and tapes. Why not drop over one of these days and take a look and a listen. Or call us at 584-6498 and ask for Jim. We might NOT be the place for you. But — then again — we MIGHT. Once again, that's TRIPOD AUDIO at 219 Main Street in Northampton. On the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop. You'll be hearing more about us in the coming weeks.

TRIPOD AUDIO
219 MAIN STREET — NORTHAMPTON, MASS. 01060
TELEPHONE 584—6498

UMass Senior Tours Europe As Guide And Interpreter

Two weeks, first class, all expenses paid in Europe! That was one answer to an old question, "Why study Chinese?" Bob Nylander, a UMass senior in Chinese Language and Literature, spent October 1-15 as guide-interpreter for three Chinese businessmen sightseeing in seven European countries.

The businessmen, part of a group of 30 invited to the U.S. to investigate corn, sorghum and cotton oil production, decided to return home via Europe, rather than following the group directly back to Taiwan. Although they spoke Japanese as well as Chinese, they spoke no European language, so with five days remaining before departure time, they invited Nylander to accompany them.

Their travels took them through England, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, Holland, France, Switzerland, and Italy. "It was obviously a 'touristy' trip", said Nylander on his return, "but we were not part of any tourist group like Cook's or American Express. Every day we would decide what we wished to see and do - and do it." This brought up some problems in translation, with 3,000 years of European culture to translate into Chinese, Greek and Roman antiques in the British Museum, Hamlet's Castle at Elsinor, windmills and land reclamation in Holland, the Jungfraujoch funicular railway in Switzerland, all examples of things to be explained on the spur of the moment.

"But we overcame most of the problems," Nylander added. "The people of the various countries were sympathetic to our dilemma and very generous with their time, explanations and assistance. More important, we all made new friends, both among the Europeans and the overseas Chinese who greeted us in several countries."

This was quite an experience, speaking Chinese every day and seeing Europe too. Although opportunities like this don't come often, it doesn't hurt to be prepared. And while waiting your chance you can explore one of the greatest cultural and literary traditions in the world.

Career Guidance Conference Tomorrow

"Tomorrow Is Now" is the theme for the Massachusetts Career Guidance Week Conference scheduled for tomorrow at UMass.

The conference is sponsored jointly by the Massachusetts Association of Student Councils and the Massachusetts Personnel and Guidance Association, with assistance from the N.E. Resource Center for Occupational Education, and Project Career.

Career education will be discussed by educators throughout the day, and the keynote address "Career Education Defined: How to Implement" will be by Mr. Saul Dulbert, consultant in program developer career education for the Connecticut State Department of Education.

Introductory remarks will be given by Dr. Thomas J. Curtin, Massachusetts Commissioner of Education. Representatives from present and past leadership in the Massachusetts Association of Student Councils will discuss "needs clarification" with educators in a panel chaired by Dr. Ronald Fredrickson, president of the Massachusetts Personnel and Guidance Assocition and a faculty member in the UMass School of Education.

Conference chairman is Mr. Robert C. White of the UMass Career Planning office.

The first annual Tommy Shulman Award will be presented for outstanding contributions to youth through career guidance activities. Mr. Shulman wrote a "Carer Guidance" column in the "Herald Traveler-Record American" and "Sunday Advertiser".

Conference registration will be from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. on the first floor of the UMass Campus Center.

JFK Study Refused

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Kansas pathologist was turned down Tuesday by the Supreme Court in his bid to make laboratory studies of skin samples, bullet fragments and clothing of the assassinated President John F. Kennedy.

John Nichols, a professor at the University of Kansas Medical Center, had sued under the Freedom of Information Act after he was turned down by the U.S. Archives and by the Department of the Navy.

Nichols said in his appeal he wanted to submit some of the items to "harmless neutron activation" analysis. He said the results would either confirm or refute conclusions reached by the Warren Commission, which ruled Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in assassinating Kennedy.

Galaxy Breaks Speed Of Light

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A galaxy that appears to be breaking a law of science-that no object can go faster than the speed of light-has been reported at a meeting of astronomers.

The galaxy has reportedly joined with two quasars-mysterious objects on the rim of the universe that emit enormous amounts of radio waves-in seeming to move faster than 186,000 miles a second, long accepted by physicists as the ultimate in speed.

The report of the speeding galaxy came Monday at a meeting of the high energy astrophysics division of the American Astronomical Society in a paper written by Dr. Kenneth I. Kellerman of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W. Va.

Dr. Kellerman said movement of the galaxy is being studied through radio sources, which also are being used as tools to study the two quasars.

Ten theories have been considered in explaining objects that appear to move faster than the speed of light, but at least seven of these are discredited.

The remaining three, which are regarded as suspect, try to explain the phenomenon in terms of accepted physics, looking for reasons the objects would appear to be traveling at the speed without actually doing so.

The "cannon ball explanation" is one of two that contends an object would seem to be travelling faster than it is if another object is near enough or is moving in an opposite direction.

Another theory, the "Christmas tree model," is based on the tendency of the objects to light up and go off at irregular intervals.

FOR YOUR TRAVEL RESERVATIONS
Call Peter Pan Travel —
Complete Travel Arrangements — Transportation — Accommodations — Tours
Peter Pan
70 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst Center Tel. 256-6704

NEW ENGLAND'S LEADING NIGHT CLUB
WAREHOUSE ONE
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129
Off Parker Street Near Railroad Bridge
Near Eastfield Mall-Behind Lechmeres
U. MASS. COLLEGE STUDENTS 21 YEARS AND OVER
TOP ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY at the
WAREHOUSE ONE
NEW ENGLAND'S FINEST NIGHT CLUB
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129
THE NOW SOUND OF MUSIC
Welcomes You 7 Nights a Week to the Greatest Sound of Music.
ROCK - JAZZ
AND THE TOP 40 HITS
2 Dance Floors and a Seating Capacity For 800 People. The Greatest Place You Can Go and Meet the Swinging Set Around.
Our Groups Are From
VEGAS — NEW YORK — CALIFORNIA
NO ADMISSION, COVER CHARGE OR MINIMUM.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Steve Ferrara
NEWS STAFF	Dick Fitzgerald, Joe Vinskey
SPORTS	Bill Ballou, F. Antosciewicz
AD LAYOUT	Jan Auman
EDITORIAL	Randy Shuldiner
DARKROOM	John Neister, Al Jagoda, Kevin Erkkila

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

A Top Priority

The fact that all scholarship money for the 72-73 year here at UMass Amherst is gone isn't just a pity, it's a crime. We have yet to see the end of October, and the well has run dry. And still the budget controversy rages on, even though the student trustees from all public institutions of higher education in the state claim that one of the first things to be hit by the budget cuts will be financial aid.

The need for financial aid here is greater than ever. Of all the applicants for aid this year an unprecedented number of upperclassmen (nearly 50%) are included. Things are tough, and the cost of education is rising. But still the budgetary hassle continues, and we still see cases of waste, most notably the case of President Wood's office, the five year, $700,000 rental of which he still defends, and which we still contend is too much.

The University has consistently requested in its budget somewhere in the vicinity of $3 million for financial aid. It has consistently received about $800,000. The Governor, and after him the Legislature, should be aware of the fact that the budget cut can hurt our chances of getting what we deserve for financial aid on this campus. This makes the UMass idea of offering a low cost education to all an empty farce. If we're going to have a truly public education, let's stop the foolishness and put our priorities where they belong, with financial aid in its proper place.

'AND TOMORROW WILL BE A BEAUTIFUL DAY FOR A PICNIC ...HEAVY RAIN, OVERCAST SKIES WITH LOW VISIBILITY'

Gabe Imperato and Ed Fogarty

The Myth Of Nixon

Nixon is piling it on now. His "silent majority" is ready to flex its authoritarian muscles. They will get their chance on November 7. RMN has put the conservative backlash in fourth gear. They will be blindly storming to the polls, to pull the Nixon lever, to create the wave, which Nixon rides into the White House for four more years.

Mr. Nixon has promulgated the myth to its fullest; "change without chaos". He has constructed the myth and is now campaigning with it. You can hear him convincing himself, as he stands on the podium in the Nassau Coliseum and smiles, while he watches policemen drag protestors away. The audience cheers.

There is no change, no chaos. The fact happens to be that Nixon can do anything he wants to. He can project himself in any way he pleases. A few unprecedented trips overseas, with obscure results, and the rumor of a truce in Vietnam give RMN free reign. It is his self-constructed mandate which allows him to swing free.

His "silent majority" believe and agree with him in evangelical delight when he says "the choice to be made is bigger than political parties". Leaving to Richard Nixon to interject his own meaning into this phrase. What does it mean to Nixon? This should be no secret to anyone. RMN has not exactly been that coy about it. It means preservation, turning the clock back. It means conserving "our interests". It is Richard Nixon on the front lines holding back the forces of change and chaos, because they really mean the same thing to him. It is Nixon filling in the cracks in the dike; maintaining the status-quo. It is Nixon suppressing conflict, thereby avoiding chaos and change. It is Richard Nixon the hero of the silent majority pulling back America from the brink of anarchy. What anarchy? Finally it is Nixon rescuing America from the hands of such lunatics as George McGovern

Nixon can often be heard aspouting off about "a generation of peace". He echoes the visionary hopes of his hero Woodrow Wilson. He gets votes by developing a whole cadre of fals e consciousness around this "generation of peace". His "silent majority" comes running to be herded into the drive to re-elect Nixon.

We would like to see how RMN intends to implement the apparatus which would make such an ideal a reality. We wonder whose interests this "generation of peace" would be in. How many arms would have to be twisted. In essence we think it's a sham. It's a real line to put over on the American people. What is worse is that his "silent majority" wallows in such false consciousness. The way Nixon has been operatng he may just convince his "silent majority" that he has achieved a "generation of peace".

Go tell it to the mountain Dick. Tell them how you have brought peace to Indochina, when you know Thieu is becoming a real problem. It doesn't matter though, as long as that "silent majority" keeps believing that peace is just around the corner. You know, around the corner after November 7.

In Richard Nixon's mind there is a majority. The "silent majority" who do not irritate, criticize, demonstrate protest or conflict with the essence of America, which is Richard Nixon, of course. As RMN turns around and smiles at police dragging protesters away, as he tells the crowd, that the choice is bigger than political prties "he means that it is about time that the majority put its foot down. It's about time that they stood up and crushed under their feet these noisy irritating voices of discontent. This pain in Richard Nixon's brain that makes him send out Agnew to holler and scold. The pain that makes Nixon run the maze of his mind, to come up with strategy, which he makes "perfectly clear" to us, that in the end always secures the private property interests of individuals.

Richard Nixon would turn America back to 1870 if he could. If he can't he will tug and pull us back as far as possible. Richard Nixon is not of our time. He is a man of yesteryear imposing on the progress of America. He fools liberals into thinking he is a liberal, and Wallacites into thinking he is the next best thing to George himself.

In reality Nixon should fool no one. He is the same Nixon that came to Congress 25 years ago to tear down the New Deal and to hunt Communists. We feel that the "silent majority" wherever it is have been snowed under by the well constructed Myth of Richard Nixon. He has already duped millions into voting for him on November 7. When they do, RMN will say "you see here is my mandate." What will come down after this is hard to say. What has come down already is hard to believe. The prospect of another Nixon appointee to the Supreme Court and the possibilitiy of a Republican Congress are twinkles in Richard Nixon's eye.

We hope George McGovern can pull a surprise on November 7. Something like Harry Truman's surprise of 1948.

Gabe Imperato and Ed Fogarty are MDC Editorial Columnists.

George Daniel

It's All The Same

Who was it that said that human nature is basically the same wherever you went? Whoever it was, he was quite right. And it is one down for Kipling who said, "East is east and west is west, and the twain shall never meet".

Some time ago I was part of a class discussion group racking our brains over a project, and the conversation somehow got to life in high school days. I, an alien - that is how Immigration classifies me - listened to the glee-filled accounts of the stunts of my occidental pals in their green years.

I could have sworn that I was sitting on the white fence near my school on a hot, dusty Indian day listening to the accounts of the latest exploits of Krishnan, my buddy from the other section.

Oblivious to the laughter and chatter of my friends, I lived that day again when Krishnan vividly narrated how he had tantalized a class master for a whole hour. With pieces of a razor blade stuck into a crack in his table, hidden by an opened book propped up, he strummed the varying notes while the class gasped for breath as they tried to conceal their mirth.

(Gillette probably is ignorant to this other use for their product. One would hope that, should they come to know of it, they will not promote it.)

When the teacher walked up to him, down he would push the bits with his nails into the crack and play the angel. When the teacher left he would push them up and start all over again.

Then there was that time during "Deepavali", the annual festival of lights which is celebrated in the fall, when someone brought to class a box of tiny red percussion caps. The delinquents placed one under a leg of every desk in the back row. Ten minutes after class had gotten under way, starting from one side a kid put pressure on his desk and gently pushed it with his feet. And so on from one side of the room to the other it went bang, bang, bang! None of them are likely to forget the sight of the class teacher as he stood in front of his class, his incredulous face involuntarily following the bursts all the way along the entire breadth of the classroom from one side to the other.

(Even though these activities are a lesser sin than capturing the principal they could also, perhaps, be classified under "student unrest".)

Only the goodwill and the festive mood of the season spared their bottoms from the principal's cane that day.

Human nature seems to stay very much the same not only from place to place but also from age to age.

For there was this professor, ripe in years, who returned in the evening of his life to the college he went to as a youth. He wanted to see his room once again.

He knocked at the door and a boy opened it. He walked in and looked at the desk and sighed, "The same old desk". He reverently sat down on the chair and sighed again, "The same old chair". Then slowly he got up and went to the wardrobe and gently ran his hands along it. "The same old wardrobe."

He opened it and there was a girl inside. Shaking his grey-haired head he said, "The same old trick".

"But...but...sir, she's my sister", stuttered the boy. "I thought you might misunderstand, so I hid her there."

Shaking his head again, and smiling, the old man sighed, "The same old lie!"

George Daniel is an MDC Editorial Columnist

'FASTER! FASTER!'

Letters To The Editor

Politics And The Retarded

To The Editor:

On October 19, the Massachusetts Public Health Assoc. held their fall meeting at the Sheraton-Tara Hotel in Framingham. The topic of the meeting was "What Happens When Massachusetts Empties Out Its Institutions?"

One of the featured speakers was Dr. Benjamin Ricci, Chairman of the Exercise Science Dept. at UMass, and Pres. of the Belchertown Friends Assoc. Dr. Ricci issued charges against the Sargent administration for lack of response to the needs of the retarded.

Last spring when Gov. Sargent made his promised visit to Belchertown he appeared shocked and expressed amazement at the conditions which were allowed to exist at that institution. At that time he promised to do what he could for the residents at Belchertown. But to date his only response has been to cut the proposed budget request for 1973.

The Governor has stated that increasing the budget would reflect fiscal irresponsibility. It is interesting to note that the Governor chcoses fiscal responsibility at the expense of human tragedy.

Dr. Ricci called Commissioner of Mental Health, Dr. Milton Greenblatt both "indifferent and inept". Comm. Greenblatt has to date failed to appoint a replacement for Dr. Nagle, Superintendent of Belchertown State School, who announced his resignation last June 2nd. His amazing lack of interest on this issue was characterized by his failure to appoint a search committee until eleven weeks later. And further by the failure of the representatives of the DMH to appear at the first two meetings of the search committee.

Next Ricci denounced Commissioner of Public Health, William Bicknell for allowing unlicensed physicians to practice medicine in institutions of the DMH, and prescribe medication enmasse without benefit of examination, chemical assay, or even seeing the patient.

The DMH currently has plans to return to the community 750 retarded persons per year for the next four years, or 3,000 by 1976. The state is passing the responsibility for these retarded persons to those altruistic agencies in the community willing to undertake it, in order to alleviate a responsibility they have failed to fulfill.

In 1966 the Mass. Legislature passed the Community Mental Health Act which was to establish 38 Community Mental Health Centers across the state. Thus far only 5 have been established. The center in Springfield is housed in a renovated building which fails to meet minimum safety standards.

Such a plan to de-institutionalize the mentally retarded without planned care, treatment, and education would only further characterize the DMH as grossly incompetent.

Thomas Blanchette

To The Workers

AN OPEN LETTER TO UNIVERSITY LABORERS, SECRETARIES, ETC.

You work 8 hours a day at the University, helping to keep it rolling, and yet you have little to do with the education that goes on here 24 hours a day. You provide the support services that keep that classroom, dining hall, office, and residence hall functional, yet you have no input into the policy decisions that effect you.

Did you know that all full-time employees of the University are entitled to take one course free?

This Thursday night at 7 o'clock in Webster House's Main Lounge on Orchard Hill, will be the first meeting of the Orchard Hill Student-Labor Relations Colloquim. A one credit course, Student-Labor Relations is an exciting classroom situation involving University students and employees in a forum of current issues, problems, etc. The course asks the question of whether students as a "class" and American working men and women have many common concerns, interests, and problems that they can work on together. Labor History will be covered in the course, as well as national and local issues. Representatives from all segments of the University community will be invited to speak before the class.

We hope that you will see this course as a rewarding education experience, and will attend Thursday night at 7, in Webster Main Lounge.

John Cannon,
Janitorial Services
Susan T. Sherry,
Student
Bruce Lowry,
Professor/History Department
Steve Stoia,
Head of Residence, Webster

The New Deal

To The Editor:

In response to Governor Sargent's recent speech on higher education, The Boston Globe, on October 22, 1972 came out with an editorial praising his approach. The assumption that private institutions can and should educate the bulk of Bay State students is unrealistic. Most people cannot afford their tuition rates. The Governor scores points when he recommends a three year degree program and an open university structure. Although on the surface it sounds as though the Governor has thrown down the gauntlet to the state colleges, a cool approach shows that there is a strong middle ground in which both the educational establishment and the Governor can be mutually comfortable. It is time to review the present and future directions of public higher education in the Commonwealth. However, excellence and the level of student admissions must take priority over the issues of politics and economic control.

Susan Freeman

Work For Peace

To The Editor:

On Veterans day, Mr. Nixon declared "as long as I am President...we are not going to make a mockery" of the service of Vietnam veterans by "offering amnesty to draft dodgers and deserters." He went on to say that "it is more important than ever that we honor the millions who have loyally stood by their country when the challenge to freedom called for service."

There was a time when I had no love for draft dodgers, C.O.'s and those who fled to Canada. It wasn't until I returned from Southeast Asia that I began to question why we were there. It was the witness of those who went to jail as conscientious objectors or fled to Canada that brought me to my present level of conscienceness. The only difference between me as a veteran of Vietnam, a C.O. in jail or a draft dodger in Canada is the time, place and intensity of our opposition to the war. As a veteran I can demonstrate my opposition to the war on my home ground with reasonable impunity while my brothers of draft age face imprisonment if they don't go off to war.

I reject President Nixon's arrogant speech and call upon my fellow students to support a policy of total and unconditional amnesty for all of our separated brothers. Their commitment and sacrifice helped many of us to experience a crisis of conscience and our debt to them is great.

Work for peace.
Joseph M. Carlin

Editorial Points

Drug combo of the week: Some people take ups to lose weight, then they take downs so they can get to sleep at night.

* * *

Sports quote of the week: Are the Pats as bad as they look? Are the Bruins as bad as they look? Are the Celtics as good as they look? Yes. No. Maybe.

* * *

(continued on next page.)

Selective Enforcement

To The Editor:

This letter is to express my grievances with the officers that enforce the UMass parking regulations. You know parking lot #6. Well, right next to the exit closest to the Campus Center there lies a sign reading NO PARKING — TOW AWAY ZONE. On one occasion I had the unfortunate luck of parking my car such that six inches of the car was parked illegally.

This week I saw the officer tagging more cars - except for two. One was a state vehicle, the other was parked similar to how my car was parked. I asked the officer why he didn't tag these two cars. "We are not supposed to tag state cards." The other car was explained as being half legal, and was not deserving of a ticket. Now I really don't want anyone to have the luck of getting a ticket. BUT let's be fair--it's either one way or the other. I have to pay ten dollars for that goddam ticket. Would you????

Flip Levy

In Response...

To The Editor:

I am writing in response to Mr. Apostola's letter (10/24/72) attacking the column (10/20/72) I wrote in support of the core requirements.

While Mr. Apostola attacked various aspects of college education he never set forth any convincing arguments in support of his apparent conviction that required courses are a waste of time.

Mr. Apostola implies that the core requirements place a stranglehold on the student's freedom of choice and that they result in the student being told "what to do throughout the educational process". Surely this is an exaggeration. Having a limited set of required courses is entirely different from having a required curriculum. Few students have any difficulty in fulfilling their core requirements within their first two years at the University. Hence it can hardly be argued that the core requirements place a severe restraint on the freedom of the student.

Mr. Apostola also seems to imply that since "more facts are generated every minute than can ever be comprehended by one individual," the core requirements are useless. This is superfluous and unrelated to the issue at hand. I do not suggest that the core requirements are of value because of any facts that they may teach the students but because they ideally serve as a general introduction to a particular methodology of thought.

I agree with Mr. Apostola that the University teaches students how to become specialized but this is due to the fact that we live in a highly specialized society. It is a historical fact that the University as an institution has always reflected the goals and needs of the particular society of which it is a part. One of the main functions of higher education in the United States today is to sort people into a highly specialized economy; hence the separation of disciplines on the university level. Given that this is the case the core requirements serve as one method of counteracting such specialization and of opening the eyes of the student to the relationships between various fields of study.

I will end with a general comment. People who argue along the same line as Mr. Apostola often declare that learning should be fun and that if a student should not be forced to take courses which he finds distasteful or irrelevant. To this I say two things. First, real learning is not always fun. It involves a good deal of difficult and unenjoyable work. Secondly, few students have more than the vaguest idea of what they may find relevant during the later years of their life. If the student was aware of everything which could possibly be relevant to his future life and possessed the self-discipline to follow through on this awareness then there would hardly be a need for schools let alone core requirements. Unfortunately, this is not the case.

Galen Tinder

Student Bodies

To The Editor:

Falaka Armide's woodcuts, currently on display in the Campus Center music room, are well worth taking a look at--if you can! There are student bodies strewn all over the music room, of course, and the woodcuts on the wall just aren't easy to get close to.

If you get close, it's not the easiest thing in the world to concentrate on what you're observing, with snatches of Jagger, Brahms, and the Grand Funk RR leaking from the headphones to form a putrid glop of noise before your ears. The eyes have to work double-time to do Mr. Armide justice.

Can't UMass do better? We could have at least offered Mr. Armide wall space at registration next January.

All I am saying is give art a chance.

Jock Gunter

In God We Trust

To The Editor:

Most voters want above all else to elect leaders whose policies are in the interests of the nation as a whole and of the world. President Richard M. Nixon and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew have consistently initiated or supported the highest of American ideals. Their re-election is in the public interest. The opposition has consistently made statements that it knows it can not fulfill. In God We Trust, and we also must put some measure of it in the people we elect.

Independent Voter,
Laurence E. Andrews,
Hadley

Dan Caruso

Get Out And Bitch

Red-tape and run-arounds got you down? Have you got a better way of doing things? The Student Senate Services Committee thinks that somewhere in the vast world of the bureaucracy, there's an answer to your questions, and they want to help you find it.

On Thursday, October 26th, Services will be holding its semi-annual Bitch Day on the Concourse level of the Campus Center from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. If you've got a gripe, or a suggestion, or if you must want to rap, then go on down and see them.

Believe it or not, the Administration is real people, and to prove this, representatives from different parts of Whitmore will be available throughout the day to talk with students. Most of the time, a hassle is only the result of some misunderstanding, and can be cleared up quickly by both parties communicating with each other.

Just about everybody in 'F' Lot must have something to say to the Parking Office about lot assignments, and the women of the University will more than likely want to take up the discriminatory athletic fee they pay with the Athletic Council.

But if you've got some other bone to pick with the University, there will be someone there from Health Services, Food Services and the Campus Center Complex to listen to y u. Also represented will be the Business Manager for the Residential Areas, the Student Attorney, the Ombudsman, and the Dean of Students.

No matter how conscientious an administrator might be, there is always the possibility that he might overlook a simple solution to a problem. If you have an idea or a suggestion on how to improve a pre-existing program, or if you would like to see a new program instituted, let someone know. You may be doing the University community a valuable service.

Once the Service Commitee has received your complaint or suggestion, it will investigate your situation for you and try to contact you personally with the results before the end of the semester. The Committee is willing to provide this service not only to establish a barometer for student concern, but to prove that this kind of discussion is a viable approach to problem-solving.

Besides the fact that it was not well enough co-ordinated, last year's Bitch Day failed mainly due to poor student response. If you didn't just come to this University to be chewed up by it and spit out again in four years, then you owe it to yourself to try and make the system work for you on October 26th.

Dan Caruso is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

More Editorial Points

Would anybody in the administration care to confirm the fact that the fences by the new library are really there to stop the snow drifts?

* * *

The Student Senate, under pain of cutting our budget, has forced the truth from the Collegian. Yes, Senate fans, there were some people from the Senate on the Collegian football team that beat the Senate 54-14 Sunday. Does it hurt less now, Senate?

Dems For Who?

By GERARD M. CATALDO

They've got to kidding, really. I saw one just yesterday: red, white and blue, staring at me proudly from the rear bumper of a 1972 Cadillac. The message was loud and clear, blatantly contributing to the visual pollution of our native land. At the start of the campaign I figured that this particular organization would be operating behind the scenes, a sort of affluent underground! I mean what Democrat would want the word to get around town that he was actually supporting you-know-who for re-election.

It all started with John Connally and his fervent desires to serve the country, handle our money, and gain national and international recognition. He tried to slip out the back door, but he learned that you don't desert the present administration without paying your dues. But because one Demo-publican jumps over the bridge, does that mean that more will follow? That's the idea, because next in line was John Collins, the dear and fervently remembered friend of all Bostonians. I suppose that being Mayor of Boston must have turned him against the Democrats, and of course who could blame him? They are really a bothersome bunch, with all their demands for equal rights, better schools, lower taxes, better housing, higher wages, safer streets, honest politics. Who do they think they are, anyway? And on top of everything else, they have the nerve to expect a Democrat to support their party's nominee for President! Just the last straw!

So I'd like to ask the "Democrats for ....." to dig way back in their memories and answer a few questions. When you wanted a decent job, with safe and healthy working conditions, who helped you out? When you wanted a better wage and stable prices in the supermarket, who helped you out? When you wanted a Medicare Program, a Civil Rights Bill, or a Model Cities Program, who got them for you? In short, when legislation was needed to improve the life of the average American, who took up his cause? When the future needs become even greater than the demands of the past, which party is going to see to it that your voice is heard? And here's a question for Mssrs. Connally and Collins. When you were aspiring to elective office who supported you with energy, ideas, money and votes? There can be but one obvious answer to all the above, the Democratic Party.

I wonder what prompts some people to bite the hand that fed them, and allow themselves to be seduced by the politics of power and distortion. There have been many glaring contradictions in this campaign, but that little red, white, and blue bumper sticker has to rate first prize. What in the name of God has Richard Nixon ever done for the Democratic Party?

Gerard M. Cataldo is a guest columnist.

'NOW, SOME OF YOU MAY GET THE IDEA THAT I LIKE POLLUTION . . .'

A Time To Question

By ANNETTE TOWNLEY

As a woman who has been active in the Feminist Movement, I recently became painfully aware of the fact that most of my knowledge was first hand. I saw myself immersed in a very contemporary perspective of what it meant to be a woman. I could discuss or argue Feminism from a personal level, but had no real concrete analysis of Feminism in an historical sense. Of course this is a logical starting point and I in no way want to undermine the importance of experiences in understanding one's oppression; however, I felt the need to understand the roots of my historical, cultural, political, economic, biological and psychological oppression and to begin to develop new theoretical perspectives of what it meant to be a woman.

So i began reading various books and articles that addressed themselves to these issues. In my reading, I was both overwhelmed and angered by my discoveries and had the intense and insatiable need to share and discuss these ideas, and the ideas they had triggered off in my own mind, with other women. The need to work collectively towards a Feminist consciousness also became obvious.

I decided to return to Graduate School with the hopes of integrating courses dealing specifically with women in my program. My educational experiences as an undergraduate had taught me that within traditional courses where women should have been discussed, basically any course dealing with society, their role had been completely ignored. I was appalled and extremely disappointed to find that not one course at the graduate level concerned itself with women, whether it be in education, english, history, psychology etc. In fact, the number offered at the undergraduate level was negligible. But I was immensely pleased to see the growth of Project Self which was originally a program devoted to the non-traditional female student. Aside from Project Self, the availability and accessibility of Feminist courses for the majority of women on this campus is almost non-existent.

There is also the question of how many of the courses that are offered have a Feminist perspective. Just because a course has the word "woman" in the title, it in no way guarantees that the course will not be based on a lot of status quo assumptions about women and society in general. I am personally familar with a few of the courses that do have a Feminist perspective and are about the development of a political consciousness, but I have also heard of courses going under the guise of Women's Studies that are sexist in both nature and approach and have no concept of sexism within a larger political context.

I write this article with the hope that other women who share the same frustrations will begin to ask questions about their role within a university that does not meet their needs.

Annette Townley is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

ROOM TO MOVE presents

A New Way To Music:

Therapeutic and Transpersonal Implications

by HELEN BONNY

Music Therapist

Wed., Oct. 25 at 8:00 p.m.

Student Union Ballroom

BITCH TO THE RIGHT PEOPLE about dining commons food and services about living in Sylvan and getting a "V" lot sticker about what you aren't getting for your Campus Center fee and your Health Services fee and your Athletic fee etc.

Bitch Day will be held
10-4, Thurs., Oct. 26
Concourse level, C.C.

Sponsored by Student Senate Services Committee

What's the story ...?

By JAY SAVEREID
University Ombudsman

(WHAT'S THE STORY will be a regular feature of the Daily Collegian, so long as it is supplied with student questions. If you have any questions or problems within the University system and you're having a hard time finding answers then send or bring your written questions to the WHAT'S THE STORY box in the Collegian office Student Union.)

Q. With the current housing problem, why can't the vacant, modern dormitory near the corner of Mass. Avenue and No. Pleasant Street be rented out to willing students?

A. The 'dormitory' referred to is actually a sorority house, Pi Beta Phi, located on North Pleasant and Philips Street. Bankruptcy has been declared and the matter is now in the hands of a bank. The university could have entered into some type of lease, however, due to extensive legal entanglements and high costs (the land and building are valued over a quarter of a million dollars), they decided against the idea.

Q. What's the story with the new lights that have been installed around campus? Why aren't they lit at night?

A. Ed Ryan, Chief Project Engineer, estimates that the lights will be on in about two (2) weeks. The installation is not yet fully complete and the university has not yet inspected or accepted the installation. But, barring problems which are not now expected, there should be conditional acceptance soon enough to permit the two week estimate to be reasonably accurate. Almost all of the lights will come into use at one time. When the system is completed the controls will be largely automatic by means of photo-electric cells.

Q. What's the story on the outdoor basketball courts promised to be put up around Southwest this fall?

A. The contract bid for the basketball courts had been awarded to Puffer Construction Co. There was some delay because of the rapid increase in costs since the last similar construction. Weather may necessitate the project being completed until the spring.

Argentine Girl Extends Thanks

MENDOZA, Argentina (AP) - "I am very happy, but I do not know how to thank everyone who has helped me," Estela Marie Azar, 18, said Tuesday as she recovered from deadly food poisoning.

Ham radio operators in the United States, Argentina and Brazil, New York doctors and police and U.S. and Argentine airlines had joined forces to deliver serum here that was needed to save the girl's life.

Mrs. Lola Lauria de Azar, Estela's mother, said doctors reported her daughter "is practically out of danger now."

The mother, with tears in her eyes, asked newsmen at Spanish Hospital to "please thank in my name all of those persons in different countries who, without knowing us, made it possible that my child's life could be saved."

A son, Bertran, 12, died and Estela became critically ill after eating tainted food last Wednesday. Doctors had said Estela would die unless a serum was obtained by Sunday that was available only in the United States.

The information was given to a local ham radio operator who contacted another ham in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Eva Perenyl. She in turn arranged a hookup with John Moran of Stoneham, Mass.

Returning To College Causes Change Of Life In Some Women

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Growing numbers of women returning to the campus after marriage and children are finding that college means more than a return to tests and textbooks. It can often mean unsettling and dramatic changes in family life.

In some cases it has led to divorce, while in others it has resulted in closer relationships with husband and children.

According to U.S. Labor Department census statistics, the number of women ages 25-34 who returned to school has almost doubled during the most recent five-year period for which figures are available. It increased more than tenfold in a 19-year-span.

In 1969, the most recent year for which figures are available, 526,000 women were enrolled in classes. That compares with 238,000 in 1964 and 47,000 in 1950.

No figures are available for women ages 35 and over, but a Labor Department spokesman said she believed the growth rate was similar.

A variety of reasons for going back to school emerged in interviews on several college campuses around the country.

Many of the women are housewives with diminshing home responsibilities who want to start on or complete college degrees and embark on professional careers. Others go back for intellectual stimulation and self-enrichment.

"I think I'm quite a different person after coming back to college," said Carol Herman, a 37-year-old mother of three studying for her bachelor's degree at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y. "My whole sense of values and priorities has changed.

"The average woman who gets married at an early age is limited in her intellectual and emotional growth. When she goes back to school, she often starts changing her ideas, becomes more independent and widens her experiences.

"It can be very painful and can create a strain on a marriage. You're not the same woman your husband married."

Counselors of returning women say most of them have encouraging, supportive husbands and that many develop closer ties with their families. But if a marriage is bad, the counselors agree, a woman is usually able to accept the fact and end it.

All the women interviewed said they had developed a greater sense of self-worth and independence as a result of returing to school.

"Coming to school is frightening to these women," said Elizabeth Minnich, director of the Sarah Lawrence Center for Continuing Education, which encourages older women to go back to school.

"They're afraid they're not going to do well. Some have told me, 'All my life, men have told me I'm dumb. So I must be.' Well, they find out they're not, and it can be a great shock for them as well as for their husbands."

THE CHOPPING BLOCK

Where S — —, Dianne, Beth, Carlo, and Guy will go to your head. It it has anything to do with hair, they can do it — perfectly . . . for both men and women. 26 Main St., Amherst. Mon. - Fri. 9 to 7:30; Sat. 9 to 4. 253-9293 & 253-9271.

Our staff is available for free hair care classes or demonstrations any evening for men's or women's groups.

Also 807 Maple Road, Longmeadow 867-9414

James Collins, Nat Reed, James Nolen and Gerry Whitlock want to represent you as members of the State House of Representatives

Do you know where they stand on the issues?

Hear them DEBATE.

Question them on matters that concern you.

Tonight, Colonial Lounge (S.U.) at 9:00 p.m.

Sponsored by USCC
University and State
Communications Co

Your Head

Adjusting To College Life

By Drs. McCashin and Klein

We would like to begin our series of columns for the year by outlining some of the reasons why the first semester at college can seem so difficult. Most new students are aware of and expect to experience a significant change in their lives by coming to college and often explain their problems in the first semester as needing to "adjust to college life." But this explanation doesn't go far enough and is of small comfort to the people who feel pretty upset during their first few weeks. So, you may ask, what are the psychological processes of change?

Generally, the stresses to which a new student has to adapt have two origins; those that are internal (within the individual's personality) and those that are external (in their new environment).

People who are anticipating a change in their lives generate a set of internal expectancies or fantasies about what they will accomplish with the change. Examples of these might be phrased as, "I finally have a chance to get away from those parents who have bugged me all of my life," or "Now I can make up for that lousy social scene in high school and find that perfect mate." Often the change is a less than perfect solution to these difficulties which can lead a person to feel disappointed, discouraged or downright depressed when these fantasies aren't easily realized.

It is stressful when a person has to adapt to an external environment that is highly stimulating with many novel or unfamiliar situations. While most people welcome a certain amount of novelty in their lives, they also require that their needs such as for affiliation and/or achievement are satisfied in a predictable way. Repeated exposure to novel conditions (e.g. new people, social situations and/or different acaddemic demands) can lead to a feeling of disorientation or "shock" marked in varying degrees by hypersensitivity, anxiety, withdrawal, fatigue and apathy. So, you may question, if I am going through something like this, what can I do about it? First, reflect on your internal expectancies and realize that where they involve issues of separation, dependency and identity, that it takes time and more than a change in environment to work these through. Second, regulate novelty in your life by setting personal priorities. Decide what is most important to you at this time and don't try to do everything at once.

Drs. McCashin and Klein will answer your questions or discuss any issue on your mind. Send or bring your questions to Mental Health, 303 Machmer Hall. All inquiries are strictly confidential.

Getting High With Music

This Wednesday evening you will have the opportunity to experience getting high without the use of drugs at 7:30 in the Student Union Ballroom. Room To Move Speakers program will be presenting Helen Benny, research therapist at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, Baltimore, Maryland. Ms. Benny will be talking about her methods of experiencing Altered States of Consciousness through music. Following the lecture there will be an experiential workshop for the audience.

In 1967 Helen Benny began work as a Music therapist at the Veterans Administration Hospital and Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kansas. In 1969, at the invitation of Dr. John Lilly and Dr. Stanilav Groff, she came to the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, one of the few centers for LDS research in the country. Her work there involved programming music for LDS therapy sessions with alcoholics, drug addicts and terminal cancer patients.

Helen Benny together with Dan Brown has been cooperating with the inter-staff training of Room To Move using guided imagery and music. She has shared with them the use of music for crisis intervention, a program designed for the handling of drug and crisis situations.

Her theory and technique has also been applied to spiritual and transpersonal experience, healing, artistic, creativity, and scientific insight, and the realization of human potential. Recently in a high school near Baltimore, Maryland she has successfully trained over thirty students to become peer group counsellors for their fellow students.

With Ms. Benny on tonight's program is Dr. Louis Savary, author of a recently published book PASSAGES: A guide For Pilgrims of the Mind, a self-instructional book written for beginners of exercises for changing states of consciousness without drugs. Dr. Savary is presently collaborating with Helen Benny in a book for expanding consciousness through music, titled A New Way to Music: Listening With a New Consciousness, to be published by Harper and Row in spring of 1973.

Fine Arts Quartet Makes UMass Debut

The Fine Arts Quartet will be featured as the second event in the University of Massachusetts Chamber Music Series. This noted ensemble is in-residence at the Milwaukee campus of the University of Wisconsin and has built a reputation from its extensive use of recordings, radio, television, and films.

For its debut performance at UMass, the Fine Arts Quartet, performing in Bowker Auditorium Thursday, November 2, at 8 p.m., will offer a program including works by Haydn, the contemporary Argentinian composer Ginastera, and Brahms. Joining the Quartet in a performance of the "Piano Quintet in F" by Brahms will be the noted American pianist Frank Glazer.

Reserved tickets for the Fine Arts Quartet's concert at UMass are now available at $3 for the general public and $1.50 for full-time UMass undergraduates. Contact the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, UMass, Amherst, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium one hour before the concert.

Why Pay More?

79¢ / every week

Monday thru Friday

BLUE PLATE SPECIALS

served 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. & 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. daily

MONDAY
CUTLET & SPAGHETTI
Bread & Butter
Special Dessert
79¢

"EAT"

TUESDAY
SLOPPY JOE on a Roll
Vegetable
Bread & Butter
Special Dessert
79¢

"ENJOY"

WEDNESDAY
SPAGHETTI with ¼ lb. Meatball
Bread & Butter
Special Dessert
79¢

"CHILE"
every day
59¢

THURSDAY
AMERICAN CHOP SUEY
(Austrian Ravioli)
Vegetable
Bread & Butter
Special Dessert
79¢

"SAVE"

FRIDAY
BEEF HASH
Vegetable
Bread & Butter
Special Dessert
79¢

SATURDAY NIGHT
SPAGHETTI
59¢

HATCH CAFETERIA

New Courses In School Of Ed

The following list represents Education learning experiences that are now available under the School of Education's Flexible Curriculum. The purpose of the Flexible Curriculum is to provide alternative choices when developing a program of studies. By maintaining a modified record-keeping and scheduling system within the School of Education, which supplements the University's system, it is possible to have courses which break away from the three-credit, full semester standard. If you have questions call 545-1555 or come to room 121, School of Ed.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES OFFERED:

Lex. #7045-Spec. Prob. in Ed: Aesthetic Resources (Emph. Music) For Inner City Teaching, R. Wiggins, Fri. 10/20, 12:20-3:50, 300 mods, Instructor's Home

Lex. #7050 - Spec. Prob. in Ed: Logistics and Aesthetic Education (Inner City Emph.), R. Wiggins, Th./10/19, 1:00-4:00, 200 mods, Instructor's Home

Lex. #7057 - Curriculum Innovations in Music & Sound in Education: Harmony (1 wk.), R. Wiggins, Wed./10/25, 1:25-3:50, 43 mods, Instructor's Home

Lex. #7058 - Curriculum Innovations in Music & Sound in Education: Rhythm (1 wk.), R. Wiggins, Wd./11/1, 1:25-3:50, 43 mods, Instructor's Home

Lex. 0320 - Language Development in Early Childhood Education, David Day, Wed./10/31-12/12, 9:30-11:30, 100 mods, Herter 225

Lex. #3460 - Psycho-Motor Development & Learning Competence: Translation of Theory into Practice, Boal/Jordan, 10/18, 10/25 - 1:25-3:25; 11/3-12/15 - 1:25-4:25, 100 mods, SBA 204

Lex. #3495 - Spec. Prob. in Ed: Racism and the Suppression of Human Potential, D. Jordan, 10/27, 2:30-4:30, 10 mods, TOBN 304

Lex. #3500 - The Nature of Memory & Its Relationship to Learning Competence, D. Jordan, U.G. 10/18-10/25 - 9:05-11:05; G. 10/18-10/25 - 9:05-11:05, Tu./10/31-10/26 - 11:15-2:15; 100 mods, U.G. DKSN 214, G. SBA 204

Lex. #3505 - Creativity & Learning Competence: Translation of Theory into Educational Practice, Jordan/Leopold, U.G. 10/19, 10/26 - 1:00-3:25; G. 10/19, 10/26 - 1:00-3:25; Th./10/29-12/7 - 1:00-3:25, 200 mods, SBA 204

Lex. #4138 - The Administrator as Decision Maker, D. Flight/Staff, Tu. 10/24, 7:30-10:00 p.m., 10 mods, M M Aud.

Lex. #4139 - The Administrator as Program Director, D. Flight/Staff, Tu./10/31, 7:30-10:00 p.m., 10 mods, M M Aud.

Lex. #7824 - Case Studies: Superintendency, 10/18, 11/1, 8, 15, R. Budde, 100 mods, WOPE 153

Lex. #4629 - Spec. Prob. in Ed: Educational Statistics I: Correlation, W. Gorth/H. Swaminathan, Mon., 3:35-6:05, By Arrangement or 10/30, 15 mods, Chen. 217.

Lex. #5748 - Spec. Prob. in Ed: Community Participation in Alternative Schools and Experience in Pasadena, Phil DeTurk, Th./10/26, 7:45-10:15, 15 mods, SBA 204.

APO Sponsors Las Vegas Night

If you enjoy a night of gambling, but at the same time would like to see something done to help the retarded children at the Belchertown State School, then Las Vegas night Saturday at 7:00 in the Campus Center Auditorium may be the answer to your dilemma.

Alpha Phi Omega in conjunction with the Program Council is sponsoring a mock gambling casino with the proceeds going to the development of a playground at the school that would benefit the severely retarded.

Last year's version of Las Vegas night netted $600 in proceeds for the school, while this year's organizers are aiming for $2,000.

Organizers say the $2,000 would finance the playground project that is headed by UMass Prof. Robert James.

To play any of the various games, it will cost 75 cents to buy $1,500 of play money. Additional money may also be purchased.

Games will include two roulette tables, two gambling wheels, two dice tables, assorted card games, and a crap table.

Gambling will be from 7:00 p.m. until 10:30 at which time the queen (the girl with the most votes) will be announced. Gambling will then continue until 11 p.m. when there will be an auction of several hundred dollars worth of gifts donated by local merchants.

YOUR MONEY'S WELL SPENT AT Archer Kent

Archer Kent

AMHERST
191 No. Pleasant St.

CONGRATULATIONS!
TO ANN MARTIN, Stony Hill Rd. Amherst
WINNER OF THE PERSONAL PORTABLE SONY T.V.
Coupons effective thru 10-24-72

COUPON SPECIALS!

Mfr. $1.09
Close-up mint flavor / Close-up regular flavor
59¢
6.75 oz. Regular or Mint
Limit 2 Expires 10/29

THIS COUPON WORTH
25¢ OFF ON ANY PURCHASE of $1.00 or more except Tobacco or fair trade items.
SUNDAY ONLY 10/29 or 11/5

Mfg. $1.75
BUFFERIN
79¢
Limit 1 Expires 10/29

Mfr. 89¢
Personna 74 Tungsten Steel
Pack of 5
43¢ Double Edge Blades
Limit 2 Expires 10/29

Mfr. $1.50
TACKLE Medicated Gel
2 oz.
Limit 2
Expires 10/29
69¢

Mfr. $1.59
MICRIN Oral Antiseptic Mouthwash
18 oz.
Limit 2
Expires 10/29
69¢

Mfr. $1.09
PRELL Shampoo
3 oz. Concentrate
Limit 2
Expires 10/29
59¢

$1.09 Value
PANTY HOSE
One size fits all.
All shades
39¢
Limit 2 Expires 10/29

Mfr. 79¢
ALKA-SELTZER
Alka-Seltzer 25 Tablets
Limit 1
37¢
Expires 10/29

Mfr. $1.49
RISE Rich Wet Lather
Limit 1
Expires 10/29
14.5 oz. Regular 59¢

Mfr. $1.98
Natural VITAMIN A
25,000 units
100 Tablets
Limit 1
99¢
Expires 10/29

WE DISCOUNT OVER 3000 ITEMS EVERY DAY

PAW
Put it in our gloves
$1.50
olive, brown purple, gray beige, red $2.00
navy, gold black
the PUT ON UNIVERSITY STORE

USCC

Layman's Guide To Referenda

A referendum is a vote or popular expression on an action of the Legislature, initiated by petitions or legislative action. There will be nine statewide referenda this year, as well as local questions.

This is intended as a layman's guide and the explanations below are in the order the questions will appear on the ballot. However, they do not contain the actual wording of the questions--that is sent to every registered voter by the Secretary of State.

NO. 1 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PERMITTING THE ASSESSMENT OF AGRICULTURAL OR HORTICULTURAL LAND AT A VALUE BASED ON ITS AGRICULTURAL USES.

The proposal would authorize the Legislature to enact a law valuing, for taxation purposes, agricultural and horticultural lands according to their agricultural and horticultural uses. No parcel of land less than five acres which has not been actively devoted to such uses for two years preceding the tax year could be valued at less than fair market value.

A YES vote would authorize the assessment of farmland below fair market value, thus enabling the farmer, especially those here in the Western Massachusetts area, to more easily afford to keep his farm and to check the wholesale exploitation by developers of farmland for sub-divisions and apartment complexes.

NO. 2 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT LOWERING THE VOTING AGE TO 18.

The proposal would bring the state Constitution into conformity with the 26th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The intent of this amendment is superseded by the federal action and the amendment to the state Constitution is purely technical.

NO. 3 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROVIDING FOR VOTING BY PAUPERS.

The proposal would remove the prohibition against voting by paupers. This has already been done by court decision. The amendment is technical and would bring Massachusetts Constitution in line with the judicial decision.

NO. 4 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PERMITTING THE GENERAL COURT TO AUTHORIZE THE COMMONWEALTH TO MAKE LOANS TO STUDENTS ATTENDING A COLLEGE, UNIVERSITY OR INSTITUTION OF HIGHER LEARNING.

The proposal would authorize the Legislature to enact a law to permit the state to make loans to Massachusetts residents for tuition and board at any college, university or institution of higher learning.

A YES vote would permit the Legislature to authorize such loans, thus enabling more residents of the state to obtain a higher education.

NO. 5 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT ESTABLISHING THE RIGHT OF THE PEOPLE TO CLEAN AIR AND WATER, FREEDOM FROM EXCESSIVE AND UNNECESSARY NOISE AND THE NATURAL, SCENIC, HISTORIC AND AESTHETIC QUALITIES OF THEIR ENVIRONMENT.

The proposal--THE ENVIRONMENTAL BILL OF RIGHTS--declares that the people have the right to clean air and water, freedom from excessive and unnecessary noise, and the natural, scenic, historic and aesthetic qualities of their environment. It further declares that the protection of the right to the conservation, development and utilization of the agricultural, mineral, forest, water, air and other natural resources is a PUBLIC purpose. The Legislature is authorized to adopt necessary laws and provide for eminent domain taking where required for the purposes of the proposal. Any property so taken may only be used for other purposes or disposed of upon a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

If enacted, this proposal would enable the state to more effectively combat pollution and exploitation of our environment. Environmental problems are not limited to one town or city, but cover vast areas over which there is now no adequate regulations or environmental guidelines.

A YES vote would create an Environmental Bill of Rights, establishing as constitutional RIGHTS freedom from pollution and the protection of the natural environment.

NO. 6 — A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT AUTHORIZING THE GENERAL COURT TO IMPOSE AND LEVY A GRADUATED INCOME TAX AND TO BASE SUCH TAX UPON THE FEDERAL INCOME TAX.

The proposal would authorize, but not require, the Legislature to modify the Massachusetts income tax laws by the use of graduated rates instead of the present flat, or uniform, rates. The lawmakers could do this in any one of three ways:

1) Apply a uniform rate of percentage to an individual's federal income tax liability.

2) Apply graduated rates to an individual's federal taxable income.

3) Apply graduated rates to income determined to be taxable under Massachusetts law.

The Legislature would also be authorized to provide for reasonable exemptions, deductions and abatements and make the definition of any term used in the state tax law automatically the same as it is under Federal Law.

Thus the people of Massachusetts can amend the constitution in November to allow a fair graduated income tax to be substituted for the present unfair flat-rate tax--unfair because it taxes everyone at the same rate. A Graduate Income Tax is a fairer tax, because the rich are taxed at a higher rate than those with low or middle incomes. If Massachusetts had a Graduated Income Tax now, 90% of the taxpayers would pay less. You Can change the Massachusetts tax.

Birth Control Is What You Make It

By MARIA McNAMARA

"Birth control methods are only as effective as the way you use them." This was a main point brought out by Ms. Barbara Collishou Thursday night in a talk given in Sylvan's Area Government room. The talk, dealing with contraceptives, was sponsored by the new Sylvan Women's Center and was open to all women and men of the University.

The main speaker for the night was Ms. Ann Grose, a nurse at the Infirmary. She was aided by Ms. Collishou in presenting to the students various methods of contraception as well as their advantages and disadvantages. The two women also spoke briefly on the subjects of venereal disease, sterilization, and responsibility in sexual relations.

"The dilema of contraception lies chiefly in the fact that any advantage which might be gained by such a choice is invariably offset to some extent by an associated or inherent disadvantage. There is, in other words, no single choice which is best for all choosers." This statement is taken from one of the varied pamphlets put out by the University Health Services.

Starting with what they considered the least reliable, Ms. Grose and Ms. Collishou described seven methods of preventing a pregnancy. The most effective method now in use is the Pill, which completely stops ovulation and affects the system in the same way as a preganancy. The least recommended, according to Ms. Grose, are withdrawal and the rhythm method.

When asked about the prelevance of venereal disease on campus, Ms. Grose cited the fact that cases of gonorreah far outnumber those of syphilis. Syphilis, she said, is the far more damaging of the diseases.

Ms. Grose then asked the students who they felt should bear the responsibility of seeing that a contraceptive device is used. Most of those present felt it should be a mutual arrangement and that neither the male nor the female should have the whole responsibility, even though most present methods involve the woman.

HOMECOMING '72

THURSDAY

FRIDAY

Shorts from the New York Erotic Films Festival

Student Union Ballroom — 7 & 9 p.m. 50c

SATURDAY

National Black Theatre

Barbara Ann Teer, Director

— Student Union Ballroom — 8 p.m. $1.00 UMass. undergrads

Kon Fu Shun in concert

Student Union Ballroom 11 p.m. - 3 a.m. 50c

Las Vegas Night

Campus Center Auditorium 8 p.m. - 12 mid.

SUNDAY

THX 1138

Student Union Ballroom 7 p.m. & 9 p.m.

Fire 5-2111

UMass Police 5-2121

Sharon Tate in Roman Polanski's FEARLESS VAMPIRE KILLERS

SATURDAY Oct. 28 at 7 - 9 - 11 in MAHAR AUD.

ROADRUNNER CARTOONS 75c

Sponsored by Cinema Club

We all live in a "YELLOW SUBMARINE!"

Join us this SATURDAY EVENING Thompson 104 6-8-10-MIDNITE

Plus "GOING STEADY"

1930-1939 THE GOLDEN AGE OF AMERICAN CINEMA PRESENTS:

THE BEST OF THE MARX BROTHERS IN

A DAY AT THE RACES

AT 7:00 & 11:30 WITH

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON

WITH JAMES STEWART AT 9:20

WED., OCT. 25 IN C.C.A.

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 12345

24 HR. TEL. 733-5131

ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.

YOU'LL LIKE a thriller MY MUTHER PG

Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:40

Sat., Sun. 2:-3:55 - 5:40 - 7:35 - 9:45

One of the most daring, original pictures ever made

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE R

Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:40 Sat. - Sun. 2:35 - 7:30 - 9:50

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY G TODAY 2:00 - 7:00 - 9:40

"BAD COMPANY" IS GOOD COMPANY. GO SEE IT!" —Richard Schickel, Life Magazine

Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:30 Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:50 - 5:40 7:30 - 9:30

"BAD COMPANY" JEFF BRIDGES BARRY BROWN PG

"Freshness and Excitement! Moving and Hilarious!" —Rex Reed, New York Daily News

Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:40

Andy Warhol Presents "HEAT" X

Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:25 5:20 - 7:30 - 9:40

Sat. - Sun. "COURAGE OF LASSIE" 1:30 - 3:30

Nixon The Ecologist Goes Up In Smoke

"President Nixon has spearheaded a frontal attack on the problems facing the American environment...to provide a better life for all Americans. Pollution-free dreams of the 60's have been transformed into the Nixon battle plan for the 70's."

–1972 Republican Campaign Factbook

NEW YORK (LNS) — A television campaign advertisement shows Richard Nixon signing environmental bills amid scenes of smoke-belching factories and dirty waterways. The president speaks: "With your support and with the help of Congress, we can reclaim and preserve the natural beauty of America."

While that is their campaign line, Republican dreams of pushing Nixon as an avid environmentalist may have vanished into polluted air recently when the president vetoed the $24.6 billion Federal Water Pollution Control Act – the most far-reaching environmental bill passed during his administration.

Within two hours after Nixon refused to sign the bill into law, the Senate voted 52 to 12 to override the veto, and the House followed later, 247 to 23. Both votes easily surpassed the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto.

In 1970 Nixon made nationwide headlines by calling for "funds to help states build the necessary capability" to deal with environmental problems. Since then, however, Nixon's actions have had little connection with his words. While the administration has sent some 25 environmental bills to Congress, Nixon had not actively supported many of them. And when Congressional committees have strengthened the provisions of the legislation, the administration has vigorously opposed the action.

In 1970, Nixon actively fought the Clean Air Act, yet now he takes credit for the bill. Similarly, he opposed the 1975 deadline for auto companies to cut polluting tailpipe emissions by 90%; but in a current TV campaign spot, the Environmental Protection Agency (Nixon's creation) is given credit for the legislation.

With the camera focused on cars clogging roads into a city, the narrator says: "The new Nixon agency ordered all car manufacturers to cut hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide emissions 90% by 1975." And while the Nixon administration opposed a program to begin cleaning up the Great Lakes, the film shows Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau signing an agreement to end dumping polluted spoils into the lakes. In the background, Nixon is heard quoting T.S. Eliot: "Clean the air, clear the sky, wash the wind."

But with all his talk about cleaning things up, it seems that all Nixon has been doing is white-washing his record to convince the people that he has done things he hasn't done--and more frightening, that he plans to do things he has no intention of doing.

Ziegler Mum About Scandals

WASHINGTON (LNS) - With a new wave of scandal breaking over the Nixon administration's head every day, there's a good bit of scrambling among top presidential aides to escape the hot seat. Nixon himself has declined to comment.

"I have noted such charges...some of my more partisan advisers feel that I should respond in kind. I shall not do so...I am not going to dignify such comments."

But some of Nixon's friends have found that they cannot ease out of the problems as easily and diplomatically as their chief. Take for instance White House press conferences on October 19 given by White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler and Presidential advisor John Ehrlichman. Ehrlichman had been asked in the afternoon if he knew of any telephone log kept by Nixon's appointments secretary Dwight Chapin, showing calls from a man linked to political espionage against the Democrats. The dialogue is as reported by the New York Post.

"Turn it off, turn it off! Don't get into that, turn it off!" whispered an excited Ziegler in Ehrlichman's ear after jumping to his side. What he said could not be heard by reporters at the conference, but the words were carried over the White House public address system into the downstairs press room and laughingly noted.

Ehrlichman quickly changed the subject, calling for a different question. "I think my friend Ziegler covered all that this morning," he said.

And he was right. Ziegler had covered the subject at the 11 am White House briefing--with 10 no comments or refusals to answer questions.

Q. "Are you acting on instructions when you give us this no comment?

A. I have no comment.

Q. What is the reason for no further comment?

A. The reason I am giving you no further comment: I have nothing else to say on the subject.

Q. Who instructed you to say no further comment, Ron?

A. That is a question I am not even going to respond to.

And so it went for five minutes--frustration, irritation and finally laughter as one reporter, recalling a line out of the old House Committee on Un-American Activities hearings, asked, "Ron, are you now or have you ever been a member of....?"

Ziegler left the room.

Halloween arrives this Friday evening. . .

"THE FREAKS"

plus

"The Time Travelers"

in color

6:15 - 8:45 - 11:15

Thomp. 104 Oct. 27

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD

Only American Film to be so Honored

"One of the most daring, original, and totally fascinating pictures ever made."

Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 Rated - R -

He survived the deadliest day on earth to enjoy the sexiest night in outer space!

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE

Campus Cinemas AMHERST HADLEY LINE

Dollar Night! Monday Night Only! Everyone $1.00

REEFER MADNESS Scourge of the Devil

Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 Final Week Rated PG

It's an obsession!

THE FIRESIGN THEATRE

The Godfather

Marlon Brando Al Pacino James Caan Richard Castellano Robert Duvall John Marley Richard Conte Diane Keaton

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 Comet wagon, 6 cyl., Manitran. $250. Needs some work. 549-6335 eves.

61 Ford Bus/Van $200 with new tires. Some paneling-need little work. Call after 1:30 253-5397 ask for Roy. tf10-25

1963 Mercedes 220S excint running cond; new snow tires. For quick sale $250 or make offer. Pat Greaney 203 Hamlin 253-9237. tf10-26

For sale 1956 GMC school bus. Gas heater, stove, ref, lamp. Good condition $150 Call 542-1720, 9-5. tf10-27

1971 Fender Reverb amp. Good for harp and guitar and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279. tf10-27

1961 Chevy Wagon. 327 w/holly four barrel, 4 P-70-14 Gd. yr. polyglass tires, ps/pb, new battery. Great winter car. $250.00. 546-7645. tf10-30

1967 Malibu, low mileage. Asking $950. Call 253-2787. tf10-30

1960 Volvo PV544, $150. Call 546-7932. tf10-27

1969 Fiat 850 Spider Convert. Red with black top; 25,000 miles. $1,000 or best offer. Call 584-2564, Ask for Bob. tf10-31

Very Reasonable!! 1964 VW Bug, Fair condition, new muffler, needs some work. $100 or best offer. Call 545-0944 or 545-0944. tf10-26

LOST

Gray w/white chest, belly, paws. Reward 256-8862. tf10-26

Wanted. To represent airlines on campus. Good pay if interested. Call 253-3162 or write Campus Rep. Box 202, Amherst, Mass. tf10-26

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail. Nov. 1. Room in Puffton. Own room, everything incl. $70/mo. Call Lester or Neal 549-6399. tf10-31

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3601. tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4436. tf11-17

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted 1mm in Squire Vill Apts — Sunderland. Have own bdrm. Call Jim at 545-0074 or 665-1711. tf10-25

Female graduate student preferred to share apartment. Walking distance/bus service to UMass — own room $80.00 a month. Call 549-1137. tf10-31

Roommate wanted Rolling Green own room $100 mo util incl. Call 253-7523. tf10-25

Roommate wanted - Sunderland, 5 mi. from campus, own room, $52.50 per month, heat included. Call Doug or Neil after 6 - 665-4178. tf10-30

Won't discriminate — 2 roommates male or female wanted, own bedroom clean. Undergrad $80/mo. 315 Puffton Vil. Frank. tf10-27

ENTERTAINMENT

"Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" Find out FRI. OCT. 27, at 7:30 and 9:00 Mahar Aud. tf10-27

BEATLES "YELLOW SUBMARINE" PLUS TRUE ROMANCE "GOING STEADY" HAPPENS SAT. EVE. OCT. 28, THOMP. 104, 6-8-10-Midnite! tf10-27

HALLOWEEN BRINGS "THE FREAKS" & "TIME TRAVELERS" IN COLOR. THIS FRIDAY EVENING, THOMPSON 104, 6:15 - 8:45 - 11:15. COME MEET THE CROWD! tf10-27

Sharon Tate stars in Roman Polanski's "Fearless Vampire Killers" at 7-9-11 on Sat. Oct. 28 in Mahar. Also 2 Road Runners. 75c. tf10-27

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1970 Norton Commando 750 1/4m. E.T 11's, top end 140, Racing Suspension. Last season rebuilt & modifield. $1300. Call 665-4375. tf10-25

HELP WANTED

Work for largest environmental movement in U.S. part & full time positions. Call 253-7793 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. daily. tf10-30

Live-in babysitter. Free rm., board and Mt. Snow season pass. Tiny salary. Interview, references. Write Box 341 Wilmington, Vt. tf10-26

House parnts for girls group home. $9000 plus room, board, fringes. Send resume to Girls Center, 116 Plainfield St., Springfield. tf10-25

PE or Rec. Major to aid in teaching activities to emotionally disturbed children. 12-3 or 3-5 daily. Call 737-3549 (12-5 p.m.) tf10-25

Good exp. blues, rock vocalist, stones V. Underground needs musicians to start band. Write Dana Webster, 163 Lincoln Ave., Amherst. tf10-25

WANTED

Cash for 3 speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5390. tf10-31

Old Harley 74 any condition, prefer in late '50's. Call 546-9187. tf10-25

Cash for 3 speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5390. tf10-25

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-6716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Roommate M or F. $60/month, excellent location, own room, 1 mile from campus, call 549-0130, 4 p.m. or anytime. tf10-27

Ski companion for Jan. term. Europe or West. Good skier. Call Sue 253-5450. Leave message. tf10-25

FOR SALE

Don't be left out in the cold! Waterbed insulator pad $5.50, UL approv heater $27.50, FAC guarantee bed $19 liner $4.50 hose rental. 546-9126. tf10-25

For sale 1969 Opel GT. Must sell. Gold black int. Call 253-7353 Amherst. tf10-27

Car stereo system 8 track/FM stereo. Excellent condition. $75 or best offer. Tapes available cheap. 546-7200. tf10-25

Pair of Fisher model XP-7B stereo sp KA systems only 1 1/2 yrs old — $150 for the pr. SM elect guitar amp for beginner $30. 863-4508. tf10-25

Fender Super-Bassman amp. 100RMS, 220 Peak, 2-15" D160B jbls. One year old. List $985 will take $440 or best. Call after 11:30 369-4091. tf10-25

21" color TV $150., 22" black & white TV $15, Television Center, 55 No. Pleasant St. tf10-25

One KLH Model 20 stereo component system 250 dollars. Call 323-7376 after 8. tf10-26

For Sale - used 8 track tapes, most $2.00. Call 546-5782. tf10-26

Must go! 69 Yamaha 350 good condition, extras. Priced to sell. Peter 253-5779. tf10-26

Moving to Tex. Must sell snow tires from Maverick (6.95-14) w/walls, exc. cond. $25 for pair. Call Kenny 549-6399. tf10-31

1 pr. Reiker buckle boots for lined, size 7 med. Worn once. $50.00 worth $90.00. Call 369-4412 in Conway, anytime. Keep trying. tf10-31

Metal skis w/Solomon 10 bindings & Henke boots 9W w/boot bag — $100. Will sell separately. Call George at 665-4169 after 6:00. tf10-27

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now! Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door. tf10-31

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1766. tf4-em.

2 healthy goats 1 — A good milker other starts in Spring. Call 268-3228 Haydenville for information. tf10-27

Recorders, flutes, fifes, wooden and bamboo flutes at Creative Endeavor 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831. tf10-27

For Sale, Waterbed - 8X7 - $50. Free full length brown fur coat with sale. Both in excellent condition. Jerry 256-8085. 10-27

King size Waterbed: Heater, thermostat, padded frame, 1 year guarantee, now $50. Call 367-2091. tf10-27

Ecology minded? Buy Shakiee's Basic L for the laundry. 100% bidegradable. Buy natural vitamins too. Carol 253-2841. tf10-30

Must sell Del Rey Elec. guitar and small supro amp $100 or best offer. Call Kev 6-5800. Best after 6 p.m. tf10-27

Pioneer AMP BSR trntbl criterion spks 3 wks old perf cond. asking $250, haggle. Many records @ good prices call Rick 546-9003. tf10-25

Must sell a pair of ladies ski boots, size 8, for $15. Good condition. Boot tree included. Am selling for buckle boots. Call 6-5446. tf10-2.

PERSONAL

Sensuous-cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S, till noon, 256-6272 17 S. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now. Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door. tf10-25

Mommy: Is it trunk mouth yet? Don't run out of "ink" before you finish writing your name on the ceiling. Love, Boo-Boo. tf10-25

Doctor Flynn, Doctor Flynn, I ripped my flesh! Will you operate? Catherine & Patricia. tf10-25

Jean - KKG — Wish you the best of good times on your internship. I'll miss the lemonade. Doug. tf10-25

Vito Angelo, Happy 22 years forever. Start singing those snoidal blues but don't bend over! Love Camelia, Poochie & the Peckering 6's. tf10-25

Anyone with any questions or wanting information on homosexuality or would just like to talk, call 586-2611. Ask for Paul. Eve. tf10-27

EMPLOYMENT

Sta-Power - 253-7303. tf10-27

Yellowstone & all U.S. Nat. Parks. Booklet tells how & where to apply. Send $2.00. Arnold Agency, A206 E. Main, Rexburg, Idaho. 83440. tf10-31

VAN FOR SALE

1965 Ford van, mech. perfect, new tires, heater, sticker, int. panelled, stereo. $700. 584-7727. Keep calling. tf10-25

APTS. WANTED

23 year old girl, quiet, easy going, desires apt. or room with other girls for Nov. & Dec. in Amherst area. Call Carol 256-6745. tf10-27

TO SUBLET

One bedroom apt. to let beginning Dec 1. Close to campus. Call 549-1407 after 6 p.m. tf10-30

1 Bed. furn. apt., all utilities, $160. China, bedding, carpet, etc. Near University. Phone day 545-2896; evgs. 665-4291. tf10-31

AUTOS

Sta-Power - 253-7303. tf10-27

Notices

ARMENIAN CLUB
A meeting for all Armenian students will be held Wed. 25 in Herter, Rm 119 at 8:30 pm. Important topic to discuss, everyone please attend.

BAHA'I INFO
Tonight in rm 811 at 8:00 come and hear about the Baha'i Faith. Everyone welcome. Talk, discussion, free literature.

BASIC PHOTO WORKSHOP
Introductory meeting Thurs 10/25, 6:00 pm at Craft Workshop, S.U. Everyone welcome.

BIOCHESMISTRY SEMINAR
Dr. Donald L. Schneider will speak about "The Role of Lysosomes in the Turnover of a Soluble Protein" at 4:15 10/26, 301 GRC.

CHESS CLUB
Meeting tonight in CC 804-808. Come in any time between 7:30 pm and midnight to play chess.

GSS PLEDGES:
Meeting at 6:30 in Mem. Hall. Call Judy 5-2308 if you can't make it.

HALLOWEEN CELEBRATION
Meet the freaks Fri. night. They're ready for Halloween. (P.S. If you don't dig freaks, how about Time Travelers? Thompson 104.

KUNG FU CLASS
Class in Chinese Self-Defense to be held Thurs. 10/26 in 151 Goessman Lab at 7:30 pm. Girls and new members are welcome.

OUTING CLUB
Pre trip meeting tonight at 7:30 in 162 CC for all those who are going on the Knox camping trip. Please attend.

PERFORMERS
Talent wanted for Country Comfort Coffee House Sat. 10/28, 8 pm. Call Sogo, 5-2303, Rm 401.

PROGRAM COUNCIL
Important Program Council Meeting tonight, Wed. 10/25 at 6:00 in the Student Activities Work Area.

SENIOR CLASS MEETING
Weird meeting of senior class will take place on Thurs. 10/26 at 7:30 pm in CC (see schedule for room). Come and help in the absurd reactionary affair.

SIGMA DELTA TAU
Do you like folk songs? Do you like to sing? Well then come join the sisters of SDT tonite 7-8:15 at 409 No. Pleasant St. for our "Folknite".

STRATEGY GAME CLUB
Attention all Avalon Hillers; there will be a meeting tonight at 6 pm in CC 805-809.

STUDENT SENATE
This week's meeting has been cancelled. The regular agenda will be taken up next Wed. at 7 pm as usual.

TERTULIA
The weekly Tertulia will be held today beginning at 2:30. Coffee served. All are welcome to attend.

WILDLIFE SOCIETY
Wildlife meeting tonite-same time, same place. Pelham project to be discussed. Please attend.

ZEN CIRCUS IS COMING
May be better than cornflakes for breakfast. Nov. 11 and 12. Sign in Pierpont Lobby.

LOST
Brown suede shoulder bag out of Catalyst. Don't care about the money but please return, no questions asked. Contact Susan in 419 Mary Lyon.

Basset Hound- black tan white answers to "Jasper". Male. If found call 253-9442 or Apt. 82 Riverglade Apts.

Apple green wallet. ID's from Idaho. No questions asked. Call Jeannine 6-9897.

Blue spiral notebook around CC, Goodell, or S.U. (Econ 211-Money and Banking) call Tom at 6-6834 or 66890. Need it for exam!

Bright yellow folder whose contents is for a math course. Please I need it. Call Hannah 546-6717 or leave at Lost and Found.

FilmProgram

Film students on campus should be informed that Butterfield, a small dorm in the Central Residential Area, has for the last two years been building a broad, informal film program.

This program includes: (1) Film viewing - 35 features this semester of American cinema of the 30s and 40s. (2) Use of 16mm production equipment - cameras, lenses, editing equipment. (3) Course work - a production oriented Rhetoric 180 was taught last Spring.

Film production is a group process; the residential setting facilitates that process and Butterfield is well along the way to developing a film production company composed of students of some expertise in various areas of cinema from the theatrical to the technical.

Students interested in this kind of residential film production company contact in Butterfield: Russ Mundy 546-4538.

ALL THESE VEHICLES CARRY A 50-50 GUARANTEE FOR 30 DAYS.

1970 Pont. GTO, V-8 a real cream puff	$2495
1969 Toyota Corona Real Sharp	$1195
1965 Ford Mustang Red V-8 Std.	$595
1967 Ford Galaxie V-8 Auto.	$795
1967 Olds Delta 88 V-8 Auto-air	$995
1965 Ford Custom V-8 Auto	$495
1971 Std. Beattie Orange	$1595
1970 Sq. Back Clean car	$1695
1965 VW Sedan Black	$595
1963 VW Bus 17,000 orig. miles	$1095

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.

OPEN EVES. 'till 9.

NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN

Your Authorized VW Dealer

246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton

FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers -

Call 584-8620

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by SYDNEY OMARR

Sagittarius enjoys travel, is a natural philosopher with humanitarian instincts. Natives of this zodiacal sign share secrets with Scorpio, can make money with Capricorn, are drawn to Gemini and often become attached to Virgo. Sagittarius is the physician, the dramatist and the student of law. Weight can be a problem. Sagittarius is the ninth sign, is associated with the thighs, is said to be "ruled" by Jupiter and has had the number 3 assigned to it. Some famous persons born under Sagittarius include Garson Kanin, Joe DiMaggio and Archie Moore.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New ideas are tested. Some neighbors, relatives may appear ultraconservative. However, those close to you do want you to succeed. Pioneering efforts will succeed. But you can't change people overnight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who teaches will seek your opinion. Co operate but don't waste time. Means make plain that your efforts are worth something more than compliments. Trust hunch. Look beyond the immediate. Perceive potential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stop trying to skip essentials, including meals. Energies can be debilitated. Plainly, it is necessary now for you to take better care of yourself. Journey may have to be postponed. Pace activities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some revisions in plans are indicated. Pressure is exerted behind scenes. Be thorough. Don't delegate duties. Apparent minor matter could be blown up out of proportion. Know it and take precautionary measures.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): Friend may resort to heavy handed methods. Weigh various factors, including motive. Stop and listen and evaluate. Applies especially where opposite sex is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home, security—these matters are accented. Gift purchase could be more appropriate than imagined. Make conciliatory gesture to family member. Taurus, Libra persons are involved. You get opportunity to improve position.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't go too far afield. Stick to familiar ground. One you took for granted has ideas which would surprise you. Do some additional reading. Gain indicated through written work. Check with Pisces.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relative may have idea which could save you money. Don't permit pride to stand in way of progress. Heed voice of experience. Capricorn is in picture. Joint effort succeeds. Take inventory.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish what you start. Don't initiate new project. Instead, round out present activity. Permit mate, partner to take initiative. You gain most now by waiting, listening and learning. Bide your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cooperate with Scorpio. Lend weights of experience, prestige. Your efforts will be repaid. Know it and act accordingly. Fresh approach now pays dividends. Break through to new horizons. Live up to potential.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid acting on impulse. Extra planning now aids in achieving ultimate objective. One close to you requires special attention. Some plans may have to be changed. Go with the tide. Be analytical.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Differentiate between desire and necessity. If impatient, you hamper chances for success. Build slowly. Strive to fulfill past commitments. Leave no loose ends. You get chance to create a more secure position.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: you tend to be introspective. Very few persons know the real you. In December, social life will be accelerated. Throughout this year, you have been summing up, completing, getting pieces together, preparing for project which will crystallize in 1973.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Transfix
4 Piece of dinnerware
8 Greek letter
11 River in Siberia
12 Sicilian volcano
13 Fall behind
14 Near
15 Place
17 Put in harmony
19 Hit lightly
21 Man's nickname
23 Mournful
24 Verve
26 Soak
28 Average
31 Small child
33 Tropical fruit
35 Expire
36 Hebrew month
38 Followed
41 French article
42 Meadow
44 Longing
45 Measure of weight
47 Choicest
49 Place
51 Narrate
54 Capuchin monkey
56 Posed for portrait
58 Tiny
59 Gratify
62 Inlet
64 Parent (colloq.)
65 Organ of hearing
66 Metal
68 Praise
70 Intellect
71 Sinks in middle 72 Ventilate

DOWN
1 Part of flower
2 Preposition
3 Short sleep
4 Hinder
5 Pronoun
6 Nahoor sheep
7 Chapeaus
8 Avoided
9 Sunburn
10 Mature
11 Tardy
16 Guido's low note
18 Scottish cap
20 Stroke
22 Explains
25 Negative
27 Sesame
29 Be ill
30 Born
32 Attempt
34 Obtain
36 Priest's vestment
37 Insect
39 Roman bronze
40 Speck
43 Declare
46 Recent
48 Chinese pagoda
50 Mountain lakes
52 Nocturnal animal
53 Conduct
55 Egyptian goddess
57 Note of scale
59 Church bench
60 Burma tribesman
61 Period of time
63 A state (abbr.)
67 King of Bashan
69 Three-toed sloth

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 25

Fall Lacrosse Ends On Happy Note

By BILL KING

Fall lacrosse at UMass ended on a rather happy note as the Minutemen stickers romped Boston Lacrosse Club Saturday 7-1, before crushing the Greenies from Dartmouth 11-3 on Sunday.

Garber's Gorillas went right to work on BLC as Fred Michels rifled a score past former UMass co-captain, Bruce Crawford, assisted by Frank Garrahan. Less than two minutes later, Michels scored his second on a second effort, unassisted tally. Frank Garrahan lifted the UMass effort to four on a goal from Pete Connolly and a second unassisted score. Co-captain Dwight Bloomquist then made it 5-0 on a beautiful unassisted play as the first period ended.

The second period was a continuation of the first as Steve Crimmins scored for UMass. BLC came right back as former UMass All-Americans Charley Hardy and Paul Ritch teamed up to keep the game decent. Ritch's goal was the first real good shot on starting goalie John Rutledge, as the Gorilla defense showed great form. Joe DeRiso boosted the Minutemen to seven, assisted by Fred Michels, to close the period.

The third period action was limited to no score for either team, although both Bruce Crawford and Jim Haddad turned away several good shots.

Sunday's clash was repetitious of Saturday. At 10:30 of the first period, Dwight Bloomquist shook the nets on an excellent feed by Jack Moran. Two minutes later Fred Michels was on the receiving end of a Bloomquist pass for the second UMass goal. Dartmouth came back at 13:15 with their first to close out the period.

The second period belonged to attackman Pete Connolly. Connolly scored three goals on assists from co-captain Hirsh Seidman, Jack Moran, and Frank Garrahan and an unassisted score on a bad Green clear. Dartmouth managed two nets as the game turned to a bone bruising clash of bodies. At 3:23 of the third period, Pete Connolly showed the Greens he wasn't through as he scored, again unassisted. John Martin blazed home a score on a pass from Fred Michels before the "Little Big Stick", Connolly, fed Frank Garrahan for the ninth UMass goal. John Martin scored his second from Dave Dibble and Andy Chefer hit from Joe DeRiso to round out the 11-3 scoring. The Gorilla net keepers and defense came up with some fine play in the brutal clash. The physical Greenies sent back to Ivy land a little more the worse for wear as the Gorillas matched them muscle for muscle.

Lacrosse at Massachusetts now begins its winter lay off and fund raising before the Washington's Birthday practices and the spring season.

Justice Finally Comes

By BOB ESTELLE

Well, the baseball season is finally over and, thank goodness, baseball managed to remain in the good graces of the fans despite a player strike last spring. But more important, justice was done to a team which truly deserved it.

Yes, in case you haven't heard, the Oakland Athletics are now the World Champions of baseball. This is the first time the A's have been in a World Series since 1931 and the first time they have won one since 1930.

But it isn't just the fact that it has been over four decades since this has happened to the A's that makes it justice. It is the way that it happened to them. To explain this, a summary of the history of the Philadelphia-Kansas City-Oakland A's:

The Athletics were founded, along with the American League, in 1901 and were owned and managed by Cornelius (Connie Mack) McGillicuddy until 1954. During Mack's time, the Philadelphia ballclub won nine pennants and five world series'. The first six of these pennants won by the A's came in the early years when they boasted of the $100,000 infield (Frank "Home Run" Baker, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry, and Stuffy McInnis). This bunch brought the World Championship to the City of Brotherly Love three times; 1910, 1911, and 1913. The other three pennants came in 1929, 1930, and 1931, with Series titles coming in '29 and '30. Players of that era included Hall-of-Famers Lefty Grove, Mickey Cochrane, Al Simmons and Jimmy Foxx.

Afterwards, the A's fell on hard times, on the field as well as the gate. They had a few bright spots on the field, the most notable of them being Ferris Fain's two consecutive batting titles in 1951-52 and Bobby Shantz' 24-7 record and MVP award in '52. But that didn't help the attendance much and in 1954, at age 92, Mack was forced to sell his ballclub.

The buyer was Arnold Johnson, who moved the A's to Kansas City where they took on the function of being a major-league farmclub of the New York Yankees. It seemed that almost any player the A's had with any talent wound up in Yankee pinstripes. Examples of this include Clete Boyer, Hector Lopez, Bob Cerv, Ralph Terry, Bud Daley, Bobby Shantz, and most notably, Roger Maris.

But in 1960, an evolution started: an evolution that would climax with a World Series victory in 1972. What happened that year was that Charles O. Finley bought the ballclub from Johnson, who couldn't manage to have a team finish in the first division.

In Finley's first years as owner, the A's became more known for a high rate of managerial turnovers and less known as an organization trying to build a winning team. The eccentricities of Finley also became apparent with the green and gold uniforms, the A's "official" mascot (a jackass named, what else, Charlie O.), and a zoo placed behind the center field fence. These things infuriated local officials of K.C. who forced the ballclub out of their city and into Oakland following the 1967 season.

But behind the scenes, the setting up of a player draft was getting the A's a nucleus of players that would eventually win the '72 Series. These people include "Catfish" Hunter, Joe Rudi, Reggie Jackson, John Odom, Dave Duncan, Dick Green, Sal Bando, Campy Campaneris and Gene Tenace.

The breaks started to come Oakland's way in 1971. Charlie O. (the owner, not the jackass) finally found the right manager for the cluo in the person of Dick Williams, who had been the leader of the "Impossible Dream" of the 1967 Boston Red Sox but who had fallen in bad graces with the front office for his constant conflicts with Carl Yastrzemski. Another break came in the form of a left-handed pitcher named Vida Blue who, because of his big year in '71, gave the A's the shot-in-the-arm they needed-on the field and at the gate. That year the A's, as we all know, won the AL West, Vida Blue was the league's MVP and Dick Williams was the manager of the year.

The 1972 season brought anticipation of a pennant into A's fans and suddenly, the A's were drawing fans into the Oakland Coliseum. The race was further agitated by an early season hot streak by the Minnesota Twins and a summer surge by the Chicago White Sox, whom the A's beat out for the divisional championship in the final week of the regular season.

Then came the playoff with Detroit for the right to go into the Series. That series went an exciting five games involving, among other things, come-from-behind victories by both clubs, and a bat-throwing incident starring Bert Campaneris.

The Series itself was even more exciting. Not that it included the best quality the game could offer, but who needs that to have exciting baseball? Besides, which is more important?

Well, after 42 seasons of being practically ignored, the Athletics are finally back on top. It took three cities, a heavy managerial changeover, green and gold uniforms, a jackass, perennial second-division ballclubs, and, finally, the patience of building up a team and finding the right manager to run it.

This, friends, is justice.

10 PIN BOWLING

Evenings 4:30 - 10:30

Monday - Friday

50c per string

Boyden Gym.

Powderpuff Teams In Stretch

By DIANE BISSONNETTE

While for most teams powderpuff football action has ended for the '72 season, for the best, the most decisive games are yet to be played.

Tri Sigma, pulled ahead in the sorority Theban league by defeating Alpha Chi Omega, last years' soority champs, 12-6. Tri Sig is undefeated to date and has accumulated 44 points in 5 games.

Meeting Tri Sig for the Sorority title will be the Chi Otees who have compiled 65 points and four wins. Gamma Sig, who handed the Chi Otees their only loss early in the season, were held back by the tough defense and versatile offense of Chi O, in the last season game. Barb Barry starred offensively for the ChiOtees scoring 12 of their 16 points.

In the Residence hall division the Koalas are undefeated in the Aquarius League. Behind their star quarterback, Karen Dolphin, the Koalas have scored 65 points this season. Their first opponents in play-off action will be the Melville Whalers also undefeated and defending residence champs. The Whalers have scored an impressive 134 points and have allowed only 6 points to be scored against them.

Patterson's Packers, another undefeated residence team will meet the winner of the Koala - Whaler game to decide the Residence Hall title. Behind Kathy Lawsen, who has scored 98 individual points and their quarterback Mary Myers, the Packers all novice football players, have scored a total of 116 points.

BAKER AND CHADBOURNE fight it out in powderpuff action. (MDC Photo by Frank Morra)

Team manager David Moore, expressed confidence in his team, "I think we're going to win campus champs and so don't the girls." They'll know for sure Tuesday, Oct. 31 when they meet their opponents.

With three wins and no losses to date, the Mushrooms Independent team, look like the sure first place winner in their league. The Alkies with a 2-1 win-loss record could surprise them however, after losing to the Mushrooms 38-0 earlier in the season.

JV Runners Keep It Up; Easily Handle BC

Saturday afternoon, the UMass Junior-Varsity Cross-Country team ran its best race of the year, and nearly shut-out Boston College in an 18-45 romp. The win improved their record to 4-2.

The meet was little more than an intrasquad race for UMass. B.C. was never a factor, and only one Eagle runner managed to break into the top ten. Tom Wilson led early and was never seriously challenged on the way to his second consecutive first-place finish. Phil Broughton ran well, and took second. Dennis Bussiere, Joe Martins, and Eric Ruth, who took fifth through seventh, all had their best finishes of the season.

In a sidelight event that may be of far reaching significance, Charlotte Lettis became the first woman runner ever to compete against men in intercollegiate competition. The New England Women's Cross-Country champion ran well behind the leaders, but ran a steady race, and finished strong.

WALT POWERS

For Your Convenience

PICK UP YOUR STUDENT TICKETS for

UMASS vs. CONNECTICUT

(Saturday, October 28, 1972 - Alumni Stadium 1:00 p.m.)

at the following times and locations

MAIN CONCOURSE - CAMPUS CENTER

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25 12:30 - 3:00

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26 12:30 - 3:00

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27 12:30 - 3:00

OR ANY DINING COMMONS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26 4:30 - 6:30

(a service of your athletic department)

OH NO! HERE IT COMES AGAIN!—Dick Cummings (30), Jim Queeney (61), and Pell Pennington (11) escort ball carrier Jim Mahaney around right end into the end zone. The Minutemen overpowered the beleaguered Rams last Saturday, 42-7. (MDC Photo by Ken Sulin)

Field Hockey Team Shut Out by MHC

By AVIS YUNI

For the first time this year, the UMass Girls Varsity Field Hockey team was shut-out yesterday afternoon in their game against Mount Holyoke.

Losing 2-0, Coach Jane Farr attributed it to their playing "like individuals instead of a team. We were not cutting to meet the ball or passing to one another. They (Mount Holyoke) played together as a team. They were passing to one another but we were just hitting the ball and expecting one of the girls to run and get it. The defense got in the way of the forwards and the forwards in the way of the half-backs and fullbacks."

While the Varsity team lost, putting its record at 5 wins, 2 losses, and 1 tie, the JV team beat Mount Holyoke. They won 2-1 (Kathy O'Neil and Linda Lambdin scored the goals), making them 6 wins and 1 loss.

UMass had shut-out both Worcester State's Varsity and JV teams in their games on Thursday, October 19th. With Wendy Alpaugh scoring one goal, Jennifer Edminster two goals, and Roberta Farr one goal, the Varsity team triumphed 4-0. The JV's victory was 2-0 with Michele Locke and Kathy O'Neil scoring the goals. Both teams were leading at half-time, the Varsity 2-0 and the JV 1-0.

While Coach Farr was not able to attend the games, she stated that from what the girls had said, "we just kind of dominated the play" and played an offensive game. "From what I understand, they played very well" and "were cutting for the ball."

Speaking of this year's players, Coach Farr stated, "I think that on the Varsity, Wendy Alpaugh had been the standout of the year. She's been our steady player. She was on the Northeast 1st team last year and we expect the same this year."

On October 28th-29th, the UMass team will go to Yale in New Haven, Connecticut to compete in the Northeast College Tournament. Ten college teams who belong to the Northeast College Field Hockey Association will be present. At that time the best 22 players on the teams will be selected to go to the Northfield School on November 11th and 12th in the Northeast Tournament.

There are many field hockey associations to which various colleges belong, of which the Northeast College Field Hockey Association is one. Each association picks their top players to compose two 11 member teams. In all, 16 teams chosen thusly will attend the Northeast tournament in November.

At this tournament, the best 22 players will be chosen to compose a Northeast 1st and a Northeast 2nd team which will go to the National tournament in California. There they will select the US 1st and US 2nd teams - the top 22 players in the United States. Field Hockey is different, stated Coach Farr, in that they don't select the top teams but the top individuals.

Last year, Wendy Alpaugh made the Northeast 1st team and went to the National tournament, stated Coach Farr. She used to play at Smith College in the Hampshire Field Hockey Association which is made up of college and non-college players. The top 22 players within this were chosen to go to the Northeast tournament. At Northeast, Wendy was one of the 22 chosen to represent Northeast at the National Tournament.

"Actually, the way we've been playing, everyone on the team has a chance to make the Northeast 1st or 2nd teams this weekend," Coach Farr said. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if nine of the eleven on the team make it. It all depends on what happens at this tournament and it depends on what the selectors are looking for." Coach Farr explained that the girls are selected just on how they play this weekend at Yale, not on what the selectors have seen in the past.

Most of the members of this year's Varsity team are either graduating, going on exchange, or will be Student Teaching next fall. So in reference to this year's JV team and next year's Varsity team, Coach Farr expressed that Linda Lambdin and Kathy O'Neil should move up from the JV to the Varsity team next year. She also expects Elaine Senosko and Donna Meisse to move up without any difficulties. "I think almost anyone on the JV has a chance of moving up but those four in particular should move up," she stated.

Dr. J Still Squire

NEW YORK (AP) The U.S. Court of Appeals agreed Tuesday with a Brooklyn federal judge who ordered basketball star Julius Erving to play only with the Virginia Squires until an arbitrator decides his contract dispute.

dispute.

In a 10-page opinion, Judges Harold R. Media, Henry J. Friendly and Robert P. Anderson upheld U.S. District Judge Edward R. Neaher, thus rejecting Erving's appeal of Neaher's arbitration order.

Erving has returned to the Squires while waiting for a settlement.

In the opinion, Media called the case "another chapter in the history of contract jumping by famous American athletes."

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

B-Ball Stars Denied Trip

UMass baseball stars Ed McMahon and Mike Flanagan were selected last month by the United States Baseball Federation to represent this country, along with 18 other collegiate baseball players, in the World Amateur Baseball Tournament in Managua, Nicaragua on November 15 - December 4.

That was last month.

Yesterday after "considerable discussion" according to UMass baseball coach Dick Bergquist, these two were denied permission by athletic director Frank McInerney to make this trip "due to academic reasons."

Under ECAC rules permission is needed by member institutions for trips of this nature by any of their athletes.

By EARLE BARROLL

Celts Win Eighth

BUFFALO (AP) — Don Nelson and JoJo White produced some clutch shooting in the last 3 1/2 minutes and the unbeaten Boston Celtics won their eighth National Basketball Association game, beating the Buffalo Braves 105-97 Tuesday night.

Notices

Intramural Volleyball Officials Needed

Men and women volleyball officials are needed for Intramural games. Orientation meetings for officials are scheduled for Thursday, October 26 and Monday, October 30 at 8:00 p.m., at 215 Boyden. Those interested must attend one of these meetings. Pay is $1.85 per match.

Wanted

Wanted: Two attractive girls to earn $5 for two hours work at the soccer game on Saturday. If interested call 5-2614.

Stockbridge

All candidates for the Stockbridge basketball team report to Room 227 in the Boyden Building on Thursday night at 7 p.m.

Harriers Lose To SC

By WALT POWERS

HERE we go again. For the second week in a row, the UMass Cross-Country team followed up a runaway victory with a lopsided loss. Springfield College did them in this time, by a score of 19-38.

The race was hardly a representative one. Coach Ken O'Brien ran a team composed primarily of freshmen. Both squads were recovering from hard races on Saturday. The result was a comparatively slow race, much slower than the race against B.C.

Charlie Duggan led early, built it up, and was never pushed. His time of 12:50, was forty seconds slower than Saturday's winning time. UMass' Peter Crisci grabbed second on the second orchard loop, and finished there in 26:18, fifteen seconds slower than his time on Saturday, when he finished eighth.

Springfield won the meet by taking the next four positions.

The dominating factor in the race was fatigue. Crisci had this explanation: "I ran a steady race, but when I tried to run fast, the legs tightened up, and running was difficult." His feelings were echoed by his teammates. They just couldn't run as well as they wanted to.

"Both teams came off of hard races on Saturday," said Coach O'Brien, "and you can't expect to run consistently well with such short recovery time." O'Brien used this to justify his unorthodox coaching methods, whereby he has sacrificed two dual meets, in order to do well in the Conference and New England championships. "Springfield is good, fifth or sixth in New England. But with the full team we would have beaten them. However, these championship meets are more important, and it's imperative that we enter them in peak physical condition."

UMass will run next in the conference championships this Saturday at Orono, Maine.

TOP TEN FINISHERS: VARSITY

NO.	NAME	SCHOOL	TIME
1.	Duggan	S	25:50
2.	Crisci	UM	26:18
3.	McLeod	S	26:37
4.	Arthur	S	26:37
5.	McGinty	S	27:01
6.	Peltz	S	27:04
7.	Roy	UM	27:12
8.	Conlin	UM	27:21
9.	Littlefield	UM	27:29
10.	Cryran	S	27:29

Bill Ballou

Yan Con-Fun Football

There was something very nice about being in Kingston, Rhode Island last Saturday. Something very nice that was really more than just being on the winning side of a football game.

People too often have cut down the Yankee Conference as being a "no class" operation, afflicted with dying athletic programs and mismatches that sometime make a mockery of the work "competition". But it was a Yankee Conference day Saturday, and that was probably the basis of the "very nice" that went with the day.

You can put aside the final result of the ostensible reason to be in Kingston, the football game, for it was as a whole, deadly dull. Its major function on Saturday was to bring together the constituents of the good time.

Meade Field was kind of "high-schoolish", and the muddy track that surrounded the playing field only added to that impression. Maybe Meade Field was the reason why nobody in the stands appeared ready to die if the outcome of the game didn't suit them.

Maybe it was this good naturedness in the air that emboldened Marty Kelley and I, after cleaning out the visitors' press box of sandwiches, to head over to the main press box and feast on their offerings. No one seemed to mind.

The main attraction to the fans in front of me was Yogi Berra. It seemed that a lot of people got as much of a kick out of watching Yogi listen to the World Series on his radio as watching the game. Picture that happening at a Big Ten game, where you're not supposed to talk between plays.

All was not lost for URI fans, though, because the Rhody soccer team beat UMass earlier in the morning. The PA announcer told the crowd about it in the early going, getting a big cheer. But when the Rams were down, 35-7, he came back to it. "I'd like to remind everyone that this morning the University of Rhode Island soccer team defeated the University of Massachusetts soccer team by a score of 4-2." Everyone was a winner.

The spirit of "small-time" football was probably best exemplified by the girls in the chorus lines that entertained before the game. There were only about 1,000 people around at the time, and no TV cameras focusing on them. Kelley and I smiled at them rather wolfishly, and they smiled back, not because they thought that much of us, but because they were happy someone was watching them, even if it was only us.

There were no catcalls or boos from the "throng" of 5,500 when the Rams failed to do anything right over the course of the afternoon, and evidently the officials didn't make any mistakes because they also escaped scot-free. No one threatened Paul Metallo's life, trying to keep him from scoring any points.

It was fun. And the guy who had the most fun was the kid who used the field after the monumental clash was over to play frisbee with his dog. The dog was really good at catching the frisbee in the air, and I stayed in the press box an extra five minutes to watch them.

There's something personal about sports in the Yankee Conference, a "personalness" that hopefully won't be lost because of success.

What worries me most about this team, which is 5-0 and tops in New England, isn't that they'll lose a game and drop out of that top spot, it's that too many people will lose their perspective and cry "big time".

Big time schools don't let a guy and his dog play frisbee on the field after a game.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

"Ain't a fit night out for man nor Gork!"

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 34 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1972

Bulletin

Viet Police Capture Ceasefire Document

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) - South Vietnamese police have captured a Communist command document ordering Viet Cong cadre in Da Nang to observe a cease-fire beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 28, Vietnam time, U.S. sources reported Thursday.

The informants said the document was turned over to the Americans by police of the South Vietnamese Special Branch who said it was captured "in the past few days."

The document ordered the Viet Cong cadre to intensify terrorist activities and attacks in the Da Nang area beginning at 8 p.m. Wednesday and to lay down their arms at 11 a.m. Saturday, or 11 p.m. EDT, Friday, the informants said.

In other developments, NBC news reported early this morning that Radio Hanoi broadcast in English that a peace accord will be signed by them and the United States on October 31, 1972.

Acting on information contained in the document, South Vietnamese police made a series of raids and house-to-house searches in Da Nang late Wednesday and netted 21 Viet Cong sappers and 14 political cadre, the informants said.

The informants said some of those arrested told interrogators the Viet Cong had infiltrated about 60 people into Da Nang for the operation, many of them teen-agers. Two of the persons arrested were 18-year-old girls carrying 15 hand grenades.

Three policemen and a civilian were killed and two policemen were wounded in a gun battle with one group of suspected Viet Cong in the northern residential section of Da Nang.

The American sources tend to believe the document is authentic. They said the large number of suspects netted by the police raids appeared to bear this out.

The sources commented that a unilateral cease-fire by the Viet Cong could prove an embarrassment to the Saigon regime.

One American military source said enemy troops appeared to be trying to get as close to Da Nang as possible. He said aerial reconnaissance had spotted new trails and fresh repairs to several bridges on the outskirts of the city, and there has been an increase of enemy activity in the mountains north and northwest of the city.

James Nolen, the incumbent, said people should look at his record to see what kind of job he's done. (MDC Photos by Bill Beggs)

Candidates Rap On Issues

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

The candidates-incumbent James Nolen (D), James Collins (D), Nat Reed (R) and Gerry Whitlock (R) - running for two seats in the Second Hampshire District, each defined the local need for representation in the State House, during a panel discussion last night in the Colonial Lounge. They spoke before a small crowd of about 40 people.

Nolen, the incumbent with fourteen years in the state legislature, decided to rely upon his record. He felt that his re-election over the years demonstrated the support of his constituents. He said that his record should be reviewed by the voter and that he felt that this would indicate that that he has done his job.

Collins, a 26 year old assistant director of the UMass Upward Bound Program, presented a five point program. First, he noted the need for tax reform which he felt could be solved by the proposed graduated income tax. Next, he cited the need for state aid to local school systems to stop the rise in property tax. Third, he said that open spaces, such as farm land should be taxed at a lower rate. Fourth, he noted the problem of the youth and he felt that the establishment of more vocational schools could be a step in preparing for their needs. Lastly, he felt that Western Mass has been forgotten in Boston and should be better represented.

Reed, a dean at Amherst College, cited two basic issues. First, he again stressed the need for on-the-job representation. He said that this involved both voting on the legislation and providing constituent services. Secondly he noted the need to solve the cluster of economic problems, which wavered from high taxes on real estate to excessive state spending.

Whitlock, a trustee on the Belchertown state school and Belchertown town official, broke his program into two parts. First, he emphasized the idea of home rule-the state government is slowly taking over local government and the process should be reversed. Secondly, he attacked the welfare program by noting that this program constitutes 50% of the state budget.

During the questioning, by the panel, the effectiveness of Nolen was questioned, as he had missed supposedly 25% of the legislature meetings. Nolen noted the importance of influence and the part played in the making and enacting of legislation. He asked that he not be judged on the matter of skipping school, but rather the grades he received on his report card. The other three candidates stressed that this should be a full time job and the representative should make a reasonable attempt to attend all meetings.

In regard to programs relating to unemployment, the candidates believed that industry should be encouraged and that the legislature should promote more industry and more jobs.

When asked about tuition for state universities, the candidates were divided. Nolen favored no tuition, while the other three saw tuition as necessary. Whitlock and Reed said that the tuition should go up as the cost of education increases.

When asked about their positions on free choice in abortion, there was a chuckle, and then the candidates gave diverse views. Nolen was opposed to changing the present Massachusetts law. Whitlock stated that it should come as a referendum on a ballot. Collins and Reed said it should be a personal question. Reed continued by saying if it was looked at practically, rather than ideally, then the legislature has to decide.

The panel consisted of a representative of the Coalition for Environmental Quality, a member of the Western Mass Public Interest Group, a student senator, a representative of the Collegian and a member of the University and State Communications Council, which sponsored the event.

Jim Collins cited the need for state aid to schools to stop the rise in property taxes.

Nat Reed, a dean at Amherst College, believes one issue this year is solving the state's economic problems.

Library Not Opening In Spring

By BARBARA VOORHEES

The new library will not be open for spring semester according to library officials.

Gary Mingus, coordinator of the move from Goodell to the new library, said that elevators and heating and ventilating systems have not been completed and carpeting has not yet been laid in the new structure. Because of this the University will not accept the building from the contractors at this time.

The opening of the new library, which has been rescheduled several times since the fall of 1971, has been reset for the summer or fall of 1973.

Mingus said that commercial movers will begin moving Goodell's collection in late May, 1973 and library officials and staff members will move into their offices in June.

Mingus said that the new library will have three times as much space as Goodell for the library's rapidly expanding collection; last year 125,000 books were added. More reading rooms for students will also be available in the new library he said.

Merle Boylan, Director of Libraries and University Librarian, has submitted his resignation, effective December 31, 1972, to accept the position of Director of General Libraries at the University of Texas, Austin.

Associate Director, Richard Talbot has been appointed Acting Director of Libraries beginning January 1.

Robert L. Gluckstern, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost said that Talbot will remain as acting director until the move from Goodell to the new library is completed.

Gluckstern said that at that time a search committee will be formed. The committee will include student members and will be open for all suggestions and opinions.

Gerry Whitlock, a trustee at the Belchertown State School, emphasized the idea of home rule in state government.

Ripoffs Cause Board Hikes

Arthur H. Warren, assistant director of Food Services, said that the theft of silverware and unestimated quantities of food from the dining commons were two major reasons for the hikes in the board cost. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

By MARK VOGLER

University Food Service sources confirmed last week that the theft of silverware and unestimated quantities of food from the dining commons were two primary reasons for the hike in board annually.

Arthur H. Warren, assistant director of Food Services, stated in an interview that it cost $16,000 last year just to replace stolen silverware.

He said that it would be difficult to determine the amount of money that the dining commons lost in terms of food "ripoffs."

According to Warren, "The students who are on board have an unlimited quantity of food to consume. Therefore it is very difficult to judge just how much of a loss we suffer in this respect. But I'd say that it is high.

"The students who are taking from the dining commons are, in effect, only taking from themselves. And this is one of the reasons why food services is an expensive operation to run."

It has been the policy of the dining commons to restrict students from leaving with "excessive" quantities of food, but Warren admitted that little can be done to stop the thefts on a large scale.

Students on board are currently paying per semester, $306 for the 15-meal plan and $271.50 for the 10-meal plan. Besides the theft of silverware and food playing an important role in the increase of board, Warren pointed to other factors.

He considered the mortgage costs of the buildings to weigh heavily in the matter, along with the rise in labor standards and the increase in food prices. In the past six years, the standard hourly wage has gone from $1.05 to $1.85.

Warren also commented that there is as little waste as possible in the dining commons. He said that the menu is planned "so that it barely meets the needs of the students".

"We try to keep the waste down to a minimum. What leftovers we do have, we use as an alternate to the main courses in a different form. It is not to be used as a menu substitution, though."

There is currently a "no leftover" policy instituted in the respective dining commons. Student workers and full time employees are not allowed to bring home any food, even if they desire to purchase it.

It's required that student workers be on board. Full time workers receive no fringe-benefit meals and are charged for what they eat on a daily basis.

"We're as strict on D.C. workers as we are on the meal ticket holders who take food from the D.C.," Warren declared. "You get in a lot of trouble with giving out any type of leftover.

"Who's to decide what a leftover is or isn't? Nothing is to be taken out. There have been employees dismissed for taking out food. Students have been dismissed."

With the increase in board, Food Service sources claim a considerable lift in quality. Their specifications for food are generally higher than what they have to be.

Warren said that the dining commons prepare "nothing but Grade A vegetables and top choice selected meat."

"Dairy products are delivered daily, and because of this, you stand a better chance of getting old or stale bread in the supermarket than what you'd get here."

One of the biggest gripes of the students on board in recent years has been their inability to be reinbursed for the meals that they don't eat. In regard to this problem, Warren said that it is tough to adopt such a policy, except for "certain situations".

"You just can't work the system for an individual student," he said "If you do that, you might as well say that everybody's on cash.

"But we don't insist that the student pay for the meals that are impossible to make. We have and do make allowances for student nurses, work study people, and others working here and there who just can't fit into our time schedule."

Warren rationalized that there are probably more appealing and worthwhile meal systems available to undergraduates than that which is offered by the dining commons "depending upon how you make the comparison."

"I'd certainly agree that six guys together could eat a less expensive meal as compared to eating anywhere else. I think that we're doing a good job, trying to make it better, but there's no incentive for me or anybody else working in the D.C. to make the food cheaper. I'm not being measured on a profit-loss basis."

The assistant director of food services said that it's difficult to prepare an interesting meal which students will like day after day. He attributed this to eating in the same "monotonous" environment with a lot of people.

Warren said that it's impossible to satisfy everyone, no matter what the dining commons does.

Everywoman's Center Offers Wide Range Of Counseling

By ROBERTA MARTONE

What am I doing and where am I going? The counseling service of the Everywoman's Center on campus sees this as a basic issue to contend with in their work.

Where did this counseling service originate and what exactly is it? Graduate student and coordinator of the counseling service, Sara Wolff said the Everywoman's counseling service stems from the interest of several woman at The University Counseling Center who felt a need for a service that would be available for non-students in the community planning to return to school.

The Everywoman's Center counseling service is composed of professional counselors, Joan Hemmer and Eleanor Bossi of the Counseling Center, and Sara Wolff and MaryLou O'Neil, graduates of the Human Relations Center, and Norma Gluckstern of the Community Development and Human Relations Offices.

The counseling service works in cooperation with the counseling service of The Valley Women's Center. It also receives the support of Continuing Education and the Community Development and Human Relations Offices.

Ms. Wolff said topics may range from those concerning academics to the topic of divorce or welfare.

One aspect of the counseling service is the development of support groups. A support group is sometimes referred to as a consciousness-raising group.

It is a group of 8 to 12 women who meet once a week in their own homes, to share the common experience of being a woman.

One support group deals with the problem of older women entering into the academic world. Another group is made up of divorcees. Still another group deals with the aspect of living in the country.

However, Ms. Wolff stressed the point and the subject of the support group is left entirely up to its members; the groups will "build from whatever is needed." The main object is to keep women from being "isolated from themselves and each other."

SW Cold Care Center Remains Closed

By IMELDA ROJAK

The Southwest cold care center is currently closed down because of a new Food and Drug Administration law. The packaging which is used now for medication must be replaced with costlier containers.

"Aspirins and other drugs must be put into child-resistant containers," explained Jeffrey Harsfield, director of Pharmacy and Central Services. "Other drugs such as cold tablets must now be packaged in airtight containers."

"Students noticed that cold tablets in different envelopes were sometimes different shades of red. The airtight containers should prevent this. They would help to keep drug quality uniform and prevent degradation of the medication," said Harsfield.

"It's mostly a cost factor that's involved," he went on. "The aspirin cost two or three cents, the containers cost seven."

"It's also a matter of supervision," Harsfield added. At the Southwest cold care center, and also at the Infirmary last year, there was often no supervision. People could take as much aspirin and cold tablets, as they wanted. They probably took more than they needed.

"Now there is no more self-help medication in the Infirmary. Cold supplies must be signed out in the pharmacy. The number of people using it is still about the same, but the quantity of medication used has decreased. This leads us to believe people were taking more than they could use," Harsfield told MDC.

Harsfield said that Sylvan and Orchard Hill gave also requested cold care centers. "It isn't fair to support a cold care center in Southwest and not be able to in the other residential areas," he said.

Brenda Rau, chairwoman of the Health Services Committee of the Student Senate, is part of a group working toward a solution.

Ms. Rau told MDC of the many suggestions brought up before the committee.

"A small fee could be charged to a residential area. Another suggestion was to have cold medications sold at Munchies for a minimal cost," she said.

"Perhaps Southwest could purchase medicine for the heads of residence to dispense. Or the health fee could be raised to pay for the medications, which can be purchased in bulk by the Infirmary for a very low cost," Ms. Rau added.

"A committee has been formed to decide on a soluation in two weeks' time," Ms. Rau said. "We will probably use their decision."

Choker To Be Given Away
Sterling Silver
Bitter Bloom
Silver Crafts
Amherst Carriage Shops Upstairs
(7 stores to the right of the Pub)
Drawing on November 18th
Stop in and fill out an entry blank

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Interested in S.U.G. Board Graduate Appointments?

The Graduate Student Senate is accepting applications for four appointments to the newly revised Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors. Applications must reach the Graduate Senate Office (CC 110) by Oct. 27, 1972.

BITCH TODAY
10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Concourse level, C.C.

THE CHEQUERS
Dinner — TONITE — Movie
Baked Manicotti
tossed green salad
oven baked garlic bread
$5.95 For TWO and then enjoy the movie of your choice
at the
CAMPUS CINEMA
All For One Fabulous Price

Ms. Helen Benny, research therapist at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, spoke in the Student Union Ballroom last night about getting high through music rather than with drugs. (MDC Photo by Steve Ruggles)

Auto Fines Yield $60,000 For Student Scholarships

By A. KENT BEST

In 1972, $60,566 was collected from traffic related fines on the UMass campus in Amherst.

Somewhere between rumor and probable guessing, it is thought among many that the money collected from the traffic fines and the parking "misdemeanors" contributes to the enhancement of the security forces on campus. This is not the case though.

The collected monies are immediately transferred to a predetermined fund known as the "traffic fine scholarship." For the year 1972-73, over $50,000 has already been allocated to designated students.

According to Jerry Miller, Financial Aid source, this program was established three years ago. Miller repeated that $50,000 had already been given out for the 1972-73 school year.

The scholarships range from $200 to $800, but generally each scholarship is $350 to $400. The scholarships are awarded on a two-fold basis. First the student must prove he needs the money just like any other scholarship is awarded. Second, he must have a proven academic standard to warrant the receiving of such an award.

This scholarship money is not treated differently than any other, but rather the students apply for financial aid and the department steers the student in the appropriate direction. Providing a student presents a need and is academically worthy, any student is elegible for these scholarships.

In an MDC interview, Assistant Director of Security, Gerald O'Neil said, "The money collected from students and faculty is only collected by us at the department, but the money is immediately transferred to the traffic scholarship fund, rather than having the police department handle any of the money."

It should also be noted that during 1971, a continued conscientious effort was made to collect all outstanding fines, which led to the enormous amount of over $60,000.

For some, the traffic fine collection is a mystery, for others it's like the news of being caught cheating, but Jerry Miller said, "there are many needy students who are thankful to those who continue to speed and park in the wrong places."

Free Auto Test To Be Offered

A free auto emission test will be held by the UMass Mechanical Engineering Dept. There will be two test sessions; one will be at the South End of Gunness Lab from 12:00 to 3:30 today. The second session will be held at the Plaza Shell Station on Rt. 9 next to Zayre's from 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Sat., Oct. 28, 1972.

Fac-Sen To Vote On Rhetoric

By ARNOLD NEWBERGER

The proposal to abolish the Rhetoric requirement comes before the Faculty Senate this afternoon for final action. If passed by the Senate today the proposal would go into effect in the fall of 1973.

Faculty Senate debate today will culminate a year long discussion of the requirement's merit that began when the Academic Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate held hearings on the Rhetoric requirement last January.

The committee voted in January to recommend abolishment of the requirement and to review this decision in the fall semester when evaluations of the program would be available. On October 5, the committee upheld its earlier vote by again recommending abolishment of the requirement.

The Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate has also studied the Rhetoric requirement and likewise recommended to the Faculty Senate that the requirement be abolished.

The chairman of that student committee, Nick Apostola, will be one of the principal spokesmen in favor of abolishment at tomorrow's Senate meeting.

He has asked for student support at the meeting but expects a small turnout. Apostola said, "I have asked for student support at today's meeting because I want to show the faculty that the Rhetoric requirement is of crucial concern to the students." Whether that "concern" will be translated into attenance at tomorrow's meeting is doubtful, Apostola said.

The Rhetoric program is under the jurisdiction of the English Department and its head, Joseph Frank, is the principal opponent of the recommendation to abolish the requirement.

At a meeting of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate two weeks ago, Frank vowed that he would "pin back the ears" of the students on this issue of abolishment when it came before the Faculty Senate.

Frank has circulated to every faculty senator a position paper on the Rhetoric requirement that outlines the goals of the Rhetoric program and points out some of the program's failures as well.

The paper reads, "If one believes that problems of communication are central to our society, and that they will continue to plague us in the future, then a program that seeks to offer some disciplined experience in writing and speaking to all students should be supported."

The paper went on to say that, "We need a more University-wide Rhetoric advisory committee and we need stricter supervision of Teaching assistants."

The outcome of tomorrow's Senate vote is difficult to predict. Although Faculty Senate Secretary Robert Wellman pointed out in an MDC interview on October 11 that "not one recommendation passed by Academic Matters last year was overturned by the Faculty Senate," passage tomorrow is not guaranteed.

The Faculty Senate session tomorrow begins at 4:00 p.m. and is held in Herter 227. The meeting is open to the public.

Wood Concerned By Budget 'Cuts'

By JAMES E. GOLD

"We all feel that the present system hasn't been given a chance," said University President Robert Wood during a telephone press conference yesterday.

He was speaking of the trustee's reactions to Governor Francis Sargent's reform plans. He said that they had met over the past weekend at Hyannis for their annual retreat.

Regarding a recent Boston Globe editorial favoring the governor's position concerning the UMass proposed fiscal 1974 budget, Wood said they were "gravely concerned" and that it contained simple inaccuracies. He added that the editorial gave no credit towards innovations developed on the UMass campuses.

Wood called the recent cutbacks recommended by the Board of Higher Education regretful. He said cutting out the law center was a "cheerless brush-off of very thoughtful reports." He mentioned that the planning of the center might continue with private financing.

The Board of Higher Education Friday recommended a total of $5 million in cuts. These came mostly from the proposed law center for the Amherst campus and holding the line on scholarship aid.

Wood said although he disagrees with the cuts, "We had no objections to the Board undertaking the role" of recommending them.

Concerning Sargent's proposed reforms, Wood agreed that the matter will become a "political football."

Bitch Day Schedule

The following is a list of administrative representatives and the times they will be available at the "Bitch Day" tables to answer students' questions. The tables will be set on the concourse level of the Campus Center today from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Administrative Services
Thomas Campion-Vice Chancellor	11:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Physical Plant
George Norton-Director	10:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.
Housing
Robert Campbell-Business Manager
Ed Percosha-Business Manager	1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Glenn Edwards-Business Manager	11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.
Herb Potter-Housing Officer	10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.
Food Services
Marie Cappadona-Marketing	10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.
Arthur Warren-Assistant Director	12:00 N to 2:00 p.m.
Joel Stoneham-Director	2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Campus Center
Richard Davies-Management	10:00 a.m. on
Dean of Students Office
Michael West-Assistant to Dean	1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.
Student Affairs
Dr. Robert Gage-Vice Chancellor	10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.
Health Services
Barbara McCarthy	10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.
Ann Grose	11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.
Karen Beavais	12:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.
Dr. Brent Spears	1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.
Jane Zapka	2:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Barry Averill-Director	3:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Maureen Dion	3:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Parking Office
Patti Suprinant-Staff	1:00 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.
Ken Liptnin Staff	10:30 a.m. to 12:00 N
Athletic Department
Francis McInerney-Director	11:00 a.m. on
Ombudsman
Jay Severied-Ombudsman	10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Commuter Problems
Tom Meriuzzi-Commuter Assembly	2:15 p.m. to 3:15 p.m.
Paul Doran-Commuter Assembly	12:00 N to 1:00 p.m.
Women's Committee
Mari Earnest-Chairwoman	1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.
Student Matters Committee
Elliot Sherman-Chairman	afternoon
Services Committee Staff	all day

ERIC'S GIANT SUB
(formerly Gourmet Shop)
featuring
"Meal Size Subs"
Rte. 9, Amherst
253-9521

"I DID NOT KNOW HITLER WAS A NAZI. THE TRUTH WAS, FOR YEARS I THOUGHT HE WORKED FOR THE PHONE COMPANY."

AVAILABLE IN PAPERBACK FROM WARNER PAPERBACK LIBRARY
95¢ 95¢

In The Nation And The World

FLEEING THE FIGHTING–Carrying their hastily gathered belongings, villagers scurry along Highway 13 north of Saigon recently as they attempt to avoid fighting which has engulfed their hamlets. (AP)

Thieu Rejects Coalition

SAIGON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger's talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu dealt with a Communist proposal that Thieu stay on as head of one part of a three-part government, the Senate president said Wednesday.

Sen. Nguyen Van Huyen, whose office would put him in the presidency if Thieu should step down, said he had learned this in a palace briefing on the government situation of Thieu's conferences with the President's national security adviser.

Thieu's ouster has been a principal part of previous Communist demands.

Thieu rejected the three-part government concept in a speech Tuesday night. Huyen - reputedly anti-Thieu - said he agreed with the president "because any coalition would ultimately lead to a Communist regime."

South Vietnamese politicians of various factions expressed approval of Thieu's speech.

Supporters of Thieu introduced in the Senate Wednesday a resolution to back up the President.

Huyen said he was confident the resoltion, which condemns the North Vietnamese invasion, rejects a tripartite government and insists on South Vietnamese self-determination, would be adopted within a few days.

Sen. Vu Van Mau, an opponent of Thieu, declared in the Senate that if the president does plan to step down he should start making arrangements now for a strong nationalist government with broad public support.

Political sources said Mau was nursing an ill-founded notion that he would be picked to fill Thieu's shoes because of his long-standing opposition. However, Mau was not the only political leader to view Thieu as expendable in the interest of a settlement.

"Militarily South Vietnam hasn't anything to trade, but politically maybe we can give them something to save face," said Nguyen Gia Hien, a former senator who heads a 500,000-member party largely composed of Roman Catholic refugees from North Vietnam.

"They want Thieu - this is my own personal opinion - I say okay give them Thieu. He is president, yes, but he is just a guy. The system stands not just on a man but on a system. We want to prove it. However, I am not going to put pressure on President Thieu. He has to run things now."

Huyen, frequently mentioned as a possible interim leader who could keep South Vietnam's factions from each other's throats, said he had no interest in the job.

Huyen and other political leaders expressed concern over what might happen between tne announcement of any cease-fire and putting it into effect. Military officers also have pointed out difficulties in keeping up army willingness to fight one a truce is in sight.

"I think if a cease-fire comes it would have to be after the U.S. election," Huyen said. "There are so many details to work out beforehand.

"If something comes before, it would be only an announcement of principle - by President Nixon, not President Thieu. I think President Thieu has already made his statement."

Bombing Curtailed

SAIGON(AP) -Enemy forces intensified their attacks across South Vietnam on Wednesday while the United States further curtailed its bombing of North Vietnam as an apparent peace gesture.

Rocket barrages slammed into the northern port city of Da Nang, two province capitals and two district towns, killing one American civilian and 26 Vietnamese. An American civilian and 109 Vietnamese were wounded.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong infrantry units maintained pressure on hamlets and villages along Highways 1 and 13, within 25 miles of Saigon, and on government positions north and south of Pleiku in the central highlands.

The U.S. Command reported 100 bombing raids Tuesday over North Vietnam, compared to120 Monday and 140 Sunday. It refused comment on the curtailment, but sources said it was ordered by President Nixon as a gesture of good will during the current peace talks.

Air strikes over the North had averaged 250-300 a day before the visit of Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, to Saigon for talks with Presdent Nguyen Van Thieu on secret peace negotiations with the North Vietnamese.

All air raids Tuesday were below the 20th Parallel, 75 miles south of Hanoi. This was also the bombing boundary in President Lyndon B. Johnson's partial bombing halt of 1968.

A Viet Cong radio broadcast monitored in Hong Kong attacked Thieu for opposing a coalition government and said the United States would have to get rid of him if it really wants peace.

Thieu made a hard-hitting speech Tuesday night terming Communist peace proposals "dark schemes aimed at taking over South Vietnam."

Two Receive Nobel Prize For Economics

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - The Nobel Prize in economics went on Wednesday to an American and a Briton whose theories help to assess business risk and government economic and welfare policies.

The $98,100 prize was shared equally by Prof. John R. Hicks, 68, of Oxford and Prof. Kenneth Arrow, 51, whose associates at Harvard University said his achievements include theoretical proof that perfect democracy can never be possible.

Arrow was the eighth American to be honored in this year's Nobel awards, which are now completed, and Hicks was the second Briton.

Only German novelist Heinrich Boll, who won the prize in literature, broke the solid British-American sweep of the prizes. In addition to literature and economics, they were awarded for medicine, chemistry and physics. There was no Nobel Peace Prize this year.

The Swedish Academy of Science cited Hicks and Arrow for "their pioneering contributions to general economic equilibrium theory and welfare theory."

The economic prize, set up in 1969 by the Swedish National Bank, has gone to the United States three times out of four. The prize will be presented here to the two professors on Dec. 10 along with the others.

The fundamental theories of Hicks and Arrow have served as important means in aiding government and industry to create improved economy higher living standards and more regular employment, commented a top Swedish economist, Prof. Bertil, Ohlin.

Arrow in 1962 belonged to the Council of Economic Advisers to President Kennedy.

The equilibrium theory for which Hicks and Arrow were cited maintains that active forces cancel each other and produce a tate of balance.

This theory, Ohlin said, is the basis for most economic theories now used in investment, foreign trade, price structure and general economy. As an example he cited theory on how taxes work in various situations.

Paper Company Gets Okay To Cut Trees In State Park

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Great Northern Paper Co. was given permission Wednesday by the Baxter Park Authority to cut thousands of acres of timberland in the northwest corner of Maine's only wilderness park.

The agreement was reached behind closed doors between the three members of the authority and representatives of Great Northern.

Originally, the company was to have harvested 16,000 acres of woods in the southeastern tip of the 200,000-acre park.

But the authority was against Great Northern exercising their cutting rights there because it is a heavily used areas and offers some of the park's most spectacular scenery of Mt. Katahdin.

The new agreement will allow Great Northern to exchange the cutting in the southeastern corner Townships 2 and 3, Range 9 for a volume of wood in Township 6, Range 10 equal to two-thirds of the timber the company planned to take. The exact amount of acreage hasn't been determined yet.

The cutting area is one the late Gov. Percival Baxter specifically granted the authority the right to practice scientific harvesting.

Great Northern holds the last of the timber cutting options in the park. Those rights, part of the land purchase agreement with Baxter, were to have expired Dec. 1, 1973.

However the new agreement will allow Great Northern until April 1, 1975, to cut over the northwestern section.

Forestry commissioner Austin H. Wilkins, a member of the authority said this will give the company time to plan its road system and cut in a manner agreeable to the authority, which will oversee the operation.

He said the arrangement makes it possible for the threat of a severe spruce budworm infestation to be met.

"Great Northern will attempt to concentrate on removing the balsam fir, which is the primary feeding source of the budworm," Wilkins said.

In Brief...

Insurance Discount For New Bumpers BOSTON (AP) — Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. said Wednesday it will give 10-20 per cent discounts on collision insurance rates to motorists whose cars have crush-resistant bumpers.

The company said it would give 10 per cent discounts to motorists whose cars meet 1973 federal standards, which require that new cars have bumpers that will withstand a 5 miles per hour front-end crash and a 2-1/2 m.p.h. rear collision without damage to any safety-related equipment.

plugs 'n jacks

TDK Tapes

Switchcraft Cables

Stereo Headphones

Cassette Recorders

Radios

Record and Tape Accessories

Amherst Carriage Shops

We Service All We Sell

SWAP applications deadline: NO LATER than Friday, Oct. 27th

at R.S.O. Office C.C.

20 Cancer Clinics To Be Set Up In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 20 clinics for the early detection of breast cancer will be set up throughout the country, many by the end of next year, under a $6-million program of the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute.

The cancer society's board of directors approved $2 million for the first eight of the clinics at its annual meeting Wednesday and spokesman said the National Cancer Institute has agreed to provide additional funds on a 2 for 1 basis.

The clinics will be designed to detect breast cancer at a very early stage, before the appearance of a lump, using advanced X-ray techniques called mammography and another approach, thermography, sensing the additional heat given off by cancer cells and producing a photograph.

"This is an attempt to find out how many cancers can be found and how many can be controlled," said Dr. Arthur G. James, new president of the cancer society and professor of surgery at the Ohio State University Medical School.

The cancer society annourced the establishment of a task force on breast cancer at its 1971 annual meeting and said the action by the board Wednesday was the result of that work.

The first eight centers have not been named, but eight sites are being considered, the society said, and details should be announced in a few months. With the National Cancer Institute joining in, a spokesman said, there will be at leayt 20 clinics.

There has been no significant reduction in the mortality rate from breast cancer in the last 30 years, the cancer society said. Breast cancer is the leading site for both the incidence of cancer in women and for cancer death in women. It largely affects middle-aged and older women.

Most women with breast cancer - 95 per cent of them - discover it by self-examination. But by then 60 per cent have cancer that has spread to the lymph nodes. In these cases, the five-year survival rate is 40-45 per cent.

If the cancer is still localized to the breast upon discovery, the society said, the five-year survival rate is 80 to 85 per cent.

Israelis Defuse Letter Bombs

(AP) — Letter bombs began turning up Wednesday in various parts of the Middle East, including three in Israel addressed to President Nixon, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird. Israeli police defused the bombs.

Two letters exploded in Beirut, Lebanon, injuring seven persons, and another was found in the mail in Cairo. One blew up in Algiers on Tuesday night.

The letter bombs in Israel were found in the sorting room of a post office in the northern frontier town of Kiryat Shmona, near the border with Lebanon.

Police said they were the same type of bombs as the many explosive envelopes mailed last month from Amsterdam to Israeli officials in various parts of the world.

Police Supt. Mordechai Tavor said the three envelopes were detected when the Washington addresses "aroused the suspicion of postal workers" in the border settlement.

One of the Amsterdam envelopes exploded and killed an Israeli agricultural attache in London.

"It should be pointed out that Kiryat Shmona is situated near the northern border," police said.

The envelopes posted in Kiryat Shmona could have been mailed by Arab guerrilla infiltrators slipping into the country from Lebanon, less than two miles away across the hills. Police sources in Kiryat Shmona, however, said they did not believe the explosive letters to Nixon, Laird and Rogers were the work of infiltrators. Arab authorities could not say where the letter bombs in Lebanon were mailed from.

Police sources in London said there were signs Arab terrorists planned a new mail bomb campaign against Israelis during the Christmas and New Year's holidays, when mails are heavy.

Couple Shuns Cigarette Costs

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Bill and Charlotte Luly say they have found a solution to the high cost of smoking. They built their own cigarette machine which pumps out six cigarettes an hour at a cost of 15 cents a pack.

As the couple watches television in the evenings their Rube Goldberg-like contraption, consisting of 15 motors, 50 switches, 12 bicycle chain link belts and four fan belts, sends the cigarettes bouncing along the assembly line.

It was 18 months ago that the Lulys, discovering their cigarette habit was costing them $10 a week, decided it was too expensive.

Luly said he made the 9-1/2-foot-long motor driven machine by "just working around the garage, like a lot of other men do in their spare time."

"It's done surprising things when we're not looking," Luly said. "It even rejects badly packaged cigarettes and shuts off automatically if three come out bad."

Mrs. Luly says the machine took 12 months to build and "a lot of beer and a lot of profanity."

The Lulys get the cigarette wrappers and tobacco from Canada. The tobacco is a blend of Turkish and domestic and "doesn't taste too bad once you get used to it."

The machine is set up with one end feeding wrappers into a central unit on a chain link belt. As the unit, a hammer in the machine packs the tobacco into a tube. The tube is then injected into a wrapper and the tobacco is pushed out of the tube into the wrapper.

Wrappers are fed to the unit on two slow-moving chains. Tobacco then drops into the unit on a four-foot-long, two-inch-wide cloth belt.

Mrs. Luly said the machine's 15 motors were purchased from Goodwill Industries here for about $1 each while another motor, used to turn a fan belt, "is an old kitchen mixer my mother used but it leaked oil."

"We don't give the cigarettes away as gifts," said Mrs. Luly, "not unless someone bums one from us. We just make them for ourselves."

MDC
SPORTS HOTLINE
5-0344

Sirhan Goes To High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) -Lawyers for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan Wednesday appealed to the Supreme Court for review of his conviction of the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

They said, "The evidence indicates petitioner Sirhan did not kill Robert Kennedy" and that police searched the home of the Arab Immigrant's mother illegally.

Sirhan, 28, is serving a life sentence for the 1968 slaying. He had been condemned to death in the gas chamber, but the sentence was reduced to life after the California Supreme Court declared capital punishment to be unconstitutional.

Sirhan's lawyers, Roger S. Hanson and George R. Milman, told the court they are heading up a team of psychiatrists, criminalists, forensic physicians and engineering physicists who have uncovered significant physical evidence which points to petitioner's nonfiring of the fatal bullet.

The California Supreme Court unanimously upheld the conviction last June and denied Sirhan's plea for a new trial.

The appeal to the Supreme Court raised 12 questions, beginning with claims that the police should have obtained a search warrant before they went through Sirhan's bedroom in his mother's home.

Hanson and Milman told the court that "it is evident that few members of any appellate tribunal would, care to be on record in reversing the conviction of a nondescript Arab immigrant who was convicted of assassinating Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who undoubtedly was at the threshold of his pinnacle of political achievement-the Democratic nomination for president of the United States.

FIVE COLLEGE
January Flight
December 29, 1972
January 20, 1973
Round-trip
Boston - Paris
$165.00
All UMass students, staff, faculty and dependents are eligible to apply
Full payment required by October 27
INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS OFFICE
238 Whitmore Building
Tel. 545-2710
Amherst

Reform In Abortion Sought

BOSTON (AP) -Efforts to win support in 17 Massachusetts cities and towns for a public policy question relative to repeal of the state's abortion law were aired at a State House news conference Wednesday.

A dozen supporters of the repeal movement, including a spokeman for the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of the National Organization for Women NOW and state Sen. Jack H. Backman, D-Brookline, attended the conference.

Backman said he intended to refile an abortion repeal bill for consideration by the 1973 legislature.

Appearing on the Nov. 7 election ballot in the 17 communities will be a question asking: "Shall the representative from this district be instructed to vote for the repeal of the abortion laws of the commonwealth."

BITCH
TODAY
10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Concourse level, C.C.

WHY PAY MORE?

MONDAY	79¢	Cutlet & Spaghetti
TUESDAY	79¢	Sloppy Joe
WEDNESDAY	79¢	Spaghetti w/½ lb. meatball
THURSDAY	79¢	American Chop Suey
FRIDAY	79¢	Beef Hash

HATCH CAFETERIA

IT'S ALL HAPPENING AT
The English Pub
FOR HOMECOMING
THURSDAY
GREEK NIGHT
free peanuts quarter beers
D.J.
FRIDAY
HAPPY HOUR 3-6
D.J. 9:30 til 1
SATURDAY
10 a.m.
Pitchers of Bloody Marys; Scrambled Eggs; Bacon or Sausage; Home Fries; Toast or Muffins; Coffee $2.99
SATURDAY
AFTER THE GAME
D.J. Quarter Beers
FOR DINNER
Beef 'n Beer
$3.50
AT NIGHT
DEADLY Night Shade
9:30 til 1
75¢ cover

Television Tonight

7:00 (4) NBC Nightly News. John Chancellor
(5) To Tell The Truth
(24) Soul! Performances and interviews by and for the black community
(37) Louis Lyons: News and Comment
(40) The ABC Evening News. Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith
(3) UFO
(10) Action News
(22) Big News 90, Part 3. Local
(30) Early News Report
(38) Hogan's Heroes
7:30 (4) David Frost Revue. Topic: Marriage and Divorce. Guest: George Hamilton
(5) Five By 5. Hot Seat
(24) The Reporters
(40) Dragnet
(10) To Tell The Truth
(22) I Dream Of Jeannie
(30) Wait Till Your Father Gets Home
(38) Boston Bruins Hockey. Vs. Chicago Black Hawks
8:00 (4,22,30) The Flip Wilson Show. Guests: David Steinberg; Jackson 5
(5,40) The Mod Squad
(24,37) The Advocates: Round Four: Peace In Vietnam. McGovern's Or Nixon's
(3,10) The Waltons
8:30 (27) The Comedy Of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hadley: Below Zero
9:00 (4,22,30) Ironside
(5,40) The Men-The Delphi Bureau
(24,37) International Performance. Phedre. A stunning French television ballet based on the ancient Greek myth
(27) Jim Nabors As Gomer Pyle
(3,10) The CBS Thursday Night Movie. Guest Who's Coming To Dinner. Sidney Poitier, Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn
9:30 (27) Twilight Zone
10:00 (4,22,30) The Dean Martin Show. Guests: Don Meredith, Joseph Campanella
(5,40) Owen Marshall, Counselor At Law
(24) The State Of Connecticut
(37) Martin Agronsky: Evening Edition
(27) Newshour
(38) Bruins Wrap-Up
10:15 (38) The Phil Donahue Show. Guest: Dr. Boyd Cooper, author of Sex Without Tears
10:30 (24) Martin Agronsky: Evening Edition
(37) Thirty Minutes With
(27) The Big Action Movie: The Siege At Red River (1954). Van Johnson, Joanne Dru
11:00 (4) Eyewitness News, Weather
(5) Late News, Sports, Weather
(40) Newsbeat News
(3) News
(10) Action News
(30) Late News Report
11:15 (40) Newsbeat Weather
(38) Film Festival: The Violent Ones (1968). Fernando Lamas, Aldo Ray
11:20 (40) Newsbeat Sports
(3) Weather
11:25 (3) Sports
11:30 (4,22,30) The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson
(5,40) The Dick Cavett Show
(3) Starlight Movie: Breakout (1967). James Drury, Kathryn Hays
(10) Perry Mason
12:30 (10) Call Of The West
12:45 (38) Late News
1:00 (4) Eyewitness News Summary
(5) News Final
(40) USAF Religious Film
(30) Sign Off News Report
1:05 (4) Boston Movietime: Until They Sail (1957). Paul Newman, Sandra Dee
(5) Medical Call: Health-science series
1:25 (3) CBS Late Night Movie: Man on a String. Christopher George, William Schallert
1:35 (5) Morning Glory

Republicans Need South To Gain Senate Majority

WASHINGTON (AP) -If the Republicans are going to capture control of the Senate in the Nov. 7 elections, they probably will have to do it in the South. States like Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina and Virginia-none of which has elected a Republican senator in this century-appear to be crucial to GOP changes.

Republicans don't have to win all these states, but it looks as though they will have to pick up one or two seats- and maybe more-in this area if they are to have a majority in the Senate.

Overall, a net gain of five seats is necessary if the Republicans are to wrest control away from the Democrats. Even that assumes Vice President Spiro Agnew will be re-elected and, as the Senate's presiding officer, will be able to break a tie vote.

Right now there are 54 Democrats and 44 Republicans in the Senate, with one conservative, James L. Buckley of New York, and an independent, Harry F. Byrd Jr. of Virginia.

There are 33 Senate races this year. In 15 of these, 11 Republican incumbents and four Democrats are regarded as almost certain to win re-election.

This leaves 18 races in the doubtful category, with 10 of these seats now held by Democrats and eight by Republicans. As a result of death, defeat or retirement, newcomers will be elected to eight of these seats.

Outside the South, the Democratic incumbents regarded as having the toughest re-election contests are Clairborne Pell of Rhode Island, Lee Metcalf of Montana, and Thomas J. McIntyre of New Hampshire.

CARL ANDERSON'S
RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE
Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013
BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.

THURSDAY - Luncheon Specials
Bar-B-Q Spare Ribs, Rice, Saffron $1.35
PETER, PAUL, & MARY, A delightful open hot sandwich on whole wheat, w/melted cheese, ham, asparagus and Hollendaise $1.50 served 11:30 - 2 p.m.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night
Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar included. $3.95
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

McG Links Nixon To Sabotage

DETROIT (AP) - Sen. George McGovern said Wednesday night President Nixon is responsible for White House staffers accused of political sabotage and the reporter link of his top aide means "the chain of scandal and corruption runs to the very heart of Mr. Nixon's White House operation."

In a paid nationally televised campaign speech, the Democratic Presidential nominee followed up on a charge made earlier in the day that "this whole ugly mess of corruption, espionage and sabotage is now squarely traced to the lap of Richard Nixon."

Directing the third of his campaign telecasts to charges of corruption in the administration and GOP fouling of Democratic campaigns, McGovern said other presidents have accepted responsibility for their administrations and Nixon must do the same.

McGovern hammered away at the same theme all day in appearances in Milwaukee, Cleveland and Detroit following publication by the Washington Post Wednesday morning of reports alleging to link White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman to campaign sabotage and espionage.

While the White House denied the Post story that Haldeman was in charge of funds for the alleged effort to sabotage Democratic campaign efforts, McGovern declared in a Cleveland rally that "the chain of scandal and corruptions runs to the very heart of Mr. Nixon's White House operations."

Most of McGovern's day was

Campaign '72

Refusal by Nixon to admit knowledge "of a $700,000 fund for criminal activity and political subversion," McGovern said, raises the question: "Have you lost control completely of your campaign and your administration."

The television speech, in which McGovern reviewed a series of charges of corruption he has made against the Nixon administration, was taped before McGovern learned of the story citing Haldeman, considered the White House aide closest to Nixon.

McGovern told reporters on his plane that his poll taker, Patrick Caddell, tells him the corruption issue is "starting to show up now as a significant issue" and that it "seems to bother independents and Republicans more than it does Democrats."

Most of McGovern's day was spent taping interviews for radio and television in the three cities he visited. In midafternoon, however, the Democratic nominee paid a visit to a shopping mall in the Detroit suburb of Troy, causing a tremendous jam of humanity as he attempted to walk through the mall with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Nixon Pledges More Money For Learning

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, bidding anew for the votes of those who oppose busing to achieve school desegregation, said Wednesday "the answer to inequities in our educational system is to spend more money on learning and less money on busing."

In a campaign speech broadcast nationwide by radio, Nixon also had a message for those who favor parochial and other non-public schools.

If re-elected, he said, "I am irrevocably committed to seeking tax credit legislation" that would ease the financial burden of parents who pay tuition to schools outside the public system.

The President also pledged to press the next Congress to pass legislation that would place a moratorium on court-ordered busing-a measure he described as having been "filibustered to death in the Senate by pro-busing senators" in 1972.

Nixon reported that under his administration federal outlays for education have increased by 70 per cent-to $15.7 billion from $9 billion.

However, he declared that "money is only part of the answer," and that millions of tax dollars have been wasted on education programs "that did not work because not enough thought and planning went into them."

Noting that he has three times vetoed what he termed excessive education spending legislation, Nixon said:

"It is very easy to politicians to call for fresh millions to be allocated for every new education spending proposal that spins out of an ivory tower. The myth that all problems can be solved by throwing money at them is not easily dispelled. But the president of the United States must carefully weigh the cost of new proposals against their merits."

FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY
brings to you : . . .
The HEAVY HALLOWEEN
TUES. OCT. 31ST
prepare yourself for:
THE MOST MADDENING
MASCARADE BALL
OF ALL TIME. PLUS:
HORROR FLICKS featuring:
Terror Trip #211 & The Corpse Vanishes

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.
They must already be registered.
2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____.
(Signature) _____ (Date) _____
Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Thursday	October 19	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	October 25	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	October 26	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.
5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the PSO office or call him at 5-2351.

UMass Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery received a record album during a performance of The Mystic Revelations of Rasta fari in the New Africa House coffee shop on campus, Friday night. Count Ossie, leader of the Jamaican musical group, presented the group's own album "The Mystic Revelations fo Rasta fari Groun'ation".

Mobe To Present Films On Indochina

Tonight the Student Mobilization Committee is presenting an Indochina Educational featuring two films from the Indochina Resource Center in Washington D.C., written materials from the IRC, and projected plans for building the mass demonstrations called for November 18.

The films are from the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and are called: "US Technique and Genocide in Vietnam", which describes "improved" anti-personnel weapons, their use in Indochina, and their victims; and "Some Aspects of Chemical Warfare in SE Asia", which describes the longterm consequences of American usage of herbicides and gases in Indochina.

The written material comes in the form of three pamphlets. "The Era of the Blue Machine, Laos: 1969:", which describes the air war in Laos and the secret electronic warfare from Thailand.

Finally, plans for the building of November 18 will be laid which include media work, educational activities, an endorsement campaign, projections for a "Stop the Bombing Day" in Amherst, leafletting of polling places, work with high schools and community groups.

The movies will be shown at 7:30 pm in the Dukes Room, Student Union.

Everywoman's Center To Offer Lecture Series

Everywoman's Center at UMass will offer a five week noon-time lecture series for non-professional women on campus beginning Nov. 8, part of a newly-developed program designed for non-professional women employees.

Mary LaSota, coordinator of non-professional services at the center, has asked women lecturers from various areas to participate in this series. A University student, Ms. Patty Azack, will open the series on Nov. 8 with "It Ain't Wonderland, Alice."

Nov. 14, a doctoral candidate and member of the Community Development and Human Relations staff, Ms. Chyrlene Boyd, will speak on: "CDHR As a Channel of Systems Change." Nov. 29, Ms. Nina Entrekin, instructor at the School of Nursing, will present a film and speak on "Rescue Breathing: What you Can Do in an Emergency."

Dec. 6, feminist Ms. Katherine Weinstein of the Valley Women's Center in Northampton will talk on: "The Meaning of Masculine and Feminine in Various Cultures." Closing this first series on Dec. 13 will be nutritionist Ms. Michele Bremer, presently doing research on natural organic diets. Her topic: "Implications and Applications of Natural Foods for the Working Woman."

Lectures are free of charge and each will begin promptly at 12 noon and end at 1 p.m., place to be announced. Each period will include informal discussion. Space is limited, so those interested are requested to reserve places as soon as possible through Everywoman's Center, Munson Hall, 545-0865 or 545-0883.

BITCH TODAY
10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Concourse level, C.C.

Infirmary (In An Emergency)
5-2671

Philosophy Undergrads To Meet

There will be a meeting of undergraduates interested in philosophy (including but not restricted to philosophy majors) on Monday, October 30 at 3:30 PM in the Student Union Colonial Lounge. Members of the philosophy faculty are invited also. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

The general purpose is to facilitate communication among UMass philosophers, students and faculty, and to exchange ideas on matters of mutual concern. Particular topics that might be discussed include the following:

(1) philosophy courses for Spring 1973 (pre-registration starts Nov. 13)
(2) philosophy major requirements
(3) new course possibilities
(4) new program possibilities, e.g., a philosophy honors progrram, a combined philosophy-teacher training program for students wishing to teach philosophy in high schools,* etc.
(5) an Undergraduate Speakers Program
(6) involvement of undergraduates in the affairs of the Philosophy Department
(7) interaction of undergraduate philosophers with faculty, graduate students, and one another.

*Undergraduates interested in this prospect should attend the meeting scheduled for tomorrow from 1:30 to 3:30 in 719 Thompson, at which the work of the Center for high School Philosophy newly established at UMass, will be discussed.

Students For McG To Show Films

A Burns and Allen and a Beatle's movie will be shown tonight in the Campus Center Auditorium at 7 pm and 9 pm.

Sponsored by UMass Students for McGovern, "100% Service" starring George Burns and Gracie Allen, and the Beatles on tour in "Rainbow from the East" will be the features of a comedy film festival.

The other films are exerpts from "Happy Times and Jolly Moments", by Max Sennett, Laurel and Hardy's "In the Live Ghost," and W. C. Field's "The Great McGonigle."

A member of the McGovern Steering Committee, Susan Bamford, said that the movies were one of several fund-raising events the UMass McGovern group has sponsored.

She added that anyone wishing to work for George McGovern should sign up at the McGovern table in the Campus Center concourse any week day or call Jo Ann Dominick, the Canvassing Chairman at 67326.

10 PIN BOWLING
Evenings 4:30 - 10:30
Monday - Friday
50c per string
Boyden Gym.

The Pub
BEEF 'n BEER Nights
Wednesday & Saturday
Charcoal Broiled Rib Steak
Pitcher of Beer
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Baked Potato
Roll + Butter
$3.50
The Pub

NATIONAL BLACK THEATRE
- Sat., Oct. 28/8 p.m.
Present "REVIVAL" Student Union Ballroom

FINE ARTS QUARTET
Frank Glazer, Pianist
Thurs., Nov. 2
Perform Brahms Piano Quintet in F and Works by Haydn and Ginastera. Tickets $1.50 UM Undergrads/Others $3.00.

AHAHK: Performing Arts of Korea
Friday, Nov. 3.
Classical Courts and Chamber Music, Military, Religious and Folk Music and dances of Korea.....Tickets $1 UM Undergrads/Others $1.50.

FINE ARTS COUNCIL TICKET OFFICE
125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0200

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nestl
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Tom Borkowski
NEWS STAFF	Mary Vorderer, Gail McDonnell
EDITORIAL	Gabe Imperato
SPORTS	Steve Crowe
DARKROOM	Steve Ruggles
AD LAYOUT	Jan Auman

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

McGovern Now

George McGovern should be President of the United States.

Since his election almost four years ago, Richard Nixon has done little to bring the Country together and to bring about the conditions for peace. In every field, in every area, Nixon has exacerbated exisiting wounds and created new problems.

In education, Nixon vetoed the health and education appropriations of 1970 because of its family planning provisions. In 1971, he vetoed more funds that would have established child care centers. This year, Nixon refused to spend summer school lunch program funds.

In civil liberties, Nixon supported "preventive detention", opposed the enforcing provisions for the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1970, and discredited the Pornography Commission while it was still studying the questions.

In his relations with the press, Nixon held, as of August, a mere 31 news conferences in 41 months. Eisenhower has had 193 (96 months); Kennedy, 72 (34 months); Johnson, 135 (62 months). Nixon's Justice Department has intimidated the press through its partisan criticisms, and its prosecutions of the Beacon Press, and newsmen who claimed the right to protect their sources.

In health and welfare, Nixon vetoed the Hospital Construction Act of 1970, the Family Physician training program, and the Economic Opportunity Act amendments of 1971 because it provided legal services for the poor. He ordered the Cannikan Nuclear Test, the SST, and supported the Alaska pipeline.

With the economy, Nixon instituted wage controls for workers, but no profit controls for the conglomerates that finance his campaign.

In foreign affairs, he pursued a hypocritical and inconsistent policy, and allowed the name "America" to become the most hated, feared name in the world.

He eased relations with China, but refused to do the same with Cuba. Former allies were hurt as his trade policies were consistently isolationist. He continued American military involvement in Europe, Latin America, and Asia. He encouraged trade with Rhodesia and South Africa.

Richard Nixon has not secured the release of one American prisoner of war in Vietnam. He did not bring the leadership to this Country that required an immediate end to all U.S. killing in Vietnam. He has not ended the war.

George McGovern will not be the panacea for all of our woes.

We do believe that George McGovern will protect and respect the Bill of Rights, unlike Mr. Nixon.

We believe that George McGovern will bring us out of Asia, and will bring our prisoners of war, our brothers, home in 90 days without further loss of our honor.

We urge all UMass staff, faculty, and students to cast their ballots for George McGovern.

Ed Bryant

On Moral Judgment

One of the principal tasks of the Federal Reserve Board is to tighten and loosen the flow of credit, according to the best intereys of an economy constantly in flux. Perhaps we need a Federal Morality Board to influence the flow of moral judgment. On the other hand, perhaps we need one like we need the bubonic plague.

Moral conflict is both widespread and inevitable. While nearly everyone subscribes to a moral code, no two people have the same one. Were judgments never made, this would not be of great import, but someone is always making them, and in any case, sometimes judgments are necessary. We must deal with the question somehow; it always arises.

When Hegel first proposed the theory of the dialectic, he displayed great faith in the power of people to reason. Many theses and their antitheses have eventually been synthesized; just as many have produced mutual antagonism. There are too few generalities to cover the entire battlefield of moral disagreement. As a pervert and a deviant, I for one shudder at the thought of facing the kind of moral judgments my country would make if issues of moral conflict were put to a vote. I do not share Hegel's faith, and am far more enamored of my freedom than I am of uniformity of behavior, which would be an immediate by-produce of any enforcement of a moral code. There are, however, a few matters which seem to me worth discussing because they demonstrate the problem of inconsistent morality as it operates today.

The first of these questions deal with "the sanctity of human life." I don't know anyone who, if asked point blank, "do you think it's right to kill?' would answer yes. Everyone opposes murder in the abstract. Yet a substantial number of people in this country oppose war and support abortion.

While many other people oppose abortion, simultaneously supporting the idea of war. Abortion opponents in the New York State Legislature are fond of bringing in pickled foeti to shake up legislators favoring abortion. No one has yet thought to bring the charred body of a Vietnamese child onto the floor of the United States Congress, but the vigor of opposition to the war is equal to the vigor of opposition to abortion, if the tastes differ somewhat. Richard M. Nixon, author of so much of the current vocabulary, introduced the phrase, "the sanctity of human life," in a speech in which he announced that freer abortions would not be allowed on Army bases. If Richard Nixon were not Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, he could perhaps pass as a humanitarian.

What of war opponents who favor abortion? They do not have one spokesman, but essentially their support of abortion comes from the beliefs that women should have control of their bodies, and that population must be controlled. That there is a resolution to this conflict I am not certain. That there shold be I am certain.

A second conflict regards popular attitudes towards the police. Policemen are defended and cursed with equal vehemence by various factions. Chicago cops beating people senseless drew condemnation from some, commendation from others. Cops who bust people for smoking dope are similarly greeted with party-line reactions. Cops on the take are attacked, but too often they are attacked by people who hate cops, which prompts cop-defenders to defend them, without clarifying whether or not cops on the take are a minority or majority. When a cop busts Richard Speck, cop defenders gloat and cop-haters remain silent.

Clearly a cop has responsibilities. His responsibilities include doing his job, regardless of his own prejudices. If a cop busts a freak over the head because he doesn't like freaks, he should be suspended. If a cop takes pay-offs, he should be fired. If a cop busts someone for grass, however, it is not his responsibility. It is the responsibility of the lawmakers who have made marijuana illegal. They are the real pigs behind the "pigs," if you will. People who call the campus police when their stereo is stolen would not appreciate being told by the investigating officer that stealing is a political crime against the capitalist system. The police should enforce the law, not make it. If cops misbehave, get rid of them. If they enforce laws you don't like, remember their fans, and think about what would happen if everyone thought the law to be relative.

Another problem comes directly from this last discussion. Marijuana laws are the result of one morality outvoting another. No one has ever suggested making marijuana mandatory for everyone. As with alcohol, the defenders of legal marijuana do not ask everyone else to smoke marijuana, much less require them to do so. Yet those who oppose marijuana for themselves think they have the right to dictate their judgment to others. Personally, I favor keeping marijuana illegal, punishable by a $1 fine, in order to avoid the taxes legal marijuana would entail. Politicians are reluctant to legalize marijuana, afraid of the wrath of the people who made it illegal. Franklin Roosevelt asked Congress to repeal Prohibition of alcohol in a sixty-word message during the blitz of the first Hundred Days of the New Deal. He had to sneak it by the prigs of the country. Unfortunately, marijuana will probably be legalized in the same way.

The marijuana laws are indicative of what happens when one morality seeks to impose itself on another, and succeeds. When this happens, one must ask whether or not the rights of those on the losing side are rights which they should have in the first place. If not, then the imposition of one morality is justified. On the question of murder, for example. If however, the rights forfeited were rights people should have, like the right to get high, then the imposition of one morality over another is unfair. Trusting Americans as much as I do, I feel safer with moral pluralism. Hoa binh.

Ed Bryant is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'SPEAK UP—I CAN'T HEAR YOU!"

Matt Tackeff

Come Home, Democrats!

"COME HOME, AMERICA...COME HOME AMERICA!!!...COME HOME, AMERICA?...AMERICA???...WOULD YOU BELIEVE GOD BLESS AMERICA???...

George McGovern is going about this all wrong. He should be saying "Come home, Democrats!" The chances are very slim that the Senator from South Dakota will make any substantial inroads into the ranks of the registered Republicans. Ever since his "New Politics" seized power in the Democratic Party, George has been running his toughest battle, not against Tricky Dicky, but against John Connally (Hey...ain't he the name on the Dollar?).

Democrats for Nixon. Verrry Innnteresting. Ten years ago, the average straight ticketing Democrat would have preferred the man-on-the-moon rather than vote for Nixon. But the man on the moon has landed, and brother, he's a real Lunertick' Well, in that case...people DO change their minds, don't they? After all, Nixon did change his mind about China, Wage and Price controls, Keynesian economics, etc. And didn't George McGovern change his mind about Eagleton, Abortion, grass, quotas, $1000, $6500, Mayor Daley, Lyndon Johnson, Gay rights, Thailand, Henry Wallace, Inheritance Taxes, the Middle East...This is a year for change, by golly. Who says a Democrat can't vote for Nixon. He's better than the man-on-the-moon, ain't he?

COME HOME, AMERICA...COME HOME, DEMOCRATS, DEMOCRATS???

* * *

AVAILABLE FOR THE ASKING, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE..."ANYBODY BUT MCGOVERN" BUTTONS, AVAILABLE FROM THIS COLUMNIST IN COLLEGIAN OFFICE.

Matt Tackeff is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

HOMECOMING WEEKEND SPECIAL

HOMECOMING '72

THURSDAY

FRIDAY

Shorts from the New York Erotic Films Festival

Student Union Ballroom —
7 & 9 p.m.
50c

HOMECOMING PARADE
Starting 7:30 p.m.
at Haigis Mall

SATURDAY

UMASS VS. UCONN
1:00 p.m. at Alumni Stadium

National Black Theatre

Barbara Ann Teer, Director

— Student Union Ballroom —
8 p.m.
$1.00 UMass. undergrads

Kon Fu Shun

in concert

Student Union Ballroom
11 p.m. - 3 a.m.
50c

Las Vegas Night

Campus Center Auditorium
8 p.m. - 12 mid.

SUNDAY

THX 1138

Student Union Ballroom
7 p.m. & 9 p.m.
$1.00

Peil Pennington, UMass quarterback looks on as fellow teammates finish up the afternoon against Cornell. (MDC Photo by Alan Chapman)

Concerts Are From 'Days Of Future Past'

Janis (above) and Traffic (below) were only a few of the performers who used to come and play at UMass Homecoming weekend. After a near riot in the Cage, however they were all but cancelled. Oh, well, Erotic Film Festivals have taken their place which isn't all that bad.

By BOB CALLAHAN

Ever heard of the Hot Nuts? If you haven't, they were a rock and roll group playing the college circuit back in the mid sixties. How about Janis Joplin, Traffic, Donovan, or Buffy Ste. Marie. Sounds more familiar, huh?

These are some of the performers who have entertained tens of thousands during UMass Homecomings from 1966 to 1970.

If you're new to the UMass campus, it is only natural that you ask why aren't such performers as these, with the exception of the Hot Nuts perhaps, appearing in concert here this Homecoming weekend.

Concerts held in the Cage featuring big name performers used to play a large part in the Homecomings of the past, but an event on November 14, 1970 cast a pall of death over the future of any more BIG concerts.

On that night, the ten o'clock show featuring Traffic, Dave Frye and Buffy Ste. Marie was the scene of near mayhem as people banged and kicked their way into the Cage. Thousands attempted to gain free admittance and did when the door gave way under the onslaught and people poured in.

The Cage, which held approximately 4,500 for concerts, was jammed by as many as 9,000 persons, a Homecoming committee member estimated.

Since it was impossible to throw the free loaders out, it was declared a free concert.

The events of that night resultd in five people seeking assistance for injuries suffered in the mass confusion caused by the pushing and shoving. As the dust settled, it was evident that the havoc resulted in damage to the Cage. Doors and windows were broken as well as a section of bleachers. Thousands of wine, whiskey and beer bottles filled both the inside and outside of the cage.

This marked the death of Homecoming concerts at UMass when it was decided that no more major concerts would be held there. The events of that night drew much comment in the Daily Collegian; most condemned the actions of those that prevented UMass from ever having another large scale concert.

To fill the large void left by the concert's demise, various campus groups picked up the pieces and conducted programs of their own in 1971. Movies, small concerts, and a night club as well as the traditional float parade sponsored by the UMass Greeks and the Homecoming Football game made up Homecoming of 1971.

As usual, the annual Homecoming parade will help launch the events planned for this weekend. Long a tradition of UMass Homecomings, the parade will start at 7:30 on Friday night. (See related story)

In past years, dorms, sorority and fraternity houses have all taken part in the annual event, but this year only the Greeks will be participating since it appears that others on campus have lost interest in the parade.

It's to bad that interest isn't what it used to be, but then again, maybe it's a blessing.

In 1967, the Daily Collegian reported that some eighty floats were registered to participate in the parade that year which was expected to draw an audience of 35,000. They further reported in a later issue that the most economical material to decorate the float with was toilet paper. Eighty floats means a hell of a lot of toilet paper. The result was anguished cries of despair from the stricken areas on campus which had been lifted of their supply. At least we don't have that to put up with that this year.

What would Homecoming be without the Minuteman Football game? Although the Big concerts are gone and the float parade has lost interest, it appears that the game on Saturday against UConn will have all the interest that Homecoming football has had in years past. Tickets are going fast and it now looks that a crowd in excess of 15,000 will be cheering for a UMass win over the Huskies from Connecticut.

As you can see, Homecoming Weekends at UMass aren't what they used to be, but it is hoped that the programs that will be presented this week end will have some appeal to the students and alumni of UMass.

HOMECOMING '72

THURSDAY - FRIDAY
Shorts from the New York Erotic Films Festival
Student Union Ballroom — 7 & 9 p.m.
50¢

SATURDAY -
National Black Theatre
Barbara Ann Teer, Director
Student Union Ballroom — 8 p.m.
$1.00 UMass undergrads

Kon Fu Shun in Concert
Student Union Ballroom — 11 p.m. - 3 a.m.
50¢

Las Vegas Night
Campus Center Auditorium — 8 p.m. - 12 mid.

SUNDAY -
THX 1138
Student Union Ballroom — 7 p.m. & 9 p.m.

MDC CLASSIFIED

WHY PAY MORE?

SUNDAY
Hatch Cafeteria SPECIAL

New-England Turkey Dinner
Tender Turkey
Savory Dressing
Creamy Whipped Potato
Fresh Frozen Green Beans
Rich Turkey gravy
$1.19 plus tax

Sirloin Steak
Cranberry sauce
Crisp French Fries
Roll & Butter
$1.55 plus tax

Chicken in a Basket
Tender Fried Chicken
Crisp French Fries
Roll & Butter
$1.29 plus tax

HATCH — STUDENT UNION
A Place for good conversation and good food

UMass marching band plans to put up a good fight against UConn Saturday. Included on their agenda of songs will be "Conquistidor" by Procol Harem, and "Song Sung Blue" by Neil Diamond.

UMass Band Planning A Sound Strategy

By MICHAEL SLOBODKIN

While the football teams rest and review their first half action of Alumni Stadium Saturday, the UMass and UConn bands will be engaged in their own "battle."

The UMass Band will be "UP" for the march against UConn. Each Band will try to outdo the other by putting on a lively show with a big sound.

This Homecoming Saturday brings also a special pregame show to Alumni Stadium. The University Band will perform a political vignette depicting its ideas on the November 7 election. This pregame show demonstrates that the band not only marches well and sounds good, but has a sense of humor. The band will continue the tradition of forming the Massachusetts "Block M" while playing the Alma Mater.

At halftime the band will have Walter M. Chestnut as guest soloist. Chestnut is an assistant professor of music, teaching trumpet, at the University. He will play "La Virgen De La Macerena," and "Chicago Medley". The halftime show will start with a driving arrangement of Procol Harem's "Conquistidor." The band will also play "Song Sung Blue", featuring the twirlers.

The University Marching Band hopes to keep its title, "The Best In the East."

CLIP OUT AND USE

Big Burger™ 2 for 1 SPECIAL!

TWO FOR 59¢

The Big Burger is a real country-style meal on a toasted sesame seed bun. A full 1/4 lb. of good eating garnished with a special sauce. During this special offer, you can get two Big Burgers for the price of one. Don't miss this money-saving offer. Stop by today for your Big Burger Special. Offer good thru Nov. 2 with this coupon.

Hadley loves what the Colonel cooks.
"it's finger lickin' good"
Kentucky Fried Chicken
Rte. 9 (across from Zayres) Hadley
256-8745

Homecoming Parade Is Alive And Well

By JEANNETTE MARTINEAU

"There will be a Homecoming Parade this year," Greek Council Vice-President Marty Kelley announced yesterday. "The Greek Area has picked it up since the University itself and other people have agreed to let Homecoming die."

According to Kelley, the Greek Council will meet tonight to formally vote on it. He feels that Greeks have a special interest in Homecoming because of visiting alumni. Kelly gave the structure of Friday's parade.

There will be 10-12 floats and 4 decorated cars designed by various sorority and fraternity houses, whose members will also be collecting money for UNICEF along the parade route.

The University Marching Band is also scheduled to perform. This may be their last performance in the town of Amherst unless they get funding for next year.

Several cars will also be provided for members of the football team. Football Coach Dick MacPherson and his family will be in one car. Another car will carry Chancellor Bromery and Frank McInerey, the athletic director.

Also appearing will be the University's cheerleaders and the Revellers. Kelley said that he was negotiating to get the South Hadley High School Band.

The parade will start out at the Haigus Mall at about 7:30 and will go up Lincoln Avenue to Amity Street to the center of town, down North Pleasant Street and then back to the mall.

There will be a reviewing stand in the center of town. Basketball Coach Jack Leaman, his wife and daughter have agreed to be among the judges. A turnout of between one and two thousand is anticipated along the parade route.

Kelley is hoping for the support of the Greek Council Publicity Committee, and coverage by WHYM-TV Channel 40 from Springfield.

Kelley also elaborated on the decreasing interest in Homecoming. "Homecoming, the idea and the ideology in the word has gone down in the past five years. Since the ruling about the Cage a few years ago, you couldn't get a weekend up here. The University couldn't structure it. Last year's was just thrown together...personally, I wanted to see Homecoming off with a parade.

AS FOR NEXT YEAR, Kelley stated: "I'll be around next year, and two months before Homecoming, we'll sit down with the Program Council, the Fine Arts Council, and the Heads of Residence to find out what we can do."

Kelley felt that Saturday's football game would be the highlight of the Homecoming weekend, with 10 thousand student tickets exchanged and between 8 and 10 thousand additional tickets to include alumni and faculty.

Every Saturday afternoon is football on WMUA. Kent Best calls the play by play and Don Gorski will provide the color commentary. Air time for Saturday's game will be 12:45 on WMUA 91.1 FM.

OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
(NEXT TO WALTER'S)
OPEN: MON. - SAT. 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Tel. 586-3727

Largest Retail Distributor for "Male" Jeans in Massachusetts
$18.00 values NOW 5.00
also New West. Denim Shirts 5.50

Our Specialty Used Clothing
New Parkas & Snow mobile Suits

JEANS $2.50 FURS $15 - $25
FLANNEL SHIRTS $1.50
SWEATERS $4.00
LEATHERS $15.00
SUEDES $10.00

OVERALLS $4.50
P-COATS $12.00
DENIM JACKETS $4.50
NAVY 13-BUTTON PANTS $6.00
CORDUROY JACKETS $5.00
Zig-Zags — Marfils — Bamboos

UConn--"They Want Us Bad"

By EARLE BARROLL

You look at the respective schools--UConn and Boston College. And without hesitation the ayes have it for B.C. Your own school is 5-0. Boston still look to the Eagles.

Wait just a minute.

Symbolically--yes--B.C. does represent what you look for in upward mobility in collegiate football. But, realistically UConn is the team you have to concern yourself with.

Sure, you go 9-1 and you beat B.C. But that loss. Where did it come from ? To UConn ? Yes. And the Yankee Conference title? Gone. Tough luck. You're number one in New England, maybe. The Lambert Trophy recognizes you as a power in the East. The national polls say yes, you're one of their kind.

But, no Conference title.

You have to live with it for the next year. The big cheese of New England football and UConn wears the Conference crown.

You say you want to step out of the Conerence. You say you're growing too big and you want Syracuse, Princeton and West Virginia week after week, not New Hampshire, Maine and Rhode Island.

Hey, you can't even win your own Conference title. Come back again when you do.

And the discourse can go on and on.

It's no secret that Yankee Conference football--and for that matter the entire athletic picture--without UMass and UConn is like Howard Cosell without something to say.

"Tradition through success has made us the class of the Conference," says head football coach Dick MacPherson. "The greatest credit to the UMass athletic program is that when any Yankee Conference team steps on the field with UMass--it's the ultimate in victory.

"Any varsity participant wearing the red and white of the Minutemen must recognize this responsibility and rise to the occassion to maintain it."

Herein lies the importance of Saturday's Homecoming clas'. between the Minutemen and the Huskies at Alumni Stadium. It's become common practice throughout the country to focus in on major interconference rivalries.

Nebraska and Oklahoma. USC and U.C.L.A. Texas and Arkansas. Dartmouth and Harvard. Alabama and L.S.U. Ohio State and Michigan.

Add UMaas and UConn. The meaning is all the same.

Feast your eyes on this statistic: In the all-time Yankee Conference football standings going into this game (including identical 3-0 records this season) UMass is 64-33-4. UConn is 63-33-8.

Last year the score was 3-3. The year before it was 21-21. And the betting odds were just about the same. Even or a point either way.

But this year the story's entirely different. When you're number one in New England, tied for third in the East and seventh in the country in the small college poll the opposition comes looking for you, with a capital look. You're big game now, the type of win that upsets are made out of.

And UConn knows it.

"They want us bad," says defensive line coach and chief UMass scout Bob Harris. "Last week in the press box (when he was scouting UConn vs. Maine) all they talked about was UMass. It's no secret they want us bad."

For both teams there's no room for anything less than victory. But while UConn has the way out in defeat-- we had nothing to lose, look where they're ranked--UMass has everything to lose.

MacPherson is emphatic on this point. "Our number one objective every year is to win the Conference title," he says. "When the search committee selected me their aim was to be respectable in the East and number one in New England. We've already attained this super category of New England's best, but we've done it before attaining the team's number one goal.

"And so what Saturday's game boils down to is that if we want to keep both titles (N.E.'s best and YC champs) on Saturday night we've got to win on Saturday. If we don't we'll be out the window on both.

"That's what Saturday means to us."

During the past year MacPherson, his staff, his players and anyone else associated with UMass football has had to live with last year's 3-3 tie at Storrs that produced a title tie between these two clubs.

History shows that UMass was 1-3 at the time and with a minute left Mark Palau had kicked the only points of the game from 26 yeards out. "Somehow some things began to look good," MacPherson remembers. "And after that field goal we were ready to take the 3-0 win at this stage in the season."

But 3-0 was not to be as UConn tied the then Redmen with only seconds left and as MacPherson says, "It's like a loss getting tied in the last few seconds. Some guys on the way out the back door of the lockerroom shed some tears over this game.

"Some of these guys are back with us this year. They remember. There's a lot of character on this team and I'm sure that they'll be ready for UConn on Saturday."

THERE IS a defensive unit on the football team and an excellent one at that. Opposing offenses have found this young group of defenders to be extremely stingy this season as evidenced by linebacker Tim Edwards who sets Cornell quarterback Mark Allen up for the coup de grace to be applied by defensive end Ed McAleney (88). (MDC photo by Gib Fullerton.)

UMass-UConn Over The Years

By BILL BALLOU

Here's how things have gone the past six years in the UMass UConn series:

OCTOBER 9, 1966: UMass just does squeak by UConn, 12-6, as Greg Landry scores on a sweep late in the fourth quarter at Alumni Stadium. Game was tied most of the way, as Huskies' Roy Lawrence kicked two field goals, one of 52 yards and Mike McArdle returned an interception 52 yards for the other UMass score.

OCTOBER 14, 1967: Greg Landry breaks the all-time total yardage record set by Jerry Welchel with a 200 yard performance at Storrs. Redmen win easily, 35-14. Game was 21-14 but UMass breaks it open in second half.

OCTOBER 26, 1968: Connecticut beats UMass for the first time since 1960. Score is 27-20 in game before 17,500 at Alumni Stadium. Connecticut gains over 300 years on the ground. Redmen engineer a late comeback but final drive falls short in UConn territory.

OCTOBER 25, 1969: Redmen crush Huskies in every department as they beat UConn at Storrs, 28-7. The offense scored all four touchdowns in the second half. Defense holds Connecticut to just 37 yards rushing and intercepts five Rick Robustelli passes.

OCTOBER 24, 1970: Redmen and Huskies tie 21-21 in incredible game at Alumni Stadium. UMass piles up 542 yards in total offense but the Huskies get breaks. Collegian mentions some "questionable officiating" and a freak play that resulted in the second Connecticut touchdown. Crowd of 14,600 saw UMass record dip to 1-4-1. Big play for Redmen Art Corsaletti's 80 yard TD run.

OCTOBER 24, 1971: Collegian says "if you didn't go you didn't miss anything' as UConn and UMass battle to 3-3 tie at Storrs. All the scoring comes in the last 1:05. UMass appears to have won on Mark Palau's 26 yard field goal but Connecticut gets it back at tail end of ballgame. "Foot" really important in this one as MacPherson singles out Jack O'Neil's punting for praise.

The Polls:

New England

1. Massachusetts	5 0	172
2. Dartmouth	4 0	165 1/2
3. Harvard	3 1	135
4. Yale	4 0	129 1/2
5. Boston College	2 4	112
6. Holy Cross	2 2 1	77
7. Connecticut	3 2	69
8. Bridgeport	6 0	46
9 Vermont	2 3	35
10. Middlebury	5 0	22

National

1. Delaware (20) (6-0)		333
2. Louisiana Tech (15) (7 0)		324
3. Cal. Poly (SLO) (5 0 1)		183
4. [illegible] State (5-1)		179
5. Ten[illegible] State (6-1)		156
6. [illegible] (1 1)		112
7. [illegible] (5 0)		97
[illegible] St. (6 0 1)		91
[illegible]		78
[illegible] (6 1)		66

A NEW FEATURE AT THE

Northern Grill

Corner of Rt. 63 & 116 No. Amherst

Delicious Grinders

Home Style Cooking Our Specialty

Sharon Tate in ROMAN POLANSKI'S
FEARLESS VAMPIRE KILLERS
Saturday, Oct. 28
at 7 - 9 - 11:00
Mahar Auditorium
ROADRUNNER CARTOONS
75c
Sponsored by Cinema Club

ALL OF US AT
The Pub
invite you to come to our HOMECOMING ACTIVITIES
See page 5 for Details!!

Memoirs Of The Young Kell-1966

By MARTY KELLEY

TRAIN STATION - Amherst is a small Western Mass. surburbia nestled quietly but confidently away from the heyday of industrialism. It's innocense if projected in a quiet work week with many cultural aspects of life flowing freely from it's two colleges.

That was six years ago, but as time has passed Lord Jeffery by, attitudes have changed, the grandeur of Metawampee and Lord Jeffery have gone, the Aggies have doubled in size, and you just can't get a parking space anymore.

And even the furor of college football has left this Collegetown. There were days when the Sabrinas of the College of Lord Jeffery would romp to incredible feats over hapless Trinity College before muffled gatherings at Pratt Field. And you didn't even bother to check up on Old Vic. His Fusiamen with Morin and Meers were Muckraking the Catamounts and the Yellow Jackets of AIC before a "beany crowd" at the now elaborate School of Business Administration.

And although the School of B.A. now holds less than the cherished confines of Alumni Field, the UMies used to pack it for the UConn game and you can bet I was one of the first on the block to get my pants dirty crawling under the fence hours before kickoff.

As a matter of fact, when the team would cross from Hicks to the fence gate at the Field, there used to be a sign that captured the aura of the moment. The sign read "Cattle Crossing". And it was right. UMass was much bigger and more powerful than the locals it scrimmaged on its schedule.

But there was that one game at State that Vic by no means took lightly. And seven years ago the Husky came by train to harrass the Minutemen or the then Redmen of Massachusetts.

It was about twelve noon and the town was just waking up to a college football weekend. As a hellion I wanted to get to the Stadium early to pester the cheerleaders. To get to the new Stadium I took the foilage route, down the tracks, up Main Street, and my regulars would walk down Amity to the Stadium where the cop would direct us to the Endzone.

But this particular Saturday was different. There was a loud noise and a lot of activity ushered from the nearby train station. As I hustled down to satisfy my curiosity, I saw what appeared to be an Army of Blue Clad volunteers descending upon my town. Then they started making a lot of noise and I really didn't know what the hell to think.

Being slow at the TIME, I finally summarized that it was a band and when before my eyes, nearly two thousand greasers took to the streets behind the band, and then when the March to the Town Hall began, I knew it had to be the University of Connecticut.

Yes, the Huskies came by everything but Land and Sea to pester the then top ranked UMies. The Huskies knew Fusia had a New England power, the Conference's best, and a Homecoming crowd, just ready to howl for Husky Meat. And so the students thought that by Marching through the heart of UMieland with the pompous brash of Stonewall Jackson with music instead of Musket, that they could in some small way inspire their Satans to victory.

Needless to say that hours later when the wine was gone and the trumpets spieled no longer, it was a long, embarrasing trek back to the Train Station...

And as they say in UMieland and ask themselves in Storrs, will history repeat itself. Well, I can tell you, off the cuff of course, that I don't think the Huskies will come to Amherst, one by land, two by sea, and three by train. They'll be here in the personage of a fired-up football team with the charicatures of class performers in Brian Herosian, Ray Tellier, and Greg Andrews. And the MacPherson men will battle the Husky for Mac's second straight Yankee Conference title.

From word of mouth it was quite a weekend of fun at a place I'll never forget, last weekend as Connecticut humbled Maine at Memorial Field. The game program mentioned how next weekend was the game as the Husky would engage the Minutemen at Amherst. The PA man continually announced the result at Kingston with much more than a casual interest. With no irony at all, the Kingston score was aggressively booed at Memorial Stadium.

And speaking of Memorial Stadium, there was a bit of hurt left on its turf last season. I'll never forget the moment as long as my cobweb still clicks. I sat with Uncle Kent Best high above the Stadium late that Saturday afternoon as the two of us went about the boaring task of telling you that the Redmen were protecting a 3-0 lead as seconds ticked away and a title looked only a flash on the scoreboard away.

Something tells me that a shot at the Lambert Cup, New England's top ownership and perhaps the largest Homecoming throng in the School's history will change that. I'll bet on it. Anyway you won't see a train pull into Amherst with a message from Storrs this weekend.

As a pro coach Dick MacPherson knew the value of a bruising fullback to compliment a pro-set backfield. And now at UMass Mac can still appreciate it again as he has the man to do the job, fullback Dick Cummings (30) (MDC photo by Ken Sulin)

UMass captain Clarence Brooks was named to the ECAC team of the week for his outstanding performance at guard against Rhode Island on Saturday. The 6', 225 pound native of New Bedford, Mass. was instrumental in the Minuteman offense that churned out 409 total yards at the Rams.

BEATLES'
"YELLOW SUBMARINE"
Plus "Co-Hit" — "GOING STEADY"
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28
Thompson 104 6 - 8 - 10 - 12

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1·2·3·4·5
24 HR. TEL. 733-5131
ROUTE 5
RIVERDALE RD.
WEST SPFLD.

YOU'LL LIKE MY MOTHER PG
a thriller
Wed. Mat. 2:00
Daily 7:30 - 9:40
Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:55 - 5:40 - 7:35 - 9:45

One of the most daring original pictures ever made
WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD
SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE R
Wed. Mat. 2:00
Daily 7:30 - 9:40
Sat. - Sun. 3:35 - 7:50 - 9:50

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY G
TODAY
2:00 - 7:00 - 9:40

"BAD COMPANY" IS GOOD COMPANY. GO SEE IT!" -Richard Schickel Life Magazine
"BAD COMPANY"
JEFF BRIDGES
BARRY BROWN PG
Wed. Mat. 2:00
Daily 7:30 - 9:30
Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:50 - 5:40 7:30 - 9:30

"Freshness and Excitement! Moving and Hilarious!" —Rex Reed, New York Daily News
Andy Warhol Presents "HEAT" X
Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:25
5:20 - 7:30 - 9:40
Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:40
Sat. - Sun. "COURAGE OF LASSIE" 1:30 - 3:30

JERRY LEWIS TWIN CINEMA
HAMP SHOPPING PLAZA - NEXT TO BIG Y
RTE 5 TEL 586-3209

CINEMA I
The Godfather R
Mon. - Fri. 7:30
Sat. - Sun. 5:00 and 8:15

CINEMA II
'MELINDA'
Your Kind of Black Movie
Nitely at 7:00 & 9:00

MATINEE
Saturday - Sunday 2:00 and 4:00
KING KONG
Disc. With Student I.D.

"THE FREAKS"
A masterpiece of horror by Tod Browning — director of "Dracula"
PLUS!
"THE TIME TRAVELERS" IN COLOR
Friday Evening, October 27
Thompson 104 6:15 - 8:45 - 11:15

The Best of the First Annual N.Y. Erotic Film Festival

Thursday and Friday
October 26 and 27
S.U. Ballroom 7 and 9:30
Admission $1.00 — Program to be preceded by Erotic Love Poetry read by Bob ("Bleeding Rose") Zelman.

LAFAYETTE

SEIDEN SOUND RADIO ELECTRONICS

SIX BIG SYSTEMS

STEREO SYSTEM SALE

This Week Only At Lafayette You Can Get Into Quality Stereo Components At The Right Price . . . Your Price.

SANSUI STEREO SYSTEM

$199.95 NOW

FEATURING:

1 – Sansui 210 – 24 Watt AM-FM receiver $149.95
2 – Seiden – LR–1-2 WAY Speaker Systems at 25.00 50.00
1 – BSR 210X turntable 54.95

Mfg. List Price $254.90

NOW $199.95

SHERWOOD STEREO SYSTEM

$269.95

FEATURES:

1 – Sherwood: 7100A 70 Watt AM-FM receiver $199.95
2 – Lafayette Criterion 50 2-way speakers systems 31.25 62.50
1 – BSR-310X turntable package 54.95

Mfg. List Price $317.40

NOW $269.95

LAFAYETTE SYSTEM

$249.95

FEATURES:

- Lafayette LR 200 75 Watt Solid State AM/FM Receiver – features built-in circuit for 4-dimensional stereo listening from 2-channel stereo records, tapes and FM broadcasts. Complete with rich, simulated walnut finish enclosure*
- Garrard Model 40B 3-Speed Automatic Turntable with attractive matching base*
- Pickering P/ATE 1 Elliptical Stereo Magnetic Cartridge with Diamond Stylus.
- 2 "Criterion 25A" 25-Watt Speaker Systems – each cabinet with an 8" woofer and a 2½" tweeter

SAVE

Pickering Garrard LAFAYETTE Criterion

FISHER SYSTEM

$349.95

FEATURES:

1 – Fisher 301 – 140 Watt AM/FM receiver $349.95
2 – Fisher XP-56 2 way deluxe speaker systems at 79.95 159.90
1 – BSR-310X turntable package 54.95

Mfg. List Price $564.80

NOW $349.95

CHECK OTHER SENSATIONAL VALUES YOU'LL FIND AT LAFAYETTE DURING OUR VETERAN'S DAY SALE!!!

4 CHANNEL STEREO . . .

LAFAYETTE 4 CHANNEL

LAFAYETTE Criterion Pickering Garrard

200-WATT AM/FM 4-CHANNEL STEREO SYSTEM

Sale! 499.88

If Purchased Individually 620.60

Save 120.72 from individual component prices

The Complete System Includes:

- Lafayette LR 440 200-Watt AM/FM 4-Channel Stereo Receiver – plays everything in 4-Channel SQ, Discrete, Derived Features "Acutune" Precision Visual FM Tuning and Superb AM/FM Stereo Reception*
- Garrard 40B 3-Speed Automatic Turntable with attractive matching base*
- Pickering P/ATE-1 Elliptical Stereo Magnetic Cartridge
- 4 "Criterion 77" 3-Speaker 3-Way Bookshelf Acoustic Suspension Speaker System – features 8½" Woofer, 3½" Mid-Range Speaker, 1½" Direct Radiator type Tweeter plus oil walnut cabinetry*

FISHER 4 CHANNEL

$599.95

1 – Fisher 601 – 4 channel 200 Watt AM-FM receiver $599.95
4 – Fisher XP-56 deluxe 2 way speaker system at 79.95 319.96
1 – Fisher 402X deluxe turntable package 159.95

Mfg. List Price $1,079.80

All Fisher System

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS

master charge

Owned & Operated By Seiden Sound

AMHERST STORE 15 E. PLEASANT ST. 549-1105

Pittsfield, Mass. Colonie, NY Albany, NY Schenectady, NY Glenstatts, NY

Erotic Films Coming Into Their Own

The organizer of what is being billed as the First Annual New York Erotic Film Festival says there's no love lost between him and the come-hither sex merchants of 42nd St.

Ken Gaul, the 29-year-old onetime managing editor of Screw Magazine says the festival next month plans to present 35 to 45 films at Upper East Side movie houses and other first-run theaters. It is an attempt to establish erotic film as a valid art form free from the money-loving embraces of exploitive theaters, he says.

Festival advertisements appearing in trade journals note that movie-goers cannot turn on to erotic film when they are turned off by theaters, the "dingy former dance halls in Times Square." Soliciting "artistic and beautiful" films, the ads beckon film-makers to get "the kind of exposure you think it deserves."

Gaul explains that audiences are tired of "clinical close-ups" and have graduated from the ABC's approach to erotica. The low standards for sex movies, he contends, are to be attributed to promoters, not producers.

'Just for Fun'

"A guy shoots a 16mm film and takes it to a Times Square theater which buys it outright - anywhere from $500 to $1500. So he's not going to do a very good one."

He calls such films, which are cranked out in less than 10 days and sometimes as few as three, the product of "out-of-work Hollywood cameramen - there seem to be a lot of them on the West Coast - and in New York by the people making TV commercials, who do something erotic just for fun."

"And there are the tired old cigar-smokers who grind out the craft for the quarter peep show business," Gaul adds.

The festival hopes to encourage more creative work. It is bidding for international as well as American films and plans to buy, package and distribute the movies here and abroad. More than 125 films have been submitted for consideration.

The festival is scheduled for Nov. 5 through Dec. 17 and will present awards for best film, best American full-length film, best foreign full-length film, best short, best animated film, most original screenplay and best performance.

Cinema judges, who are helping screen films at the E. 27th St. festival office, include artist and filmmaker Andy Warhol, actress Sylvia Miles, WPJL–FM disc jockey commentator Alex Bennett; erotic painter Betty Dodson and Screw Magazine editor Al Goldstein.

Gaul says there's been "a ripple or two" about the nature of the festival. But except for a few church foes and what he calls their "morality media," he says, the reaction has been favorable.

(Reprinted from N.Y. Post)

Film Schedule

The question of censorship and the arts is increasingly relevant to the campus. The producers of the first N.Y. Erotic Film Festival attempted to deal with the problem of eroticism and film. The judges for the festival included Andy Warhol, Milos Forman (the Czech director), actress Sylvia Miles, critic and author Gore Vidal, and radio commentator Alex Bennett. New Line Cinema has selected a program of the award winning shorts from the festival. They include work from various sources including student films, underground films and films from film makers working in TV and advertising.

Among the films:

MILLER'S TALE directed by John Dale. A cinematic rendition of one of Geoffrey Chaucer's "Canterburry Tales" with some bawdy language, a touch of nudity, sustained humor, period costumes and excellnent acting and direction.

CALMA by Kim and Gilford Productions. "...the camera roams sensously over closeups of a human body. At the end the subject is flashed and we learn we've been examing the anatomy of a baby."Leogrande- N.Y. Daily News.

A QUICKIE by Dick Kartz. A spoof on stag films. The style of A QUICKIE was "stolen" by Stanley Kubrick for a sequence in A CLOCKWORK ORANGE.

EYETOON by Jerry Abrams. An experimental "head trip" of visual experiences by a noted West Coast light show producer.

WHERE IS IT ALL GOING? WHERE DID IT ALL COME FROM? directed by Victor Faccinto. An animated journey through a Hades of sexual and religiouus hangouts.

NORIENTEN directed by John Knoop. An experimental film using among its techniques solarization special lenses and reversal printing.

LOVEMAKING by Scott Bartlett. A sensual study by the noted West Coast experimental film maker.

WAR directed by Alan Holzman. A provocative study of the impact of war on personal relations.

PLUNGER directed by John Chatterton. Ahumorous look at a new viewpoint of a common object.

DEJA VU directed by Bertram Duvert. A student made film, DEJA VU is an evocation of the fantasies of a young woman.

NURSERY directed by Randell Icleiso. An animated film which puts a new perspective on the toy industry.

SPORT directed by Alan Rafner. A subtle, erotic episode chronicaling the fantasies of a beautiful girl, as she watches her younger brother play baseball.

Startling Glimpse Into Future

"THX 1138" is a startling glimpse into the 25th centruy. Opening...at the...Theatre, "THX 1138", a Warner Bros. release, is a deceptively rich film. Its futuristic society lives totally underground. Men and women both have clean-shaven heads and are forced to take soothing drugs that kill all aggressive and sexual drives. The police are metallic-faced robots, totally without malice.

THX is a member of the society who stops taking drugs and falls in love with his roommate, shapely LUH 3417. He is jailed in an infinite white void. An eerie escape and a hair-raising chase lead to the mind-bending climax.

"THX 1138" is the brainchild of George Lucas, who wrote and directed it, and is based on a short prize- winning film he made while a student at the University of Southern California. Lucas is only 26, a man with a free-swinging imagination, whose whole existence revolves around the film. His thesis, apparent throughout the film, is that it is not so much the future you are seeing as it is today.

"THX 1138" will play Sunday 7 and 9 p.m. Admission $1.00

The Best of the First Annual N.Y. Erotic Film Festival

Student Union Ballroom — 7 & 9 p.m.

50c

PAUL McKINLEY

plays at

THE CHEQUERS

TUES. thru SAT. 9:30 til close

October Fest

Thursday and Friday

October 26 & 27

Featuring

a German Band

3 p.m. - 7 p.m.

come and celebrate!

Bluewall, Campus Center

Make

HALLOWEEN

a fun time!

Join the crew of

THE Rusty Scupper

ON

TUES. OCT. 31st

Enjoy the best in food & drink while being entertained by that titillating trio

The Deadly Nightshade

HAPPY HOUR from 12 Midnight 'til 1:00 a.m.! surprises for everyone in costume

Don't miss it!

529 Belchertown Rd. 256-8551

WHY PAY MORE?

MAMA MIA! IT'SA SPAGHETTI NIGHT

AT THE

HATCH CAFETERIA

every SATURDAY

FOR ONLY

A heaping platter of HOT SPAGHETTI covered with MEAT SAUCE - PLUS - HOT GARLIC BREAD served from 5 PM - 9PM

59¢

APO's Las Vegas Nite To Aid Charity

The candidates for Las Vegas Queen are as follows: on top, right to left - Evie Whitney, Susan Cotter, Evana Anderson and Deborah Tanacea. Girls from bottom left to right are Jean Ryder, Anne Pasquale, Joanne Resteghini, Suellen Sector. Balloting is still on in the CAMPUS Center, so get those votes in!!!

By ALPHA PHI OMEGA

Once again Alpha Phi Omega, National Service Fraternity, is sponsoring Las Vegas Nite, a social event benefitting a worthy charity. This year the proceeds will be donated towards the development of a sensory-motor playground for Nursery 11 at Belchertown State School. Last year 600 dollars was donated from the proceeds to start this project. A projected total cost of the playground is in the vicinity of $1600. It is hoped that with this initial investment it will spur on other sources of revenue to complete the playground.

To be held on Saturday, October 28, at 7 PM in the Campus Center Auditorium, Las Vegas Nite has the format of a mock gambling casino. Admission is free but in order to gamble, one must pay seventy-five cents for $1500 in play money. Additional money may be bought when the need arises.

Among the types of gambling offered are wheels of fortune, dice bird cages, roulette, and a variety of card games.

The object of gambling is to accumulate a large sum of play money which can then be used to bid for the valuable gifts, donated by local merchants, that will be auctioned off at the end of the evening.

A special part of the evening is the crowning of the las Vegas Nite Queen. The queen is chosen by a week long penny balloting on the concourse level of the Campus Center, and capped off by last minute voting at the casino on Saturday night. The contestant who has the most money when the balloting closes is this year's queen. The queen will be crowned at 10:30 pm by Marylin Elloitt, a former Las Vegas Nite Queen. Entertainment will feature Tom White on the piano playing some of the old favorites.

Manpower to build the playground at Belchertown State School will be provided by the Brothers of Alpha Phi Omega. Other up and coming APO projects include the walk for the heart fund, aiding the Red Cross blood drive, and the annual Amherst Fair held in May, as well as other service projects for the campus and the community.

Fine Arts Pitching In For Homecoming

For the first time, the Fine Arts Council has made a special effort to provide a program during the annual "home-coming" weekend. The Council sponsors more than forty professional activities in the Arts throughout the academic year, and is pleased to include two major events during the 1972 Homecoming.

On Saturday evening, October 28th the National Black Theatre under its Director Barbara Ann Terr will offer a single performance of excerpts of its current New York production in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 p.m. The performance of "Change/Love Together/Organize: A Revival".

The engagement of The National Black Theatre is part of the Fine Arts Council Special Events and is presented in conjunction with the Third World Alliance here at the University. Tickets to this performance are priced at $1.50 ($1.00 to full-time UMass undergraduates) and may be obtained at the Council's office, 125 Herter Hall, to Friday at 4:00 p.m. Remaining tickets will be available at the Student Union Ballroom on Saturday evening, October 28th from 7 p.m. on.

Also under the Council's auspices is the University Art Gallery which is located in Herter Hall. The current show is entitled "Second Rome", an exhibition of 17th, 18th and 19th century graphics focusing on views and vignettes of Renaissance Rome assembled from collections in the Connecticut Valley. This exhibition will be on until November 5th and hours at the University Art Gallery during Homecoming are Friday, Oct. 27th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and then again from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday, October 28th from 2 to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, October 29th from 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is, of course, free.

Pictured above are two of the performers of the National Black Theatre, which will visit UMass on Saturday night at 8 P.M. in the Student Union Ballroom, under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council and the Third World Alliance.

La Befana, the Epiphany figure, presenting gifts to children of early 19th century Rome. You can see this photo at the UMass Gallery in Herter Hall.

Vote For The Las Vegas Queen

The Barrel House Blues Band

at Thatcher House

Sat., Oct. 28 8:30 p.m.

Admission $1 (includes 2 free beers)

Beer 25¢

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT
Till 2 a.m.
VILLAGE INN
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO
DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2548

WITH THIS COUPON
ONE FREE ELEPHANT
Shalimar Shop
Route 9, Russell St., Hadley
Baluchi Blouses
Unique Wedding Gifts
Sheep Skin Coats
Hand Embroidered Tunics
Monday - Thursday & Saturday 9:30 - 5:30
Fridays til 9 p.m., Sundays 1 - 5

Jimmies OF SAVIN ROCK
suggests that you look up in the sky at the UMass. - UConn. game

Editorial Points

Some people think that President Thieu is just a puppet, a front used to give the appearance that South Vietnam is democratic. They also say he has a fat Swiss bank account. You might say he's one for the money, Thieu for the show.

*****

With the Bruins in fifth place, you can just hear the howls from the critics. They all gave a knowing grin when Sports Illustrated called the B's for third place last year, too.

*****

The Collegian sports staff has broken a time honored tradition. Yes, folks, they called the Athletics in seven for the World Series. First right prediction they ever made. But don't take it too hard sports, everyone has a slump.

*****

The Student Senate did not have its weekly meeting yesterday, due to lack of business. It could be the most productive week in years.

Letters To The Editor

Student Commitment

To The Editor:

There are a tremendous amount of committees, boards and assemblies on this campus that offer students an opportunity to play a role in the decision-making process on the University.

The Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors offers a unique opportunity for the student to be a member of the Board of Directors of a sizeable enterprise, with capital assets in excess of 22 million dollars and an equal cash flow in the vicinity of eight million dollars.

There are very few Campus Centers like good old Murray D. Lincoln and none of them have student governing groups in positions of authority like the Board of Governors.

The new Campus Center Board of Governors presently has all the authority it needs to make the Campus Center respond to the wishes and needs of the student body. What it needs to complete the process are students. There is a lot of work to be done. The prices of items in the bookstore and in the food services areas have to be re-examined. The Student Union building has to be resurrected. The Campus Center fee has to be stabilized, and most important, the student must get the services from the building that he expects and pays for through the fee.

The success or failure of the Campus Center Board of Governors will depend on the nature of the people who are appointed to it. The Board will need people with a wide variety of special skills and abilities, but most of all it will need people who are willing to spend a great deal of time and effort in trying to make the Campus Center work. Membership on the Board is a real commitment and a lot depends on the student members meeting that commitment. If you are willing to become deeply involved in the achievement of student governance and policy determination of student-funded projects, than I urge you to apply for membership on the Student Union/Campus Center Board of Governors.

Rich Nelson, Chairman
Interim Board of Governors

Give A Damn

To The Editor:

Why is it that some people feel they get more mileage crawling on their knees than walking on their feet??

In yesterday's Collegian we opened to page 5 and saw, as usual, that charges of "willfully disobeying lawful orders and falsifying official documents" had been dismissed against Maj. Gen. John D. Lavelle for ordering unauthorized bombing strikes against North Vietnam. However, Lt. William Calley is still under House Arrest, serving a term for the murder of innocent Vietnamese civilians at My Lai. The question is not of innocence or guilt. It is a question of DOUBLE STANDARDS. It is a question of lower ranking military officers and enlisted men being found guilty of atrocities and GENERALS being excused for their "mistakes".

Double standards again!! Veterans talk about their experiences in Vietnam; death, atrocities, corruption, drug addiction, etc., to each other. But when it comes to active involvement in the very things they TALK about despising, you can find them between a mug and a bowl. How does one profess to be against the war and then do nothing to back it up because of fear of encounter or the "I don't give a fuck" attitude. Those Vietnam vets weren't beaten in the Nam, they were beaten back here in the U.S.A., by the same people they'll be re-electing through their inactivity.

Our brothers in San Francisco, Dorchester, Gainsville, Chicago, Denver, New Mexico, etc,, are facing prison terms for their commitment to support what they profess.

So sit on your double-standards and your support of them by not doing anything about them...For those who "Don't give a fuck"; you deserve Nixon...

UMass Vietnam Veterans
Against the War

Vote McGovern

To The Editor:

I urge the students of the University of Massachusetts to work vigorously in Sen. George McGovern's campaign for President of the U.S. this fall and to vote for him on Nov. 7.

As President, Sen. McGovern will end the war and get the U.S. out of Vietnam "lock, stock, and barrel." He will also replace the corrupt Nixon-Agnew government by a government that is honest and fair to everyone. Jobs will be found for all young people.

Thank you very much for your help.

Robert Barber
Athens, Ohio

Why Are You Voting?

To The Editor:

From speaking with many of my peers, I've realized some information that I had not recognized or questioned before. So many young people will be voting for the first time...What is their reasoning behind their individual vote? Quite a few persons told me outright that they were voting because they felt it was their duty as an American. To me, that's fine. What worries me, is that many people are voting for the candidate their friend or family are voting for. Does this sound like an acceptance value? Does this sound unreasonable? Why does anyone just vote for a candidate if he or she knows nothing of his background or the facts behind his platform? Why vote at all?

As far as television, radio, magazines, and newspapers are concerned, I feel much of that information is often one-sided. So much political advertisement is propoganda. Sometimes I really wonder what I can honestly say I believe to be fact.

The last and most obvious problem for me as a first time voter is...Do the candidates for the presidency speak lies or truth about their platforms? Can we believe that their ideas for improvment will be thought out and worked upon?

As for my value on the right to vote...I see that all Americans have the liberty to vote for the Presidency, but before you write out your ballot, my only hope is that you have your own, firm, intellectual opinion as a citizen.

Susan Spring

Words Of Praise

To The Editor:

I think it important that your readers be aware of the very complimentary words I received last week from Eugene Ormandy, conductor of The Philadelphia Orchestra following their concert in the Cage on October 19th. Mr. Ormandy asked me to pass along to the student body his deep thanks for their kindness to him and to the Orchestra as evidenced by the attention and courtesies extended by this overwhelmingly student-attended event. He was impressed by the decorum during the concert and the heartwarming ovation that followed it. Speaking as Manager of the Fine Arts Council, I, too, wish to add my praise and thanks to all who attended and made that concert the great success it was. Everyone will probably be surprised to learn that Mr. Ormandy also praised the accoustics of the Cage and while all of us were distressed with the "buzzing" of the lights during the quiet passages, we were thrilled by the outstanding, warm sound of The Philadelphia Orchestra throughout the evening.

Terry Charles Schwarz, Manager
University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Council

Clarifying Things

To The Editor

In regards to Ms. Razin's letter of Tuesday, October 24th, I hope that this note will help clear up any misunderstandings. First of all, I must admit that I made a mistake in preparing the ad for last Friday's Collegian, my mistake was in assuming that people would understand what was written in front of them, and for the most part I was right, out of over 2,000 patrons last week, only 2 misunderstood what was advertised. Our ad did say "all seats $1.50" and "50¢ discount" but not for the same show. Our Friday night last show was advertised with all seats $1.50, as it has been for the past two months. The 50¢ discount was advertised under our regular feature, i.e., this movie shown nightly, Wed. through Tues.

In order to clarify any remaining questions, please allow me to present this: Wed. through Sunday all adult admission will be $2.00 unless a college ID is presented, in which case a 50¢ discount will be made. Monday and Tuesday night all adult admissions are $1.00. The Friday night late show will continue to be $1.50 per seat. An admission of $1.50 will be charged on Sat. and Sun. matinees. For the matinees no discounts will be made.

As a U. Mass student, I realize how much even 50¢ can mean, however I hope you can see that we are trying to run a profitable business, while charging the lowest prices possible.

As to the charges of slander and discourteous manners, I can only say that it not as one sided as Ms. Razin may have wanted to express. Shouting across the lobby at the employees is not my idea of the "out of earshot of others" she described Tuesday.

I hope that this letter has made a little clearer the situation as it stands now and we are looking forward to serving you in the future.

Len Wiley
Assistant Manager
Amherst Cinema

Letter From Europe

(Editor's Note: The following letter, with a Paris postmark, was received at the Collegian yesterday. It was signed by about 1,000 staff members of Universities and research institutes all over Europe, especially France. The signatures are not included here.)

Paris 18 October 1972

Dear Friend Student,

As you can read in the Open Letter enclosed, we, Scientiests of French and European Universities, are upset by the Vietnam War. I am sure most of you, US students have the same feeling. Every thing done by yourselves in the US, or by us in Europe, to stop the War would be of great help for the People of Indochina, threaten of extermination by hundred thousands tons of US bombs. YOU CAN HELP!

Let make every one know our opposition, your opposition to the War, in printing this letter in your Student Newspaper, in posting it on your city walls, as soon as possible.

WE MUST END THE WAR WE WANT PEACE NOW.

Sincerely yours
Marcel Eminyan

In the past, the staff of European universities found themselves in the same situation as you are in today. Those who did not do their moral duty were sometimes severely criticized by international opinion and rightly so.

Today, the whole world turns its eyes towards the U.S.A. and is pleased to see that opposition to the war in Indochina is developing again.

You ought to know that the American intervention in Indochina is severly criticized here in Europe and that fewer and fewer people are taken in by the fallacious arguments of the U.S. government.

The three peoples of Indochina ask only for the right to live freely and independently and to govern their own affairs. But NIXON refuses to allow this, refuses all attempts at serious negociation and continues to develop the weapons of mass destruction.

In the name of the higher interests of the U.S.A., of the so-called "defence of the free world" and of supporting President THIEU, who was installed by NIXON himself, hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese, Laotians and Cambodgians have been killed in this endless war.

To talk of invasion of South Vietnam by Vietnamese is absurd. Isn't it clear that the withdrawal of American troops, who have no business in Indochina anyway, is the only road to peace?

You should not allow war crimes to be carried out in your name. How can a cause be called "just" when it means in practice the genocide of three peoples?

NIXON and his advisors claim to be international policemen. The whole of humanity has the right to call them to account.

But NIXON is the elected representative of the American people and it is above all you who must bring him to task and force him to adopt reasonable policies.

We applaud those of you who, conscious of the tremendous responsibility of the American citizen, have already raised their voices, and we hope that you will soon be numerous enough and powerful enough to stop this terrible war.

apple sauce!!!

BOONE'S FARM, MODESTO, CALIFORNIA

Special Town Meeting Monday

Amherst special Town Meeting scheduled for October 30th provides an occasion for Town Meeting Members and townspeople alike to cast a critical eye not only on the issues raised in the warrant but also on the institution of Town Meeting itself. They are urged to do so by Barbara Cavanaugh, chairman of the Town Meeting Study Committee, which plans a public hearing November 14th at which citizen opinion will be solicited on "procedures and practices associated with town meeting, and...recommendations for improvements therein."

The quotation is from the vote of Town Meeting last March which created the seven-member Study Committee and further directed it to consider "the efficiency and size of town meeting and its function and accountability as a legislative body."

Taking the forthcoming Special Town Meeting as an example, and drawing on their experiences with Town Meetings of the past, residents are invited to consider such questions as the following:

Should we keep Town Meeting or, following the example of Agawam, change to a Town Council form of government?

Should we keep Town Meeting but reduce it in size? Amherst's Representative Town Meeting Act, which could be changed by Charter Commission, provides for 240 elected members. This Act and local by-laws provide for an additional 23 ex-officio members. (The chairmen of some but not all town boards serve as ex-officio members, as do the Manager, Clerk, Moderator and members of the Board of Selectmen and School Committee.) Are there too many ex-officio members, or should there be more?

Do voters make an informed choice among candidates for Town Meeting? Should provision be made for recording of how Town Meeting Members vote on certain issues?

Do Town Meeting Members make informed decisions on the issues? Can the town budget be made more comprehensible to them?

Are changes needed in the conduct of Town Meeting to ensure greater fairness and/or greater efficiency?

The public hearing is scheduled for Tuesday, November 14th, at 8 p.m. in the Town Hall. The Study Committee has been meeting since last spring and must submit a report to the next Annual Town Meeting. Members were appointed by the Moderator and include Chairman Cavanaugh, Mildred Beals, Nancy Foster, Irving Howards, John Janse, Lewis Mainzer and Maria Roberts.

Columbia Prof. To Speak On 'Academic Freedom'

Walter P. Metzger, professor of history at Columbia University, will speak at Amherst College on "Academic Freedom in the 70s" tonight. The event, sponsored by the Lecture Committee, will take place in Converse Assembly Room at 8 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

Born in New York City, Metzger holds degrees from City College, Columbia University, and the State University of Iowa. He is actively involved in the American Association of University Professors, and has been on the Columbia faculty since 1950. Perhaps the best known of his many writings is "The Development of Academic Freedom in the United States in the Age of the University."

During the Columbia disorders in 1968, Prof. Metzger initiated the Ad Hoc Faculty Group, which attempted to mediate between the university administration and protestors.

BU Bringing Suit Against 'Termpapers'

The Trustees of Boston University brought suit today in Suffolk Superior Court against the businesses selling term papers to students in the Boston area. The University is greatly concerned about the effect of such businesses upon the educational process and upon its relationship with its students. The University's counsel has been investigating the term paper situation for some months.

The presidents of other Boston area universities have expressed their support for the action taken by Boston University. Costs of the action will be shared by seven major universities in the Boston area.

The suit asks for a declaratory judgment that the defendants interfere with the educational functions of the University; that the defendants interfere with the relationship between the University and its students; and that contracts for the sale of term papers and other research documents sold for submission by a student as his own work are in violation of the public and educational policy of this Commonwealth and are invalid.

"The continued operation of term paper companies undermines the aims and programs of all educational institutions," President John R. Silber said. "Boston University is concerned to preserve the academic community free from the influences of those who would subvert its very foundation. The overwhelming majority of students do not engage in deceitful practices, such as purchasing term papers, in pursuit of their education and degree. It is also on their behalf that Boston University takes this action."

The court action seeks injunctive relief against future sales of such term papers. Judge Harry Kalus of the Suffolk Superior Court has set today as the date for hearing on the question whether such an injunction shall issue. Pending such hearing, defendants have been restrained from destroying records of their dealings with students.

Air Pollution Hazard For Kids

BOSTON (AP) - Massachusetts pediatricians consider air pollution to be the biggest environmental hazard facing children, according to a survey conducted by the state chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Along with air pollution, which causes respiratory problems, the doctors cited lead poisoning and infectious diseases transmitted through water pollution.

Also highly rated were transportation hazards, including automobile and snowmobile accidents and exhaust.

THURSDAY, NOV. 2 AT 8:30 P.M.
AMHERST COLLEGE
ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE
WILL PRESENT

JR. WELLS and BUDDY GUY

IN A DANCE CONCERT
IN THE
AMHERST COLLEGE GYMNASIUM
TICKETS $2.00

Available Starting Oct. 23
at The Listening Post
Amherst & Northampton
And at the door.

For Your Convenience
PICK UP YOUR STUDENT TICKETS for

UMASS vs. CONNECTICUT

(Saturday, October 28, 1972 - Alumni Stadium 1:00 p.m.)

at the following times and locations

MAIN CONCOURSE - CAMPUS CENTER

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25 12:30 - 3:00
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26 12:30 - 3:00
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27 12:30 - 3:00

OR ANY DINING COMMONS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26 4:30 - 6:30

(a service of your athletic department)

If you paid a $62.50 Campus Center fee, you may be interested in running the place.

11 undergraduates are needed for the Campus Center/Student Union Governing Board

Pick up applications at the Student Senate Office 1st level, CC

Deadline is Fri., Oct. 27

Interviews by appt. 7 - 10, Mon., Oct. 30 in Rm. 178, CC or doesn't $62.50 mean much these days?

© 1972 Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee and the world.

Notices

AMHERST ELEM. PROGRAM INTERVIEWS
Elementary teacher training program in Amherst Schools. Interviews 9-11 a.m. Mon. through Thurs., 10/30-11/2. Sign up at School of Ed., Rm. 219 (545-1563) now.

ASTRONOMY CLUB
Club meeting tonight at 7:30 in Has. 20/22. Members, bring what you've written for the Cosmos. New members welcome.

ATTENTION NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS
Bus will leave at 6:30 from Has. Lab. It will also stop at Patterson House on Sunset Ave. at 6:35. Bus returns at 9:30 p.m.

FENCING CLUB
The Fencing Club meets every Mon. and Thurs. in Rm. 8 WoPE from 7-9 p.m. Come on down tonight and test your skill.

FLOAT PARADE
Lift your spirits and float on down. Tomorrow, leaves Haigis Mall at 7, returns at 9. Going up Lincoln St., up Amity, down No. Pleasant.

FLORICULTURE CLUB
Work meeting to make corsages for Oct. 28 football game. Party next week for those who help.

FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY
Are you psyched for Halloween? Funny Farm Dream Factory will appear for the first time at UMass to bring you The Heavy Halloween, Tues., Oct. 31.

GAYS
Tonight: regular meeting 7:30. Special guest speakers on Psychosocial Aspects of Gay Life. Gay Women's Caucus and new friends cordially invited to attend Fri. eve.-Halloween Costume Dance. 545-0154 for info.

GAY WOMEN'S CAUCUS
Gay women's night tonight, S.W. Women's Center, Crampton-Mack-Crimmie faculty lounge, 6:30, all women welcome.

HILLEL
Special meeting today at 2:30 in Hillel office. Please try to attend.

INTERNATIONAL FAIR
All international group members and interested individuals are invited to a meeting of COFASAF, Oct. 31, Tues. at noon in main lounge of Prince House. Discussion of International Fair, March 8-10.

ITALIAN CLUB
Informal but important meeting to be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in 305 Brown Lounge. Bring wine, Italian records, friends.

KARATE CLUB
Meetings Mon. and Thurs. nights, 8-10 p.m., Council Chambers.

KUNG FU CLUB
Chinese self-defense lesson tonight at 7:30 p.m. in 151 Goessman Lab. New members are welcome. Be on time!

LACROSSE USHERS FOR FOOTBALL GAME
If you can usher Sat.-UMass vs. UConn, see Coach Garber or sign the sheet in the locker room.

LANDSCAPE OPERATIONS
Meeting to be held in Rm. 904 CC at 7:00 p.m. tonight. Please attend.

MERKABAH
Mysticism class will meet tonight at 6:30 p.m.

MOTORCYCLISTS
All dirt and street riders interested in joining the UMass Motorcycle Club call Jim at 5-2150.

NAIADS
Meeting today at 4:00 p.m. at WOPE Pool.

NEWMAN CLUB
Open Exec. meeting tonight at 7:30. Want to find out what Newman is about? Please come tonight!

POETRY READING
Poets David Lenson, Nancy Rice and Anthony McNeill will read their poems at 8 p.m. tonight in Mem. Hall. Free admission and refreshments.

SCROLLS
No meeting Thurs. night.

SENIOR COMMITTEE
All seniors are urged to attend opening meeting of senior class gov't. Come and declare "martial law, anarchy, fiscal irresponsibility or other ludicrous actions. Tonight, 7:30 p.m. Location to be announced.

SKI PATROL
Meeting tonight CC 165, 6:30. Attendance required.

STUDENT FILM FESTIVAL
A Student Film Festival will be held at Harvard Dec. 1, 2, 3. For further info., call Jake at 5-2917 between 4 and 5 p.m. Entry deadline Nov. 6.

STUDENTS FOR OBJECTIVISM
Meeting in Dukes Rm. S.U. at 7:30. New members welcome.

SGAF
The Student Group for Academic Freedom will have an organizational meeting in the Campus Center at 8 p.m. Bring your minds.

LOST
One pair soft leather gloves in S.W. or CC area--more than anything of personal value to me. Steve, 6-7583.
Darling Arabee, friendly female Irish Setter pup--lost near Morrill on Wed. Any info., please call Sue, 323-7031.

Seniors pay a $4 tax to senior committee.
Want it back?
Meeting - Thurs., Oct. 26, 7:30 p.m.
C.C. - to be Announced

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

Beacon Clinic Needs Volunteers

Students interested in volunteering their time during daytime or evening hours in the Beacon Clinic (an outpatient clinic for alcoholism) of the Franklin County Public Hospital in Greenfield, are requested to either call or write the Administrative Director, 57 Beacon Street, telephone number 772-6388, for further information.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 Comet wagon, 6cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work. 549-6335 eves.

1961 Mercedes 220S excint running cond; new snow tires. For quick sale $250 or make offer. Pat Greaney 203 Hamlin 253-9237. tf10-26

For sale 1956 GMC school bus. Gas heater, stove, ref, lamp. Good condition $450. Call 512-1720, 9-5. tf10-27

1971 Fender Reverb amp. Good for harp and guitar and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279. tf10-27

1961 Chevy Wagon, 327 w/holly four barrel, 1 F-70-14 Gd. yr. polyglass tires, ps/ph, new battery. Great winter car. $250.00. 546-7615. tf10-30

1967 Malibu, low mileage. Asking $950. Call 253-2797. tf10-30

1966 Volvo PV544, $150. Call 546-7932. tf10-27

1969 Fiat 850 Spider Convert. Red with black top; 25,000 miles. $1,000 or best offer. Call 581-2561. Ask for Bob. tf10-31

Very Reasonable!! 1961 VW Bug. Fair condition, new muffler, needs some work. $100 or best offer. Call 515-0911 or 545-0914. tf10-26

1970 Simca for sale. In great shape, 32 miles per gallon. Must sell, need money. Call Joe evening, 546-8921. tf11-1

68 Cougar 302 auto, ps, many extras. Excellent condition, will consider trade & cash. Call Ray 256-6651. tf10-30

1962 Oldsmobile, Super 88. Runs great. Must sell, $200. Full inspected, 59,000 miles. Call Eric, 546-7781. tf10-30

1969 Volkswagen Beetle. Very good condition, asking $1000. 253-2845. tf11-1

1960 Chevy Sedan, full inspected. Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-1121 tf11-2

1965 Mustang, V-8, Standard 3 speed, snow tires and rims. Good condition. Call 545-0112 or 586-2579. Keep trying. tf10-30

1971 Camaro, 3 spd. std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188. tf11-3

LOST

Gray w/white chest, belly, paws. Reward 256-8862. tf10-26

Wanted. To represent airlines on campus. Good pay if interested. Call 253-3182 or write Campus Rep. Box 202, Amherst, Mass. tf10-26

Lost set of keys for Firebird. Need badly. Call 546-4726, ask for Larry or leave message. tf11-1

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail. Nov. 1. Room in Puffton. Own room, everything incl. $70/mo. Call Lester or Neal 549-6399. tf10-31

Room for rent in Farmhouse. For female, $70/mo., own room 5 mi. from Amherst in Belchtn. 1/4 mi. off Rt. 9. Avail. Nov. 1 or sooner. 253-7076. tf10-31

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3061. tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4436. tf11-17

Part time, Foreign & American - light body & mechanical repair. Reasonable rates. 323-7008. tf11-1

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female graduate student preferred to share apartment. Walking distance/bus service to UMass — own room $80.00 a month. Call 549-1137. tf10-31

Roommate wanted - Sunderland, 5 mi. from campus, own room. $52.50 per month, heat included. Call Doug or Neil after 6 - 665-1178. tf10-30

Won't discriminate — 2 roommates male or female wanted, own bedroom clean. Undergrad $80/mo. 345 Puffton Vil. Frank. tf10-27

Own room in very large apt. near Smith & 5 College bus. 3rd floor. Quiet. Interesting room shapes. 584-1580. $67.50 tf10-30

Roommate wanted, Squire Village. 665-3108. Male or Female. Ask for Tom or Dave. tf10-27

Female roommate wanted to share Puffton Apt. starting Nov. 1. $83 a month. Call 545-2112 between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Ask for Sally in 315. tf10-30

ENTERTAINMENT

"Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" Find out THI OCT. 27, at 7:30 and 9:00 Mahar Aud. tf10-27

BEATLES "YELLOW SUBMARINE" PLUS TRUE ROMANCE "GOING STEADY" "HAPPENS SAT. EVE. OCT. 28, THOMP. 101, 6:8-10:Midnite! tf10-27

HALLOWEEN BRINGS "THE FREAKS" & "TIME TRAVELERS" IN COLOR. THIS FRIDAY EVENING, THOMPSON 101, 6:15 - 8:15 - 11:15. COME MEET THE CROWD! tf10-27

Sharon Tate stars in Roman Polanski's "Fearless Vampire Killers" at 7:0-11 on Sat. Oct. 28 in Mahar. Also 2 Road Runners. 75¢. tf10-27

Have Mason, Oct. 27 at A.I.C. Springfld. 8 p.m., Butova Gym. Tickets, Student Activities Office. tf10-27

The October Fest starts today at the Bluewall! Polka to the German Band, Thurs. & Fri. from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. tf10-26

Jeremy Steig and his flute come to the Folklore Center, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 27 and 28. Concert begins at 8:00. Info. 253-9261. tf10-27

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1971 Honda 350 CL. Excellent condition, 5,000 miles. Only $500.00. 1-731-8335 anytime. tf10-27

HELP WANTED

Work for largest environmental movement in U.S. part & full time positions. Call 253-7793 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. daily. tf10-30

Live-in babysitter. Free rm., board and Mt. Snow season pass. Tiny salary. Interview, references. Write Box 341 Wilmington, Vt. tf10-26

Housekeeper needed, female for wife & daughter. Light housekeeping. 1 hr., $40 week. Call 247-5462 after 5. tf10-27

Alternative free radio production conforming only serious, hardworking need appls. Contact Marlowe or Steward, South College 302. tf10-27

WANTED

Roommate M or F, $40/month, excellent location, own room, 1 mile from campus. call 549-0130, 4 p.m. or anytime. tf10-27

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4718, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Cash for 3 speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5380. tf10-31

Need someone to fix and clean type writer, at reasonable rate. Please call 665-8061. tf10-27

Skiers! Want to share Killington Ski Chalet? Season Nov. 15 - May 1. $250/person/couple. After 6, John Stubbe 617-734-3961. Fs Thurs.! 10-26

FOR SALE

For Sale used 8 track tapes, most $2.00. Call 546-5782. tf10-26

Must go! 60 Yamaha 350 good condition, extras. Priced to sell. Peter 253-5779. tf10-26

One KLH Model 20 stereo component system 250 dollars. Call 323-7376 after 8. tf10-26

For sale 1960 Opel GT. Must sell. Gold black int. Call 253-7353 Amherst. tf10-27

Moving to Tex. Must sell snow tires from Maverick (6.95-14) w/walls, exc. cond. $25 for pair. Call Kenny 549-6399. tf10-31

1 pr. Reiker buckle boots for lined, size 7 med. Worn once. $50.00 worth $90.00. Call 369-4112 in Conway, anytime. Keep trying. tf10-31

Metal skis w/Solomon 40 bindings & Henke boots 9W w/boot bag — $100. Will sell separately. Call George at 665-1160 after 6:00. tf10-27

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now! Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door. tf10-31

Must sell Del Rey Elec. guitar and small supro amp $100 or best offer. Call Kev 6-5086. Best after 6 p.m. tf10-27

2 healthy goats 1 — A good milker other starts in Spring. Call 268-3228 Haydenville for information. tf10-27

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf.sum

For Sale, Waterbed - 8X7 - $50. Free full length brown fur coat with sale. Both in excellent condition. Jerry 256-0865. 10-27

King size Waterbed: Heater, thermostat, padded frame, 4 year guarantee, now $50. Call 367-2091. tf10-27

Ecology minded? Buy Shaklee's Basic L for the laundry. 100% bidegradable. Buy natural vitamins too. Carol 253-2841. tf10-30

Recorders, flutes, fifes, wooden and bamboo flutes at Creative Endeavor 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831. tf10-27

Toyota 70 Corolla, 35,000 m., needs some work, 2 new tires & snows, $900. 6-1513. tf10-27

For Sale: 1935 Hudson, Running! Reasonable; Call 650-3322 after 6:00 p.m. tf10-27

Notecards & Xmas cards for sale. Total proceeds spent for medical care for wounded Viet children. Call 546-9227. Ask for Stan. tf10-27

1 pr. Head Ski boots used 1/2 season, comfortable high back, size 9, $50.00. Also 1 pr. Hachle red hots, size 10, Used $25.00. 323-7908. tf10-30

EMBROIDERED Turkish, Indian, Mexican blouses, all reduced at reasonable rate. Come to 239 Pierpont anytime. 6-5395 day or night. Stu tf10-27

New Skis 72 K2-37s. Never been mounted. Were $160, asking $100. Also used look bindings, $20. Phone 546-6760. tf11-1

Big couch, $15.00. Call 665-2830 in good condition. tf10-31

For sale A G.E. Refrigerator. Works well. $25. Call 256-6688. Ask for Snow. tf10-30

Skis — Blizzard Exclusive 200 cm with Solomon S50 bindings. Used only 20 times. Cost $150 new, now only $80. Call 586-2729 after 5. tf10-27

PERSONAL

To my Little Jock Broad, Now that you're an old lady, will you still love me? Happy 20th, Nosey. tf10-26

Quiere es a-par-ta-miento? Co-mooo se dice? A-par-ta-mento. No, estupido, se dice departamento. tf10-26

Attention! Special birthday reduced rates. Have a Happy 19th Jaye-Jaye! Love, the guys. tf10-26

The Chemzos openly challenge the powerful Wgit' Hfg. team to a friendly game of volley ball, so shove that up your traps! tf10-28

Anyone with any questions or wanting information on homosexuality or would just like to talk, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, Eve tf10-27

Sensuous-cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S, till noon. 256-6272 47 S. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

B3 — Happy 22nd birthday! (and congratulations, Pilot!) with Love, N.A.S. tf10-26

Anyone with questions on homosexuality or wanting information, call 586-2811, ask for Paul, Eve. tf10-30

Dear Fabian (Alias Boob), Happy Birthday! Love, Marble and Barfra. tf10-26

APTS. WANTED

23 year old girl, quiet, easy going, desires apt. or room with other girls for Nov. & Dec. in Amherst area. Call Carol 256-6785. tf10-27

EMPLOYMENT

Sta-Power - 253-7303. tf10-27

Yellowstone & all U.S. Nat. Parks. Booklet tells how & where to apply. Send $2.00. Arnold Agency, A204 E. Main, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. tf10-31

VAN FOR SALE

1965 Ford van, mech. perfect, new tires, heater, sticker, int. panelled, stereo. $700. 545-7727. Keep calling. tf10-25

TO SUBLET

One bedroom apt. to let beginning Dec. 1. Close to campus. Call 549-1107 after 6 p.m. tf10-30

1 Bed. furn. apt., all utilities, $140. China, bedding, carpet, etc. Near University. Phone day 545-2896; evgs., 665-1291. tf10-31

AUTOS

Sta-Power - 253-7303. tf10-27

APT. FOR RENT

2 bdrm apt. immediate occupancy, carpeted. Couple or family. $190. 665-1721 tf10-27

2 bdrm apt. all elect. Hillside opt. to renew — Available Nov. 1. $170 - utilities included - pool - tennis. Call 665-2398 tf10-27

MISCELLANEOUS

Amherst Elementary Program interviewing, Oct. 30, thru Nov. 2, for next semester. Sign up Sch of Ed Room 219 (545-1563) now. 11-1

FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY
FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY
brings to you
HEAVY HALLOWEEN
Prepare yourself for the first annual UMass
MASCARADE BALL
On Oct. 31 Tuesday at Worc. Dining Com. East.
(Better get your costume ready!)
plus
Incredible HORROR SHOWS at C.C. Aud.
10-26

Anderson Named NL Manager of the Year

CINCINNATI (AP) - George "Sparky" Anderson doesn't bemoan his role as the losing manager in two of the last three baseball World Series.

"After all," says the Cincinnati Reds skipper, who was honored Wednesday as the National League Manager of the Year, "if I weren't here I'd be painting houses, so I can't kick.

"I have nothing to complain about," he said. "How can you complain when you've got steak in your mouth?"

Anderson, whose Reds were beaten by Oakland in the seven-game World Series which ended here Sunday, has won National League pennants in two of his three years at the Cincinnati helm.

His efforts in guiding a revamped Big Red Machine through the just-completed campaign reaped him a 271-179 vote margin over Pittsburgh pilot Bill Virdon in an Associated Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters for the Manager of the Year honor.

A humble, direct man who runs a tight ship based on conservative attitudes, Anderson smiled in appreciation of the award and paid tribute to the man he says made it possible.

"I'm real happy to win this award," Anderson said, leaning back in a chair in his small Riverfront Stadium office, "but I have to share it with Lefty Phillips. I owe everything to him."

Anderson was a skinny kid of 13 when he first met Harold "Lefty" Phillips on a Los Angeles playground.

Phillips, who later would work with the Los Angeles Dodgers organization and manage the California Angels before his death in July at the age of 53, befriended Anderson and encouraged him.

Anderson went on to struggle through an undistinguished 10-year minor league career, interrupted by one major league season with the Philadelphia Phils.

Then Phillips re-entered his life, helping him land a minor league job as manager at Rock Hills, S.C.

After Rock Hills came St. Petersburg, Modesto and Asheville, then a coaching post with the San Diego Padres in 1969.

When the Reds fired Dave Bristol in 1970, Anderson moved in as the Cincinnati Manager.

He soon proved his managerial merit guiding a power-packed team into the World Series, where they absorbed a disappointing five-game licking from Baltimore.

Butkis Isn't Just a Brute

CHICAGO (AP) - The Minnesota Vikings found it's a big mistake to regard Dick Butkus as just a mauling football monster.

Butkus proved to be the Chicago Bears' fast-thinking defensive captain, keying a 13-10 upset of the Vikings here Monday night. That brought him recognition Tuesday as National Football League defensive player of the week by the Associated Press.

Linebacker Butkus not only filched a Fran Tarkenton pass to set up the Bears' winning field goal and recovered a Viking fumble to launch their lone touchdown drive, but also "called" a fake punt and fake field goal for vital first downs.

As a blocker on the Bear kicking unit, Butkus gets a chance to be a bit of a quarterback himself. 'I knew the Vikings gave a great kick rush, especially after watching their films all week," sakd Butkus, "so at the right time I signalled the fake kicks."

Bear Coach Abe Gibron explained both calls were "automatics" by Butkus at the scrimmage line. "He gave me a signal," said Gibron, "and I waved 'okay' back to him."

The first call, a fake field goal, sent holder Bobby Douglas scurrying six yards for a first down on the Viking 29 and several players later Douglass hit Jim Harrison on a four-yard TD pass.

Early in the final quarter, Bear punter Bobby Joe Green came in on a four:h-and-three situation. "The Vikings were nearly in a nine-man line to block the punt," recounted Butkus. "So when the ball was snapped, I was hollering 'Throw it, Bobby Joe, throw it.'"

Green cooly flipped wide to Cecil Turner for 23 yards and a first down. Despite interruption by a lost fumble, the drive for a decisive 20-yard field goal by MacPercival was renewed by Butkus' interception and 14-yard return to midfield.

Wills Waivered

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Shortstop Maury Wills, who stole more bases than any major league baseball player in history, was placed on waivers Wednesday by the Los Angeles Dodgers, who also offered him an instructor's job.

Wills, recently turned 40, has been little used this season, 10 years after he broke Ty Cobb's mark by stealing a record 104 bases.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆—by SYDNEY OMARR—☆

Virgo can appear passive while seething on the inside. These natives strive to be of service and when not appreciated suffer inwardly. Virgo must keep busy to be happy. And to be happy there must be love which is reciprocated. Virgo responds to Capricorn, finds Leo mysterious and is willing to work for Aquarius. The Virgo woman is scintillating and the Virgo man can be brilliant. Man or woman, Virgo wants to be appreciated and will go to almost any length to make a mark.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Duties at home tend to dominate. Take long-range view. Shortcut methods are not likely to suffice. Cancer person plays key role. Outline duties. Be clear in your own mind where it is you want to go.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spread efforts and influence. Refuse to be painted into corner. Key is to be versatile and to maintain sense of humor. Look ahead. Your potential is greater than might be imagined. Sagittarius is involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Review money questions. Check obligations. Thorough approach is necessary where profit is concerned. You can do better in financial area. Key is to draw up program and follow it. Don't be disuaded by one who is basically lazy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find that many of your idols have feet of clay. This will work to your ultimate benefit. You will be forced to utilize your own talents. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Condition at home, which had been neglected, now demands attention. Taurus, Libra persons are in picture. Steer clear of argument involving relatives. Secrets are likely to be exposed. Maintain composure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be in line for financial windfall. Key is to sharpen sense of timing. If you wait, you get what is needed. Avoid self deception. See persons, situations as they actually exist. Friend plays significant role.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Assume responsibility. Obtain valid hint from Virgo message. What you require is close at hand. Don't go too far afield. Play game in your own ball park. Then you obtain needed advantages. There is room at top.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start. Don't play games with security. Avoid premature starts. Aries individual could be in picture. Accent now is on what occurs at a distance. Check lines of communication. Be available for special report, assignment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One who appears to wish you well may not be sincere. Know it and protect yourself in clinches. Check assets. Revise budget. What occurred in recent past should serve as guideline for immediate future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Opposition will boomerang in your favor. Public relations is due to improve. Legal problem can be resolved. Friendly forces are at work in your behalf. Sympathetic Cancer individual is involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Prepare to show wares. Means dress up home, product, appliances. Do some entertaining. Fine for combining business and pleasure. Applies especially in connection with travel. Broaden horizons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check tendency to spend too much for too little. Make some economic adjustments. Young person may be making unreasonable demands. Be sympathetic but firm. This policy will result in long range gain.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are persistent, dynamic, possess business acumen and natural creative ability. New start made this year is due to bear fruit. Event that occurred in July could result in greater financial security.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Greek letter
4 Poem by Homer
9 Quarrel
12 Young boy
13 Loop
14 Female sheep
15 Enthusiastic
17 Aided
19 Bitter vetch
20 Eagle's nest
21 Biblical weed
23 Pronoun
24 Festive
27 Abstract being
28 Cut of meat
29 Pertaining to the cheek
30 A state (abbr.)
31 Evil
32 Prohibit
33 Exist
34 Hail and rain
36 Novelty
37 Decay
38 Lampreys
39 Conjunction 40 Simple
41 Giver
43 Knock
44 Earthquake
46 Impregnate with air
49 Organ of hearing
50 Crown
52 Irritate
53 Printer's measure (pl.)
54 Artist's stand
55 Grain

DOWN

1 Guido's high note
2 Sailor (colloq.)
3 Snakes
4 Hostelries
5 Parcel of land
6 Maiden loved by Zeus
7 Residue
8 Antlered animal
9 Amend
10 Be in debt
11 Marry
16 Before
18 Goods cast overboard
20 Goal
21 Brief
22 Old-womanish
23 Possessed
25 Toil
26 Rugged mountain crest
28 Chapeau
29 Insane
31 Broom
32 Prohibit
35 Church officials
36 Preposition
37 Mend
39 Water wheel
40 Deface
42 Memorandum
43 Actual 44 Golf mound
45 Male sheep
46 Exist
47 Attempt
48 Piece out
51 Conjunction

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Mann
Would You Believe? ELEPHANT WALE CORDS
1¼" PILE
11¢ Pink Camel Olive
the PUT ON UNIVERSITY STORE

Soccer Team Having Problems

By DOUG FIDLER

Coach Gerry Redmond has known great success in the soccer world, first as a leading member of England's number one team of a few years back, and then as a coach in Canda.

Redmond is extremely knowledgeable in all aspects of the game. His first hand experience as a player is combined with his intense studying of the game as a discipline.

He has been forced to add one more area of study of soccer - that of the young college player. After years of playing with and against competitors of World Cup Caliber, he must now attempt to understand the young competitor, who is subject to many complexities involving his everyday life.

I visited Redmond's Curry Hicks office yesterday afternoon to get his insights into the performance of his team in the first half of the season and what he though was needed to carry out the rest of the campaign in a successful fashion.

"We have conceded eight goals in our last two games," began a dejected Redmond, "while just scoring three in return. It may be convenient or fasionable to blame the officiating or whatever, but plain fact is we are not good enough at this time. We have surrendered space in midfield and in our half of the field as if our opponents were entitled to it.

"One or two of our defenders have been caught upfield with opponents in possession of the ball twenty yards behind them, and trotted back as leisurely as Senior Citizens at times - too casually and too late. Perhaps this is my fault and we should have spent more time on conditioning and less on ball skills and passing. If so it can be rectified easily.

"We have also allowed," he continued, "opponents time and space to enter our penalty area, collect the ball and turn, and set it up and shoot - without a body being placed in front of them or a tackle being made. There is no question that we must tighten up our defense.

"On offense we have agreed that forwards should not attempt a shot from an acute angle near the opponent's goal line, especially when the goalkeeper has the angle covered, but to pass back to a colleague. Yet shots are still being made from this position despite our agreed game plan. On occasion, when the correct pass has actually been made from the position, other team members have not yet come up to receive the pass. We have even wasted good corner kicks at crucial times by kicking the ball behind the opponent's goal.

"We have agreed also to be unselfish and pass when we can, unless one is within shooting range, and generally most players have observed this rule well. But there are still one or two who attempt to beat as many as three opponents by himself, even though there are colleagues who have run into unguarded areas to receive a pass. Such tactics usually result in losing possession of the ball in a totally unnecessary fashion."

"We do have unselfish players with the ability to go past opponents with the ball when it is desirable and necessary in order to shoot for a goal. But there are some who attempt to beat the same man again and lose the ball. The object of every player should be to help the team score goals, not to give an individual exhibition."

"Also, we have given away some necessary and dangerous free kicks in our half of the field. Players should sometimes consider the consequence of their actions upon the whole team before they make an illegal tackle.

"We still have our enthusiasm, however, and our willingness to work hard. We have beaten Amherst, Boston College, Worcester Polytech, and Boston University decisively. But our losses to Maine, Tufts, and Rhode Island have shown up our deficiencies.

"We must work to put the losses right," Redmond concluded, "before we take on undefeated Connecticut on Saturday. Only when all the players concentrate full-time while they are on the field, adhering to agreed principles and tactics, will we approach our real potential."

Just what is an automatic transmission Adjustment?
...and what should it cost?
A regular adjustment consists of tightening the bands, adjusting linkage, replacing the filter and refilling with fluid. Doing this once a year (or about every 10,000 miles) is like an insurance policy against major trouble, and it keeps your transmission shifting smoothly and efficiently. Our price for the complete job is $8.00.00.
United Transmission Exchange, Inc.
389 King St., Northampton
584-6790

ALL THESE VEHICLES CARRY A 50-50 GUARANTEE FOR 30 DAYS.

1970 Pont. GTO, V-8 a real cream puff	$2495
1969 Toyota Corona Real Sharp	$1195
1965 Ford Mustang Red V-8 Std.	$595
1967 Ford Galaxie V-8 Auto.	$795
1967 Olds Delta 88 V-8 Auto-air	$995
1965 Ford Custom V-8 Auto	$495
1971 Std. Beattie Orange	$1595
1970 Sq. Back Clean car	$1695
1965 VW Sedan Black	$595
1963 VW Bus 17,000 orig. miles	$1095

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.
OPEN EVES. 'till 9.
NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN
Your Authorized VW Dealer
246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton
FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers
Call 584-8620

The Snack Bars... where good food and good friends get "TOGETHER" for study breaks.
Hampden 7am-2am
Catalyst 7am-10pm

RUGGARD!
by Bostonian Bootiques
Soft Brown Leather only $26.00
at:
BOLLES SHOE STORE
"HOME OF THE BOOT CELLAR"

NOW FEATURING CLEANING & POLISHNG OF CONTACT LENSES also try the new
PHOTOSUN LENSES
AMHERST OPTICAL SHOPPE
195 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, Mass.
Parking in Rear

TONITE PENNY NITE meets SUPER SCHLITZ TONITE
At The Rusty Nail Inn RUSTY NAIL INN featuring "Cuckoos Nest"
Rte 47 Sunderland 665-4437

UMass Still No. 1 in New England

Unbeaten Massachusetts and Dartmouth are 1-2 for the third consecutive week in the Associated Press' New England college football poll.

The Massachusetts Minutemen, who have rolled to five impressive victories, received 11 first place votes and 172 of 180 possible points this week in the balloting by a panel of sports writers and sport scasters in the six New Englanc States.

Dartmouth, which hiked its record to 4-0 with a romp over Brown last Saturday, remained right behind with 165-1/2 points. The Big Green received six first place votes and shared the spot with Yale on one ballot.

Surprising Harvard, which has rebounded from an opening loss to Massachusetts by winning three in a row, moved from fifth place tc third with 135 points. The Crimsor are host tc Dartmouth in an Ivy League showdown this week.

Unbeaten Yale won its fourth consecutive game against Columbia last week, but dropped a notch to fourth in the AP regional poll. The Elis, who travel to Cornell Saturday, received 129-1/2 points.

Boston College, having troubles in taking on national powers, slipped to fifth with 112 points. The Eagles have a disappointing 2-4 record after losing to Pittsburgh.

Holy Cross, idle last week, retained sixth place with 77 points, while Connecticut remained seventh with 69. Connecticut tests Massachusetts in the Yankee Conference Saturday.

Notices

Volleyball Officials Needed

Men and women volleyball officials are needed for Intramural games. Orientation meetings for officials are scheduled for Thursday, October 26, and Monday October 30 at 8:00 p.m., 215 Boyden. Those interested in officiating must attend one of these meetings. Pay is $1.85 per game.

* * *

Basketball Scrimmage

After the UConn football game at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, the basketball team will hold an intrasquad scrimmage in the Cage. The public is invited to attend.

One Thing Leads to Another

Split end Ed Hajdusek snares a pass from UMass quarterback Mark Tripuka. Notice the Rhody defender in decent position to make the tackle. But Hajdusek evades his pursuers and dashes in for the score. Action was in fourth period of last Saturday's game. Minutemen racked up their fifth straight win with a 42-7 romp. (MDC photos by Ken Sulin)

Greg Andrews is UConn's "Big Gun"

By BILL BALLOU

There are a couple of things important about this Saturday's UMass-UConn game. It is Homecoming, and even though it ain't what it used to be, it does mean something. It is for the Yankee Conference title, and while that might not be the Rose Bowl, it's nice to be No. 1. And this is probably the best of UMass' YanCon rivalries, and it is always nice to beat Connecticut.

Larry Pasquale, the defensive backfield coach at UMass, knows something about rivalries, having coached at the Naval Academy for a couple of years. Pasquale gave the scouting report on UConn at yesterday's Varsity M Club luncheon and said "I've been in locker rooms here and at the Naval Academy, and to us this is just like Army-Navy."

Pasquale also mentioned that Connecticut had a couple of ringers you should keep your eye on. One of them, Greg Andrews, is a split end with something like 4.5 or 4.6 speed. Pasquale calls him UConn's "big gun." The other guy is old baseball nemesis Brian Herosian, who's the big man in the secondary for the Huskies, playing middle safety.

Also on hand to partake of the tuna casserole were Johnny Jones and Peil Pennington. Jones, representing the defensive unit said that "our major goal is a shutout" and for the longer range indicated that the Minutemen were pointing toward the Lambert Trophy, which they've never won.

Pennington said that for UConn "we'd like to get our sweep game going" and in regards to his own performance, "I'd like to improve on my passing. Last week I thought I was a little off." Most of the other quarterbacks in New England would be thrilled with the kind of "off" days Pennington's talking about.

One note of interest that bodes well for UMass fortunes on Saturday is that Peter Gammons will cover the game for the Globe. Not that Gammons is going to score any points for the Minutemen, but a UMass football team has never lost a game that he's covered.

Incidentally, the door prize drawing this week had to be rigged. I was something like 200 digits off and I don't think they can fit that many people into the space they're using.

Pool Tourney Planned

The Campus Center Games area and the Student Activities Program Council will conduct the Annual Pocket Billiards and three cushion Tournament this year between October 31 and November 21. The pocket billiards is open to a men's division and a women's division. The three cushion tournament is open to men only. There must be eight or more participants to conduct a tournament.

Winners and runner-ups receive a trophy appropriately inscribed. The winner and runner-up in the pocket billiard tournaments will go to the New England final at Central Conn. State College, on February 9 and 10.

An entry fee of $1.00 pays for playing time and New England's share of the expenses.

Enter now for the fun and experience of tournament play. Last year's champion in pocket billiards, Paul Brouillette, '73, is challenging all on-comers.

To enter, see Mary Margola or one of her staff, in the games room for an application. Applications are accepted up to 1 p.m. on Monday, October, 30.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Dan Kamal

Voting for "Manager of the Year"

The following is an imaginary interview with a veteran baseball writer. Considering that the nation's baseball scribes voted Chuck Tanner Manager of the Year, Eddie Kasko SECOND and Dick Williams (you remember him–the guy whose team won the World Championship) FIFTH, this writer may not be atypical.

"First of all sir, may I ask who your choice for Manager of the Year was?"

"You don't have to call me sir–the name's Joe. I voted for Bob Lemon, the manager of the Kansas City Royals."

"Bob Lemon? Didn't he get fired about a month ago?"

"Yeah, but he showed that Freddie Patek a thing or two. Remember when Patek and Amos Otis got a little out of hand? Well Patek straightened right out. Otis still gave us–I say us as you know because I cover the Royals–some trouble though. But one for two isn't bad. I always like a manager who won't let his players run all over him."

"But what about team performance? The Royals had some of the best hitters in the league this past season but could only manage a fourth place finish. What good does a straightened out Freddie Patek do on a fourth place ballclub?

"Big deal! Is it Lemon's fault that his pitching was so inconsistent?"

"But Lemon WAS a pitcher–shouldn't that have helped some? And besides, how can you vote someone Manager of the Year when he's been fired. What do you call it, a posthumous award?"

"It's not my fault the Royals' management is such a bad judge of baseball leadership."

"Let me ask you, Joe, in all candidness, don't you think that perhaps Dick Williams might have been a good choice for the award? After all, he did guide the Oakland team to the championship."

"Whaddy talkin' about? I thought Williams was manager of the Red Sox.....oh.....well I don't really pay that much attention to what the other teams are doing. But if he was as good as you say, maybe I should have given him the number two spot on my ballot."

"Who did you vote for as your runner-up?"

"I voted for Abe Gibron–you know the guy from Chicago who made all his players cut their hair. He's another guy that won't let his players get the upper hand."

"But Gibron is the coach of the Chicago Bears–that's a football team!"

"Oh."

"Tell me, Joe. How long have you been a sportswriter in Kansas City?"

"About twenty-five years. I used to cover the Athletics before they moved and before that I did Little League wrap-ups every week–so my baseball background isn't lacking."

"That may be true, Joe, but don't you think you should have found out more about what the other managers had done this past season before you voted for Lemon?"

Jackie Robinson 1919-1972

Baseball lost a true friend this past Tuesday when Hall of Famer Jackie Robinson died in Stamford, Conn. at the age of 53. Robinson was regarded as one of the all-time stars for the old Brooklyn Dodgers, but was best known for breaking baseball's color line. (AP Wirephoto)

Vogler Relives "Paper Lion"

Have you ever had the ambitions while watching a football game from the stands or on the tube to be right there on the field pads and all? Well, meet the guy who did: Mark Vogler.

Last spring Mark and all his 5'7 and 157 pounds went out for spring football practice under the permission of head coach Dick MacPherson and the individual supervision of defensive halfback coach Larry Pasquale.

There were no punches pulled and actually Mark relates that most of the team accepted him as a teammate having no idea that he was going through a "George Plimpton" experiment.

His experiment culminated in May with the annual Red and White intersquad game in which he took part in as a defensive back.

Luckily for us Mark is also a staff reporter for the DAILY COLLE

Luckily for us Mark is also a staff reporter for the Daily Collegian and beginning tomorrow in the Poor Richard's section of the paper Mark will relate to you in the first of a two part series his experiences as a UMass football player.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

There's A Chance Peace Will Come...

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 35 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1972

Vietnam Peace 'Within Reach'

WASHINGTON–KISSINGER REPORTS–Henry A. Kissinger, just back from talks in Paris and Saigon, meet at the White House with President Nixon to report on the latest developments almed at ending the war in Vietnam. (AP Wirephoto)

Thieu Cautious

SAIGON (AP) - The Saigon government said today South Vietnam is ready to accept a cease-fire but will never accept a political settlement that goes against the will of its people.

The government comment followed disclosures by North Vietnam and the United States that they have come to within reach of an agreement to end the war in Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese, in announcing their understanding with Washington, charged that President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam constituted an obstacle to putting the final touches on the accord because of his delay in accepting some of its provisions.

They charged Washington was using Thieu's balk "to postpone the realization of those matters on which the U.S. had already given its promise."

The South Vietnamese intended to sew suspicion among the Republic of Vietnam and her principal ally and to try to use the pressure of public opinion for an early end of the bombing and mining to their advantage."

"As President Thieu already pointed out in his televised talk on October 24, the Republic of Vietnam is ready to accept a cease-fire, but will never accept a political settlement which goes against the will and interests of 17-1/2 million people of South Vietnam.

Nixon Optimistic

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) - President Nixon said last night that differences blocking a Vietnam settlement "can and will be worked out" in a way that brings "peace with honor and not peace with surrender."

Speaking at two Appalachian political rallies after a day of rapid-fire developments on the Vietnam peace front, Nixon said settlement of America's longest war would mean that chances for a generation of peace are "better than at any time in this century."

While Nixon delivered an optimistic assessment on settling final details of the impending peace agreement with North Vietnam, he offered no timetable. His chief Vietnam negotiator, Henry A. Kissinger, earlier in the day had said "peace is within reach in a matter of weeks, or less."

Nixon brought a crowd of 3,000 jammed into the Ashland high school gymnasium to its feet when he said he is confident "we can succeed" in obtaining "peace with honor and not peace with surrender."

"There are still some differences to be resolved," Nixon said. "I believe they will be resolved."

A few hours earlier, at a Huntington, W. Va., airport rally, the President referred to the differences remaining and said "I believe they can and will be worked out."

Faculty-Senate Delays Rhetoric Vote

By JIM DEMPSEY

The long-awaited discussion on the abolition of the Rhetoric requirement was postponed yesterday by the Faculty Senate. The meeting was recessed before the matter could be taken up but when the Senate meets again next Thursday it will be the first matter of business on the agenda.

The proposed motion provides for the abolition of rhetoric as a University requirement, effective in September of 1973. There is also a provision which recommends the establishment of a committee to determine whether other courses in communication skills may be taken in cooperation with the Rhetoric Department and the University to meet the requirements.

One reason for the abolition proposal, according to the report of the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee, is the excessive enrollment of 1500 freshmen each semester. Because it is a requirement, most of them tend to have a "just get it over with" attitude toward the course.

Due to the size of the program there is the necessity of using many teaching assistants, whose major training is not always specifically for language and writing skills.

The Academic Affairs Committee, who will present the proposal, recognizes the need for development of an individual's communication skills. However, they feel that because rhetoric is a requirement, the existing rhetoric program cannot meet the varying needs of the campus community.

The major time-consuming business of the Senate meeting concerned special report from the Tenure and Grievance Committee. They presented their suggestions for improvement of the basically sound UMass tenure policies and practices.

Their first recommendation called for an annual poll of the faculty, indicating each tenured member's mandatory retirement year and each other faculty member's tenure decision year. In addition, there would be a 25-year projection of each faculty member's schedule of possible new appointments.

Speaking against the motion, Senator Ellis Olim cited "the unreality of the 25-year projection" pointing out that teachers would be forced to "look into cloudy crystal balls." This first motion was rejected.

Their second recommendation won the Senate's approval, providing for the development of a plan within each department, school and college to maintain intellectual vigor and assure the necessary flexibility to respond to changing needs.

Senator Terence Burke spoke in favor of the proposal pointing out that "any department that cannot add new people is going to be outdated." He went on to say that "Irrespective of the age of incoming faculty members, a significant turnover rate is highly important."

The Senate approved the Committee's request for a study of the legal and financial implications of increasing early retirement incentives and/or lowering the retirement age. The mandatory retirement age for faculty members is now 70 years of age.

A motion restricting voting on tenure recommendations to tenured faculty members only, was defeated. It was felt that non-tenured faculty members should also continue to have a say in the matter.

This feeling prevailed despite the fact that there have been incidents where non-tenured faculty members were compelled to vote on someone else's tenure, knowing that they may well be excluding themselves from a job.

A motion to include students in the tenure decisions will be introduced with the Committee's next report.

David Navon, Chairman of the Tenure and Grievance Committee, presents a report on current tenure policies. (MDC Photo by Kevin Mack)

On The Inside:

•Peace Proposal see page four

•Asia After Vietnam see page five

•CC Fee Increase see page three

Ms. Andre McLaughlin, defending the Program Advisor Search Committee Report at last night's Campus Center/Student Union Interim Board of Governors meeting. (MDC Photo by Steve Quigley)

SHL: A Place To Get Together

By BOB SCHEIER

It's a plain-looking office on the second floor of the Student Union, overlooking the lobby. Several comfortable chairs, a filing cabinet, a bookshelf or two, all enclosed by a glass partition, the kind of student function office you see by the dozens in the Student Union and Campus Center..

This is the Student Homophile League (SHL) at UMass, whose main function, although it also sponsors social and educational events, seems to be its existence--"a place for gay people to get together."

Although homosexuals have sometimes been the subject of hostility on campus, the SHL operates in an atmosphere of tolerance-even anonomity.

As in most other student offices, organization members drift in and out throughout the day. stopping in the office to talk or study.

"It's someplace to go where you can feel relaxed," said a former student who preferred to call himself Pete, a 25-year-old physical therapy major who dropped out of UMass early in October in his sophomore year.

Estimates of the number of people coming to the weekly SHL meetings ranged from 100 to 200, and several members of the organization estimated the group's steady membership at around 125.

Members estimate that over three quarters of its members are women, and say a homosexual women's group operates as a part of the SHL.

In addition to UMass students, people from the Connecticut Valley and the five college area attend meetings, according to members, as well as several professors from area schools.

Pete, who says he is bisexual said several of his homosexual friends had been beaten up in Springfield, and once, a member of the SHL was called to deliver a lecture in a dormitory on campus only to be heckled by a group of students.

He called the campus "liberal-minded", but added that "gay people have different problems than straight (herosexual) people."

"Homosexuals are very limited, both socially and sexually," he said.

About ten members of the league have spoken to different university classes on homosexuality.

"The function of the group is mostly social for individuals," said another member of the group. "It's not a dating service, but it gives gay people an opportunity to meet other gay people."

Estimates by members of the SHL on the number of homosexual students on campus vary from 5 to 20 per cent. "There are lots of passive gay people, who never do anything about it," said Pete.

The SHL was founded two years ago, after the foundation of an organization called the Gay Liberation Front, which had about 25 members, but was more militent and open than the SHL.

"The only difference in the groups was that the SHL didn't want to be seen on campus," said another member, Roger, who says he left Boston University for a semester while a junior.

Almost all the members of the league interviewed said they had not been the object of any overt hostility on campus, but one said the subject was still "taboo".

"It will be a good ten years before we can get a job, and people won't raise their eyebrows," said Pete. He said he had not received trouble in getting a job because of his bisexuality, but added "some of my friends have."

C.C. Board OK's Nelson

By JEFFREY LEVIN

After considerable debate, the Campus Center/Student union Interim Board of Governors voted last night to accept a committee report recommending David Nelsun as Program Advisor for the board.

At the time of the Collegian deadline, debate was still going on about whether to endorse the salary range proposed by the Program Advisor Search Committee.

The Interim Board of Governors is a temporary group, formed after the reorganization of the SUG (Student Union Governing Board) last month. It is scheduled to be replaced by a permanent Board of Governors.

Objection to endorsement of Nelsun was voiced by Gerald Scanlon, Coordinator of Student Activities and Acting Director of the Campus Center. Scanlon is the Student Activities Staff representative on the Search Committee.

Speaking for the Student Activities Staff, he said, "We feel very strongly that David (Nelsun) would not be suited for the position." He argued that the Staff looked at the job from the inside out, as opposed to students who view the job from the outside in.

Scanlon said that the job demanded a person with stamina, perseverance, and a sense of direction. He said that according to the resume, Nelsun hadn't stayed on a job in the past for longer than two years. He argued that Nelsun is a writer and an intellectual, "the type of guy that students pick as their advisor."

Scanlon also said that he thought that Nelsun would not handle details and drudgework very well.

In a refutation of Scanlon's charges, Search Committee member Ms. Andre McLaughlin argued that Scanlon did not offer substantive reasons for his rejection of Nelsun. She filled in the gaps in Nelsun's resume and claimed it was institutionalized racism that was holding up his appointment to the position.

"What requires more work with details than the work of a writer?" asked Ms. McLaughlin.

Student Government Association President Larry Ladd also remarked, "if the candidate is not prone to detail and drudgework, that's an asset rather than a liability."

In other business, Interim Board of Governors Chairman Rich Nelsun announced that he had designated Richard Geffen to work with the Student Senate in the formulation of a CO-OP.

Olver, Barrus Clash On Records

By MDC STAFF

With only 11 days left to election time, the campaign between the two candidates for the state Senate seat in the Franklin-Hampshire District has heated up with both men clashing over their respective legislative records.

Rep. John W. Olver, D-Amherst, says he sponsored or co-sponsored 17 bills in the House last year which became law, while the incumbent John Barrus, R-Goshen, was only responsible for three.

However, Barrus said he sponsored seven acts in the last year.

Olver charged that Barrus had inflated his legislative record by including resolves, study orders, committee reports, and studies in his bill totals. With these other criteria included, Olver sid Barrus had a total of 11 while he had a mark of 30.

But, Barrus charged that Olver had only 27 actions and further that the challenger had included committee reports as bills that he had co-sponsored. Barrus said he did not claim co-sponsorships on committee reports.

The incumbent also produced statistics for the last four years including resolves and acts that showed him out-producing Olver 55-43.

Moreover, he said, Olver had ignored "some rather pertinent" pieces of legislation the incumbent had sponsored, including the passage of bills which provided funds for recreation in Franklin County and initiated the payment of back wages to some Northampton school teachers.

Olver said Barrus was using the dispute over legislation production as a "smokescreen" to avoid discussing "the vital issues of this campaign."

Olver further charged that Barrus was using it to hide his long-standing opposition to tax reform, his "negative labor record," and his "lack of understanding for the movement for full rights and privileges for young adults."

10 PIN BOWLING
Evenings 4:30 - 10:30
Monday - Friday
50c per string
Boyden Gym.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

THE HUNGRY-U
roast beef, meatball, Italian cold cuts, pastrami, veal cutlets, Hungry-U Special, Italian sweet sausage, pepper steak, tuna, American cheese, lettuce, tomato, onion, pickle, pepper, olives, oil & vinegar
Italian submarine sandwiches
103 N. PLEASANT,
AMHERST 256 6350

CIGARETTE CONTRAPTION--Bill Luly operates a Rube Goldberg-like machine which he built as a solution to the high cost of smoking. The machine, consisting of 15 motors, 50 switches, 12 bicycle chain link belts and four fan belts, pumps out six cigarettes an hour at a cost of 15 cents a pack, Luly reports. Luly said he and his wife, both heavy smokers, got tired of paying $10 a week for cigarettes. (AP Wirephoto)

$30 C.C. Fee Increase Seen

By BUFFY SPENCER

Students attending UMass in 1975 will face a $90 Campus Center fee, an increase of $30 over its present rate.

Speaking in an MDC interview Rich Nelson, Chairperson of the Interim Board of Governors of the Campus Center-Student Union, explained the problems of the Campus Center which will cause this increase.

Nelson stated, "The Campus Center was not designed to be self-liquidating. It was assumed throughout the planning of the Campus Center that there would be a considerable amount of state money involved in paying off the bonded indebtedness."

The State Building Authority has since decided it could not allow multiple sources of financing for a single building, shifting the burden to the student body. Nelson says the problem now is "trying to make a going business out of something that was designed to operate at a loss."

Including debt service and operating costs the Campus Center is now running at a 1.2 million dollar loss. In 1975 we will begin paying off the bonds for the building (up until now we have only been paying interest on the bonds) and the annual overall deficit will be 1.8 million dollars. This money must be raised by the $90 Campus Center fee.

This projected fee does not include any kind of renovation or the replacing of capital equipment. An additional fee increase would be necessary for this. Nelson reports that we are already putting off this type of activity.

In addition, students must contend with considerably higher prices than competing private concerns because the building service areas were not really designed to operate profitably.

The Interim Board will eventually be replaced by a permanent Board of Governors. There are 22 positions to be filled on the permanent Board. Seven come from area governments, four are graduate students, and eleven are appointed by Larry Ladd, President of the Student Governing Association, with Senate approval. To date Ladd has received only ten applications for the positions.

Ladd said the important thing mw was to find out whwhat the students think should be done. In his opinion the Board of Governors is in a position to do, or at least attempt to do, what the students want.

He also said, "The governing board has the problem of establishing good relationships with the management. Up until this time there have been distinct problems of communication."

For two years UMass has had the highest Campus Center Student Union fee in the nation. Both Nelson and Ladd stressed thahthe Board of Governors, thrust in the middle of the fee increase, must do some scurrying around in order to increase revenue.

SIMS Plans Halloween

To honor the eve of ween, the Students International Meditation Society of UMass invites itself to a gathering of ideal social behavior. This Sunday evening, the regular advanced meeting held at the campus center will be exchanged for the first social function of the year.

This will take place at 7:30 at 35 Butterfield Terrace, the new SIMS Amherst center.

Refreshments will be served by those who bring them. Directions to the center can be obtained from the office (409-B) student union. While you are at the office, pick up a 1972 membership card and any other pertinent information about SIMS lectures, courses or holiday residence weekends you desire.

Checking of meditation will still be done on Sunday afternoon from 2-4 p.m. in the campus center. Consult the daily schedule for the room numbers.

There will be a second lecture on transcendental meditation this Thursday evening at 8:00 in Rm. 903 campus center and an opportunity for personal instruction this weekend. Those who would like to begin meditation or are in need of more knowledge of the technique are welcome to attend.

Interested in S.U.G. Board Graduate Appointments?
The Graduate Student Senate is accepting applications for four appointments to the newly revised Campus Center Student Union Board of Governors. Applications must reach the Graduate Senate Office (CC 1101) by Oct. 27, 1972

Sun. - Wed. 9 a.m. - 11 p.m.
Thurs. - Sat. 9 a.m. - 3 a.m.
BLACK KETTLE DELICATESSEN
Amherst Carriage Shops
253-9050
Phone orders accepted

THURSDAY, NOV. 2 AT 8:30 P.M.
AMHERST COLLEGE
ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE
WILL PRESENT
JR. WELLS and BUDDY GUY
IN A DANCE CONCERT
IN THE
AMHERST COLLEGE GYMNASIUM
TICKETS $2.00
Available Starting Oct. 23
at The Listening Post
Amherst & Northampton
And at the door.

Vets Not Joiners

By A. J. BASTARACHE

In a recent Collegian interview Frank Cotter, Special Assistant for Veteran Affairs, said that approximately 2200 veterans had registered at UMass this year, but he didn't mention where these veterans go, or what they do when not in class.

The Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) is the only Recognized Student Organization on campus which concentrates on veteran membership.

Beta Chi is a Greek-type gathering of veterans, but is not recognized by any fraternity organizations or by UMass.

Inquiries at the Veterans Affairs Office, the VVAW office, and to the president of Beta Chi all failed to yield any leads to any other campus-oriented veterans groups. Amherst posts of Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) and the American Legion were suggested.

Gerry Morton is listed in RSO files as president of the VVAW. He and two VVAW members, Bill Stewart and Eric Carr, held an interview in the new VVAW office in Room 104 of the CC.

Morton says that the VVAW had approximately 300 members early last year, and that there was heavy discussion as to whether the group would become political or not. There may be no connection, but Morton says when the group became political, membership dwindled to a present maximum of 30.

Stewart says the VVAW is a campus group open to anyone interested, although only Vietnam era veterans are allowed to vote. He says anyone can speak, present opinions and receive information.

Morton, Stewart, and Carr outlined a series of activities in which the group participates:

--Rap session at the Leeds Veterans Hospital for patients suffering from "Post-Vietnam Psychosis", a program headed by Psychiatrist Mort Campbell.

--Fund-raising for the Quang Ngai Children's Hospital in Vietnam, where civilian casualties, children from North and South Vietnam, and paraplegics are treated.

--Acting as an honor guard during the transfer of funds from the American Friends Service Committee to its Canadian counterpart.

--Raising defense funds in the trial of national VVAW members arrested in Gainesville, Florida, on charges of disrupting the Republican Convention.

--Continuing deeds of political activism against the war in Vietnam.

In a separate interview, Joe Kilmartin, president of Beta Chi, said his organization is in no way political.

Kilmartin says, "We've had two organized meetings thus far; maybe 100-120 showed at the first one and the second had about 40-60."

Kilmartin says there are about 18 members in Beta Chi now, and he hopes to have 30 to 40 vets. "We remain small for closer contact," he says.

A phoned query to VFW Post 754 in Amherst received an unofficial reply that there are 6 or 7 students who are local members.

As for the Post 148 American Legion of Amherst, Bill Seruda, its commander, said that any veteran of a conflict era with an honorable discharge and the sponsorship of a local Legion member may join.

George Andrews, the post's Financial Officer, said there are no student members of Post 148.

Out of 2200 campus veterans, a maximum of 29 VVAW members, 18 Beta Chi pals, 7 VFW marchers, and American Legion recruits, only a maximum of 54 student veterans are members of the local organized groups catering to veterans.

WHY PAY MORE?
SUNDAY
Hatch Cafeteria
SPECIAL
New-England Turkey Dinner
Tender Turkey
Savory Dressing
Creamy Whipped Potato
Fresh Frozen Green Beans
Rich Turkey gravy
$1.19 plus tax
Sirloin Steak
Cranberry sauce
Crisp French Fries
Roll & Butter
$1.55 plus tax
Chicken in a Basket
Tender Fried Chicken
Crisp French Fries
Roll & Butter
$1.29 plus tax
HATCH — STUDENT UNION
A Place for good conversation and good food

In The Nation And The World

Peace Pact Outlined; Signing In Doubt

PARIS (AP)-North Vietnam disclosed the broad outlines of a peace agreement yesterday and said the United States had agreed to sign it next Tuesday, but then backed away on the grounds that South Vietnam had refused to agree to it.

Hanoi charged this proved the United States was "not negotiating with a serious attitude."

Despite the harsh words the peace delegations here agreed to meet again next Tuesday.

First reaction from the United States was a denunciation of Hanoi by William J. Porter, the U.S. peace envoy in Paris, for making public the contents of secret talks with Henry A. Kissinger, the presidential national security adviser. He made the remark to reporters on leaving the peace talks.

Later, in Washington, Kissinger declared that "peace is at hand" and said most provisions of a settlement had been agreed on, although one more negotiating session was necessary.

Reaction in Saigon came from the official radio, which declared: "We in South Vietnam have the right of self-determination. A separate agreement ebetween North Vietnam and the United States does not concern us in any way.

"Let the Northern Communists demand nothing from us because any such demand will be vain unless they put an end to their aggression in the Republic of Vietnam."

North Vietnam demanded that the United States sign the agreement next Tuesday, the date it said was settled between the two nations.

Asked by reporters if failure of the United States to sign by the deadline would jeopardize private negotiations, Xuan Thuy, North Vietnam's chief negotiator at the Paris peace talks, replied:

"Wiat and you will see." Hanoi's announcement said, however, that publishing the gist of the secret negotiations "is in the interest of peace and will in no way affect the negotiations."

North Viet Stand

The North Vietnamese statement, broadcast by Radio Hanoi and submitted to the Paris peace conference, called for a cease-fire in Vietnam within 24 hours of the signing of a peace agreement.

All prisoners of war would be released and all U.S. and foreign troops would be withdrawn within 60 days. Negotiations would begin between the Saigon government, including President Nguyen Van Thieu, and the Viet Cong to arrange elections for a coalition government.

Declaring that the United States has postponed the signing because of a lack of an agreement with Thieu, North Vietnam's statement said: "The so-called difficulties in Saigon represent a more pretext to delay the implementation of the U.S. commitments because it is public knowledge that the Saigon administration has been rigged up and fostered by the United States."

In his talks with reporters, Xuan Thuy emphasized that under the agreement, Thieu could remain as head of the South Vietnam government in the negotiations to settle internal questions. These would be settled within three months after a cease-fire.

National Council

In the private talks, Thuy went on, North Vietnam agreed to a national council instead of the provisional government the Viet Cong demanded. He said under the Viet Cong plan, it would be impossible to have two administrations in South Vietnam.

In the peace talks, Thuy declared: "It is manifest that at the present time all conditions are combined to rapidly settle the Vietnam problem and immediately re-establish peace."

Thuy disclosed to reporters that it was North Vietnam that made the move to break the deadlock. He said the plan was presented at a secret meeting with Kissinger in Paris on Oct. 8. This touched off five days of secret talks by Kissinger, Thuy and Le Duc Tho, member of the North Vietnamese Politburo.

Hanoi's statement gave this account:

The United States indicated its satisfaction with Hanoi's proposal and agreed to this time table: Bombing of North Vietnam to stop Oct. 18; representatives of the two sides to initial the agreement in Hanoi on Oct. 19, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh of North Vietnam would sign it in Paris on Oct. 26.

Time Table

The United States proposed a modification of the timetable on Oct. 11, Kissinger's fourth day in Paris. Then, on Oct. 20 while he was negotiating with Thieu, the United States asked that the final signing be scheduled for next Tuesday and Hanoi agreed.

On Monday, when it appeared Kissinger was making little progress with Thieu, the United States again backed off.

Informants in Saigon said the United States was planning a massive airlift while Kissinger was in the South Vietnamese capital but denied it was connected with the return of U.S. prisoners of war, or a quick troop withdrawal. They declined to give other details.

Nine Points

The North Vietnamese said nine points were agreed upon:

—The United States will respect the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam.

—A cease-fire will begin 24 hours after the agreement is signed. The United States will stop all military activities, including bombing of North Vietnam and mining of ports. All U.S. and allied troops will withdraw from South Vietnam within 60 days.

—The return of all captured and detained personnel of the parties shall be carried out simutaneously with the troop withdrawal.

—The South Vietnamese people will determine their political future through free elections under international supervision. An administrative structure called the National Council of Reconciliation and Concord of three equal segments will be set up. It will promote the implementation of the signed agreements of the Viet Cong and South Vietnam and to organize general elections. The two South Vietnamese parties shall sign an agreement on the internal matters of South Vietnam as soon as possible, within three months after the cease-fire goes into effect.

—The reunification of Vietnam shall be carried out step by step through peaceful means.

—There will be formed a four-part joint military commission and joint military commission of the two South Vietnamese parties to consider military matters.

—The United States will contribute to healing the wounds of war and to postwar reconstruction in North Vietnam and the rest of Indochina.

—TNorth and South Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the United States shall respect the fundamental rights and territorial integrity of Cambodia and Laos. Foreign countries shall put an end to all military activities in the two countries.

—The agreement shall come into force as of its signing.

British Pound Plunges

LONDON (AP) — The British pound plunged to new record lows yesterday, bringing the French franc and the U.S. dollar under speculative attack in the general uncertainty.

The resulting confusion in European money markets raised a question mark over the future stability of the system of exchange rates set up 10 months ago in the Smithsonian Agreement.

A remorseless decline in the value of sterling since last June has left the pound devalued by more than 10 per cent against the dollar and over 12 per cent in relation to West European currencies.

For the first time yesterday, the French franc was caught up in the backlash of the pound's slump and weakened against every major currency except the pound.

The American dollar, although less exposed to attack than the franc, also weakened in European exchanges, where for the first time it sank below its floor level against the Japanese yen.

The Italian lira managed to hold its own although it, too, is considered open to attack. Dealers noted, however, a steady flow of dollars from Italy to Frankfurt and Zurich and wondered how long the Italian currency would hold up.

Winners for the day were the West German mark and the Swiss Franc-both of which moved up in relation to the dollar, the pound, the French franc and, to a lesser extent, the Dutch guilder and the Belgian franc.

Uncertainty was the prevailing note in the exchanges, and currency rates bobbed up and down as a result.

The major factor was the future of the British pound. Its downward course has given British export goods a sharp competitive advantage, especially over the French where profit margins have long been narrower than in most other contries.

The bank of England was reported to have intervened in the market again Thursday to slow the decline of sterling, but it was not believed to have been as determined in its defense of the pound as the French, for one, would have liked.

In Brief...

Sadek Resigns

CAIRO (AP) — Lt. Gen. Mohammed Sadek, a known critic of the quality of Soviet aid to Egypt, resigned yesterday as Egyptian war minister and commander of the armed forces.

His unexplained resignation followed an announcement by Prime Minister Aziz Sidky on Wednesday that the Soviet Union had pledged to carry on with military assistance to Egypt despite problems in relations between Cairo and Moscow.

Hospital Injunction

BOSTON (AP) — State Supreme Court Judge Edward Hennessey yesterday issued a temporary restraining order against 11 Western Massachusetts hospitals enjoining them from refusing to accept patient's assignment of bills to the state Blue Cross.

Term Papers

BOSTON (AP) — Judge Harry Kalus issued an injunction in Suffolk Superior Court Wednesday barring nine term paper companies from selling their products to students.

Jimmies OF SAVIN ROCK suggests that you look up in the sky at the UMass. - UConn. game

WHY PAY MORE?

MONDAY	79¢	Cutlet & Spaghetti
TUESDAY	79¢	Sloppy Joe
WEDNESDAY	79¢	Spaghetti w/½ lb. meatball
THURSDAY	79¢	American Chop Suey
FRIDAY	79¢	Beef Hash

HATCH CAFETERIA

PARADE
HOMECOMING '72
FEATURING! The Fighting Minutemen
U. Mass. Cheerleaders!
Amity St. N. Pleasant St. Lincoln Ave. Haigis Mall
Finish 9:00 Start 7:00
Marching Bands! Colorful Floats!
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27th - - - 7 - 9 p.m.

Asia Eyes Neutrality After Vietnam

TRAFFIC–Civilian trucks and buses jam a section of Route 1, east of Saigon, after the Viet Cong recently blew up and temporarily closed the highway, backing up traffic for miles either way. The road is important for produce reaching the South Vietnamese capital from the Central Highlands. (AP Wirephoto)

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

For Asia, what shapes up in the wake of an Indochina peace looks like a whole new game. Smaller nations taking a hopeful view, apparently have named the game neutrality.

Henry A. Kissinger says peace is at hand. If it proves secure enough to permit withdrawal of all military men and preclude further intervention by sea or air, it suggests that a sharp corner is being turned in world history.

It heralds U.S. disengagement from the Southeast Aisa mainland. Will that mean stability or instability? Have symptoms of future convulsions already begun to surface?

No longer is there implicit U.S. military support for these nations. Having read the portents, they have been mending fences and casting about for alternatives, for new concepts of self-protection. All will be affected, one way or another, but for South Koreans, Thais and Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan the change, even though not sudden, is none-the-less shocking.

Contest of Ideologies

In the 1950s the world picture had a rather simple look of a contest of ideologies, a world Communist bloc against a system of U.S. alliances. In the 1960s, disintegration of Soviet-Chinese ties and China's climb to nuclear power contributed to a process of change. In the 1970s, the scene is dominated by a new and perhaps precarious three-way balance achieved by the Nixon Administration's contacts with Peking and Moscow and prospective U.S. retirment from most of the Aisan mainland.

All this represents a startling turnabout in the Asia-Pacific picture. An assumption of sharp decline in U.S. influence and authority is inescapable.

China's influence rises. Russia contests Peking and asserts her own Asian authority by strengthening the Soviet role in India and sending the fleet on showy Pacific and Indian Ocean operations.

Nixon Doctrine Tested

What may develop is a test of the Nixon doctrine of 1970.

In effect the doctrine says the United States will provide a nuclear shield for nations whose survival is tied to American security, and furnish military and economic aid to countries theatened by aggression. But it expects those nations to do the rest of the job themselves without direct American military intervention.

Having gone through the long agony of Vietnam, the U.S. public would be unlikely to support any new deployment of ground forces elsewhere. Is there, then, a substitute for on-the-scene military response? Since a nuclear shield is unusable against political aggression, is the United States even now implying that political expansion by Asian Communists need no longer represent a threat to American security?

Communist Threat Downgraded

The whole picture implies that the Communist threat has been downgraded. In the light of the big powers' new triangular relationship, Vietnam seems, ironically, to have become irrelevant to all but the Vietnamese.

Indochina's neighbors are likely to have read the Saigon regime's resistance to a three-segment government for South Vietnam as implying a dread that some day, even if it takes quite a long time, the Communists would dominate.

Saigon has a million-man force of army and police with sophisticated equipment, but it lacks political cohesion. Its history has been one of multiple divisions and squabbling by self-seeking politicians. Asian leaders may feel it likely that the regime is vulnerable now to the same sort of internal subversion that started the whole business years ago.

No matter how they read it, the Asian leaders have much to ponder.

Commitments Remain

U.S. commitments remain to South Korea, Thailand and Taiwan, but the emerging new picture appears to have made these regimes wonder how lasting those commitments might be. Thus, South Korea has edged toward dialogue with the Communist North on the possibility of finding ways of living together.

The United States still has air bases in Thailand, but in the light of new developments these could prove a Thai liability. Peking seems to be encouraging and arming Thai guerrillas who make noisy raids on those bases and turn them into a political issue for Bangkok.

Power Vacuum

Southeast Asians, noting a developing power vacuum suggested by withdrawal of both British and American presence and an implied disintegration of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, are taking hopeful steps toward neutralization.

Malaysia has decided to cut ties to the five-power Commonwealth defense arrangement with Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Singapore

Helicopter Inventor Igor Sikorsky Dies

EASTON, Conn. (AP) — Igor I. Sikorsky, the Russian-born inventor of the helicopter, died yesterday at his home. He was 83.

Sikorsky, who built and flew the world's first successful helicopter and then went on to build one of America's largest aviation corporations, died of a heart attack one day after making a consulting trip to his Sikorsky Aircraft Corp. in nearby Stratford.

He retired from Sikorsky, now a division of United Aircraft Corp., in 1957, but went to the plant twice a week as a consultant.

"He kept very much up to date," said Frank J. Delear, public relations manager of Sikorsky and author of its founder's biography. "The only handicap in the last couple of years was that his eyes were bad from glaucoma, and he had to have things read to him.

"Since his retirement, the outstanding thing he did was to really conceive and develop the Skycrane helicopter."

The Skycrane chopper, designed to haul heavy equipment in military and industrial applications, was Sikorsky's final advancement over the first, unsuccessful helicopter he built in his native Kiev in 1909 at the age of 20.

He built the world's first successful helicopter in 1939, flying the machine at Stratford.

Sikorsky was born May 25, 1889, to a family dominated by clergymen and physicians.

He built his first fixed-wing aircraft in Russia in 1910.

Peace Reaction Is Mixed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From the head of the FBI to the man in the street in Harlem, Americans expressed elation, hope and disbelief at the news that a cease-fire in Indochina seems near.

"Tremendously overjoyed," was the way FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III put it after a luncheon speech in New York.

"It's too good to be true," commented Joyce Blakeley, a secretary in Harlem.

The combination of anticipation, skepticism and uncertainty was common yesterday.

"We'll all be happy to have peace," said Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson. "It seems very tenuous, but I, like everyone else, will welcome peace." The former first lady, in New York City, said she had not talked to her husband since Henry A. Kissinger said a peace agreement was near.

HILLEL
BRUNCH
SUNDAY MORNING
OCT. 29
Around 11:30
Price $1.50
Paid-Members — 75¢

WHY PAY MORE?

the SHOE-BIN
187 N. Pleasant Amherst
ALL LOOKS IN BOOTS FOR MEN & WOMEN
fri 'til 9

THE JEANS STORE
LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE
MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS
ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women
201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)
WEAR HOUSE
Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706

MAMA MIA! IT'S A SPAGHETTI NIGHT
EAT!
AT THE
HATCH CAFETERIA
every SATURDAY
FOR ONLY
A heaping platter of HOT SPAGHETTI covered with MEAT SAUCE
- PLUS -
HOT GARLIC BREAD served from 5 PM - 9pm
59¢

Analysis

The McGovern Machine-What Happened?

By The Associated Press - Chugging through the snows of New Hampshire, picking up speed in Wisconsin, rolling through California, the campaign machine of Sen. George McGovern was the primaries.

What has happened to that McGovern machine in the presidential campaign.

A look now at the McGovern campaign in three states where he won important primary victories-Wisconsin, California and Massachusetts-indicates major changes since last spring:

Volunteers Drop

—The flood of volunteers, particularly from the campuses, which fueled McGovern's primary campaigns has not been there this fall.

—The politically savvy traveling troops who followed the primaries from state have been dispersed and plugged into various key states. They are spread thin.

—The McGovern machine now has the backing of the Democratic Party, but it has not meant much in Wisconsin, however, the McGovern machine appears to be running well with local people who moved into key spots vacated by top campaign organizers who left after the primary. President Nixon carried the state by more than 60,000 votes in 1960 and 1968, but key people in both camps say the race this year is now a tossup.

Disorganized

McGovern staffers in California frankly admit the campaign machine there broke down after the primary.

"We were fantastically disorganized in the primary. It all broke down after the election," said Elmer Cooper, who recently took over McGovern's Southern California campaign. "There was basically nothing here when I came in".

Cooper installed a highly structured organization to replace the flexible, often overlapping machinery of the primary campaign. With the party regulars filling many kep posts, the organization is now more like a traditional Democratic campaign operation than the McGovern machine of primary days.

The canvass of Democratic voters in California conducted by McGovern workers during the primary was the crowning achievement of the McGovern machine. Popular wisdom had long ago determined the impossibility of canvassing nearly every precinct in the state. McGovern workers did it.

A similar canvass is now underway, but it is running far behind the pace of last spring's effort. It started later because of an intensive voter registration drive and has been slowed by lack of volunteers.

"We just don't have the bodies that we had in the spring," said Paul Sullivan, director of the canvass in Southern California. "The momentum just is not there."

The primary campaign canvass was 70 per cent completed three weeks before that election. Three weeks before the general election, Sullivan said, the canvass was about 35 per cent complete. Some 20,000 canvassers will be needed to finish the job, he added, but so far only half that many have volunteered.

"Three thousand people came into this state for the primary," said Sullivan. "They aren't here now. We need them other places."

No Students

In addition to the lack of people from other states, Ron Sufrin, McGovern's campus coordinator in Southern California, said local students have not turned out as they did in the primary.

"There was a lull after we won the nomination," said Sufrin.

"The momentum just slipped away. People were at the beach or getting registered for school or buying books and are just now getting back into the campaign."

Independent polls in California and Massachusetts recently showed McGovern trailing President Nixon. California, with the largest bloc of electoral votes in the nation, 45, is a swing state McGovern's staffers said he must carry.

Campaign '72

Nixon Visits Ky.

WASHINGTON (AP) Amid a flurry of Vietnam developments, President Nixon prepared yesterday for a quick, two-stop political foray into West Virginia and Kentucky.

Six hours before his scheduled departure, the White House disclosed Nixon would land first in Huntington, W. Va., for an airport rally before flying on 15 miles to Ashland, Ky.

The original plan had him visiting only Ashland for a rally intended to bolster his campaign in three states-Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio.

Ashland is across the river from Ohio and 10 miles from the West Virginia border.

In the hours before his scheduled departure, Nixon was pondering the administration's next Vietnam moves after Hanoi said presidential adviser Henry Kissinger had agreed to cease-fire plan but later asked for further negotiations. Kissinger later said peace could come within a few weeks.

Nixon, sporting a big lead in the polls, has limited his reelection campaign to radio speeches and occasional one-day trips.

A half-day of campaigning Monday in New York's white-collar suburbs was his first political appearance in 10 days. He plans to motorcade through a dozen northern Ohio cities tomorrow.

Kentucky and Ohio-two of Thursday's target states-are rated as solidly in the Nixon column. West Virginia, which hasn't gone Republican in a presidential election since 1956, is a question mark.

McGovern Tapes "Debate" Ad

DETROIT (AP) - A "live" Sen. George McGovern debated films of President Nixon behind closed doors yesterday in a brief pause to his intensive, yet highly selective effort to string together enough states for a bare electoral majority in the Nov. 7 election.

Pausing to comment on reports from Hanoi and Washington that peace in Vietnam is imminent, McGovern said, "I hope that these reports of a peace settlement prove to be correct.

"I hope there is no holding back on the part of Gen. Thieu or anyone else and that we can move to get the war over," McGovern added. He also said he was "puzzled as to why the administration did not move for a settlement years ago."

McGovern said he had not been informed by the White House of the developments but he said his military and foreign affairs adviser Paul Warnke was trying "to arrange an appointment at the White House...as yet nothing has been arranged.

McGovern spent the morning in a television studio, taping a program that attempts to simulate a debate with Nixon by matching recent films of Nixon positions with live McGovern comments. When, or whether, it will be used, is undecided.

With 12 days to go before the election, McGovern is concentrating heavily on television with paid spots, half-hour speeches, a series of appearances on local interview programs and statewide telethons answering questions from callers.

Even if everything breaks right for the Democratic nominee, by his own plans he will have a tight squeeze to amass the needed 270 electoral votes.

His managers express unconcern over who wins a national popular majority.

Since Labor Day, McGovern has visited only 22 states. Of the 11 Deep South states he has been in only one, Texas, making three visits so far in quest of its 26 electoral votes.

But McGovern has been in New York 10 times, Ohio 9 times, Pennsylvania 7, and Michigan and Illinois 6 each.

WEAR HOUSE

COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by

LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER

201 N. PLEASANT ST.

HOMECOMING '72

THURSDAY Shorts From the New York
FRIDAY — Erotic Films Festival
— Student Union Ballroom —
7 & 9 p.m.
50 c

SATURDAY — National Black Theatre
Barbara Ann Teer, Director
— Student Union Ballroom —
8 p.m.
$1.00 UMass undergrads

Kon Fu Shun
in concert
Student Union Ballroom
11 p.m. - 3 a.m.
50c

Las Vegas Night
Campus Center Auditorium
8 p.m. - 12 mid.

SUNDAY — THX 1138 THX 1138
Student Union Ballroom
7 p.m. & 9 p.m.

Make HALLOWEEN a fun time!

Join the crew of

THE Rusty Scupper

ON
TUES. OCT. 31st

Enjoy the best in food & drink
while being entertained by that titillating trio

The Deadly Nightshade

HAPPY HOUR from 12 Midnight 'til 1:00 a.m.! surprises for everyone in costume
Don't miss it!

529 Belchertown Rd. 256-8551

N-Plant OK In Air

BRATTLEBORO, VT. (AP) - What may be the next to final licensing hearing on the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant was held yesterday after months of haggling and argument.

Members of the Atomic Energy Commission's Safety and Licensing Board said yesterday that although the hearings could continue next week, every effort would be made to end the proceedings tomorrow evening.

An end to the months of stop and go hearings will not be the end of the controversy surrounding the Vernon plant on the Connecticut River.

The issue of operating the nuclear plant could end in the courts because of lawsuits trying to delay permanent licensing of the plant because of environmental concerns.

Vermont Atty. Gen. James M. Jefford says he plans to appeal a Vermont Water Resources Board order that allows fogging at the nuclear plant.

Jeffords and state Water Resources Commissioner Martin Johnson expressed immediate opposition to the board order which sided with the company and softened regulations to operate the plant.

The order issued by the board allows the Vermont Yankee plant to heat the Connecticut River to 93 degrees and authorizes a large mixing zone in Vernon Pond, an impoundment in th the Connecticut River. In addition, it practically repeals all restrictions placed on the plant concerning fogging.

Jeffords objected to the introduction yesterday at the hearings of the order issued Wednesday by the Water Resources Board.

Jeffords, counsel for the state in the current round of hearings on a permanent license for the plant, said the controversial order was not a final one because it is subject to appeal at county court and possibly state supreme court levels.

Commissioner Johnson and Jeffords joined at an earlier licensing board hearing in opposing the jurisdiction of the board over the monitoring of fogging from the plant's cooling towers.

Johnson has recommended a 3-1/4 acre mixing zone be established for heating water discharged from the plant.

But, Wednesday the Water Resources Board overruled its commissioner by announcing that it intends to retain jurisdiction in the fogging issue and that the mixing zone should comprise most of the 150-acre Vernon Pond.

The decision was a victory in Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corporation's continuing battle to get its $200 million plant into full and permanent operation.

The plant has been operating at 75 per cent of its potential power since Sunday, generating up to 385,000 kilowatts of electricity for the New England power grid.

Current operation of the plant is authorized under a temporary, full-power license which expires next Feb. 28.

Environmentalists seeking to prevent the granting of a permanent license appear to be assembling a last ditch effort to seek a court injunction against operating the plant.

The New England Coalition on Nuclear Pollution, which has led conservationist forces throughout the hearings, planned to announce future plans today. It has been reported that the coalition, charging both Vermont Yankee and the AEC with failing to adequately study possible ecological damage by the plant, is seeking an injunction.

However, a coalition member said recently that the group is having difficulty raising money. This could mean that another possible course of action for the coalition will be abandoning all efforts to regulate the atomic plant.

FBI Stalks Wheat Spy

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency are looking into a case involving telephone calls last summer by a "Mr. Smith" who told a Kansas City trade magazine details of U.S.—Soviet grain transactions.

Officials of the Milling & Baking News said Thursday federal agents had interviewed the magazine's editor, Morton Sosland, a few days before he published an account of Mr. Smith's calls on Oct. 3.

The FBI here also has interviewed at least one newsman who has covered the U.S.—Soviet grain deal. The agents discussed Mr. Smith and the calls made to Kansas City.

About $1 billion worth of U.S. grain, mostly wheat, was sold to the Russians this year. Sen. George McGovern and others have said the Agriculture Department withheld information from farmers, causing some to sell grain at lower prices when they could have waited until the market went up because of the huge sales.

The Milling & Banking News is a weekly magazine which circulates mainly to the grain trade and allied interests. Sosland was out of town and not available for comment.

However, two officials of the magazine, who asked not to be identified by name, said in a telephone interview that a CIA agent had visited with Sosland once before publication of the article and that FBI agents had been in the office "several times" but not in recent days.

According to Sosland's article, a series of telephone calls was received from a man who initially identified himself as "John Smith" of the London Financial Times.

Later, after Sosland found the London newspaper employed no such expert, Mr. Smith said he was an international grain spy.

The calls began on July 17, before the size of the U.S. wheat sales became generally known. For nearly a month in successive calls, Sosland said, Mr. Smith provided tips pointing to a much larger sale than anyone publicly knew at the time.

Sosland said he did not publish Mr. Smith's tips at the time because they seemed fantastic. As details of the wheat deals became known generally in early August, however, much of the caller's information was verified.

In all, the United States sold more than 400 million bushels of wheat to the Soviets this year through private dealings by U.S. grain companies.

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

B-town Party Here

A Halloween party will be held for 35 residents of the Belchertown State School tomorrow in Rooms 168-172 of the Campus Center. The party is being run by the Belchertown Volunteers of UMass and on account of it, the regularly scheduled bus to Belchertown will be cancelled.

The party will include games, singing, dances and refreshements. It will be a good opportunity for the residents to leave the school and visit the UMass campus. All volunteers are urged to attend, and it is important that a large number of UMass students attend because the volunteers hope there will be a one to one ratio of volunteers to residents.

The Halloween party is just one of the ways in which the volunteers are playing a more active role at Belchertown this year. On Oct. 7, the volunteers escorted a group of residents to the annual Belchertown TOWN Fair.

New members or those interested in working with the mentally retarded are welcome to join the volunteers. Anyone is welcome to attend Saturday's party. A bus transports the volunteers to Belchertown every Saturday at 12:45 from in front of Whitmore (except tomorrow).

CARL ANDERSON'S
RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE
Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013

BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.

FRIDAY - Luncheon Specials
• Fresh Open Lobster Salad Sandwich $1.75
• Shrimp Scamp: w/savory rice en casserole $1.85
• Tuna Jr. Club Sandwich w/French Fries $1.25
• Irish Lamb Stew en Casserole $1.65
Served 11:30 - 2 p.m.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter.
Salad Bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night
Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef:
Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter.
Salad Bar included. $3.95
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

this is it! ...greet the bizarre ...shake hands with the unusual!

Stillman's Wood Faces, Many other props, mannequins, etc.

FACES OF EARTH

"a truly unique department store!" "the shopping center of tommorrow"...these are just a few of the tired clichés the owners keep babbling to themselves. What are Frank Wolworth and Marshall Fields saying about this time "shop is many shops"?? ...nothing!! They're both dead!! Since you're reading this, maybe you're dead, too! ...So why don't you check us out!

FACES OF EARTH 159 N. PLEASNT ~ NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Bob Scheier
NEWS STAFF	Jan Alexander
EDITORIAL	Steve Tripoli
SPORTS	Roy Lyons
DARKROOM	Pam Perry, Pete Manera, Kevin Mack, Jim Pappas, Steve Quigley
AD LAYOUT	Norma Friedman

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Long Time Coming

"Peace is at hand."

So says Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger about the Indochinese war. His comment was sparked when North Vietnam's Radio Hanoi broadcast the outlines of a peace settlement with the United States yesterday.

As announced by Hanoi, the settlement is very welcome, although our suspicions are raised when we consider the coming election is now less than two weeks away.

There are nine points upon which three of the four sides agree: United States recognition of independence, sovereignty, and unity of Vietnam; a cease-fire and cessation of all military actions together with troop withdrawals to begin 24 hours after the agreement is signed, simultaneous release of all detained and captured personnel; free elections and the formation of a National Council of Reconciliation and Concord; peaceful reunification; the formation of a four-part military commission; contributions by the United States for the healing of war wounds and for reconstruction; end of all military activities in Cambodia and Laos; the coming to force of the agreement as soon as it is signed.

We feel confident that the present obstacles towards the signing of the agreement, namely, President Thieu's objections, can be swiftly overcome. The United States can always make him an offer he can't refuse.

It has been a long time since most students here have lived without a war going on. We hope it works out.

"NEGOTIATE, NOW AND YOU'LL GET... SWISS BANK ACCOUNT. ...POUT, AND END UP WITH 75¢ ALLOWANCE!"

The Art Of Sexism

By ANDREW E. BARRAFORD

Yesterday I took part in a discussion upon the art of sexism. How is it done and what are the best methods of hiding it? This is what I was being told. The event was a hearing upon the charges of sexual discrimination which were being brought against Alpha Phi Omega for their Las Vegas Night Queen Contest. Although the case was moved to be dismissed, the room of people were turned into a forum for discussion upon the situation in question.

There were surprising declarations as one person ultimately announced with pride that he believed in 'male supremacy'. Other equally emotional and pointed verbal contests ensued while I sat and listened. The 'ends justify the means' conversation was turned upon the worthy goal in sight of the Belchertown playground, yet the object under discussion was not the playground, or the contest, or the integrity of Alpha Phi Omega. The matter being drawn and quartered and subsequently missed in heated debate were the intermeshion of dangerous attitudes involved.

A set of attitudes, a very fine chain of thinking created this contest, infinite gestures and pressures. The polarity of the contest was obviously feminine, and the extreme parallel is truly prostitution, yet some people could not understand the harm being done. As these attitudes exist in their small but derogatory fashion; they build and develop hidden prejudices throughout the social strata. A story was told of a woman in the American military who had a child and because of the institutional pressures upon her; she left the child in a locker. The child died and the woman is now in a mental hospital. This is another result of the same attitudes that caused this contest yet unfortunately not nearly as beneficial. It is similar to looking down two separate tunnels from the same point.

Yet what is the harm? Look at the good?

Everything that occurs in a society, must begin from a harmless source. This very slight prejudice by men about women when isolated can be sexually amusing and truthfully harmless, but when amplified through a social construction; these feelings and thoughts are dangerous. This I hope was the one object that some people brought down to understanding. As you eat your daily bread, so do you consume your prejudices, and to be given the opportunity to see your prejudices is commonly called enlightenment.

Andrew E. Barragord is a Guest Columnist.

Smear, But Don't Swear

By JOHN HOGAN

There has been much dialogue regarding the desirability of the major presidential candidates. The following is an imaginary speech, given by one candidate in regard to the opponent:

"My fellow Americans, it is an honor and a pleasure to be here today. When I embarked upon this political campaign, I hoped that it would be conducted on a high level and that my opponent would be willing to stick to the issues. Unfortunately, he has decided to be tractable instead-to indulge in unequivocal language, to eschew the use of outright lies in his speeches and to even make repeated veracious statements about me.

At first I tried to ignore these scrupulous, unvarnished fidelities. Now I will do so no longer. IF MY OPPONENT WANTS A FIGHT, HE'S GOING TO GET ONE!

It might be instructive to start with his background. My friends, have you ever accidently dislodged a rock on the ground and seen what was underneath? Well, my opponent's background is dissimilar. All the slime and filth and corruption you can possibly imagine are glaringly nonexistent in this man's life. And even during his childhood!

Let us take a look at that childhood. It is known that, on a number of occasions, he emulated older boys at a certain playground. It is also known that his parents not only permitted him to masticate excessively in their presence, but even urged him to do so. Most explicable of all, this man who poses as a paragon on virtue exacerbated his own sister when they were both teenagers!

Of course, it's not surprising that he should have such a typically pristine background-no, not when you consider the other members of his family:

-his female relatives put on a constant pose of purity and innocence, and claim that they are inscrutable, yet every one of them has taken part in hortatory activities.

-the men in the family are likewise amenable to moral suasion.

-his sister, who was always obsessed by sects, once worked as a proselyte outside a church.

-his father was secretly chagrined at least a dozen times by matters of a pecuniary nature.

-his brother once wrote an essay on the virtues of being a homo sapien.

-his great-aunt expired from a degenerative disease.

---his nephew subscribes to a phonographic magazine.

-his wife was a thespian before their marriage, and even performed the act before paying customers.

-his own mother had to resign from a woman's organization in her later years because she was an admitted sexagenarian.

Now what shall we say of the man himself?

I can tell you in solemn truth that he is the very antithesis of political radicalism, economic irresponsibility and personal depravity. His own record proves that he has frequently discountenanced treasonable, unAmerican philosophies and has perpetrated many overt acts as well.

My opponent has admitted to all of the following:

He perambulated his infant son ON THE STREET!

He practiced nepotism with his uncle and third cousin.

He attempted to interest a 13 year old girl in philately.

He participated in a seance at a private residence, where incense was present.

He has declared himself in favor of more homogeneity on college campuses.

He has advocated social intercourse in mixed company-and has taken part in such gatherings himself.

He has deliberately been averse to crime on our city streets.

He has urged our Protestant and Jewish citizens to develop more Catholic tastes.

Last summer he committed a piscatorial act on a boat that was flying the American flag.

Finally, at a time when we must be on our guard against all foreign isms, he has coolly announced his belief in altruism-and his fervent hope that some day this entire nation will be altruistic!

I beg you, my fellow Americans, to oppose this man whose life and ideas are so openly and avowedly compatible with our American way of life. A vote for him would be a vote for the perpetuation of everything we hold dear.

The facts are clear; the record speaks for itself.

DO your duty.

(Based on GUARANTEED EFFECTIVE ALL-OCCASION "NON-SLANDEROUS POLITICAL SMEAR SPEECH" by Bill Garvin)

John Hogan is a Guest Columnist.

I BRAVED THE MINUTEMEN • See Page Nineteen

Poor Richard's

Volume Two, Number Seven October 27, 1972

From the Report's introduction: "The story of the Department of Mental Health is one of ineptitude, misfeasance, and misguided priorities. This state agency, responsible for the mental health of our citizenry, largely disclaims responsibility for children."

An Anatomy Of Frustration

By Robert Medeiros

At the age of four, Jimmy was diagnosed as "borderline psychotic with problems of ego impairment." A psychiatrist recommended that he be placed in a residential program for disturbed children.

No openings were available. Meanwhile, Jimmy was refused admission to the public school, and was placed on a waiting list for treatment at a mental health facility.

One day, while with his mother at a supermarket, Jimmy approached a baby in a carriage. He opened a can of pepper and poured it into the infant's eyes, severely burning the corneas.

Charges were brought against Jimmy. He was taken to court and committed to an institution.

He finally had "services."

Unfortunately for the children of Massachusetts, Jimmy is only one of many similar cases documented in a report on the state Dept. of Mental Health that was released last month by the Task Force on Children Out of School.

The tragedy is not that the report is critical of the department, but the fact that it is the second such critical report to be issued in recent years on the department.

A joint legislative commission studying the Belchertown State School stated in their March, 1971 report: "We are totally dissatisfied with the manner in which Belchertown is being administered. We are deeply impressed by the department's (Mental Health) indifference to change."

In fact, only last February a group of parents of Belchertown residents filed a class action suit in federal court charging that DMH has been negligent in the care of residents of the school.

The task force stated that the department is characterized by "ineptitude, misfeasance and misguided priorities.

"The energies of the department go toward defending the present lack of services, by protecting officials to whom the public looks for leadership and help," said the 120-page report.

The report assailed Mental Health Commissioner Milton Greenblatt, 58, who has headed the department for more than five years.

"Our observation and knowledge of DMH has led us to conclude that its top officials either misunderstand the needs of children or they tend to mistreat and ignore them," said the report.

The political infighting that occured before the report was released has given the average citizen an inside view of the contemptable policies of a bureaucratic institution that is fighting criticism and reform movements initiated from the outside.

The principle author of the report, Larry Brown, said Greenblatt hired "the so-called father of public relations, Edward L. Bernays, to prepare a series of press releases with the hope of diffusing our report."

According to Brown, the public relations buildup was a "tremendous waste of money that should have been used for mental health facilities." Bernays was chosen in 1970 among the five outstanding American PR professionals of the century.

Brown in a letter to Greenblatt charged before the report was released that the commissioner "repeatedly intervened in the internal matters of our organization."

"Your apparent purpose," Brown wrote to Greenblatt "was to influence the contents of the study."

He charged that Greenblatt had approached the four charitable foundations that funded the study, "questioning their support of our work. Without having read the report, you labeled it a political document."

Brown added: "Your actions no longer constitute an endeavor merely to alter or stop publication of our study. They represent an overt effort to threaten the existence of the task force itself. The attempted use of public office to intimidate a private organization can be seen as nothing less than disgraceful."

Shortly after the report was released, House Speaker David M. Bartley, D-Holyoke, said a special legislative commission would probe charges made by the last force.

He said the 1966 state Mental Health Reform Act mandated proper care for handicapped children. "Yet this task force report indicates that many of the disturbed and handicapped kids haven't been getting the help they need-deserve."

The speaker said House chairman of Services, Rep. Charles Flaherty, D—Cambridge, would conduct hearings and investigate the charges outlined by the report after the Nov. 7 election. He said hearings of this type if held before election day would tend to carry political overtones.

Bartley cited charges against the DMH as "another example" of the administration's "failure to carry out legislative mandates."

Reaction concerning the report came

(Continued on P. 14)

Aardvarks

Correspondences

To The Editor:

I find it revealing that Frank Baglione's judgment of McGovern's campaign (Poor Richard's Oct. 20) is that "it failed to be refreshing, honest, articulate and optimistically refreshing." Apparently it isn't plain old refreshing enough or optimistically refreshing enough to campaign on a platform to end the war and mean it, reorder national priorities, stop the big business control of executive leadership, revamp a tax structure that bleeds the poor and relieves the rich, halt executive dictatorship over national policy, recognize that leaders can make errors without lying to cover them, reverse policies that have proven a failure, and willing return to Congress those powers that belong to it by law.

Since this did not create a refreshing, honest or articulate campaign, what could McGovern have done to make it so? He could have openly espoused every cause and issue that he believes in and has urged for years, like abortion, amnesty, gay rights, etc. Of course, this would ensure his defeat in middle-class America. Or he could be another Nixon and tell us tales of glory and power and wealth with confidence, resoluteness, grace and dignity. Of course this would not likely get him elected either. In other words, McGovern is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't.

This is precisely the point of Mr. Baglione's article which does not state what the author himself considers McGovern's biggest mistake to be. McGovern unfortunately did not turn out to ge god after all; he isn't the perfect Jesus reincarnated wandering earth to bring his message of instant salvation with no effort for all. Alas, he is merely a man, a political man, who wants to get elected to begin the lengthy process of change. Whether he will do so we will not know until November. But one thing is for certain right now. No matter what McGovern does, Mr. Baglione will only see futility in it. For there just doesn't seem to be any method of pleasing "dilletante intellectuals and their declasse offspring."

Bernard A. Barufaldi

To The Editor:

I would like to comment to Frank Johnson in regard to his review of John Coltrane's "Infinity", that appeared in the October 20 issue. First of all, I wonder where you got your information for your comments that John Coltrane's style resembled in any way David Brubeck and Bill Evans. They should be so talented. Why didn't you speak of Charlie Parker or Thelonius Monk or some of the other men who were most likely to have some kind of influence on John Coltrane. There are so many great musicians you could have spoken of, why did you even bother to mention these mediocre musicians?

Also you said that John Coltrane was "noticed" by Bob Thiele–he had already been recording under Prestige with men like Red Garland, Paul Chambers, and Arthur Taylor. And before that he was "noticed" by Miles Davis and Thelonius Monk, to name a few. I wonder if Mr. Johnson has bothered to listen to this side of John Coltrane.

Mr. Johnson, you also made the comment that John Coltrane "got into drugs as a means of augmenting his musical experience". Where did you get that information? I tend to believe that there may be many reasons for Mr. Coltrane's use of drugs, and none were quite that simple.

You also spoke of this Great Man's work as becoming "diffuse" and "a descent into atonal mediocrity". I wonder whether you ever "listened" to John Coltrane at all. Then you went on to say that "members" of John Coltrane's "original group moved on to form different groups of their own" because John Coltrane's music was becoming mediocre. I am sure if Mr. Coltrane came alive today, they would drop whatever they were doing just to play with him as mediocre as you say he was. In other words, how could greatness ever be mediocre? Save that word for those half-assed groups running around calling themselves musicians and making all the money. If Mr. Johnson knew anything about musicians, he would know that they have a tendency to try new things and play with different people, knowing that who they had played with before still may be great. There are many good musicians who would have liked to play with John Coltrane even then.

Now, you would have done so much better if you tried not to comment at all and just told us that there was a new release of John Coltrane and we are lucky to be able to hear it. Otherwise your whole comment showed that you hardly know what you are talking about. If you must criticize an album find one that you can relate to. You show you do not understand John Coltrane's music or know the man. There are very few people capable of criticizing his work. So we all shoud sit back and listen and learn all we can about John Coltrane and give him the respect he so much deserves. And you Frank Johnson, if this is all you can turn out after listening to the great John Coltrane, should go and watch TV or something so you can't depreciate any one else's work.

Estelle Kaplan

Poor Richard's

Vol. II number seven

Co-edited by Bob Nesti and Ken Sulin

This week's staff:
Howard Bloom, Steve Ferber, Frank Baglione, Jim Lavrakas, Ed Smith, Steve Feld, Bob Medeiros, Galen Tinder, Carl Greenberg, Mark Vogler, and Clark Kent

Poor Richard's is the weekly magazine of the MDC. Contributions and comments may be delivered to the MDC office

Why Is This Man Smiling?

McGovern said to be losing. Many people seem to be under the impression that McGovern has been on vacation since the Democratic convention. Tinder tells us why McGovern can't seem to come home, and why Nixon seems to be already beyond the finish line. Does "incoherent" George need voice lessons? Or has Richard a monopoly on all the kitchen utensils necessary for brewing up a dinner of victory next month? Is George an uninvited guest in this campaign, or is he simply unable to find the party? (After reading, send him this article.)

Why Is This Man Groaning?

Meek member of Academia becomes brute. Vogler animalized by rough-housing during football training. Thinking he was Plimpton, reporter invades UMass football for grueling three months and emerges with expose and bruises. MacPherson, head coach of dirty eleven, plays devil, contracting for Vogler's soul for spring semester. Vogler wanted full treatment, gets it. Is he the same man as before? Read and see.

Why Is This Man Happy?

Because after months of miserable films, he has finally seen that he admired without reservation. The film, The Emigrants, is reviewed on page twenty-one. It is the epic story of the Swedish emigration to the New World in the 1840's and is not only a beautiful film to watch but also an enrapturing historical experience. It makes for an impressivie debut for Swedish director Jan Troell. Is this one of the year's top films? We think so and for the reasons why see inside.

And Why Are We So Sad?

We were thinking of changing the name of this week's issue to "The Student Shopper," but decided against it. Richard has always been a poor boy and hopefully remains so; part of his charm comes from he being a parasite. If you feel gyped this week, so do we. But what's inside? Book reviews. What would happen if marijuana was legalized? A new novel, "Acapulco Gold" is centered on that premise, for a review of this and John Updike's latest series of short stories, see page thirteen.

Politics fill the next two pages and ads our center, after Mark Vogler's Plimpton experience are albums, then films which include a list of the Amherst Film Co-op's remainder of the semester. A look at the National Black Theatre, on page twenty-two, who will be on campus this weekend. TV Hot Spots on twenty-three; you'd be surprised what's on this week. Then Weekend on the back with a wealth of films planned to end October.

The Subtleties Of Media Bias

By Howard Bloom
and Steve Ferber

The blunt cases of media bias are easy to identify. When an editorial in a newspaper endorses a candidate we call that media bias. When the manager of a television station comes on the air and expresses the station's viewpoint we call that media bias. If these were the only cases of media bias it would seem possible to eliminate it. Yet media bias is as impossible to eliminate as the media itself.

Objectivity still exists in the realm of news reporting. Certainly some newsmen don't editorialize in their news columns; but the term 'media bias' involves much much more than reporting of news.

It involves selectivity, which is the key to media bias. Imagine all of the possible news stories available to a given TV station in any one day. Imagine all of the possible pictures available to a daily newspaper.

Then realize that a television station has only 30 minutes to report the news. Realize that a newspaper can only allow for a limited number of pictures.

The process of selectivity necessarily goes on. There is no getting around it. The limits of time and space force the medium to select what it considers most important, a selection that no doubt proves itself to be highly individualistic.

Take the case of a television station. After selecting 10 important news stories it has the problem of ordering them. This again will point up the bias of that particular station. Further yet, the time given to each news story is decided by that particular station; and as if enough selectivity hasn't been allowed for, the stations also have the power to use news reels with some stories and not with others.

The prove-all would be to view two television networks simultaneously. Then the subtle means of media bias would glaringly take form.

Yet watching two television news shows seems somewhat unfeasible. So let's switch to the medium of newspapers, where more practical means of comparison can be made.

The identical problems of selectivity face the newspaper editor. He too sets up a list of news story priorities, which in turn results with the top stories getting front page coverage. Length of articles is somewhat analogous to the length of a TV news story, while the inclusion of news reels on TV shows parallels the newspaper's use of pictures.

Many additional subtle biases appear in a newspaper. These involve placement of stories on a particular page, as well as headline type and headline slants. In support of the latter claim we take the case of the Florida primary on March 14, 1972, when one paper reported the result like this: "Wallace Romps in Florida Winning 42% in Victory," while another paper headlined the story, "Muskie draws only 9% as Wallace Wins Florida." Something as innocuous as a headline might be tremendously influential, especially when one begins to consider how often people merely read the headlines and nothing else.

People often take the word of television news reporters as gospel and this can be extremely dangerous. So often we hear, "Well, that's what the New York Times said, so..." This too can be dangerous. Not that we should now go around doubting everything we hear or are told, but we should maintain an awareness that with each separate medium, and within each medium, there lies an inherent quality of media bias.

Magazines, in fact, have the toughest problem of all. They don't have a great deal of space in which to put everything. So selectivity reaches maximum proportions with this medium. One particular bias that is memorable came also from the early primary period in which after Muskie's win in New Hampshire Newsweek magazine headlined their story, "Muskie's Underwhelming Victory."

Surely we have no recourse to media bias, in fact without it imagine how flavorless the news would be. Imagine every newspaper and every TV station reporting the same story first, using the same words, and showing the same pictures. It would probably get a little boring.

So while media bias exists, we should take it upon ourselves to avoid the pitfall of believing that every headline story is the most important of the day. If the Boston Globe headlines a story about the Watergate issue then simply that's what the Boston Globe believes most important. And that's it. They might have dozens of political and non-political reasons for putting that story up top, and in light of that we have to stay on guard.

The power of the media is tremendous. Thus restricting oneself to a single source of news can be extremely dangerous. Take the case of Orson Welles, when he announced that the Martians had landed on earth. He created a panic in the surrounding areas, because we've been conditioned to believe news reporting as the absolute truth.

Just think what the media could do if they all got together and started making up news stories. We'd be at their mercy. Its kind of a crazy and scary thing that we have so little control; that without the media we wouldn't even know that there was a war in Southeast Asia and that even with the media how can we be sure? Its all sort of funny but we have to keep believing that no one is really out to spoof us or pull one over on us. But as righteous as their motives might be, the media does present a definite bias. It is our responsibility to maintain an awareness of that bias, an awareness that will lead to a greater perspective in regard to news reporting and selectivity.

Could Nixon Lose The Election By Ending The War

As November 7th draws nearer and nearer-as the day that the American electorate will make its decision as to whom it wants to guide the country until January, 1977 approaches swiftly-the Vietnam war is ending. A cease fire in the next two weeks is imminent. Be happy that it will soon be over; in just a short while all the senseless, heartless acts of war will stop.

Be happy that no longer will you pick up your morning newspaper and have to read about casualty figures. The war is over.

Be happy that no longer will you have to shut your eyes in disgust at seeing a picture of a young Vietnamese child running, burning, from what used to be his village. The war is over.

Be happy that no longer will you have to hear, read, or talk about hawks and doves. The war is over.

This is what we've all been waiting for since we first were old enough to appreciate the tragedy of what was taking place in Southeast Asia. Now, at long last, the nation will be able to utilize its tremendous wealth and resources to help people, not hurt them. In America, not Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand, or Laos.

And, in the end, who will we have to thank for all this happiness? Who will have done what every President before him who tried, could not do?

Richard Nixon's opponent, George McGovern, has campaigned as the peace candidate since he first announced his intention to run for the Presidency long ago in January, 1971. He has always been opposed to the Vietnam war. When one thought about opposition to the war, one thought of George McGovern.

Now, he has lost his strongest issue. Don't worry about voting for George McGovern if you want the war to end. It is over.

We can't help wondering, though, if justice might not be served in the end. As the war wound down in the last four years, the American public, satisfied, listened less and less to arguments made by immediate-troop- -withdrawal advocates. President Nixon was a good man, because he was pulling our troops out and cutting down on the killing. Fine.

Strangely, though-ironically, the rumors of an impending cease fire within the next two or three weeks has been the pacemaker for the ailing heart of the public's mind. It has made those people who were ready to lie back, letting things happen as they may on November 7th, start questioning. If he can end the war this way now, why couldn't he have done the same thing four years ago? Was all that fighting and killing for nothing, after all?

Wouldn't it be ironic if Richard Nixon lost the election because he ended the war? Wouldn't it be justice?

Feiffer

Why McGovern Is Losing

By Galen Tinder

As the 1972 presidential race has shifted into high gear, it has become increasingly clear that the candidacy of George McGovern is floundering and that President Nixon is, barring any dramatic and unforseen events, on his way to an impressive victory in November. At this juncture of the campaign it is important to attempt to reach some understanding of why this is the case, particularly if one is aghast, as is this writer, at the thought of Richard Nixon occupying the White House for another four years. An inquiry of this nature must not only concern itself with questions of practical politics, that is questions relating to the manner in which the campaign has been waged thus far, but must also address itself to the deeper question of what is wrong with the American people such that they seem to overwhelmingly favor a man as unprincipled and fraudulent as Richard Nixon.

On a purely political level it must be admitted that while McGovern has waged an ineffective and somewhat disorderly battle, Nixon's strategy has been whittled down to a fine sharpness. It cuts quickly, neatly, and leaves nothing untouched.

To his own discredit McGovern has failed to launch a coherent and articulate attack on the Nixon administration. His speeches are often overwrought with emotion and evangalistic fervor but short on facts and on the solidity which marked his earlier speeches. One of the manifestations of this is his inclination to overstate his points, a risky business in American politics. He has, for instance, accused the Nixon administration of being the "most corrupt in the history of the country." Although it should be obvious to anyone that the Nixon administration is corrupt McGovern's statement is too broad and over-simplified. He has thrown out a lot of accusations but he has not made a calm and logical foundation upon which these accusations can stand. As a result of this failure, McGovern appears to the public as inexact and perhaps even irresponsible. He also makes it very easy for one of President Nixon's cabinet members or advisors to denounce the accusation and ridicule his "hysteria."

Unfortunately this statement concerning the corruption of the Nixon administration has been symptomatic of McGovern's general style. He has let the eloquence and sharpness which so often marked his pre-primary campaign slip from his grasp.

Al Chapman

On the other side of the fence President Nixon has thus far conducted a devious but nonetheless astute campaign. He has decided that it is below his dignity to run as a common office seeker and is instead running as the embodiment of an institution. Even the name of his campaign committee reflects this attitude. It is not called the Nixon For President Committee or even the Committee for the Reelection of President Nixon but merely the Committee to Re-elect the President. In line with this Nixon has conducted his campaign from the White House rather than from the cities and towns of America as has George McGovern. His rare public appearances are usually made before selected audiences and are always meticulously planned so as to avoid as much as possible unpleasant situations and hostile crowds.

But while Nixon himself is lying low he has scores of surrogates cruising around the country making speeches on his behalf and when a Democrat makes an uncomplimentary remark concerning the Republican ticket one of them pops up with a quick retort. By always having one of his cabinet members or aides answer McGovern and Shriver, Nixon can keep his opposition off balance while appearing to remain personally above the battle. Although this is a somewhat underhanded way to conduct a campaign for the highest political office in the country, it is probably an effective one in this case. Nixon is in fact a poor campaigner and a terrible debater and his advisors have probably decided that the less he says before the least number of people the better off he will be.

These political considerations can only partially explain why the American people favor Nixon over McGovern, and in order to reach a fuller and more complete explanation of this fact the core of the American psyche must be examined.

Recent polls have indicated two things. First that the majority of the American people are making their political decisions on the basis of the characters and personalities of the candidates rather than on the issues over which the campaign is in theory being fought. Secondly the polls indicate that while few voters are enamoured with President Nixon many are suspicious and distrustful of Senator McGovern. The two apparent reasons for this distrust are the Eagleton affair (which supposedly showed McGovern to be incompetent) and the reworking of his welfare plan (which is held as an indication of his instability and indecisiveness in regard to the major issues).

The fact is though, that to hold these things against McGovern is irrational. It is true that the Eagleton affair was handled poorly but it pales in comparison to the mess which Nixon made when he attempted to shove a couple of sheer incompetents onto the Supreme Court. Furthermore, the policy changes which McGovern has made have been minor compared to the major about face which Nixon, a vociferous anti-communist for most of his career, made when he went to the Republic of China and the Soviet Union.

It is so implausible to regard Nixon as being more competent and more trustworthy than McGovern that it must be the case that there is something going on deep within the minds of many Americans which can serve to explain these baseless and illogical misperceptions.

The explanation is, I think, two-fold. First most people naturally feel more comfortable believing that the country in which they live is essentially in good shape. McGovern disturbs people's complacancy and sense of well being by telling them that America is not quite the perfect society which they envision it to be, that it is committing war crimes, and that it needs some fundamental changes. Many people realize, deep within themselves, that what McGovern is saying has a strong element of truth to it but they prefer to thrust these nagging realizations far back into the inner cavities of the mind where they cause the least amount of discomfort. Instead of facig reality they turn to President Nixon who reassures them that McGovern is an alarmist and that there is nothing seriously wrong with America. On the contrary it is a good and moral nation and is in no need of any dramatic changes.

In short, McGovern is an overhauler and Nixon a tinkerer. The United States has always prefered incremental change to sweeping reform and it seems highly unlikely that it will break with tradition in 1972.

The second part of this two-fold explanation is closely tied to the Vietnam War which has affected this country in ways which few people fully realize yet. No country can perpetrate the gross moral crimes which the United States has without eventually feeling the effects of this immorality. Thus far the War's most readily identifiable effect on the country has been to make it numb to corruption and evil. If this numbness was not creeping over the United States there would be a large public outcry over Watergate.

This is of an utmost seriousness to the future of America as a livable country and as a democracy. It is very possible that America may be on the verge of going through a process of political transformation and spiritual decay which may not be fully comprehended for decades. When the people in a democracy become stupified and lethargic, when they can no longer respond to issues of moral consequence, and when they can no longer preceive reality then that democracy is fighting for its vey survival. If this were not the case then the term democracy would merely be a formal one and would not signify an ideal toward which the social organization of human society should aim.

JERRY LEWIS TWIN CINEMA
HAMP SHOPPING PLAZA - NEXT TO BIG Y RTE 5 TEL 586-3209
CINEMA I
The Godfather
Color by Technicolor A Paramount Picture
Mon. - Fri. 7:30
Sat. - Sun. 5:00 and 8:15
CINEMA II
'MELINDA'
Your Kind of Black Movie
Nitely at 7:00 & 9:00
MATINEE
Saturday - Sunday 2:00 and 4:00
KING KONG
Disc. With Student I.D.

PAUL McKINLEY
plays at
THE CHEQUERS
TUES. thru SAT. 9:30 til close

Newman Club
Social Religious Community Service
GENERAL MEETING
all are invited!
Sunday 8:00 p.m. Newman Social Lounge

BEATLES
YELLOW SUBMARINE
PLUS TRUE ROMANCE
"Going Steady"
This Saturday eve., Oct. 28
Thompson 104 6 - 8 - 10 - 12 mid.

HAIL HALLOWEEEEEEEN!
"THE FREAKS"
A true masterpiece of horror by Tod Browning — director of "Dracula"
PLUS
"THE TIME TRAVELERS"
in color in the year 20651
Friday Evening, October 27
Thompson 104 6:15 - 8:45 - 11:15

Books

Wasting Wood Pulp On This?

By Ed Smith

Acapulco Gold
by Edwin Corley
Dodd, Mead

Eventually, it would seem, marijuana shall be legalized. It is one of those issues which will be batted around for a few years until all the impact has gone out of it and the politicians have no more use for it. Then it will be legalized. Basically, that is the premise upon which this story rests. A certain head of a cigarette company has inside information that the president-elect is going to legalize marijuana shortly after his inauguration. Consequently, this corporation head decides that he should get a jump on the competition and contracts with an advertising agency in New York to devise a campaign to sell grass. The entire novel concerns what type of procedures and personalities are involved in this rather unorthodox public relations drive.

When one looks at this basic outline, as I did in reading the flyleaf, an impression is given that this could be a fairly interesting and amusing novel. The basic groundwork is there and with a bit of well done characterization, the personal lives of the main characters could interact with the advertising agency and possibly provide an interesting moral dillema. While the book could never be a great social commentary, it had the possibility of parodying some of the absurdities of present marijuana laws, etc. With all this in mind, I was shocked to discover that this book is one of the worst pieces of trash I have ever had the misfortune to pick up. The author does not even approach what I considered to be his most remedial objectives.

Acapulco Gold is completely devoid of characterization. After finishing the book the reader does not know what the main character looks like, other than the fact that he has a thirty-eight inch waist-line. Possibly this is a new type of writing which I have not heard about; I may just be behind the times. If this is the case maybe it should be called the "un-art."

The one character who receives any coloring whatsoever is the head of the cigarette company. He is a gay and charming capitalist who sees big business as the solution to the world's problems. He, along with Mike Evans from the public relations firm, are two of the most repulsive and obnoxious characters who have ever had the nerve to be the heroes of a novel. They are exactly the type of bastards who would publish and try to foist off on an unsuspecting public a book like the one they appear in.

Bob Nesti

There is a weak, almost comic attempt by the author to devise some type of triangular relationship among this guy Mike, his ex-wife and a girl graduate student working in the public relations firm. All that can be said is that he does not succeed here in doing what he intended any more than any place else. There is one sex scene between Mike and the girl graduate student, Jean, which is an attempt by the author at creative description. Invariably he fails, and even this scene comes off like a cliche; it seems as though there must be a directory of sex scenes for novels around some place and every time a hack writer wants one he just looks up one that suits him and plugs it in. Despite the fact that we are supposed to be living in an age of liberation, sex scenes still come across as the "dirty parts".

Up until this point most of the things Mr. Corley has done, while being poorly written, have been fairly innocuous. However, there are parts of the book which deal with the effects of marijuana and here he makes some really asinine comments that are bound to fool someone. First we are treated to people "freaking out" on grass, after some is slipped into the fixings at a pig roast. The reader is given the impression that the first time one injests grass it can be pretty risky, you could turn into a living vegetable. Reading books like this make me wonder exactly what type of grass the writer did his research with. The next myth that he promotes is that grass is a powerful aphrodisiac. He pays lip service to the concept that it only intensifies one's feelings, but very obviously he wants the reader to believe that it will greatly increase his desire and potency.

The book, in the final analysis was either written by a complete fool or a man with an incredible sense of socratic irony. The entire book can be seen as talking to two audiences; one which blindly accepts what he says as truth and the other which perceives the idiocy of the characters and appreciates them as caricatures of straight society. This is probably most obvious at the very end of the book in a scene with Mike and Jean. She has just admitted that she leaked the story about their clandestine advertising campaign to the press and Mike is asking why she did it. Her reply is the following:

"I told you, Mike. Marijuana is dope! I ought to know. I'm hooked on it.... I can't function without it."

Yes, it's true; in the end we discover that Jean is a hardened pothead who could not kick the habit. After I read the paragraph which contained these lines and after I stopped laughing, I began to think that maybe Corley was not as stupid and incompetent a writer as I had thought he was all along. He might just possibly have been constructing a big hoax to goof on every one. Fortunately, that thought passed for even if that had been his idea there was no necessity to pose as a writer who has no talent in writing a story whatsoever

In reading Acapulco Gold I kept trying to figure what the publisher saw in the manuscript, which presumeably was worse than this. I searched desperately for a theme, a social comment, anything and then it hit me; money. I should have realized it before but in my naivete I had thought publishers felt some moral responsibility to print things with literary value. It is ironic that this book is about fast-talk and hard-sell advertising campaigns because nothing short of that will move this book if people have any idea how bad it is. The least they could have done was print it on recycled paper; the thought of healthy trees dying to print this crap is too much for me. By now you may get the idea that I do not like this book, but I have discovered a very valuable use for it. There is a small audience to whom this book should be a veritable bible- aspiring novelists. It is without a doubt the best primer in what to avoid in writing a novel that I have ever read.

Updike's Latest: A Hint At Greatness

By Carl Greenberg

Museums & Women and Other Stories by John Updike
Knopf
282 pages, illustrated $6.95

John Updike came on the scene while he was still young. At the early age of 23, he was already on the staff of the New Yorker (1955). Museums & Women and Other Stories is a collection of 29 of his stories published in various magazines (mostly the New Yorker) over approximately the last decade.

While Updike was writing in the 1950's, he was in his 20's and was recognized as a "child prodigy" who had great promise. He has not, so far, disappointed the prophets. The 1960's were years of maturation for Updike. His turns of phrase and methods of description became more polished, less cut and more insightful. Characters became truer.

Even though Updike had the seal of approval by none other than the New Yorker magazine, and had had his talent recognized so early, it wasn't until the mid-60's, with the publication of Couples, that he achieved an identity as an independent and perhaps important author, and began to divorce himself from his image as a gifted child protected by mother New Yorker.

Couples was controversial to an extent, since wife-swapping was not yet a vogue. It marked a turning point in Updike's career because it showed that he was, indeed, capable of examining suburbia as a critical reflection of an entire society. Updike goes beyond the superhighways, and Howard Johnsons, and the middle America which Jean Shepard so ably describes, and evokes the loneliness and shallowness which lie there.

Anyway, Museums is a rather representative and comprehensive collection from the last decade. Not that one says that each story seems to be better than the ones written the year before, but one does get a good idea of the medium in which Updike works.

The collection is divided into three parts. The first fourteen stories are stories of subburbia, or at least of the psychology which dwells in suburbia. Museums and Women is the first story. In it, Updike discloses how women and museums are similar. Both are eternal and beautiful and mysterious, etc. It is a highly challenging story, almost an essay.

Other stories in the first section discuss divorce, old age, parents and children, small towns.

The second section contains ten stories of a different sort. They are surreal, some almost science-fictiony, and deal with such things as a micro-organisms' cocktail party, and golf pro who is really some sort of psychoanalyst.

The last five stories in the third section are the Maples' stories, the Maples being a family which Updike periodically revists to examine their unfaithfulness and isolation.

It is difficult to name the best or better stories, but I did notice that my favorites tended to be the later ones.

All of Updike's stories have their moments and insights which strike us immediately and then leave a lasting impression. In "Plumbing" (1971, one of my favorites) we are taken into his basement as the plumber is explaining why the old pipes are going bad and how differently they used to be made. Different owners of the house may come and go, but the plumber and the pipes are deeply and forever part of the house. "All around us, we are outlasted."

Other memorable lines from Updike include his statement about a young-old man who "had drawn a straight line from that night to the night of his death, and began walking on it"; and the thought that "children are not our creations but our guests".

Even in a story that I did not like as well as most of the others, "Carol Sing", there is the saving line: "Strange people look ugly only for a while, until you begin to fill in those tufty monkey features with a little history and stop seeing their faces and start seeing their lives."

Other excellent stories are "The Day of the Dying Rabbit" (1969), in which the narrator and his children nurse a catmangled rabbit; "The Orphaned Swimming Pool" (1970), in which a back-yard pool has a life of its own after the owners separate; "Your Lover Just Called" (1966), a Maples story wherein the teasing has gloomy overtones; and "Solitaire" (1972), the man who is walking the straight path to his death.

The longest story "I Am Dying Egypt, Dying" is billed on the jacket as an allegory of the U.S. foreign policy. I doubt it. If it is, then it is not terribly direct; the story succeeds much better on other levels. The hero of the story is on a boat tour on the Nile with assorted foreigners, notably the Russians who screw in the next cabin and the sexy Swede who tries to allow him to seduce her, but somehow he can't.

If, indeed, Updike meant it to be allegorical, it may be because he wrote it for Playboy (1969) and thus sacrificed some artistic integrity for a kind of witty timeliness. That is probably being too harsh, but in any event, it is not his best story perhaps because we don't see enough of the hero on his own. Instead, we only see his fellow travelers with whom he has little contact, and we never do get too deep into him. We are too distracted.

Updike's fictional town of Tarbox is the scene of his story about youth, "The Hillies". It seems to be a more successful short story than his latest novel, Rabbit Redux, was as a novel. In "Redux", Updike takes on racism and the new American Revolution of the late 60's, and doesn't quite succeed in helping us understand either the Revolution or the hero's reaction.

"The Hillies" (1969), however, puts the whole thing into a clean, crisp microcosm. A town park area becomes the haven for the local freaks. The hill there is stratified by character type, beeries on top, grassies next and pillies at street level where they can deal with the salesmen from the city. We get a sample of the letters to the editor about the problem, and we are saddened by the realization that so much of the fear is generated only because of the rhetoric. "Push 'em back where they came from", says one man.

But Updike says that this formula no longer applies. For "They came from our own homes. And in honesty do we want them back? How much a rural myth is parental love?"

Updike is keeping his eye on us. He grows with us and is better and better able to tell us about ourselves. Museums indicates that Updike has a lot to say and hints that we can expect in the next decade some truly outstanding work from an already powerful and artistic author.

(This book was made available for reviewing by the University Bookstore and is presently on sale there.)

S.H.L. Costume Ball

"Treat You To A Treat"
Friday, October 27
8 P.M.

Keady, Smithline, Baltimore & Anderson
This Saturday Nite 8 - 12:30 p.m.
IN CONCERT
Hampden D.C.
56

Anatomy of Frustration (cont.)

hard and fast on both sides. One mother told a news conference of the "desperation and the agony" thousands of Massachusetts parents experience in their search for adequate medical and psychiatric care for their retarded and mentally ill children.

"I know hundreds of parents on the South Shore alone who have given up hope of finding the care and facilities their children should have," she said.

"It's a crime against the children, against their families, against society. Gov. Sargent and DMH must do something about this great need," she added.

Well, Gov. Francis W. Sargent did respond to the implications of the report. In fact, the governor used a popular ploy in Massachusetts politics to respond to the charges in the report, and the furor that resulted when the report was released.

Sargent appointed a committee in the wake of the report's release with the objective of reviewing "serious inadequacies" to children services. The ploy is to take no decisive action, but to placate the masses and to frustrate individuals until people have time to find another problem to "fuss and fret" about.

Who then should be held responsible for these inadequacies in DMH?

Brown said Greenblatt, Deputy Commissioner William Bloomberg of Mental Health and top administrators in the Central Office should be held responsible for not implementing laws that have been enacted by the legislature to improve mental health facilities.

The leading organizer of the parents' suit against DMH said Greenblatt is "99 per cent responsible for the problems in the department."

Dr. Benjamin Ricci said: "All the commissioner has ever done is respond to crises. He doesn't have an innovative idea in his head."

The task force emphasized the value of a commissioner in implementing reforms within his particular department. The force praised Youth Services Commissioner Jerome Miller for liberally interpreting his department's mission and seeking out children to aid before they become labeled juvenile delinquents.

Miller has come under a good deal of criticism in the Legislature and elsewhere for alleged administrative irregularities, but he has pushed through reforms without concern for the bureaucrats, who may stand to lose their corruptable power by change.

"Dr. Miller determined that children had to have help before they committed delinquent acts," said the report. "This meant that the department had to move to help children when they first indicated a need for help. It was out of this definition of responsibility and this passion for children that the commissioner of youth services assumed a greater burden than he actually had to carry."

From The Report: "Five years after the initial legislation, the majority of emotionally disturbed children still get no help. This gives rise to political tampering in a bizarre battle where there are scores of children who lose for every one that wins."

However, the report said Greenblatt's proclamation of "The Year of the Child" two-years ago, an attempt by the commissioner to increase public awareness and support for mentally ill children, is a sham that "does not exist" except as a slogan.

The department is the largest single agency in state government with 18,000 employes and a budget this fiscal year of $168 million. It maintains 26 institutions, oversees 534 community programs, and is advised by 39 area boards made up of 900 citizens who are suppose to advise on mental health and retardation needs.

The report contends the department either ignores or frustrates the advisory boards that were supposed to give parents the feeling they were involved in the decisions affecting their children.

The report added that the concepts and priorities of DMH are forcused on an old view of mental health which is "inappropriate to meet the needs of our children today.

"There are 68,000 emotionally disturbed and mentally ill children in the state who receive no help at all. In all likelihood, they will become emotionally disturbed and mentally ill adults. There are 60,000 retarded children, 24,000 of whom are in institutions. Half of them receive no training and no educational opportunity."

The report added that despite the fact that DMH has reduced the adult population in institutions, 90 per cent of its budget is still spent on institutions.

It says that only 10 per cent of children requiring psychiatric services in the state are actually getting help.

"There has been no substantial change in resources provided for children to comply with the stated policy of the department," the report continued. "Children receive only 15.7 per cent of the total staff resources of the department." Children comprise 40 per cent of the state population.

If you are interested in working for reform within DMH and if you are interested in working with the retarded and the mentally ill, then you better think twice about your goal, or be prepared to find a job in another state.

Joe Sylvia, who was a UMass grad student last year and the organizer of Students Offering Support (SOS) on campus, is now employed by the New York Dept. of Mental Health because Massachusetts can't seem to find an opening.

Sylvia believed that the parents of the Belchertown State School should have the right to be heard in court whether they are right or wrong. He said it would be a tragedy if the parents lost their case because of the lack of money.

SOS was organized he said, to provide students with the opportunity to express support and obtain funds for the suit. His actions resulted in SOS collecting over $6,000 in donations for the suit.

The leading figure in the suit, Dr. Ricci acknowledged that without the support of SOS, the suit may have been lost already in court on the grounds of lack of money. The organization is attempting to regroup its forces this year, but the loss of Sylvia has left SOS flat.

Greenblatt has interpreted Sylvia's actions as criticism of his policies, and as an attempt to undermine his administration, and has seen to it that Sylvia is not given a job in state government.

As usual Greenblatt's gain is Massachusetts loss.

"Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?"

Fri., Oct. 27th

7:30 & 9:00 p.m.

Mahar Auditorium

Country Comfort Coffee House

Sat., Oct. 28 8 p.m.

Crabtree Basement

featuring

Mike O'Donnell

Eddie Vincent Phibes Trio

Cliff Hagberg, John Sharkey & More

AT THE GATES
SMITH COLLEGE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON MASS

NOW, Daily at: 7:00 and 9:10

from the novel by KURT VONNEGUT, JR.

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE

A Universal Picture in TECHNICOLOR® R

MONDAY & TUESDAY Balcony Seats $1

October Fest

Thursday and Friday

October 26 & 27

Featuring

a German Band

3 p.m. - 7 p.m.

come and celebrate!

Bluewall, Campus Center

LUTHER JOHNSON

CHICAGO BLUES BAND

Saturday, Oct. 28

9 p.m. - 1 a.m.

at the BLUEWALL

SOUND IDEAS

1 Cook Place
Amherst

presents the first

In The Alley
253-5942

36 Hour Homecoming Sale

STARTS TODAY - 10:00 A.M.

LIVING LEVELS II

IN THE ALLEY - AMHERST - 256-8157

24 HOUR SALE

Starting Tonight at 6:00 p.m. - until 6:00 p.m. Saturday

Hourly Specials

		Regular Price	Sale Price
6:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.	Assorted Candles	$3.00	$1.50
7:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.	Assorted Rolling Papers	$0.25	$0.10
8:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.	Leather Vests	$28.00	$12.00
9:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.	Yucaton Hammocks	$33.00	$20.00
10:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m.	Leather Hotpants	$22.00	$12.00
11:00 p.m. - 12:00 p.m.	Wood, Glass & Other Pipes	$1.50 - 10.00	50% off
12:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.	Complete Water Beds	$59.00	$39.00
1:00 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.	Silver Rings & Other Jewelery	$2.50 - 15.00	50% off
2:00 a.m. - 3:00 a.m.	Fur Spreads	$20.00 - 45.00	$8.00 - 20.00
3:00 a.m. - 4:00 a.m.	Bean Bag Chairs	$29.95	$19.95
4:00 a.m. - 5:00 a.m.	Floor Pillows	$19.95	$10.00
5:00 a.m. - 6:00 a.m.	Leather Jackets	$55.00 - 100.00	$30.00 - 50.00
6:00 a.m. - 7:00 a.m.	Leather Bags	$20.00 - 45.00	$10.00 - 20.00
7:00 a.m. - 8:00 a.m.	Waterbed Heaters with Thermostat	$55.00	$40.00
8:00 a.m. - 9:00 a.m.	Incense & Burners	$2.00	$1.00
9:00 a.m. - 10:00 a.m.	Belts	$3.00	$1.00
10:00 a.m. - 11:00 a.m.	Leather Hotpants	$22.00	$12.00
11:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.	Cube Tables	$37.50	$20.00
12:00 p.m. - 1:00 p.m.	Leather Vests	$28.00	$12.00
1:00 p.m. - 2:00 p.m.	Fur Spreads	$20.00 - 45.00	$8.00 - 20.00
2:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.	Leather Pants	$65.00	$30.00
3:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.	Kuss Water Mattresses with 5-year quarantee	$80.00	$40.00
4:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.	Leather Boots	$35.00	$20.00
5:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m.	Deluxe Rustic Waterbeds	$275.00	$200.00

You can't afford to miss these outstanding SPECIALS!

SOUND IDEAS

1 Cook Place - In the Alley
Amherst - 253-5942

Some of our Sound Ideas during this

36 - HOUR SALE

ALTEC 911A STEREO COMPACT SYSTEM

60 watts RMS per channel 1.6 mv sensitivity.

GARRARD SL95B Automatic changer with SHURE M93E magnetic cartridge.

List $600.00

A VERY SOUND IDEA at $399. (only 6)

SANYO DCX 3300 K
4 channel receiver
List $339.95
A SOUND IDEA at $225. (only 4)

HEGEMAN I Loudspeakers
List $228./pair
A SOUND IDEA at $145. /pair

KENWOOD 6170
Jumbo Receiver
List $550.00
A SOUND IDEA at $399.

SONY 6036 AM/FM Stereo Receiver
List $200.00
A SOUND IDEA at $149.

ELECTRO VOICE EV 14
2-way acoustic suspension speaker systems.
List $200.00/pair.
A SOUND IDEA at $120. /pair

ROTEL RA610
Stereo Receiver
45 watts RMS per channel
List $400.00
A SOUND IDEA at $230.

MARTIN Loudspeakers
Crescendo - List $199 each now $120. /each
Spectrum Slope - List $139 each now $175. /pair

AKG K150/4
Headphones
List $40.00
A SOUND IDEA at $20

SOUND IDEAS

1 Cook Place - In the Alley - Amherst - 253-5942

HOURLY SPECIALS

FRIDAY:	LIST	SPECIAL
5:00 p.m. - BSR TD85 8-track player	$50.00	$29.00
6:00 p.m. - TDK C-90 SD cassettes	4.00	2.00
7:00 p.m. - TDK SD-150H-7 1200' tape	5.00	2.50
8:00 p.m. - Metrotec equalizers (KIT)	80.00	55.00
9:00 p.m. - Nuvox 8-track FM/AM stereo receiver (includes speaker)	199.95	50.00
10:00 p.m. - Harmon Kardon Citation XIV	550.00	325.00
11:00 p.m. - Rectilinear Mini III speakers	200.00	100.00
12:00 a.m. - Rectilinear III speakers	550.00	350.00
ADC XLM cartridge	50.00	30.00

FREE! – EXILE ON MAIN STREET LP's to the first 5 people who bring us coffee and donuts.
(We supply the coffee and donuts after that.)

SATURDAY:
1:00 a.m. - Shure M91E cartridges	$ 50.00	$15.00
2:00 a.m. - Dokorder 8-track recorder	159.00	90.00
3:00 a.m. - Garrard G-100 with B&O cartridge	300.00	135.00
4:00 a.m. - PE3012 record changers	80.00	45.00
5:00 a.m. - Harmon Kardon 930 receivers	400.00	280.00
6:00 a.m. - Lafayette LA-25	50.00	10.00
7:00 a.m. - 1 - Rectilinear XI speaker	80.00	45.00
8:00 a.m. - Dynaco Quadaptor Kits	20.00	12.00
9:00 a.m. - Breakfast Break
10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. - Business as usual (we hope) many unadvertised specials.
10:00 p.m. ★ Auction of all remaining sale merchandise!

Check with us for thousands of money-saving, unadvertised specials.

*We reserve the right to buy our own merchandise.

FOR THE RECORD — the Record Store in the Alley

We will be open as long as we can hold out!

A great selection of records, at the lowest possible prices.

Free Cookies

Upstairs at

PEOPLE'S CRAFT CO-OP

FRIDAY & SATURDAY

Sales on Candlemaking Supplies - 10% off
Selected Jewelry and Candles - greatly reduced other unadvertised specials

DON'T MISS our collection of unusual Jewelry, Pottery, Candles, Clothing, Stuffed Toys, Leather Batik Prints, Paintings anything and everything handmade

OPEN FRIDAY NIGHT 'TILL MIDNIGHT (longer if we can stand it)

Sports

Plimpton Experiment

By Mark Vogler

Editor's Note:
Last spring, Head football coach Dick MacPherson granted undergraduate and COLLEGIAN Staff Reporter Mark Vogler permission to get a realistic taste of the collegiate football culture. The coach allowed him to become a team member for the entire period of the spring practice drills.

What you are about to witness is a simulation of a goal line stand – one of the most brutal action-drills that a collegiate football spring training camp can offer.

Two lines of players get down in their stances, ready to fire into one another at the snap of the ball. The offense fights like heck to push across for the imaginary touch down. The defense, in a vain attempt to quelch the score, destroys the offense while holding its own.

This wild and ugly scene lasts for a series of plays. A round of cheers goes up from the side that wins the individual contest. The head coach acts as a mediator, praising the side that wins, then chewing out the side that falters.

• • •

I'm no innocent bystander by any means. Last spring I decided towork out with the University of Massachusetts football squad during the spring practice drills. Having gone through the ordeal of rigorous training sessions in full pads, I will attempt to portray a very vivid and objective picture of the physical aspect of football in a spring practice session.

It was Monday afternoon, just two hours before the UMass football team would begin its third and final week of spring practice. Head Coach Dick MacPherson, who was very disgusted and still fuming over his Redmen's poor showing in a weekend scrimmage, entered trainer Vic Keedy's office to check the injury list.

"Well, how are we set for injuries Vic?"

"Quite minor. Lovejoy's got a broken arm and we had a player sprain his ankle playing basketball Saturday night."

"Playing basketball? How, in the rain!"

"Other than that, coach, the injuries are very minimal."

"I'll say. They played like it. They did hardly any hitting out there. You can't win ball games that way. Better get Dr. Ralph and Dr. Cotanche over here today, cause it's going to be a collision day."

"Yes sir. Cheese and Crackers, hey."

About an hour later, players began filing into the locker room to begin suiting up. The atmosphere was different today. There would be no clowning around or pre-practice entertainment. Everybody could sense the hell that was coming because of a poorly played scrimmage.

Vic Keedy was busy treating injuries and taping ankles. Some of the players were complaining about the poor spring we were having weather-wise and how the practice sessions were getting rougher.

"You mean we're gonna scrimmage this afternoon?" one player asked.

"You bet. There's going to be some hitting out there today. With Dr. Ralph and Dr. Cotanche coming down, you fellas better not expect a picnic."

The different units went into their designated meeting rooms for the usual instructions. But most players, carrying long and drawn faces, noticeably anticipated the verbal explosions that were just seconds away. The fireworks started when Defensive backfield coach Larry Pasquale administered a tongue lashing to the cornerbacks and safeties.

"In regard to the scrimmage Satruday, men. LOUSY! LOUSY! The way you defensive backs played out there was lousy, just plain and stinking lousy!

"Do you want to know why the deep four are the most important men on this ball team? Because they can lose a ball game quicker than anyone else.

"Let me show you men (he

Jeff Sheehey

writes on the blackboard). If you have 12 interceptions, you're not going to lose the game, providing the offense scores. It's up to us not to let the opponent score, and then we got a quarterback who can bring us into the endzone a few times."

The team, over a hundred strong, trodded to the muddy field – which had become a makeshift marshland due to the heavy bombardment of rain during the spring.

Two players who were waiting for practice to begin were shooting the bull. An observant coach detected the culprits and put his foot down with some rather choice words.

"I don't want to hear any bull shit out here! The only kind of bull shit that I want to hear is football. That's the only good kind of bull shit!"

A very irate Coach MacPherson had prepared some welcoming words for this day of doom.

"Do you people want to have a football team or not? Then let's get with it! I don't like what I saw Saturday. Nobody seemed to be enjoying himself. Men, you play football because you love it. So let's show a little more enthusiasm out there. If you don't like it, Quit. It's as simple as that."

The practice opened with simple cals. One of the exercises which was widely detested by the players was the ups-and-downs. A player would run in place and would hit the ground at a given signal on his belly. On a second signal, he would pick himself up and would resume running.

This would last anywhere from 15 to 20 repetitions, depending on the mood of the coaching staff. One could usually estimate what sort of day he was in for by keeping count. The less one had to do, the lighter the practice would be.

Today the coaches were not in such good moods.

What makes the ups-and-downs so miserable is that each player must run 200 yards to his first drill. At first I got the notion that this is what it meant to "have cheese and crackers." I was later informed by a team mate that vomiting on the field was considered high school.

The spot drills followed. The various units worked out at different stations for short periods of time.

One of the most unpopular drills -- well, not too many are popular anyway -- is the mirror drill. Two lines of men, directly opposite one another, would take their turns separately for about a 10-second duration.

One man would try to fake out the other man by running to the right or left, wherever he pleased. It was up to the defensive man to stick with him. A player would change lines after his turn.

It was utter exhaustion. A player would no sooner complete his fake-out role, then would have to go chasing after somebody.

Another well renowned drill was the "Wave". It's not too popular amongst the players. One would run to his left or right, depending to where the coach in charge pointed. It was a speed-agility drill, and it was easy for a player to bump into the guy aside of him. Four men were lined up abreast.

Perhaps the worst one-on-one drill of all was instituted today. It was the contain drill, and it provided a lot of collision. The purpose of the drill is for a defensive back to contain a crashing blocker and still main'ain his own balance.

It was evident that many of the players had a great distaste for either being on the receiving or giving end of the block. The giver would get down in a three-point stance and would fire off toward the back on a given signal, driving his head and shoulder into the back's gut full force, trying to take him out of the play.

The defensive back would try to push the blocker to the inside, brushing off the block with the palms of his hands while maintaining a steady balance. He is supposed to turn the play inside, and at the same time, come up to help make the play.

When the blocker is excellerated to a pulling guard, the contain drill becomes even more brutal. Especially if that guard is massive, mean, and means business. Just ask one survivor.

Billy Nosel got up there and held his ground very well, but stood in his position a while, just dazed and shaking his head. Defensive backfield coach Larry Pasquale complimented him on a fine effort. "Good job Billy. There's nothing wrong with that. What's the matter?"

"I'll tell you what's the matter, I can't see straight!"

Nosel had done an excellent job, pushing the guard to the ground. But he stopped dead in his tracks, instead of following through and coming up to make the play. He was obviously dazed from his well executed hit.

I later asked Nosel to give a vivid picture of how he felt at the time of impact.

"I felt like my eyes were moved out of their sockets, like my retinas had been detached. There wasn't any focus at all, it was like a cross of vision.

I got the whirlybirds and my head was spinning around and around. I was wondering if my semi circular canals were distressed. It was just like seeing stars. It's not too fine a feeling, that's for sure."

Andy Dukanicz took a pasting during the drill. Coach Pasquale called over: "Remember that Andy. Remember that. Remember who did it and go after him next time."

Now came time for the "cheese and crackers", and one sorry soul got his the hard way.

Jim Queeney, an offensive guard, was missing his blocks during the scrimmage period. Consequently the backs were getting creamed fairly bad. So MacPherson, in order to teach Queeney a lesson, had him switch positions with one of the backs.

Mac. instructed the back to let the defense in and not to block. Queeney was knocked silly. You could hear the hit a mile away. Mac. did this in order to let Queeney know how the half backs felt when the linemen didn't do their job. The procedure was repeated for the benefit of a flanker who had not cracked on an end sweep.

While taking a breather on the side lines, I noticed Bob Sullivan who was still on crutches. Despite his inability to play, Sullivan continued to go to practices with a starving passion to participate. How did he feel?

"I feel just horrible, just horrible. When you work real hard, you want to go out there and really go at it. But then when an injury slows you up and outs you on the side lines, it's really quite depressing.

"You suddenly get the feeling that you're missing out on everything. It drives me up a wall. You're standing out on the field and the coaches are looking at you. Then you start to wonder what they're thinking about.

"I tell you, you feel like running into the locker room and putting your suit on. It kills you cause you want to play, but you can't."

During the scrimmage I heard an unusual noise, but couldn't associate it with a specific source. I just recall an end sweep with a mass of players converging on one another. And from the side lines I could hear this growling sound -- like that of a dog biting into someone's leg. It could very well have been a hungry linebacker busting through the line to make the tackle.

From atop his command tower, Head coach MacPherson shouted one last order.

"I think some of the men want to go live in there, get 'em going."

So we went live, all right – goal line coverage.

The players herded around the battle ground and the same polarization into offensive and defensive units took place.

Shouts of "Rip off his arm", "Cream him", and "Murder the SOB" were echoed through the helmets. There was an exchange of words from the offense and defense, then an exchange of actions.

The sound of heavy foot steps and the racket of heads connecting was enough to make one's blood curdle. The whims of pain and the raving mad yells of coaches made the game seem more like war.

The whistle blew and the fighting ceased. A truce was called between the offense and defense until the next time they would collide.

MAELSTROM
SUNDAY NITE Oct. 29 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. BLUEWALL

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD
Daily American Film to be so Honored
"One of the most daring, original, and totally fascinating pictures ever made."
Daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Rated - R -
He survived the deadliest day on earth to enjoy the sexiest night in outer space!
SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE

Campus Cinemas 256-6411 AMHERST HADLEY LINE
Dollar Night!
Monday Night Only!
Everyone $1.00

"To Have and Have Not" "Big Sleep"
THE CLASSIC BOGART
Double Bogart Program In 35 mm Starts 7:00

"REEFER MADNESS"
Daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Final Week
Rated - PG -
THE FIREBIRD THEATRE
AMHERST PLAZA

Sharon Tate in Roman Polanski's
FEARLESS VAMPIRE KILLERS
Saturday, Oct. 28
at 7 - 9 - 11:00
Mahar Auditorium
ROADRUNNER CARTOONS
75c
sponsored by Cinema Club
HAPPY HALLOWEEN

Album Inquest

National Lampoon

By Frank Baglione

Radio Dinner by the National Lampoon, Banana/Blue Thumb Records

The National Lampoon has released an album of contemporary satire that deserves a great deal more attention than most radio stations have been willing to give to it. While it may be true that certain cuts on the album are difficult to play because of obscenities, sexual and "social," the limited airing Radio Dinner receives could be due, in part, to an American inability to recognize or appreciate good satire. This defect in the American character may have been a small one in the past, but recent consciousness tinkerings have now made it acute. Thus the National Lampoon's startingly humorous efforts go largely unappreciated.

Radio Dinner draws its greatest strength from a core of musical parodies that take to task the artistic effronteries of John Lennon and Joan Baez. In addition, there are some strong thrusts against the work of Paul McCarthy, George Harrison and Bob Dyland. I have chosen to describe the parodies in an aggressive manner because, although parody need not have this intent, the effect of the Lampoon's is to ridicule.

The best example of this is the parody of John Lennon in a number called "Magical Misery Tour." The musical accompaniment to the lyrics is a basic, simple and very pleasant melody much like those produced by Lennon. The mockery is not in the quality of the sound, which is excellent, but in the statement that its simple structure is all that Lennon can produce. The nakedness of Lennon's music, thought to be innovative two years back, is today monotonous, and the ease with which it was reproduced in this albumn is a suitable comment on its complexity. The imitation of Lennon's voice by Tony Hendra is also precise and mocking in its tone.

The ridicule in the parody comes to the fore in title and lyrics. The complete title is harsh–"Magical Misery Tour (Bootleg Record) from the albumn 'Yoko Is a Concept by Which We Measure Our Pain.' " The lyrics are merciless, and from them the listener who is familiar with Lennon's repertoire in his first two post-Beatle albums will recognize the painfully tragic picture of John Lennon as it emerges. Lampoon's Lennon says, "I resent performing for you fuckers/Tell me what do you know/A lot of faggot middle class kids wearing long hair and trendy clothes..." This begins an obscenity laced tirade against his audience that is superb.

In the second verse the target is Mich Jagger upon whom Lennon turns with, "I think that Mick's a joke with all his stupid faggot dancing/I always did/Wiggling his ass/You know it's just a lot of bullshit..."But the bitterness of this verse is mild when compared with the Lampoon's interpretation of John's feelings towards his former Beatle fellows–"Paul said he hated Yoko/Tell me why should Yoko have to take that kind of shit/Shit from those fuckin' sons of bitches.../George said she gave off evil vibes/I should have beat the fuckin' shit right out of him/Him with his fuckin' Hare Krishna..."

Then, rapidly degenerating, Lampoon's Lennon spurts out phrases referring to such sensitive issues as the true identity of the "walrus," the true estimation of Yoko's work, and the fact that his auntie threw out his poems (unaware that she was offending a genius). Lennon's exit is amid screams of "Genius is Pain," as if the mere fact of his tragic suffering and stupidity could earn him this distinction.

In this parody is combined the themes of Lennon's work in songs like "God is a Concept By Which We Measure Our Pain," "I found Out", "How Do You Sleep", "Mother", and others. Indeed, the Lampoon has succeeded in putting together a statement acurately reflecting the career of Lennon in its decline from star to stooge.

An equally successful parody is that of Joan Baex. Unfortunately, this piece is not as extensive as the one of Lennon, probably because Baez is so completely boring and annoying and has even less substance than Lennon. Her music and voice (by Diana Reed) are reproduced, once again, with painful accuracy. The crusade set to music which has been selected for Lampoon's Baez centers on George Jackson, typlifying the complete absence of taste Baez displays when she rummages around for outlaws to immorilize in wax. "I'm the world's madonna," she proclaims, "I'm needed from Belfast to Bangla Desh/So many grievious wrongs for me to right with tedious songs..."And then comes the chorus which contains that other type of obscenity–"Pull the triggers, Niggers/We're with you all the way/Just across the Bay..." But the true obscenity, as the Lampoon illustrates, is Baez' delusions and righteousness.

Resorting to such impiety towards blacks, and the reference to Baez' works as "tedious," while quite true, do make this parody less successful because it overtly ridicules. A companion piece might have been Dylan's song, "George Jackson," which was equally tedious, but the Lampoon probably thought this failing by the revered Dylan spoke for itself.

Where Dylan is treated it is a searing imitation of the bard doing a channel 56-type commercial called "Those Fabulous Sixties" offering a special issue albumn, "Golden Protest Songs." Those who order now also recieve a "Treasury of Acid Rock," and "The Best of the Super Groups."

Paul McCarthy's efforts at banality are spotted in a recurring short piece, "Give Ireland Back to the Irish," which carries the corollaries of "Give Lapland back to the Laps/Give China back to the Chinese/And Yoko back to the Japs. While George Harrison's flights are treated in an interesting "Concert In Bangla Desh," and also in a series of conversations between two teeny-boppers who applaude "George's fixing the whole thing so we could take care of it just by buying the albumn....-That's where the seventies are really at, I think, you know." The information is also passed that one may get high with George's Bangla Desh albumn if you put your tongue in the hole and spin it. "Pain is so far out, man."

Somewhat overdone lyrically, but very pleasant and funny nonetheless, is a musical parody of the Desiderata recited in a deep male voice and broken occassionally by a sweet female chorus singing, "You are a fluke of the universe..." Since it contains no obscenities and the nastiest line is "always put people on hold," this song has managed to get some air time on radio. It did not, however, make the "charts," probably because it offended every college freshman who has a dishtowel with the Desiderata hanging above the sink for inspiration.

The remainder of the albumn is filled with various mocks and imiations. There is a good rendering of Rod Serling doing an anti-pot commerical, a poor one of Frank Rizzo recruiting retards for the police force, and a useless one featuring Barbra Streisand asking for a particular service. The weakest section is a long and rather pointless piece mocking give-away programs called "Catch It and You Keep It." Another, which stages the upcoming presidential election as an automobile race offers two, maybe three, insights.

But where Radio Dinner succeeds is far more important than where it fails. The Lennon parody alone justifies the albumns existence. Certainly this album is equal to many other humor records enjoying a wide reputation. Its failure to achieve immediate recognition may be due to the difficulty in airing a work that uses obscenity so effectively in its most deserving cuts; or it may be due to the fact that its parodies largely ridicule the very audience it is playing to. In this sense it is a mock of itself, bruising the sensibilities of the people who are most familair with the material treated. You would have had to know and in some ways identify with what both John Lennon and Joan Baez do in order to fully appreciate the absolute devastation brought upon their images. It is a matter of laughing at yourself. Any takers?

West, Bruce, and Laing

Why Dontcha–West, Bruce and Laing (Columbia Records)

By Steve Feld

The question before us is if the newly formed West, Bruce and Laing is a Supergroup, or merely a supergroup. We can all concede that they are at least a supergroup. The teaming of Jack Bruce (the cream of the Cream) and Leslie West (the mountain from Mountain) was cause for considerable joy amongst those of us who like our rocks hard. Why Dontcha, then, is the product of experienced virtuous and professional artists. It can't be bad.

West and Bruce are performers who are the acknowledged leaders of two of the Sixties most talented and exciting groups--Mountain being the heavy-est of the plethora of second-rate rockers and Cream being the apex of the white blues bands, sporting Eric Clapton (whom I recently heard was voted the most admired person in the world by college kids!).

Corky Laing is the Rich Grech of the group–he gets by with a little help from his friends. The former drummer of Mountain is certainly no Ginger Baker, but, then again, "Toad" isn't on the album. He does his job.

Now that it's happened, it seems like a natural and inevitable move. There has always been a camaraderie between Mountain and Cream through producer/-bassist/vocalist Felix Pappalardi. And also, "Theme For An Imaginary Western", one of Mountain's most popular performances, was penned by Jack Bruce.

With Pappalardi's lead vocals sounding very much like Bruce's, and with West trying his goddamn best to match Clapton (but ultimately losing out to Eric's smoother, more precise adroitness), the coupling was destined to take place. West, Bruce and Laing seem to be a potentially miraculous injection of new blood into the waning rock vein. But so did the individual Beatles....

What did we have the right to expect from this seemingly overpowering trio? Jack Bruce, first of all, has been categorized as an experimentalist. The hard rock formula of Cream's bowed heavily under his moody, orchestral concoctions ("Passing the Time", "White Room"). His versatility ended up a major factor in the breakup of Cream. (Ever seen the picture of Jack Bruce hovering over a cello during the sessions for Wheels of Fire? Not quite what Eric and Ginger expected for their high-energy trio!) The group was too constricting for Bruce and it tore apart at the seams.

Since then Jack Bruce has given us a melange of musical merriment with his solo albums, Songs for a Tailor, Things We Like and the especially fine Harmony Row.

Leslie West and Mountain started out strong with their first two records (of which Climbing! was clearly the better). Probably their most famous recording to date is "Mississippi Queen", the quentessence of Mountain-screeching guitar, thumping bass and pounding drums. What separated Mountain from the thousands of rock bands of the time was Leslie West, whose mammoth frame made his guitar look like a toy and play like a charm.

Further recordings of Mountain (Nantucket Sleighride and a compulsory live album, The Road Goes On Forever) showed strains within the group that eventually foreshadowed their demise.

In May of this year, all the trade papers carried the news that West, Bruce and Laing had been formed. Jack Bruce, in interviews, said that Leslie West was the best guitarist he has ever worked with (not Mayall, not Calpton), and the other two members likewise showed and spewed their enthusiasm. Around this time also, Leslie West became the object of Todd Rungren's fury. Rundgren, his own best P&R man, claimed that he, not West, was the best guitarist in America.....

Let's get to the business at hand. What I wanted Why Dontcha to be was Jack Bruce-oriented, but after listening to my pre-release acetate, the placement of the names became all the more obvious. West, with top billing dominates the record making it Leslie West-heavy instead of Jack Bruce-musical. Three-quarters of the record is devoted to a foundation of loud guitar, while Bruce's vocals and melody lines (of which there are few) play a distinct second fiddle.

Alas, of these rockers, not many make much headway. The title tune fares O.K., as does "Third Degree", "Pleasure", and "Love is Worth the Blues".

EXTRA ADDED ATTRACTION
EDGAR WINTER

History Without Histrionics

By Bob Nesti

The Emigrants
Written for the screen and directed by Jan Troell; from the novel by Vilhelm Moberg; with Max Von Sydow and Liv Ullmann.

The story of the great European migration to America during the Nineteenth Century has been absent from films. It is usually left to as the background, the canvas on which the melodrama takes place. What happens is we see historical films without any historical sense. Our empathies are with the characters for all the wrong reasons. Filmmakers have generally approached the panorama of Nineteenth Century America with the attitude of a Twentieth Century tourist. The stories haven't scope, the landscapes do. Poorly handled in all the action and visual splendor are the motivations and beliefs of individuals caught up in events. They are the most obvious and least sincere portions of a film. We cringe when a Bible is preached from, despite our knowledge that it was our forefather's strong religious convictions which led to the settlement of large portions of this country. We often sympathize with the hardships pioneers endured while crossing the nation, but never with those reasons which led them there.

These problems have been neatly done away with in a new Swedish film The Emigrants. It is the first film to deal specifically with the vast subject of Nineteenth Century migration and one of the few to approach a historical event as a thematic end unto itself. The breadth of the Swedish emigration to the American midlands during the 1840's is carefully modulated into a beautiful whole. It is the second film released in this country by the new director, former cinematographer, Jan Troell and the first of a two-part film on this subject. As a work suggesting this epic theme The Emigrants resembles the large section of a vast, episodic, strongboned novel. At its conclusion the viewer feels one with the adventure of the settlers, you anticipate the second half. This is the film's strength and indictative of mastery of Troell's talent.

It begins with a series of images of a Swedish village in the 1840's. The immediate effect is to frame the film in the austere beauty of the land. It is a film very much concerned with terrain and the hardness of nature upon man. The Earth is Man's treacherous master, the emigrants journey a chance they take. The characters are introduced as part of this terrain and the story comes in a sort-of visual osmosis. A rock falls upon a man while farming, his son takes over the farm and marries. This economic exposition immediately frames the film in its historical context then gradually tells bits and pieces of the central family's struggle to maintain dignity against stringent natural and social forces.

The young farmer Karl Oskar (Max Von Sydow) and his wife Kristine (Liv Ullmann) vainly fight nature to maintain their farm, their indenture brother suffers at the hands of a cruel master, and their strong-willed uncle suffers religious persecution by the authorities. Young Robert thinks of coming to America first, as an adventurous escape from his futile toil. Karl thinks of coming for more practical reasons: land in America is fertile and cheap. Their uncle belatedly joins in their plan when he has no other way to escape the legal penalties authorities have threatened him with.

For Karl this journey comes with deep thought, but upon losing his barn in a lightening-ignited fire and, more deeply, his daughter in an accident, he decides his homeland offers his family little to compensate for their hardship. The second long sequence takes place on board a clipper bound for America. The film moves from the natural lyricism of the Swedish section to a more dynamic and engrossing adventure of a two-month voyage across a huge sea. Epidemic diseases ravage the cramped passenger quarters, food is scarce, the voyage is long and difficult and you are caught up in it. If the first part established this culture, the second shows it in transit and the adventure becomes just as much ours as it was our forebearers. The shipboard drama is one of humans unsure and afraid. They fight, first disease then each other. Troell gives his images equal weight, a shot of the clipper's sails in the sunset has the same value as one of the scurvy-ridden quarters. He presents us with the many possible feelings humans felt during the greatest journey of their lives. Troell works less with individual characters than these characters as different aspects of a greater communal whole.

It is the genesis of this community which culminates The Emigrants when they arrive in the United States. At last there is a feeling of being an unit, one based on the adherence to a foreign life style placed in a new land. Troell makes America appear like a new land. Although some critics have complained that once in America we have only a general idea of where the travelers are at any given moment and only a hunch as to their destination, this ambiguity works well in suggesting their confusion of their new land. It has been a firm move away from the past toward the future, The Emigrants is a film of hope which culminates the first portion of its adventure with a man's momentary triumph over nature. Karl Oskar, in the final shot, places his claim on some land by a lake then rests. We realize his rest is temporary and long to watch the Swedes struggle to build off this virgin land which is the subject of the sequel, now called The New Land and scheduled for release sometime after the first of the year. This was a hugely successful film in Sweden and it is easy to understand why. Few films approach a subject with such scope and succeed so admirably. Its appeal is universal and our exhilaration comes for Troell tells a tale of Everyman.

The Emigrants is austere and distant at first. Troell immerses us in images of Swedish life then slowly tells a story. The images are beautiful. Troell, a former cinematographer, reminds one of Wildeberg and Visconti in his ability to vividly recreate the pat. He doesn't show the surface of large events, but the reflective moments in the sweep of a great one.

It is a film of the passage of time and Troell spends his in the patient rendering of the past. For a story filled with rampling events as this, each part is modulated to the whole. Taken from a novel, it is a cinematic one in the best way possible.

The performances of Max Von Sydow and Liv Ullmann are fine, but what is most apparent from every frame of The Emigrants is the remarkable talent of Jan Troell. He photographs his film with such splendid visuals that they often border upon being excessively lovely. Instead the story's firm backbone and its epic radiance are immersed in Troell's lovely and serene visions. It is a glorious film to watch and an enrapturing and resonant historical recreation, one which leaves you anticipating its sequel with fervor.

Film Co-op Announces New Series

"What comes out of closets once went into them."-Dixon Wheeler

The American film movement has always been in the hands of the common man. This might seem strange in an era when Hollywood is run by corporate types with button-down minds, but it remains for the directors and actors to "make" the film. John Cassavettes has taken so-called Hollywood actors (Peter Falk, Ben Gazzara in Husbands, John Marley in Faces) and directed them in human, inprovisatory performances. Other more conventional directors have taken studio scripts and turned them into fine cinematic works, such as Pretty Poison (1968), the American films of Fritz Lang.

There are, however, a number of film artists that choose not to work within the Hollywood corporate system. They feel that Hollywood offers no creative atmosphere and eventually co-opts the artist to the point where he must suport status quo. It is this feeling that binds them together loosely in a group that has been labeled the New American Cinema. Though through the excellent efforts of Jonas Mekas most of these film artists are based in New York City, there is a growing number of film-makers on the West Coast, particularly in San Francisco, who are being embraced in this N.A.C. group.

"What if (Harry) Truman arrested James Dean?"-Taylor Mead

Taylor Mead, a poet and actor in many N.A.C. films (Flower Thief, Illiac Passion) believes that "the movies are a revolution" because governments and big business suppress emotional responses to life, and film is a way to record those very emotions. Suppression is a very real thing in all the media. If it cannot be done by outright blue-pen censorship, it can be done through economic means. Most N.A.C. film-makers have made films on slim budgets coming largely from their own pockets. Jonas Mekas was once asked to do, by Show magazine, a film on the arts in New York. When they saw the result they were angry because Mekas hadn't included anything about Show or their sponsor, Dupont Fabrics, in the film Mekas' reply was "What has that got to do with the arts in New York?" The film was destroyed.

This anecdote serves to point out several things about N.A.C. artists. They are convinced that film is a medium of integrity and deep personal worth. In order to preserve these two truths, no compromises can be made. Cassavetes tried compromise when he went to Hollywood between his beautiful inprovisational work Shadows and his first box-office triumph Faces. While in Hollywood he made two films, Too Late Blues and A Child is Waiting, and both were eminently forgettable. Cassavetes even disclaims A Child is Waiting and calls it Stanley Kramer's (the producer) picture. The problems with both pictures were in dealing with department heads, bankers, producers-a siphoning off of energy from the main task.

This type of experience is one usually avoided by the N.A.C. group. But the point made by Cassavetes' Faces is that a 16mm film personally financed, edited in a garage with unsalaried actors and a three year on and off shooting schedule can find a sympathetic audience. What independent films lack in polish they make up for in audience involvement. What remains as an unfortunate footnote is that there are many more films like Faces that lounge in the backwaters of film distribution. Some of them have been obscure for as much as twenty years, others have just been made.

Why don't we know about them? The blame lies with two aspects of media dissemination. First is the commercial distributor, who depends on Hollywood products to attract large audiences and, therefore, large profits on its line of films. N.A.C. is not a large draw and, even with the exceptions of the box-office returns on Faces and Bob Downey's Putney Swope, no theatre is willing to take a chance on an unknown product. Of course, subject matter is a problem too. X-rated films must be used sparingly at local theatres and many N.A.C. films dare to use nudity, sex, taboo relationships and radical lifestyles as their subject matter.

Also enter the critic; with the possible exceptions of Andrew Sarris and Pauline Kael, most critics are literary and conservatively-minded. This premise accepted, most critics reject N.A.C. as being of any possible interest to their readers.

The literary approach to film can never hope to keep up with the non-linear, plotless films of the future. On a more popular level, this was why so many critics had trouble evaluating Fellini's Satyricon. They knew if it was Fellini it must be good: but what was it all about?

••••••

The critic and the distributor-theatre, then, are roadblocks to cinematic awareness. The Amherst Film Coop, starting this Sunday, Oct. 29 will attempt to give a cross-sampling of New American Cinema films. The series will cover ten works--seven features and three shorts that will cover a wide range of approaches to film. We have left out kinetic art and the films of Stan Brakhage and Stan Vanderbeek. These are large gaps but we should save something for the future.

The following films will be shown on the respective Sundays at Hampden Commons in Southwest. Shows will be at 7:30 and film notes will be provided at the door.

Oct. 29-Robert Downey (a prince) Chafed Elbows
Nov. 5-George Kuchar, Corruption of the Damned--Howard Lester, Airplane Glue, I Love You-Kenneth Anger, Fireworks
Nov. 12-John Cassavetes, Shadows
Nov. 19-Ron Rice, The Flower Thief
Dec. 3-Peter Emmanuel Goldman, Echoes of Silence
Dec. 10-Alfred Leslie, Pull My Daisy
Dec. 17-Jack Smith, Flaming Creatures

FRIDAY LATE NIGHT
SPECIAL
Buy A Plain Pizza
at THE HUNGRY-U
100 N. PLEASANT, AMHERST
(regularly 99¢)
and receive two tickets to the Amherst Cinema
11:30 Skin Flick
(Regularly $3.00)
all for only $2.50
This Week: "ENJOY"

TONIGHT!
The Best of the First Annual N.Y. Erotic Film Festival

7 and 9:30
S.U.B. $1.00
Program preceded by Erotic Love Poetry read by Bob Zelman

Theater

Revival With The National Black Theatre

National Black Theatre will perform their latest offering, a new art form entitled Change/Lov together/Origanize: A Revival Saturday, October 28, 1972. This dramatic work is the accumulation of two and a half years of experimentation with the basic elements of African folklore and Black lifestyles. It will be performed by 35 liberators/musicians all of whom have been expertly trained by NBT's founder and producing/director Barbara Ann Teer. Ms. Teer is one of Black Theatre's leading and most versatile personalities, accomplished as a director, actress, writer and educator. She as NBT's prime mover and visionary, has created a Temple of Liberation/Theatre for a Black Nation.

This Revival was made possible through the collective efforts of many prominent artists and theatricians. Outstanding among these is the noted playwright Charlie Russell, best known for his Five On The Black Hand Side. Mr. Russell is National Black Theatre's writer-in-residence and is presently on a research fellowship in Africa. Mr. Russell has created a story line and characters which have been incorporated spiritually and creatively by Ms. Teer into NBT's unique ritualistic form.

This, our first Revival deals with the subject matter of elimination of drugs, evil, and vice which presently run rampant in all Black Communities. The Revival is more than dynamic entertainment. It is an educational vehicle that is designed to remove those negative influences from the Harlem community and move it back toward love. This new art form seeks to revitalize a community whose essence of love desperately needs to be reborn. The purpose of the Revival is to provide a major alternative to the existing idealogical thrust of Blackness by offering through the medium of theatrical entertainment a whole new and more optimistic outlook on the subject of Black survival.

Therefore National Black Theatre is calling for a return to the basic foundation of African traditional culture for they believe that this is the ultimate solution to the elimination of 400 years of oppression. No race can progress or survive without visionaries and NBT Liberators offer as a vision the unleashing of that overwhelming creative force which they define as Blackness.

Tickets are available from the Fine Arts Council ticket office, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202 and are $1 for full-time UMass undergraduates.

Members of the National Black Theatre company performing Change Love Together Organize A Revival, tomorrow evening in the Student Union Ballroom.

View From The 'Times'! "Face To Face With The Junkies"

By Clayton Riley

America Black art grows and grows. Goes through changes and whatnot. Is a schizophrenic form in its continuing ability to be alternately a conformist and an outlaw expression, as with the work of Leontyne Price on the one hand and that of Charlie Parker on the other. (Which is not about better and worse, just about difference.)

Theater, too, has its Black practitioners, some of whom interpret traditional Western concepts of performance and dramatic structure with skill and measurable precision, while others look to go another way in a search for new, occasionally outrageous frameworks in which to operate.

The National Black Theater, under the direction of Barbara Ann Teer, has been exploring the concept of ritual (non-narrative) presentation for several years now, seeking in its work to break away from the usual and discover the unique.

"Change! Love Together! Organize! A Revival," the company's current offering at its home at 9 East 125th Street, is an exasperating work, spectacularly brilliant in its concept and in much of its design, but also unfocused at times, wandering, as it were, away from its basic strengths in search of a somewhat over-emphasized political definition.

•

The piece concerns itself with the effects of drug addiction on the lives of those living in a Harlem neighborhood: the junkies, their victims and victimizers, pushers and policemen.

"A Revival" has, as its primary force and spirit, a spontaneous nature that is superbly stated at the outset when the audience, upon entering the theater, encounters the players head on, face-to-face: beggars after some change ("Look here, good Brother, why don't you let me have a few coins" . . . "Say, my man, my mother is sick with multiple sclerosis, can you help me out?"), a Sister totally wrecked by heroin looking to turn a fast two dollar trick ("Don't know what you missin', baby, don't know how gooooood it iiiiiizzzzzzzz!")

Getting into a seat means sitting at a night club table immediately beneath a stand where a Rhythm and Blues band is throbbing in a minor key, or in a section of a welfare office's waiting room or on some steps that lead up toward the fragmentary exterior of a battered tenement. From the beginning National Black Theater's liberators (actors) engage all of those who come to watch them work.

The scenes that follow vibrate with style and an element of what is best described as passion, an urgency very intricately wed to the band's musical patterns.

•

Pimps, pushers, a basketball player called Sugarfoot, fortune tellers, thieves and whores glide effortlessly with junkies through and around us, joining the neighborhood's unemployed and working poor in a series of lyrical and strident outcries, like so many solos in an orchestrated piece of urban folklore.

"A Revival" is based on a story line by Charlie L. Russell, the author of "Five On The Black Hand Side," a play directed by Barbara Ann Teer for The American Place Theater a few seasons back. In both pieces Russell displays a remarkable ability to capture a very essential aspect of the contemporary Black experience. His dialogue abounds with a kind of fundamental Blues poetry, rhythmically alive and sharply attuned to the shifting tonal qualities and varying cadences contained in Black speech patterns. In which the way something is said means every bit as much as what is contained in the words spoken.

"A Revival" works best when it is exploring the defiant, stubbornly energetic life style existing on America's torn and wasted inner city streets. Russell's characters, richly drawn, earthy and profane, are people whose lives are sustained in great measure by an exalted will to survive coupled with a highly developed sense of personal style.

But the experience ("A Revival" cannot really be called a play) often works too hard at being political and instructive. The second half of the work actually turns the audience into a congregation and moves into another section of the theater for what becomes a consciousness-raising religious service. The proceedings are interrupted at several points by the arrival of several figures from the earlier drama, notably two drug dealers seeking revenge against a fleeing pimp. (The pushers are portrayed by the same men who appear in the first half as two very corrupt cops, a triumphantly pointed example of double-casting).

This section is not so effective as what precedes it, however, although its intent — to engage those in attendance and move them both politically and spiritually—is beyond reproach. But in this section "A Revival" places itself in the position of depending on a large and responsive audience/congregation to fulfill a call-and-response feature of its construction. The players, particularly a young preacher/leader do, in fact call, but the response was simply not there at the performance I attended.

This is a production that needs a packed house to be really effective in achieving the excitement it contains, in realizing the ability it possesses to genuinely move people.

If the presently moribund New York theater is ever to live and grow, support of such currently unfashionable outlaws as The National Black Theater is going to become increasingly important. The ritual forms this company is now developing, shaping and constantly refining in its small uptown loft will probably, like Charlie Parker's music, not be understood or appreciated at first glance. But a second glance, perhaps a third, will reveal much in the way of dynamic possibility.

The National Black Theater details the drama of Black reality, myth and legend. It's a tomorrow form, available right now to all those willing to grasp it.

(reprinted from the New York Times, Sunday, September 17, 1972)

Program Council presents

THX 1138

- a chilling glimpse of the 25th century

Sunday, Oct. 29

S.U. Ballroom

7 and 9 p.m.

Admission $1.00

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1·2·3·4·5

24 HR. TEL. 733-5131 ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.

YOU'LL LIKE MY MOTHER PG — Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:40 — Sat.-Sun. 2-3:55-5:40-7:35-9:45

One of the most daring, original pictures ever made — WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD — SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE R — Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:40 Sat.-Sun. 5:35-7:50-9:50

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY G — TODAY 2:00-7:00-9:40

"BAD COMPANY" IS GOOD COMPANY. GO SEE IT!" —Richard Schickel, Life Magazine — "BAD COMPANY" JEFF BRIDGES BARRY BROWN PG — Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:30 Sat.-Sun. 2-3:50-5:40 7:30-9:30

"Freshness and Excitement! Moving and Hilarious!" —Rex Reed, New York Daily News — Andy Warhol Presents "HEAT" X — Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:40 — Sat.-Sun. 2-3:25 5:20-7:30-9:40

Sat.-Sun. "COURAGE OF LASSIE" 1:50-3:30

TV Hot Spots

By Clark Kent

Friday

9

Ghost Story: Helen Hayes as a schoolteacher involved in the supernatural events surrounding a sick student. Her prize pupil dreams of a murdering alter-ego who becomes real. Channels 22 and 30.

10

Banyon: A private eye in Hollywood during the Thirties, this week he becomes involved with the attempted murder of a big band leader. Channels 22 and 30.

FRIDAY'S FILMS

9

The McKenzie Break (1970)

It may be theirs, but not ours. German POWS plan an escape from an Allied camp in Ireland. With Brian Keith and Helmut Griem, lately seen in Cabaret. Channel 3.

11:30

The Oscar (1966)

Sometimes absolutely horrible movies can be a good deal of fun. Friends have argued that this is a case in point, although it's doubtful that there's anything worth watching in this two hour plus drama of Stephen Boyd's ascent in Hollywood. He claws over the likes of Milton Berle, Eleanor Powell, and Jill St. John. That seems a bill like beating up on cripples. Joseph E. Levine produced. Channel 3.

1:45

The Helen Morgan Story (1957)

During the Fifties there were a wealth of pseudo musical biographies and this is one of the least factual although its pleasant enough. With Anne Blythe and Paul Newman.

Saturday

12:45

College Football

At press time, ABC was unable to confirm its regionally telecast "wild card" games. Strong possibilities are: Florida State-Auburn (beginning at 12:45 P.M.) Ohio State-Wisconsin (12:45 P.M.) Dartmouth-Harvard (1:45 P.M.) Penn State-West Virginia (1:45 P.M.) Air Force-Arizona State (3:45 P.M.) Channel 40.

1

College Football

The UConn Huskies meet the UMass squad at Amherst. Channel 3.

8

All In The Family

Wife swapping. Channel 3.

8:30

Playhouse New York

This week a classic Japanese film, Movie: Toshiro Mifune in Kurosawa's "Throne of Blood" (1957), a Japanese version of "MacBeth." The setting is 16th century Japan, but the basic plot is faithful to Shakespeare: an ambitious general is driven to his own destruction. Recounting the general's rise and fall, Kurosawa uses elements of the traditional noh play: stylized acting, symbolism and stark settings. Visual highlights range from idyllic forest scenes to fierce battle sequences. Washizu: Toshiro Mifune. Asaji: Isuzu Yamada. Channel 57.

10:30

David Susskind

"Arabs and Israelis Confront Each Other," a candid discussion with Arab and Israeli graduate students in the U.S. Among the issues: terrorism, Palestinian refugees. Channel 57.

SATURDAY'S MOVIES

3:30 p.m.

The Inspector General (1949)

Danny Kaye cuts loose in a mythical kingdom as a simpleton who is mistaken for a law enforcer. Channel 3.

8

It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World (1963)

Stanley Kramer's large scale comedy makes ponderously untunny what Mack Sennett made hilarious in the Twenties. The attempt at being the comedy of comedies make the film a travesty, of its forerunners. Many stars, special effects galore, much frantic energy, and too much wasted talent. Channels 22 and 30.

11:30

The Roaring Twenties (1939)

The rise and fall of a bootlegger (James Cagney). Mark Hellinger's story is a fine film with nostalgia and songs. With Priscilla Lane and Humphrey Bogart. Channel 3.

1:35

Jeopardy (1953)

Barbara Stanwyck gets a good emotional workout as a wife desparately trying to save her trapped husband's life. Unusual, suspenseful little thriller. Channel 3.

Sunday

12 p.m.

Meet the Press

Special: Sen. George McGovern, Democratic candidate for President, is interviewed. Channels 22 and 30.

1

Pro Football

The Washington Redskins meet the Giants at New York. Channel 3.

The New England Patriots meet the Jets at New York. Channels 22 and 30.

Issues and Answers

Vice President Spiro Agnew is interviewed. Channel 40.

6

60 Minutes

Mike Wallace and Morley Safer host this edition of the CBS newsmagazine. Segments hinge on late-breaking news events. Channel 3.

7:30

Peanuts

Special: One of the best "Peanuts" outings to date whisks Charlie Brown into politics. Channel 3.

8

Yellow Submarine (1968)

The Beatles as characters in an animated fantasy. The story's of their odyssey to Pepperland to return it to its happy state before the Blue Meanies took over. Spectacular animated effects. The Beatles songs include: "Yellow Submarine," "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," "Eleanor Rigby," "When I'm 64," "Nowhere Man," "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds," "All You Need Is Love," "A Day in the Life," "All Too Much," "Altogether Now" and "Northern Song." Channel 3.

9

What Ever Happened to Aunt Alice? (1969)

The only proper way to respond to this infantile thriller is to say "who cares?" The kind of role, played by Geraldine Page, is the sort which has ruined film careers. Ruth Gordon is equally bad, but that can be expected. Channel 40.

11:30

Violent Saturday (1955)

Vivid story of a planned bank robbery and its effect on a small town. Channel 40.

Monday

9

Pro Football

The Detroit Lions meet the Dalla Cowboys at Irving, Texas. Channel 40.

Bobaquivari

"Lightnin'" Hopkins offers 30 minutes of improvisational music and reminiscences about his childhood sweetheart, rural life and remembered parental advice. Channel 40.

MONDAY'S FILMS

7

Arabesque (1966)

A romantic chase film a la Hitchcock, with Gregory Peck and Sophia Loren involved in murder and international intrigue in London. Directed by Stanley Donen. Channel 3.

Tuesday

8:30

Dateline America

An uncompromising look at severely retarded children, and a little hope.

James Daly narrates this 1971 film, produced as a training aid for nurses. Channel 57.

TUESDAY'S FILMS

9:30

The Dunwich Horror (1970)

An adaptation of H.P. Lovecraft's classic short story. It's a variation on the old haunted house plot, with black masses, family skeletons and an atmosphere of brooding evil. Channel 3.

11:30

The Haunting (1963)

Robert Wise directed this fine horror film from Shirley Jackson's psychological thriller. The story is of a visit to a haunted mansion. With Claire Bloom and Julie Harris. Our pick of the week, a superlative example of a fine novel being made into a film. Channel 3.

Wednesday

8

Carol Burnett

Stiller and Meara, Peggy Lee. Channel 3.

Election '72

Elections '72: Will the Republicans gain a majority in Congress? Tonight an analysis of House and Senate contests, with emphasis on the Rhode Island senatorial race between incumbent Claiborne Pell, a Democrat, and former Republican governor John Chafee. The influence of the Presidential candidates on the outcome is also measured. Channel 57.

8:30

What Shall We Do For Thursday's Child?

Pennsylvania's mentally retarded were guaranteed free public education in last winter's landmark Federal Court ruling. But tonight the rights of all handicapped children are at issue ... Should all be educated to their fullest potential, or only those who can become self supporting? Should taxpayers foot the bill? This referendum gauges the opinions of viewers (some 1500, pre-selected to phone in comments during the program) and guest panelists: attorney Thomas Bilhool, counsel to the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children; HEW's Edward Martin; neurosurgeon Robert Crosby of the National Advisory Board on the Elimination of the Handicapped. Channel 57.

WEDNESDAY'S FILMS

8:30

That Certain Summer (1972)

The subject is homosexuality and the conflict is between a divorced homosexual and his adolescent son. The boy was never told the real reason his parents split up but he's slowly and fearfully learning the truth during one San Francisco summer. Judith Crisf says of the film: "It tackles a delicate subject: a teenager's realization that his divorced father has established an overt homosexual relationship and handles it with delicacy and above all, honesty." Superlatively acted by Hal Holbrook, Martin Sheen, and Hope Lange. Channel 40.

11:30

A Matter of Innonence (1962)

A matter of bad taste, with Hayley Mills and Trevor Howard. Channel 3.

1:25

The Impossible Years (1968)

The incredibly banal play was made into a sublimely mindless film, with David Niven as a psychiatrist and his teenage daughters growing pains. Channel 3.

Thursday

8

The Advocates

The Presidency: which candidate is best qualified for the office? The leadership abilities of President Nixon and Senator McGovern are debated, and campaign issues are summarized. Kevin Phillips, author of "The Emerging Republican Majority," speaks for Mr. Nixon. He's opposed by Lawrence O'Brien, Senator McGovern's campaign manager. Advocates: Harvard professor Alan Dershowitz and Atlanta attorney John T. Marshall. Last of five shows on the campaign. Channel 57.

9

International Performance

A minor masterpiece of gaiety, wit and satire: Jacques Offenbach's light opera "Les Brigands." It's about a gang of 19th-century Italian bandits who masquerade as a royal escort to rob the coffers of the Duke of Mantua. Highlights of the jaunty score include a mocking refrain sung by the bandits about the police (J'entends un bruit de bottes de bolles") and a spirited Act II finale ("Tous sans trampette ni tambour") Channel 57

THURSDAY'S FILMS

9

(1967)

Robert Aldrich's hugely successful film about the training and exploits of a group of condemned men who are sent on a suicide mission into Nazi-occupied France. Aldrich makes fine, action films and this is one of the best. Good cast: Lee Marvin, John Cassavettes, Charles Bronson, and Robert Ryan. Part one, second part Friday evening. Channel 3.

11:30

The Catered Affair (1956)

A fine adaptation of Paddy Chayetsky's TV play about a Bronx middle class family with Bette Davis, Ernest Borgnine, Debbie Reynolds, and Barry Fitzgerald. Honest, realistic, and well acted. Channel 3.

1:30

The Liquidator (1966)

This spy feature features pretty girls and cloak and dagger thrills with Rod Taylor, Jill St. John, and Trevor Howard. Channel 3.

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1·2·3·4·5 — 24 HR. TEL. 733-5131 — ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.

WANTS 4 U. MASS.

FILM CONSULTANTS

to help promote our films on campus & get publicity

Enthusiasm, film knowledge, reliability.

Write your qualifications to —

John P. Lowe, Dist. Mgr.

c/o SHOWCASE CINEMAS

Worcester, Mass. 01608

Tomorrow Night

NATIONAL BLACK THEATRE

Barbara Ann Teer, Director

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28th - 8 p.m.

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM/UMASS

"An exasperating work, spectacularly brilliant in its concept and in much of its design!"

NY Times (9/17/72)

Tickets: $1.50 ($1 to UMass undergrads). Contact Fine Arts Council/125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0202.

Weekend

Films

BAD COMPANY

The first film directed by Robert Newman, one-half of the fine screenwriting team of Robert Benton and David Newman who also scripted this Civil War comedy about draft evaders. There is a charming performance by Jeff Bridges as the leader of a gang of runaways and thieving orphans. The script too has an accomplished sound to it, but Newman's direction debut is less than auspicious. It's slowly paced and too dependent upon the by now cliche sepia-toned view of the West. Benton and Newman include one delightful bit: a tribute to Joseph L. Mankiewicz, one of Hollywood's greatest screenwriters, in the character of the thieving Big Joe. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

BODY AND SOUL (1947)

A hard-hitting melodrama about a young man's rise from the slums to the top of the boxing world; it remains one of Hollywood's finest films about boxing. The dialogue is crisp and sharp, and the performances, especially those of John Garfield and Lili Palmer are amongst the finest to be seen in any film of the late Forties.

Amherst Folklore Center, Tuesday, 10/31, 7:30.

THE BOSTON STRANGLER (1968)

Sensationalism disguised as serious reporting; a fictional account of the crimes of Albert DeSalvo, the "alleged" Boston Strangler. Its hairbrained approach is to pass all sorts of fallacies, fables, and untruths about the Boston Strangler off as facts. It takes itself so seriously that you know none of it is. Tony Curtis as the Boston Strangler, with Henry Fonda. Directed by Richard Fleisher, it's filled with dialogue like this: "Was she raped?" The detective replies: "Then we've got a full-blown maniac on our hands." Gamble Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke College, Friday, 10/27, 7:30.

THE FEARLESS VAMPIRE KILLERS (1968)

Roman Polanski has all but disowned this 1967 film due to the careless editing the American version of this satire received. It is generally considered not his best work, especially with the needless cuts. The film is an often grisly black satire about vampires directed with the usual claustrophobic style Polanski's films are distinguished with. If the original cuts have been restored, the film will prove effective satire; otherwise, the holes are apparent. The only decent part Polanski's late wife Sharon Tate ever received. Mahar Auditorium, Saturday, 10/28, 7, 9, 11.

FREAKS (1932)

Tod Browning's often brilliant and chilling fable about a group of sideshow freaks who react with a vengeance when they feel infringed upon. The film has had a notorious history being barred for some thirty years from this country for Browning, by using real freaks as his cast, gave his film an unexpected reality which jarred the audience. It is often difficult to interpret, whether or not Browning's naive liberalism was meant as a parody. The film's conclusion, though, has the effect of a nightmare. Thompson 104, Friday, 10/27, 6:15, 8:45, 11:15.

FUNNY GIRL (1968)

Barbra Streisand won an Oscar for her perfectly tuned performance of Fanny Brice. Her's is one of those rare, mesmerizing screen portrayals which turns a lacklustre stage musical into a vastly entertaining film. It only suggests what might have been; the love story between Nick and Fanny and the dashing New York gambler Nick Arnstein is little more than filler between songs. Worse is the performance of Omar Sharif as Nick; as if their isn't enough trouble between Arabs and Jews. Streisand proved herself to be not only the supreme song stylist she has always been, but the best screen comedianne of our generation. Songs by Jules Styne and Bob Merrill. Directed by William Wyler. Palace, West Springfield.

THE GODFATHER

A straight-forward melodrama about the rise of a Mafia dynasty. Reverent and sympathetic to the exploits of the blood-letting Corleone family, the violence is seen as a means to incorporate identity. In all its use of old techniques, the film suggests a new realism and understanding of the ruthlessness and scope of the crime empire today. Marlon Brando as the family patriach takes a relatively small part and makes it memorably moving. His supporting cast, Al Pacino, James Cann, Sterling Hayden, are all competent. Directed by Francis Ford Coppolla, from the novel by Mario Puzo; an altogether extraordinary experience. Campus Cinema, Hadley; Jerry Jewis Cinemas, Northampton.

HEAT

The latest release from the Andy Warnol factory is written, directed, and photographed by Paul Morrisey (Flesh and Trash). The film starring Joe Dallesandro (Lonesome Cowboys and Trash) and Sylvia Miles (nominated for a Best Supporting Actress in Midnight Cowboy) is being likened to a 21-years later view of Sunset Boulevard only set in New York this time. Ms. Miles plays a much-married, middle-aged, B-movie actress with little talent but lots of body. Dallesandro plays his usual stud role with the little snitch being that in this film he was once a child star who finally made it big on a tv series called "The Big Ranch." The film also contains a fantastic performance by the late Andrea Feldman as a freaked out lesbian with an illegitimate child living with her lover. Was everybody's darling when premiered at the New York Film Festival recently. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

Judy Garland in two of her finest roles. In Meet Me In St. Louis, at the left, and as Dorothy in The Wizard Of Oz at the right. Both films are on campus next week.

KING KONG

"The eighth wonder of the world," as he was referred to, still remains one of the finest horror films ever made. The film concerns a Lloyd Thomas-type explorer who captures a giant ape and takes him to New York for exhibition. He breaks free and the city goes beserk. This is the original, uncut version including features sequences considered in poor taste when originally released. The film is quite often delightful and fascinating with some ingeneous special effects. Bruce Cabot and Fay Wray are featured. Campus Center Auditorium, Tuesday, 10/31, 7 and 9.

MEET ME IN ST. LOUIS (1944)

By 1944, when she was Esther Smith in Meet Me in St. Louis, Judy Garland was undeniably the most electric musical star in the business and Metro's biggest star. Under Minelli's direction the young Garland glowed. No other director understood and handled the Garland magic quite as well as her future husband in this timely and timeless classic. One of the few great musical films. Thompson 104, Sunday, 10/29, 7 and 9.

MELINDA

Another of the new black films which MGM has allowed this film to be pretty much a black enterprise, with the producing, directing, editing and of course acting being done by blacks. The plot involves a disc-jockey turned detective, who searches for the murderer of his girlfriend and nearly becomes a victim himself. A cut-above average script. Calvin Lockhart stars with Rosiland Cash in a decent effort in this new era of black cinema. Amherst Cinema, Amherst.

PORTNOY'S COMPLAINT

Richard Benjamin in this unfunny, prurient adaptation of Philip Roth's pornographic, funny novel. Alexander Portnoy recounds his sexual exploits from his adolescence to his early thirties to his psychiatrist. A horrible film; one which is more concerned with obtaining its R-rating than giving life to Roth's hilarious characters and situations. Script-writer Ernest Lehman makes his directoral debut and what a heavy-handed and plodding one it is. The New York Jewish Idiom is played to its hilt; you'd think it's Marjorie Morningstar. Badly played by Karen Black and Lee Grant is subordinate roles. Calvin Theater, Northampton.

REEFER MADNESS (1938)

A film about the horrors of marijuana. Uses expressions like "deadly scourge" and "marijuana addict." Stock shocker situations abound, and the finale contains two killings and a suicide. Campus Cinemas, Hadley. Thompson 102, Friday, 10/27, no times available, see ad.

THE SEVEN YEAR ITCH (1956)

Billy Wilder's pleasing film version of George Axelrod's mild Broadway comedy about a well-married man (Tom Ewell) who develops a wandering eye while his wife is on vacation. The object of his attention is the border in an adjacent apartment, played by Marilyn Monroe in one of her best screen portrayals. Some nice bits, deftly handled. One memorable bit: Marilyn standing above a subway grating when the train goes beneath. 20th Century Fox made a sixty-foot mock-up of Marilyn and placed it in Times Square to advertise the film. Academic Building, Hampshire College, Sunday, 10/29, 7:30.

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE

Kurt Vonnegut Jr.'s college classic was obediently transformed by George Roy Hill into a sleek, lifeless, and shallow film which time trips decades with ease, but never approaches the interesting implications about time and space. The story concerns an Army medic who jumps from the bombing of Dresden to Babbitt-like life in a Midwestern city to conjugal splendor in an interstellar penthouse. Vonnegut's point, it seems, is life but a random sampling of events and one should emphasize the good and ignore the bad. The film emphasizes the silly sort of satire about Middle America that young people would feel manic toward if it were aimed at them. Here they laugh. Worse is the power-of-positive-believing which is at the center of Vonnegut's argument. The film is admirably edited yet cold in its machine-like precision.

Campus Cinemas, Hadley; Academy of Music, Northampton.

SUNDAY, BLOODY, SUNDAY (1971)

John Schlesinger has had a career distinguished by fine films with remarkable performances. His latest film is remarkable in every possible way; beautifully played and written and directed with such subtlety that it approaches being a classic. It explores human relationsips with such care that it makes all other films parochial by comparison. The relationship explored is one between three people, two men and a woman. Bob Elkins, a young artist is having an affair with Alex, a young businesswoman and Dr. Daniel Hirsh, a middle-aged physician. Peter Finch gives the best performance by an actor in a film of last year as Hirsh and Glenda Jackson again proves she is one of the few current fine screen actresses. A beautiful film. The Student Union Ballroom, Thursday, 11/2, 7 and 9.

THX 1138 (1971)

The first film to come from Francis Ford Copolla's filmmaker's school in San Francisco was this striking but disappointing space epic. It presents us with a society where lovemaking is outlawed. Some of the effects are the best since 2001, but the story itself isn't developed much beyond its general concept. Sunday, Student Union Ballroom, Sunday, 10/29, 7 and 9.

TOP HAT (1935)

The most delightful and enduring of the Astaire-Rogers musicals of the 30s, with an agreeable wisp of plot and amusing if dated comedy dialogue handled by an expert team of supporting comics: Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore, Helen Broderick and Erik Rhodes. Irving Berlin's score, one of his best, includes 'The Piccolino', 'Cheek to Cheek' and 'Isn't it a Lovely Day' as well as the title number; and Astaire and Rogers are at their peak. Script by Dwight Taylor and Alan Scott, photography by DAVID Abel, direction by Mark Sandrich, production by Pandro S. Berman.

Campus Center Auditorium, Wednesday, 11/1, 9.

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY (1968)

Unquestionably one of the finest films of recent years and the best space epic ever. Stanley Kubrick's twelve million dollar Modern Odyssey is the surrealistic journey of Man's evolution, from Monkey to Man to Superman. The film is visually the most complex in recent years, a cosmic Marienbad and the special effects are stunning beyond belief. The music score ranges from Richard Strauss to Ligeti to Johann Strauss. In four-track stereo and ultrapanavision. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

THE WIZARD OF OZ (1939)

Despite decor which now seems vulgar, this well-loved film survives as Hollywood's best retelling of a fairy story, mainly because of the delightful score by Harold Arlen and E.Y. Harburg, and because Judy Garland, though actually too old for Dorothy, successfully portrayed the essential innocence and wonder which make such stories live. An excellent supporting cast included Ray Bolger as the Scarecrow, Jack Haley as the Tin Man, Bert Lahr as the Cowardly Lion, Margaret Hamilton as the Wicked Witch and Frank Morgan as the Wizard, Victor Fleming directed; the Technicolor which added so much at the time now seems garrish. Campus Center Auditorium, Wednesday, 11/2, 7 and 11.

YELLOW SUBMARINE (1968)

A fanciful and animated visual odyssey that features cartoon caricatures of the Beatles and is supplied with plenty of their songs. The film concerns Pepperland, home of the Lonely Hearts Club Band, and the submarine escape that occurs when Pepperland is attacked by the Blue Meanies. The film is an ingenuous visual trip that provides plenty of action and contains a good amount of clever comedy. Directed by George Running. Thompson 104, Saturday, 10/28, 6, 8, 10, 12.

J. Elliott Group

FRIDAY NITE

Oct. 27

9 p.m. - 1 a.m.

BLUEWALL

AMHERST CINEMA

256-5126
24 hour phone

Thru Tuesday

at 7:00 & 9:00

YOUR KIND OF BLACK FILM

MELINDA

Wed. to Sun. 50¢ Discount with Student I.D.

Mon. & Tues. Adults - $1.00

Skin Flick Tonight at 11:30

ENJOY®

A FRESH LOOK AT MARITAL LOVE

All Seats — $1.50

THE FIRST AMENDMENT (AMENDED)

Letters To The Editor

Devaluation Of Life

To The Editor:

1971 U.S. Census Bureau figures record the steady decline of the national maternal mortality rate. In 1940 there were 376 maternal deaths per 100,000 live births. Later figures are: 1950-83.3, 1960-37.1, 1968-27.4. The current record for Massachusetts is even more impressive-15 maternal deaths per 100,000 live births.

Early this month, Mr. Gordon Chase of the New York City Department of Public Health, reporting on the two-year New York City abortion experience, announced a reduction in maternal mortality to 37 deaths per 100,000 live births.

Thus, as of June 30, 1972, following an estimated 402,059 abortions, New York City is running a maternal death rate more than double what it is in Massachusetts without a liberal abortion statute and precisely where the United States stood twelve years ago. By current standards, this is a mediocre record.

Similarly, an announced reduction in infant mortality to 20 per 1000 live births, by dint of a policy susceptible to interpreation as "killing them before they can die", puts New York City about where the nation was, without the trouble with abortion, in 1968 (21.8). The 1968 Massachusetts figure was 19.3.

In reporting maternal deaths from legal abortion, New York departs from the standard practice of expressing maternal deaths in terms of live births. News releases quote a figure of "4.6 per 100,000". It must be realized that this is 4.6 maternal deaths per 100,000 dead births (i.e. abortions)

New York City's Department of Public Health has filed reports of 18 maternal deaths and 73 live-born fetuses among approximately 400,000 legal abortions. Expressed in conventional terms, the mortality for this series is 18 maternal deaths for 73 live births.

The New York ratio of legal vs. illegal abortion deaths is running as follows: 1970-71-legal 8, illegal 7; 1971-72-legal 10, illegal 6.

Massachusetts' maternal mortality rate of 15/10,000 comprises all deaths from complications of pregnancy, delivery and lying-in, including deaths from therapeutic and criminal abortion. Vital statistics of the Commonwealth list recent abortion deaths, (all types) as: 1966-2; 1967-1; 1968-4.

This outstanding maternity record is no accident. For one thing, it reflects good law enforcement and maintenance of high public health standards. For another, it embodies superlative obstetrical standards-the cumulative product of dedication of physicians and nurses from one generation to the next to a tradition of safe conduct for mother and child for over three centuries.

Massachusetts voters confronted with a referendum on the repeal of abortion laws would do well to ponder the possible consequences of departure from this tradition. For instance, does keeping hospital residents busy performing abortions train good obstetricians? If we devaluate pre-natal life, will future mothers, who are little schoolgirls now, know the same security that comes from total, uncompromising commitment to welfare of both mother and child which their mothers have enjoyed?

Henry G. Armitage, Jr., M.D.

The Choice Is Clear

To The Editor:

On November 7 voters in the Second Hampshire District will elect 2 representatives to the General Court to act as our spokesmen for the next 2 years. The choice this year is a crucial one. We need dynamic, full-time representation in Boston. Nat Reed is highly qualified to deal with the issues affecting this area.

The economic structure of the district is in large part related to higher education. There are about 6500 people employed in classified and professional positions in the 3 colleges and the University. The climate for the maintenance and growth of quality educational programs is, at least for the University, determined almost exclusively by the Legislature and the Governor. Nat Reed is a professional educator; he is familiar with all aspects of higher education. His expertise can provide the vital link between the University and the Boston budget makers.

Another critical problem in the district, as well as in most parts of the state, is the local property tax. In each town, a large proportion of the property tax goes to support our local schools. Complete and factual knowledge of state programs pertaining to local school funding is essential for the most economy in local school taxation. Nat Reed has served with distinction on the Amherst and Regional School Committees for the past 6 years. His experience can be used throughout the district in the development of quality local education with the minimum possible effect on the local property tax.

We are all concerned with the humane care of the less fortunate members of the community. In our district the Belchertown State School, even with some modest improvements in recent years, demands support on an extensive basis to bring it up to the standards generally thought to be acceptable. Nat Reed has already demonstrated his concern for programs at the School. Through his efforts a Student Intern Program was restored to their budget and this all important program will continue. This is typical of the type of representation and action we can expect from Nat Reed.

To me, the choice is clear. Nat Reed has the experience and expertise for effective representation of the Second Hampshire District.

The Second Hampshire District needs Nat Reed.

Donald N. Maynard

Women's Directory

To The Editor:

This is to expand on an item mentioned in Wednesday's article on the Student Senate Women's Committee.

The Women's Directory is being put together at this moment. Any woman who wishes to be listed in it is asked to send a note to Mira Marshall c/o Student Senate, Campus Center, listing her name, address, phone, and activities and interests. In about two weeks we'll start correlating the information (cross-referencing activities), then print it and make it available to all who wish a copy. (If you stop by one of the Women's Centers, forms can also be picked up and left off there.)

Mira Marshall
Women's Committee

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing eith for content or space according to the judgment of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Editorial Points

Overheard in the Collegian office: How about "Anybody But Tackeff" for the Editorial Pages?

***

Speaking of Matt Tackeff, there WILL NOT be any "Anybody But McGovern" buttons distributed in the Collegian office.

***

After two hours of talk on the topics of their agenda yesterday the Faculty Senate postponed talk on the rhetoric requirement until next week due to "the lateness of the hour" (6 P.M.). We just want them to know that it was just as late for the students who politely sat there for two hours, too.

Ms. Morgan's Clarification

Dear People:

First, please do not print this letter with the sexist form of address, "Dear Sir," but rather use the form I use above.

This is a note of clarification in response to the article by Jeannetee Martineau in your October 10th issue, reporting on an address I gave at UMass the previous Friday. I do understand the difficulty of notetaking in a large auditorium, and the pressure of trying to mold a coherent piece of reportage from such hurried notes, so this should not be taken as a criticism of Ms. Martineau, but rather as a "setting straight of the record."

There were a number of errors in the article, but I wish to reply to only the more serious ones.

1) I did not say that Rape Crisis Centers already existed in New York, Boston, etc. Rather, I said that the original "pilot project", as it were, does exist in Washington, D.C., and that others are now in the planning stages for major cities. As of this moment, however, sisters searching for such Centers elsewhere than in D.C. will, unfortunately, be disappointed. But not for long, I trust.

2) I did NOT say that the new Feminist Movement in Spain is "led by a concerned, left-liberal, radical priest." Good GRIEF. I did say that feminists in Spain have to combat not only the fascism (entrenched) of the State and the Church, but also the male-led and priest-led underground movement there which has functioned since the War. In other words, even "left-liberal priests" who do work with the traditional leftist underground, place themselves as enemies of the new feminists there, because of such issues as abortion and birth control. My meaning was the opposite of your reportage's.

3) I did not imply that Lesbians in the Feminist Movement have "created a separatist radical feminism and a backlash." I said that because of the sexism of many "straight" women in the Movement, many Lesbian sisters were polarized into working separately solely within Lesbian groups, but that the barriers were beginning to break down politically, and women were moving back to working all together again, a very hopeful sign, not only for survival, but for victory.

I would appreciate your printing this letter in its entirety, since the points to which I reply are serious, and I am committed to women hearing and reading the truth about everything–and feel especially responsible that my own positions are reported honestly and accurately. Thank you.

Robin Morgan

The Jewish Vote

To The Editor:

The recent attempt by Nixonians to capture the so-called "Jewish Vote" because of the President's supposed goodwill and deeds toward Israel infuriates all thinking Jews as a blatant accusation of divided loyalties and indifference toward the all-encompassing problems that are befalling America and the world. There is no monolithic "Jewish vote"; however, Jews have traditionally supported candidates and parties that represented all the people - not special privilege. Jews have been (and will remain) on the side of those who chose life, who pursued justice, and who followed the path of peace. The following letter, received from Rabbi Abraham J. Heschel (noted Jewish author and Professor of Jewish Ethics and Mysticism at the Jewish Theological Seminary) should help clarify the election choices for all people of faith and conscience.

Avraham Allen Frydman

The forthcoming election confronts every one of us as American citizens and as Jews with a truly momentous decision. Our country today is in a state of profound moral and political crisis. In a free society, some are guilty–all are responsible. At this serious moment of American history, I feel a deep sense of responsibility for the moral decline and confusion in our sense of priorities.

If the prophets Isaiah and Amos were to appear in our midst, would they accept the corruption in high places, the indifferent way in which the sick, the poor, and the old are treated? Would they condone the indifference to gun control legislation that has allowed some of the finest of our national leaders to be shot dead? Would not our prophets be standing with those who protest against the war in Vietnam, the decay of our cities, the hypocrisy and falsehood that surround our present administration, even at the highest level?

The Jewish people does not recognize governments of men as sanctified; it is God's law that demands of each of us the compassion to regard our fellow men as our brothers. Only if we are prepared to criticize and correct the wrongs we commit against each other will society be perfected.

Surely it is the duty of any religious leader to help change a society that tolerates a rising level of violence; that ignores our common humanity; that calmly accepts civilian slaughter in far-off lands; that glorifies killing on movie and TV screens and calls it entertainment; that makes it easy for men of all shades of sanity to acquire whatever weapons and ammunition they desire.

George McGovern's call for a revival of our national values echoes the demands of Israel's ancient prophets. By word and by deed, Senator McGovern is committed to the idea that "setting the moral tone of this nation is the most serious responsibility of the President." Regrettably, the same cannot be said of Mr. Nixon.

We must elect George McGovern to the presidency of the United States because the needs of America and the values of our Jewish heritage demand it.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Abraham J. Heschel

Room To Move

UMass Alcohol Use Up

In the two semesters of 1971-1972, 286 people were arrested by the campus police for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol (45), possession of alcoholic beverages by a minor (34), and drunkeness (207). In 1970-1971, 168 people were arrested for the same charges, an increase of 70% of people adversly affected by alcohol use.

In the month of April 1972, the Blue Wall used 266 kegs, an increase of 8%.

The following items are taken from the National Council on Alcoholism, Inc.

1. Alcohol is a mood-changing drug, as are marijuana, heroin, cocaine, barbituates and amphetamines.

2. The alcoholic is addicted to alcohol and therefore an addict. He takes alcohol as a drug.

3. Dr. Roger Egeberg, Assistant Secretary for Health and Scientific Affairs for Health, Education and Welfare, has declared alcoholism the number one health problem affecting 6.5 million Americans. Researchers at George Washington University set the figure at 9 million, with millions more on the verge of a serious drinking problem.

4. Were 6.5 million Americans to contract a disease, an epidemic would be declared and the country would be "in a state of emergency". Abuse of hard drugs and marijuana has nowhere reached the proportions of alcoholism, yet concern for alcoholism is far less than for hard drugs.

5. Alcoholism is a progressive disease. Alcoholics are sick, just as people suffering from heart disease are sick.

6. One in every 13 employees is an alcoholic. Losses in industry because of alcoholism have been computed at 6 billion dollars per year. The total cost to the nation and the human loss to individuals, families, and communities is incalcable.

7. Every problem drinker adversely affects an average of 4 other persons in his family, and more than 16 friends and business associates in the community. Therefore, at the very least, 130 million Americans are affected by alcoholism. This does not even include the alcoholic himself.

8. The "skid row" alcoholic represents less than 5% of the total number of alcoholics. More than 95% of all alcoholics are found in homes, factories, offices and communities - they have families and are employable. A ' rge number are to be found in executive suites, as well as in the arts.

9. 50% of all fatal accidents occuring on the roads today involve alcohol. 50% of those involve an alcoholic.

10. The FBI reports that every third arrest in the United States involves public drunkenness.

11. More than 95% of short term prisoners serve time in jail because of alcoholism.

12. One in three suicides involves an alcoholic.

13. Among Federal civil employees the estimated annual cost for alcoholism in the Federal Government runs between $275,000,000 and $550,000,000. Savings from alcoholism programs in the Federal Government could run from $135,000,000 to $280,000,000 a year.

14. Ninety percent of industry's alcoholic employees range from age 30 to 55 and have been on their jobs for 12 to 20 years.

15. Alcoholism ranks among the major national health threats, along with cancer, mental illness and heart disease.

16. There are some 80,000,000 people in this country who drink. Of these, an estimated 6,500,000 are alcoholics.

17. Rehabilitation, education and community services are the greatest forces operating today for the control and prevention of alcoholism in the home, on the job and in the community.

Taken from: National Council On Alcoholism, Inc. 2 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10016.

Meeting Aired

Radio station WAMH (89.5 FM), the student radio station at Amherst College, will broadcast today a Symposium on Local Elections at 8 p.m.

Symposium with a "Meet the Press" format. Four local candidates for State Representative will be present at the event, to be held in the Converse Hall Assembly room and broadcast live. They are Republicans Nathaniel Reed and Gerry Whitlock, and Democrats James Collins and James Nolen.

The event is open to the public. Questions by news media representatives and the public should be submitted before the symposium to Amherst College sophomore Gregory Harper, WAMH, Program Director, 253-497 or 542-2224, or to Hampshire College student James Odell at 542-5714.

HALLOWEEN FANCIES
Cider & Donuts
Dunkin Donuts
132 King St.
Northampton
Open 24 hours a day

PRAKTIKLY WORNE
Venders Catering to the New American Shopper
4-8 GREEN STREET, NORTHAMPTON
FINE NEW AND USED CLOTHING SOLD
!! fashionable garments & accessories — many re-cycled !!
• LOWEST PRICES • GREAT SAVINGS
• EXCELLENT CONDITION • HAND-CHOSEN jeans · denim jackets · peasant blouses · work shirts · back packs · long denim skirts · jerseys · handbags coveralls · hats · velvets · leather halter tops · navy white pants & middy tops · Sunglasses · cowboy shirts · Wallace Berry shirts · moccasins
MON. thru SAT. 10-6

Grad Schools Offered Minority Student Aid

A new program designed to help the nation's graduate schools seek out potential students from minority groups is underway this fall.

Called the Minority Graduate Student Locater Service, the program is offered by Educational Testing Service. ETS estimates that about 10,000 to 15,000 students could initially use the new service, which is offered free to both students and institutions this year.

According to J. Bradley Williams, ETS director of the project, "One of the problems facing graduate schools seeking to increase enrollment of students from racial and ethnic minorities is that of identifying potential students."

Now, students will have a chance to voluntarily complete a special 17-item questionnaire as one step towards entering graduate school.

Information about the academic interests and goals of Black, American-Indian, Asian-American, and Spanish or Mexican-American students who wish to pursue graduate level education, will be available to those institutions seeking to bolster minority enrollment.

Admissions officers may then contact students directly and invite the applications of those whose particular interests could be served by their schools' graduate offerings.

The locater service is open to second-term college juniors, seniors, and college graduates.

Nearly 2,200 counselors at undergraduate schools across the country have received information about the program and can supply questionnaires to interested students, whatever their racial background.

The student response form is also available with information bulletins describing the Graduate Record Examinations (GRE). But ETS said GRE scores are not included in the locater service and that a student need not take the exams in order to participate in the locater service.

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT
VILLAGE INN
Tilt. 2 a.m.
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO
DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2518

Notices

ANIMAL SCIENCE CLUB
Beryl Allan of Wolfgang Kennels in Jaffery, N.H. will speak on the history of sled dogs Oct. 30 at 6:30 in Grinnel Arena. Everyone is welcome.

BABYSITTING
Need a babysitter? Once again, Gorman Babysitting Service is here to help. Both male and female sitters available. For further info call Bev 546-6458.

BIBLE AND BROTHERHOOD
First Baptist, Amherst Luncheon and Bible Brotherhood class meets every Sun. after service across from Newman Center. Good food, good fellowship, all welcome.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS
Halloween party for Belchertown residents to be held Sat. Oct. 28, 1:30-3:30 in 168-172 CC. The bus is not running Sat. Bring a mask and a friend-please attend.

CHESS TOURNAMENT
Tomorrow UMass will host the '72 Franklin-Hampshire Closed Chess Championship, CC 804-808. Registration closes 9:45 a.m. Sat. For details Jim, 387 Hills So., 546-9479 after 9 tonight.

CLOTHING AND INTERIOR DESIGN MAJORS
Get involved! There's a Clothing and Interior Design Liaison Comm. meeting Mon., Oct. 30 at 6:30 p.m. in Skinner Lounge. Come and find out what it's all about!

COLLEGE CHURCH BUS
8:48 Newman Center, 8:50 Waiting Station, 8:51 Hamlin House, 8:56 U. Dr. by Emerson, 9:15 College Church and Sun. School, 10:30 Worship Service.

CONCERNED JEWISH STUDENTS
5-College area meeting in Nantucket Rm. (S.U.) 7:30 p.m.

COUNTRY COMFORT COFFEE HOUSE
Coffee House Sat. 10/28, 8 p.m. Crabtree Basement featuring Mike O'Donnell, Eddie Vincent, John Sherkley, Cliff Hagberg and more. All welcome. Free.

HELP SAVE OUR WORLD
Deposit bundled newsprint and corrugated cardboard at the Sanitary Landfill, Rt. 47, No. Sunderland. Ask attendant for info. Make our first recycling program work!

MATH MAJORS
Dave Foulis will speak on "Empirical Logic" at the Junior Colloquium next Tues. at 4:00 in Colloquium Rm. Arnold. Coffee and cookies served at 3:30 in Math Lounge.

MELVILLE COFFEEHOUSE
All music people welcome. In the Melville Rec Room at 8:00 Sat., 28th, free, of course!

NEWMAN CLUB
General meeting of the Newman Club Sun. night at 8:00 p.m. If you're interested in what we're doing, come and see us.

OUTING CLUB
Happy Haunting in Knox Cave! Meeting Mon. night at 6:30 in 165 CC. There will be a slide show. All invited.

PHILOSOPHY LECTURE
Richard Cartwright, Prof. of Philosophy at MIT, will deliver a talk "Scattered Objects" on Oct. 27 at 3:30 in 804-808 CC.

SKY DIVE
Last Fall recruitment meeting next Wed. at 8 p.m. CC but you can find us every weekend at Turners Falls Airport or RSO 318.

SOUTHWEST FILM SERIES
The film "Malcolm X Speaks" will be shown tonight in Hamden D.C. at 7:30.

STUDENT STRUGGLE FOR SOVIET JEWRY
Meeting 7:30 Norfolk rm. (S.U.). Discussion of N.Y. trip and future plans.

UNICEF DRIVE
Give a little, give to Unicef Collections, Mon., Oct. 30 from 10-3 outside Hatch, Bookstore and Bluewall. Mon. nite in dorms 6-9. Sponsored by Greeks.

LOST
Orange and blue macrame key chain w/2 keys. Contact Janet 546-6082.
2 rings, 1 pearl, 1 light green birthstone in ladies room near Hatch. Please return to Lost and Found or call Donna, 6-4331.
Blue and white tweed suitcase behind Patterson Fri. 10/21. Call 6-9561.

FOUND
House key found Wed. in front of Goessman (on green flower chain). Call Nancy 253-5545.
Brown horn rim glasses, scratched lenses, in O.H. area. 546-4130 between 5-6 p.m.

ENGAGEMENTS
Ellen Zauslaw, '75, Patterson to Barry Halpern, '74, Patterson.
Loro Filanowski, '74, Pi Beta Phi to Tim Maki, '73, Phi Sigma.
Betsy Timmerman, '73, Puffton to Brent Willes, '74, Lewis.
Anne Cocivera, '73, Emerson to George Ball, '72, Wakefield.

Weather
(9) 256-6714

UMass Police
5-2121

"Cronopios"
is coming
An Alternative Bookshop

DMH Survey Shows Students Start Drinking In High School

BOSTON (AP) - More than 50 per cent of Massachusetts' high school students have been drunk during the past year, according to a survey by the state Department of Mental Health, and "most of those who get drunk use other dangerous drugs as well."

The survey, conducted by the department's Division of Drug Rehabilitation, indicated that nearly all Massachusetts' high school students have already taken their first drink of alcohol.

The department said in a statement that the survey included more than 14,000 of the state's 400,000 students in grades nine through 12.

It revealed, according to the statement, that 92.7 per cent have used alcohol; 59.4 per cent have been intoxicated during the past year, and 40.9 per cent have used drugs in the past year.

Of those intoxicated during the past year, the statement said, 61.6 per cent had also used drugs. Of those not intoxicated, the report continued, only 12.6 per cent reported drug use.

The report found that by the ninth grade, 88.4 per cent of the youngsters have had a drink; 46.8 per cent have been drunk and 29.9 per cent have used drugs.

By the senior year, the study said, 96 per cent have had a drink; 68.6 per cent have been drunk and 48.7 per cent have used drugs.

At all grade levels, the survey showed, marijuana is the most widely used drug. Use of marijuana was reported by 38.9 per cent of the students, the statement said, and more than half of these reported using more potent drugs as well.

BELL'S PIZZA ART!!
HOT OVEN GRINDERS
Free Delivery on Campus
Call 256-8011 253-9051

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.
They must already be registered.
2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____
(Signature) _____ (Date) _____
Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.
5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

What does it take to make a HUNGRY-U sandwich?
IT TAKES TOP QUALITY MEAT PRODUCTS LIKE: ROAST BEEF, TURKEY SALAMI, HAM, PASTRAMI, ITALIAN SWEET SAUSAGE, PEPPER STEAK AND TUNA FISH SERVED ON ONE OF OUR OVER-SIZED ITALIAN BREAD ROLLS... ADD TO IT DELICIOUS SLICES OF PROVOLONE OR AMERICAN CHEESE THEN TOP WITH ANY COMBINATION OF OUR DELICIOUS GARDEN FRESH TOMATOES OR ONIONS, PICKLES AND HOT PEPPERS AND YOUR FAVORITE DRESSING
103 N. PLEASANT AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 256-0350

CEQ

Farm Tax On Ballot

Besides voting for President, Vice-President and other Representatives on November 7th, voters will also have the opportunity to vote on questions (referenda). This section of the ballot is often overlooked or considered unimportant. However, this November 7th, there are some very important questions.

In particular, a YES vote on Referendum #1 will amend the state Constitution and will empower the state legislature to draw up a law that will ease the burden of real estate taxes on agricultural and horticultural lands. Assessors would be able to give preferential valuations on farmlands.

At present, all property must be assessed at its full market value, regardless of its present use. This allows a farm in the midst of a housing development to be taxed as housing lots. Thus the extra financial burden forces the farmer to sell. Large areas are then developed without intervening open space as an aesthetic and recreational benefit to the community.

In practice, many town assessors already practice land use assessment or preferential assessment. The consitutional amendment would make the practice legal.

Support for this amendment is becoming widespread. Rural and urban people alike understand the value of open farmland. Hedgerows are valuable to wildlife. Farm woodlands and crops are important in reducing air pollution and provide the landscape with dynamic variety. Also, open farmland contributes to maintaining an underground water table.

Farmers are rapidly selling out to high bidding shopping centers and housing developments. The Massachusetts Land League reports that operating farms decreased to one sixth of their numbers in 1945 (from 38,000 to 6,200) and cropland has dwindled by one third (from 626,000 to 235,000 acres).

Proper safeguards must be set up by the legislature after passage of the amendment. Agricultural and horticultural uses must be clearly defined so that preferential assessment applies only to the working farmer and not the real estate speculator.

The passage of Referendum #1 is a step in the right direction. Perhaps all open land that is not classified as farmland can someday be given preferential treatment. At best, however, the amendment will only buy some time, for some farmers, and some land. It is no complete panacea to our problem of rapidly spreading shopping centers and subdivisions.

Another YES vote, on Referendum #5 will enact the Environmental Bill of Rights. This would afford Constitutional protection for all citizens to enjoy clean air, water, etc. It would allow citizens the right of court action in controlling and maintaining environmental quality.

For more information visit our office in Room 124 of the Campus Center or you could write us at R.S.O. #347 Campus Center, and we'll mail you the information.

Contraception For Commuters

The third discussion hour in the Commuter Health Education Series will be held Tuesday, at noon in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. The talk will be on "How to Take the Worry Out of Being Close," and will relate to many of the psychological, physiological, and factual aspects of contraception.

The speaker this week will be Mrs Jane Zapka, Director of Health Education for the University Health Services. Mrs. Zapka received her B.S. in Zoology from Skidmore and her Masters of Science in Public Health Education from the University of Massachusetts.

She will also discuss the social and personal dynamics of family planning as they relate to students.

WE HAVE IT ALL

FINE DINNERS

ITALIAN AND AMERICAN FOOD OUR SPECIALITY.

THE BEST IN ENTERTAINMENT

THE RELAXING MUSIC OF PAUL McKINLEY.

GREAT WINES

By the Glass, Carafe, or Bottle

SUPERB CHEESES

A Complete Selection From Around the World.

WHAT MORE COULD YOU ASK FOR?

THE CHEQUERS

University Drive Reservations Accepted.

The clearest choice for a generation

So McGovern can't win, eh? Where have you heard that before?

In the primaries last Spring, that's where.

But you fooled the political experts and rewrote the history books. You provided the manpower and womanpower for the largest, smoothest, toughest vote-canvassing operation this country had ever seen.

Now it's time to do it again. And the job this Fall is even more important. For the choice between Nixon and McGovern is the clearest choice voters have had for a generation.

McGovern has opposed the bombing of Indochina, while Nixon has been inflicting the explosive equivalent of 7 Hiroshima atom bombs a month on that already devastated area.

Nixon believes in putting people out of work in order to hold down prices. His policies have put 2 million more people out of work. McGovern believes that there should be a job for everyone who wants to work, with the U.S. Government itself as the employer of last resort.

Nixon started his campaign with $10 million in secret money. McGovern's campaign is financed almost entirely by contributions of $5 to $25 from the people.

Nixon has nominated conservatives and mediocrities to the United States Supreme Court. One or two more Nixon appointments if he is re-elected, and you'll live with a heavy-handed Nixon court for the rest of your life. McGovern has pledged to appoint a woman and members of racial and ethnic minorities, and will appoint highly qualified liberals.

Ralph Nader says the Nixon Administration is "the most corrupt in our history." The late Robert Kennedy called George McGovern "the most decent man in the Senate."

McGovern wants the millionaires and the large corporations to start paying their fair share of taxes. Nixon wants to maintain the status quo.

Get an absentee ballot if you need one. Get some money together to help us make get-out-the-vote phone calls. And get together with your local McGovern Committee to find out how you can help.

You started this campaign. It's up to you to finish it.

Send money while there's still time!
Help us buy get-out-the-vote phone calls.

Age of McGovern Box 100, A-M, Washington, D.C. 20005

YES, I want to help get out the vote for George McGovern. Enclosed is my contribution of:

☐ $5 to pay for 50 phone calls to voters ☐ $25 to pay for 250 phone calls to voters
☐ $10 to pay for 100 phone calls to voters ☐ _____ (whatever you can give)

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

If you are currently employed, the following information is also needed for record purposes only under the new political contributions act:

Occupation _____ Name of Company _____ City & State _____

A COPY OF OUR REPORT FILED WITH THE APPROPRIATE SUPERVISORY OFFICE IS (OR WILL BE) AVAILABLE FOR PURCHASE FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20402

The Age of McGovern
Dedicated to raising $1 million for a nationwide get-out-the-vote drive

Authorized and paid for by Age of McGovern Campaign Committee • 201 East 42nd Street • New York, N.Y. 10017 • Shane Davis, Treasurer

Project Ten Sponsors Talks, Circus

Project 10, the self-styled "experimental college" for the campus, will host three events in the next two weeks which are open to the public.

A debate on "Victimless Crimes"--those of prostitution, homosexuality, abortion, etc.--will be held Monday at 7 p.m., in the main lounge of Pierpont. It is sponsored jointly by the campus Debate Union and Project 10.

Professor Samuel Bowles, an economist at Harvard University who is visiting Amherst on sabbatical this semester, will lead a discussion on "Schooling as a Capitalist Institution--a Marxist Perspective" Thursday at 8 p.m. Bowles is a member of the Union of Radical Political Economy and is one of the most widely published of young radical economists today. The seminar will be in the Pierpont main lounge.

The last event is called a "Zen Circus" and its motto for the event (to run on Friday and Saturday, November 10 and 11,) is "run away and join the circus."

Beginning with a circus parade down the mall of Southwest, the event should include everything from holograms to massage, theatre, folk dancing, classical and jazz music, film and videotape, a light-show, food, and the ribbon-cutting for what is hoped to become a permanent art gallery in Pierpont.

If you are interested in becoming involved in the art gallery see Wendy Pollock in Pierpont 412 or call her at 546-5264.

If you're interested in film/-video, see Steve Leed at 425 Pierpont, or call him at 546-5275.

Infirmary (In An Emergency) 5-2671

IT'S YOUR CAMPUS CENTER

11 spaces on the Campus Center/Student Union Governing Board.

Today is the deadline - - - - apply Student Senate office, 1st level, C.C.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 Comet wagon, 6 cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work, 549-6335 eves.

1971 Fender Reverb amp. Good for harp and guitar and also a Altec Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279.
tf10-27

1961 Chevy Wagon. 327 w/holly four barrel, 4 F-70-14 Gd. yr. polyglass tires, ps/pb, new battery. Great winter car. $250.00. 546-7645.
tf10-30

1967 Malibu, low mileage. Asking $950. Call 253-2797.
tf10-30

For sale 1956 GMC school bus. Gas heater, stove, ref, lamp. Good condition $150. Call 542-4720, 9-5.
tf10-27

1960 Volvo PV544, $150. Call 546-7932.
tf10-27

1969 Fiat 850 Spider Convert. Red with black top; 23,000 miles. $1,000 or best offer. Call 584-2564, Ask for Bob.
tf10-31

(AW C'mon guys, honest Al) is nearly (broke)! Save now during my (annual going out of business) sale 58 Ford panel truck (no rust)! good tires all new brakes and front end. This (little beauty) runs dandy but it sure do need rings I'm crying right now as I write down this ridiculously low price $125! Takes it! 1-629-5294.
tf11-2

1963 Chevy Imp st., ps., has 1965 engine good running condition, priced for $150 or best offer. Contact Anil at 256-6195 after 5 p.m.
tf10-30

1970 Simca $900 or best offer 32 miles per gallon in great shape, call Joe Tripp evenings 546-8024.
tf11-2

'67 MGB-GT, grey, new exhaust system, r.&h. wire wheels, radial good for winter. excellent condition, call 665-1185 keep trying.
tf10-31

IHC metro van mailtruck equipped as a camper needs work best offer. Call Spfld. after 5 p.m. 739-7988.
tf10-31

1967 BMW 4dr. Sedan nw exhaust syst revalve job nw radials $1500 or best off. Call 773-9668 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
tf11-3

1970 Simca for sale, in great shape, 32 miles per gallon. Must sell, need money. Call Joe evening, 546-8024.
tf11-1

68 Cougar 302, auto, ps, ~~many extras~~. Excellent condition, will consider trade & cash. Call Ray 256-6051.
tf10-30

1962 Oldsmobile, Super 88. Runs great. Must sell, $200. Fall inspected, 59,000 miles. Call Eric, 546-7781.
tf10-30

1969 Volkswagen Beetle. Very good condition, asking $900, 253-2815.
tf11-1

1966 Chevy Sedan, fall inspected. Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-1421.
tf11-2

1965 Mustang, V8, Standard 3 speed, snow tires and rims. Good condition. Call 545-0112 or 546-2779. Keep trying.
tf10-30

1971 Camaro, 3 spd., std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188.
tf11-3

LOST

A bright yellow folder. Contents for a math class. Please — I need it. Call Hannah 546-6717 or take to lost & found.
tf10-30

Gray cat with white bib belly & paws. Reward offered please call 256-8062.
11-1

Lost — English cigarette case in CCA Tuesday night. Reward $10. Phone Amos Gileadi 545-2711, 8-4 p.m.
tf10-30

Lost set of keys for Firebird. Need badly. Call 546-1726, ask for Larry or leave message.
tf11-1

RIDE WANTED

Ride desperately needed to and from W. Springfield Mon.-Fri. 9 a.m. & 5 p.m. will share expenses.
tf10-30

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail. Nov. 1. Room in Puffton. Own room, everything incl. $70/mo. Call Lester or Neal 549-6399.
tf10-31

Room for rent in Farmhouse. For female, $70/mo., own room 5 mi. from Amherst in Belchtn. 1/4 mi. off Rt. 9. Avail. Nov. 1 or sooner. 253-7076.
tf10-31

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548.
tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3601.
tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-525-4436.
tf11-17

Part time, Foreign & American - light body & mechanical repair. Reasonable rates. 323-7808.
tf11-1

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1140.
tf11-9

Passport photos, fast fast service, Lang's photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-9667. Located in center of town near Wearhouse.
tf11-6

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female graduate student preferred to share apartment. Walking distance/bus service to UMass — own room $90.00 a month. Call 549-1137.
tf10-31

Won't discriminate — 2 roommates male or female wanted, own bedroom clean. Undergrad $80/mo. 345 Puffton Vil. Frank.
tf10-27

Own room in very large apt. near Smith & 5 College bus, 3rd floor. Quiet. Interesting room shapes. 584-1500, $67.50.
tf10-30

Roommate wanted. Squire Village. 665-3088. Male or Female. Ask for Tom or Dave.
tf10-27

Female roommate wanted to share Puffton Apt. starting Nov. 1. $85 a month. Call 545-2112 between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Ask for Sally in 315.
tf10-30

ENTERTAINMENT

Jeremy Steig and his flute come to the Folklore Center, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 27 and 28. Concert begins at 8:00. Info. 253-9261.
tf10-27

Dave Mason, Oct. 27 at A.I.C. Springfld. 8 p.m. Butova Gym. Tickets, Student Activities Office.
tf10-27

"Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" Find out FRI. OCT. 27, at 7:30 and 9:00 Mahar Aud.
tf10-27

Southwest concert Saturday with Keady, Smithline, Baltimore & Anderson Hampden D.C. Sat. night 8-12:30 50¢.
tf10-27

Luther Johnson Chicago Blues Band is comin' to the Bluewall Sat. night Oct. 28, from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Don't miss 'em.
tf10-27

October-fest at the Bluewall Thurs-sat. — German band and all.
tf10-27

BEATLES "YELLOW SUBMARINE" PLUS TRUE ROMANCE "GOING STEADY" "HAPPENS SAT. EVE. OCT. 28, THOMP. 101, 6-8-10-Midnite!
tf10-27

HALLOWEEN BRINGS "THE FREAKS" & "TIME TRAVELERS" IN COLOR THIS FRIDAY EVENING, THOMPSON 101, 6:15 - 8:45 - 11:15, COME MEET THE CROWD!
tf10-27

Sharon Tate stars in Roman Polanski's "Fearless Vampire Killers" at 7-9-11 on Sat. Oct. 28 in Mahar. Also 2 Road Runners. 75¢.
tf10-27

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1971 Honda 350 CL. Excellent condition, 5,000 miles. Only $500.00. 1-734-8335 anytime.
tf10-27

1972 Honda CB-350 perfect cond. Must sacrifice 6000 well maintained miles $600. 253-2776.
tf10-31

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $100 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine-runs very dependable. Asking $150-367-2762.
tf11-3

'70 Honda CL 450 ex cond. Buy now and save $$-must sell to stay in school $650. or best offer. Call Bob 546-1728.
tf11-1

Last call! 1971 Honda CL350 ideal on/off road bike meticulously maintained, helmets, chain, etc. $650 fall price, 545-1399 a.m. 253-2112 p.m.
tf11-2

HELP WANTED

Qualified registered nurse for coronary care, and/or nursing supervisor for full time position on 3rd shift. Please contact Mrs. Alice Goethel, R.N., director of nursing service, Wing Memorial Hospital, Wright Street, Palmer, Mass. Phone 1-283-7651, Ext. 83.
tf11-2

Work for largest environmental movement in U.S. part & full time positions. Call 253-7393 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. daily.
tf10-30

Housekeeper needed, female for wife & daughter. Light housekeeping, 1 hr., $40 week. Call 217-5162 after 5.
tf10-27

Alternative free radio production conforming only serious, hardworking need apply. Contact Marlowe or Steward, South College 302.
tf10-27

WANTED

Need someone to fix and clean type writer, at reasonable rate. Please call 665-1961.
tf10-27

Roommate M or F. $40/month, excellent location, own room. 1 mile from campus, call 549-6130, 1 p.m. or anytime.
tf10-27

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-1716, 202 Chadbourne House.
tf12-13

Cash for 3 speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5399.
tf10-31

Engine wanted for 1960 MGB, pref. a used one in good cond. Please call Bill at 546-7711.
tf10-31

FOR SALE

Moving to Tex. Must sell snow tires from Maverick (6.95-14) w/walls, exc. cond. $25 for pair. Call Kenny 549-6399.
tf10-31

1 pr. Reiker buckle boots fur lined, size 7 med. Worn once. $50.00 worth $90.00. Call 369-4112 in Conway, anytime. Keep trying.
tf10-31

Metal skis w/Solomon 40 bindings & Henke boots 9W w/boot bag — $100. Will sell separately. Call George at 665-4169 after 6:00.
tf10-27

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now! Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door.
tf10-31

For sale 1969 Opel GT. Must sell. Gold black int., Call 253-7353 Amherst.
tf10-27

2 healthy goats ! — A good milker other starts in Spring. Call 268-3228 Haydenville for information.
tf10-27

For Sale. Waterbed - 8X7 - $50. Free full length brown fur coat with sale. Both in excellent condition. Jerry 256-9085.
10-27

King size Waterbed: Heater, thermostat, padded frame, 1 year guarantee, now $50. Call 367-2091.
tf10-27

Ecology minded? Buy Shakier's Basic L for the laundry. 100% biderardable. Buy natural vitamins too. Carol 253-2811.
tf10-30

Must sell Del Rey Elec. guitar and small supro amp $100 or best offer. Call Key 6-5000. Best after 6 p.m.
tf10-27

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1766.
tf-sem.

Toyota 70 Corolla, 35,000 m., needs some work, 2 new tires & snows. $900. 6-1513.
tf10-27

For Sale: 1935 Hudson. Running! Reasonable; Call 659-3322 after 6:00 p.m.
tf10-27

Notecards & Xmas cards for sale. Total proceeds spent for medical care for wounded Viet children. Call 546-9227. Ask for Stan.
tf10-27

1 pr. Head Ski boots used 1/2 season, comfortable high back, size 9, $50.00. Also 1 pr. Hachle red hots, size 10. Used $25.00. 323-7808.
tf10-30

EMBROIDERED Turkish, Indian, Mexican blouses, all reduced at reasonable rate. Come to 239 Pierpont anytime, 6-5205 day or night.
tf10-27

New Skis. 72 K2-A's. Never been mounted. Were $100, asking $100. Also used look bindings, $20. Phone 546-9760.
tf11-1

Big couch, $15.00. Call 665-2830 in good condition.
tf10-31

For sale. A G.E. Refrigerator. Works well. $25. Call 256-6608. After Noon.
tf10-30

Skis — Blizzard Exclusive 200 cm with Solomon 880 bindings. Used only 20 times. Cost $150 new, now only $80. Call 586-2729 after 5.
tf10-27

Recorders, flutes, fifes, wooden and bamboo flutes at Creative Endeavor 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831.
tf10-27

Child's swingset 2 yrs. old, 6 legs slide, 2 swings, gliders was $90 will deliver $25. Call 217-5160 after 5:00.
tf10-31

Must sacrifice — Fender Dual Showman speaker cab. with JBL D130 excellent condition need bread. $400. Call Dave 628-3812 after 5.
tf10-30

For sale, hardtop for Triumph Spitfire, Mark II $100., or best offer. Ph 323-1115 after 5:00 p.m.
tf10-31

For sale Craig stereo tape recorder amp speakers tapes $125 - 546-7777.
tf10-30

PERSONAL

Sensuous cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-5 p.m. M-F, S, till noon. 256-6272 17 N. Prospect — Amh.
tf11-3

Anyone with any questions or wanting information on homosexuality or would just like to talk, call 586-2811. Ask for Paul, Eve.
tf10-27

Anyone with questions on homosexuality or wanting information, call 586-2811, ask for Paul, Eve.
tf10-30

Adventure! Come fly with me. Respond Box 25 So. Deerfield, Mass.
tf11-2

Who says Enzo and Paul are fags? Come to room 231 and see.
tf10-27

Happy birthday H.D. from little M.M.
tf10-27

Happy birthday to Eric. With Love, Darlene.
tf10-27

Happy birthday, Dougie, and welcome aboard. — From the "Over 30" crowd.
tf10-27

Que Pasa Janis hope your 18th is a bully whist ejaculated your college chums.
tf10-27

OK Marz — this is your weeks notice! Start your pushups now! Love, Numbers 1-31.
tf10-27

Kenny wears BVD's. Dana and Paul Won't tell!
tf10-27

I horny guy desires relationship with horny girl. If seriously interested call Ron afternoons 6-1167.
10-30

Hey Dumbo — What am I going to do about you? You are an enigma, but I love you anyway. A nice lady or "the redhaired girl."
tf10-27

Tubs — Happy birthday, you sexy Scorpio. Guess you're not over the hill yet, but 21? Whoosh! Love you Super bunches. Cree Girl.
tf10-27

APTS. WANTED

23 year old girl, quiet, easy going, desires apt. or room with other girls for Nov. & Dec. in Amherst area. Call Carol 256-6785.
tf10-27

EMPLOYMENT

Sta-Power - 253-7363.
tf10-27

Yellowstone & all U.S. Nat. Parks. Booklet tells how & where to apply. Send $2.00, Arnold Agency, A206 E. Main, Rexburg, Idaho, 83440.
tf10-31

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2049-MB, Port Angeles, Washington.
tf11-22

MISCELLANEOUS

Amherst Elementary Program interviewing, Oct. 30, thru Nov. 2, for next semester. Sign up Sch of Ed Room 219 (545-1563) now.
11-1

The magic fingers of Danny Keady are coming to Hampden D.C. Saturday night see 'em dance from 8to12; 30 only 50¢
tf10-27

Tan & white, 8 month puppy needs home. Call 549-6421.
10-30

TO SUBLET

One bedroom apt. to let beginning Dec. 1. Close to campus. Call 549-1907 after 6 p.m.
tf10-30

1 Bed, furn. apt., all utilities, $140. China, bedding, carpet, etc. Near University. Phone day 545-2806; evgs. 665-1291.
tf10-31

Apartment available Presidential apt., 950 So. Pleasant St. apt. 118. Two bedroom, no laundry in building. Interested contact L. Hayward 549-6805.
tf11-1

AUTOS

Sta-Power - 253-7363.
tf10-27

APT. FOR RENT

2 bdrm apt. immediate occupancy, carpeted. Couple or family. $190. 665-1721.
tf10-27

2 bdrm. apt. - all elect. - Cliffside - opt. to renew — Available Nov. 1. $170 - utilities included. - pool - tennis. Call 665-2608.
tf10-27

1 bedrm. all utilities incl. w/w carpet all rms. dshwsr-disposal 5 min. from campus, at Biggreen $185/mo., call 256-6657 after 5 p.m.
tf10-30

HOME FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus. 2 bedrooms asking $3,000. Call 253-5531 after 5 p.m.

Minutemen Vs Huskies; A Farewell to Apathy

By MARTY KELLEY

North Pleasant To The Stadium-Bands, floats, and screeming Revelers won't cure it. Cheerleaders try their best and even they, within their serenity, can't save it. And even the Evil Weed has now replaced the bottle of Wine at the Stadium. Let's face it, tradition has left the ledger of college football.

And sometimes winning football teams have to scrap and hustle just to save face in front of apathy that is easily described in the components of a half full stadium. Well, this Saturday all those critics, myself included, will pretty much find the answer that UMass football has been waiting to find for the last five years.

It's a question that in the past four semesters, the hacks in the Student Senate have without success been trying to answer. It's a question that has baffled those who support this place and those who in turn want to tear it down athetically. It's an uncertainty that has casted a dishonest shroud over all recruiting programs. And when a student blantantly tells you that he or she hasn't seen a football game in four years at the Commonwealth Yard, then you really begin to ask yourself, just how apathetic is this campus?

Well students you can sit back in your cubicles and relax. For you see, all the peripheral criteria against apathy has in the past few weeks been working in your favor. Let me explain.

First of all Mac got by Harvard. You didn't expect the Man and his Minute Mates to do that now did you. To top it off Mac gave you a night on the town with the football team at the Ballroom, and with cider and doughnuts we all watched and marveled at the wizardry and finesse of Schubert, Metallo, and Pennington.

And even a couple of nice guys, Wally Novak and Al Grenet, have decided to leave their cages at Boyden and bring the student tickets to the Dinning Commons and to the Campus Center. Why the good old Mass. Daily, even carried an add the other day that stated in easy rhetoric, "Get Your Tickets Fast if You Want to Drink on Alumni's Porch This Saturday".

But by no means will drinking or eating soggy hotdogs at the Stadium steal any portion of Saturday's matinee. The students who should be there in record numbers (could very well be the largest crowd of well wishers in the six year history of the school) will certainly be treated to an all stops side show as the team protects the rankings of number one in New England and seven in the country's small college standings.

"This is one we want real bad", said reserve receiver Ed Hadjusack. "You won't see us letting up on the Huskies offensively like we did against Rhody and BU. Mac is certainly a gentleman when it comes to points but we want this one bad and we'll be counting the points this Saturday". The team is now averaging better than 37 points a game.

To get people to the stadium you have to have a winner, you must be fun to watch, and you've got to put points on the board. The undefeated Minutemen are without a doubt three for three in these categories, so students take stock of this and let the likes of Steve Schubert, Peil Pennington and Paul Metallo entertain you. They're perhaps the best actors on campus.

And yes there even will be a parade tonight in honor of the football team. Maybe tradition says no to even entertaining the idea. But I think that these guys deserve whatever Homecoming chicanery can be drummed up in their behalf. I don't think that Paul Hansen or John Healy will complain. And I know youthful Jimmy Shea won't mind, for as Jim, a reserve linemen, will tell you, everyone loves a parade and the party that follows.

My theory is that the townspeople and their families may have a chance to become exposed to UMass football and just maybe the turnover rate at the stadium the next afternoon may be at 10 per cent or so. Yes the largest crowd ever to attend a UMass football spectacle may just be there Saturday. The guys certainly deserve it.

Lead All-Star Voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Allen and Billy Williams, those baseball strongboys from Chicago, lead the 1972 Major League ALL—Star team announced Thursday by The Associated Press.

National Leaguers grabbed eight of 10 spots in the vote of sportswriters and broadcasters and world champion Oakland failed to place a man.

White Sox first baseman Allen and right-handed pitcher Gaylord Perry of Cleveland, both traded from the National in 1972, were the only American Leaguers honored.

Philadelphia's brilliant Steve Carlton, winner of 27 games for a last place team, was an overwhelming pick as the All-Star lefthanded pitcher.

Joining Allen in the infield were second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati and two Cub teammates of Williams, shortstop Don Kessinger and third baseman Ron Santo.

Williams was selected in the outfield with 21-year-old Cesar Cedeno of Houston and old pro Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Johnny Bench, the National League home run and RBI king from Cincinnati, was a landslide choice at catcher.

Atlanta great Hank Aaron failed to make the All-Stars, finishing fourth among outfielders in the balloting conducted at the end of the regular season. He swatted 34 homers for a career total of 673, just 41 behind Babe Ruth.

Allen's frown from Philadelphia-Los Angeles days turned to a smile under White Sox Skipper Chuck Tanner, named AL Manager of the Year earlier this week. He hit .308, third best in the American, and led the league with 37 homers and 113 runs batted in.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

A top executive has come up with what he feels is a good statement regarding astrology. He says, "The wise man controls his destiny...astrology points the way." I am in complete agreement and have, on many occassions, used it to lead off this column.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forces tend to be scattered. Leave details to others. Make contacts through social affair. Permit one close to you to have full rein. Deal with Sagittarian. Look ahead to future. Don't brood about past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check details. Thorough approach is a necessity. Basic issues dominate. Relative confides problem. Be helpful without becoming inextricably involved. Aquarius and Leo persons are in picture. You will gain knowledge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Changes result in profit. Know it and respond accordingly. Virgo can be helpful. Throw aside false pride. Aim toward progress. Accept helping hand. There will be action in area previously closed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Domestic squabble should not be blown out of proportion. Means maintain balance. What now is adverse is due to bounce back in your favor. Taurus, Libra persons could play significant roles. Be confident.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Avoid wishful thinking. Strive to utilize perceptive abilities. Pisces can lend helping hand. Look behind scenes. See beyond the superficial. Argumentative relative, neighbor is merely letting off steam.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22): Money, business activity, the power to put program across: these are featured. Gather needed material. Don't waste time and energy with self-doubt. You can win: know it and act like you know it.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than initiate project. You will be urged to do otherwise. Mate, partner and others are impatient. They want you to take what appears to be an easy path. Be mature and in control of your own destiny.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bring forth creative resources. Let people know that you have ideas and allies. Maintain independent stance. Get rid of any notion that you are second division material. Aim for top rung.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friend is enthusiastic but may lack finesse. Be careful in area of funds, investments. Bravado, showmanship are not legitimate replacements for hard facts, basic knowledge. Eschew extravagant schemes.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-Jan. 19): See clearly. Means aim for balance. Be cheerful, not foolish. Be intelligently skeptical, not gloomy. Make amends to loved one for recent slight. Career area gets boost. Major ambition could be fulfilled.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Quiet approach gains best results. Steady pace gets you to destination. Obviously, you should avoid extremes. To do so requires wisdom, discipline. The choice is your own. Leo plays prominent role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis is on self-analysis. Find out where you want to go, and why. Get some honest answers from yourself. If you do this, all else may fall into place and perspective. Concern is with member of opposite sex.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have dramatic appearance, are eager to learn and to aid those in trouble. By October, much emotional pressure will be lifted. You will be more free to travel and socialize. Creative interests will dominate. You are going to be happier!

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Warmth
5 Foray
9 Footlike part
12 At a distance
13 Slave
14 Beverage
15 Strips of leather
17 Compass point
18 Sick
19 Greek letter
21 Pertaining to punishment
23 Mix
27 Note of scale
28 Metal fastener
29 Small child
31 Obscure
34 Bone
35 Number by which another is divided
38 Prefix: down
39 Damp
41 Group of unions (abbr.)
42 Repasts
44 Near
46 Makes bigger
48 Domiciles
51 Satiate
52 Room in harem
53 Preposition
55 Patterns
59 Nothing
60 Keen
62 S-shaped molding
63 Compass point
64 Dry
65 Soft drink

DOWN

1 Possesses
2 Newt
3 Swiss river
4 Followed in one's track
5 Remains at ease
6 Conjunction
7 Hostelry
8 Profound
9 Ached
10 Girl's name
11 Trade for money
16 Befitting a poet
20 Deeds
22 Teutonic deity
23 Blackbird
24 River in France
25 Thoroughfare (abbr.)
26 Dawn goddess
30 Vegetable
32 Unemployed
33 Army meal
36 Contend
37 Altar screen
40 Mexican dish
43 Symbol for silver
45 Symbol for tellurium
47 Crippled
48 Sharpen
49 Norse god
50 Couch
54 Evergreen tree
56 The self
57 Conducted
58 Ocean
61 Symbol for nickel

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 27

The Pub
BEEF 'n BEER Nights
Wednesday & Saturday
Charcoal Broiled Rib Steak
Pitcher of Beer
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Baked Potato
Roll + Butter
$3.50
The Pub

NCAA Withdraws From Olympic Committee

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has announced its withdrawal from the United States Olympic Committee in a move aimed at forcing complete reorganization of the USOC.

The announcement was made jointly in the name of Samuel E. Barnes, secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, and by Charles Neinas, chairman of the NCAA International Relations Committe and Big Eight Conference commissioner, at a Thursday news conference here.

Barnes said the decision was made by the 18-member NCAA Council at its fall meeting Wednesday in Knoxville, Tenn. The action is effective immediately.

The council acted upon the recommendation of the committee Neinas heads-formerly the NCAA Olympic Committee-after that body charged that the USOC "has shortchanged America."

"The NCAA strongly supports the continuation of the Olympic Games," Barnes said in a statement released at the news conference, "but the association no longer can accept membership in the United States Olympic Committee until it is extensively reorganized.

Barnes was unable to attend the news conference, which was presided over by Neinas and Walter Byers, NCAA executive director.

Neinas said his committee also suggested that the NCAA's allied conferences and affiliated coaching organizations take similar withdrawal actions. He said the matter will come up at the next Big Eight meeting in December.

"This action should not be construed as recommending the United States withdraw from the Olympic Games themselves," Neinas emphasixed. "To the contrary, the international relations committee hoqs the games will continue and that improvement can be made at the international as well as domestic level of involvement."

Barnes' statement said the withdrawal means the NCAA will not appoint representatives to USOC committees nor offer financial assistance as an organization.

It will recommend to its more than 700 members that they not assist in fund-raising, but will leave to each college, coach and athlete the decision "to determine within their own conscience the extent to which they feel they can support the USOC as it is organized at the present time."

Noting the USOC is chartered by Congress and publicly funded, Neinas said the withdrawl "will dramatize the need for Congress to establish some type of commission to look at the operations of the USOC and to look at its organization structure."

Both Barnes and Neinas said the withdrawal decision was not brought about by any specific incident at the recent Munich Olympic Games.

UMass Girls Playing in NE Tournament

Yale University will be the site of the New England women's tennis tournament this afternoon, and UMass will be sending down four of their top girls to participate in it.

In a season highlighted by the upset of Mt. Holyoke over a week ago, the netwomen ended their regular season play with a 4-2 record.

The first three matches of the season were whitewashes, as the combined scores for the three went UMass: 21 Opposition: 0. Then Springfield bested the minutewoman, but they came back strongly, after two rainouts, with a big 5-2 win over Mt. Holyoke.

The 6-3 win saw UMass lose at their number one and two singles positions, as well as their top doubles positions. But from there on down it was all UMass. Ronnie Sander won 6-0, 6-3 at third singles (losing her first three games of the season), while Karen Tspartaris won easily at fourth, her scores being 6-2, 6-1. Down at the fifth spot was Carol Mottau as she took control and won handily 6-1, 6-3.

These three wins gave UMass the lead, as they overcame losses by Cathy Morris and Ann Foley. The two lost by scores of 6-1, 6-4 and 6-4, 6-4 at first and second singles respectively.

Three double matches were won by UMass after they forfeited the number one doubles contest. Then at second it was Heslin and Trafton winning 6-4, 6-1. Next there was Sanekoff and Wesley at third doubles losing but two games in 6-0, 6-2 fashion.

At fourth doubles were Perkins and Young winning the second set in a tiebreaker. Their scores were 6-2, 7-6.

Today it's the New Englands, and travelling will be Cathy Morris and Ann Foley to play singles. The doubles team sent down for the tournament will consist of Ronnie Sanders and Karen Tspartaris.

Coach Sally Oglivie, most probably a bit disappointed over this past week's loss to Smith College, is looking forward to seeing how well her girls will perform. This will, by far, be the strongest UMass contingent sent to the women's New England tournament, and hopes are high.

Tenace Tired

NEW YORK (AP) — The fame and fanfare that goes with being the hero of baseball's World Series may seem like a pinch of heaven to the average American boy but not to Fury Gene Tenace.

"It's not that I don't appreciate it-I just don't enjoy it," the 26-year-old part-time catcher of the Oakland Athletics said Thursday after flying to New York to accept a new automobile.

"I just want to go home."

Tenace, who emerged from virtual obscurity to lead the A's to a seven-game victory over the Cincinnati Reds received a 1973 sports car Dodge Charger from Sport Magazine as the Series' Most Valuable Player.

He joined such baseball dignitaries as Roberto Clemente, Brooks Robinson, Sandy Koufax, Bob Gibson, and Whitey Ford as winner of the award, given at a luncheon at Mama Leone's Restaurant.

Attired in a light blue mod suit with a flowered sport shirt open at the collar, the miner's son from Lucasville, Ohio, sat at a table with cameras, flash bulbs and provocative questions popping from all sides and talked hesitatingly of his newly gained hero status.

WMUA

Kent Best and Don Gorski will be behind the WMUA mikes this Saturday when the Connecticut Huskies invade Alumni Stadium for the Homecoming game. Air time on WMUA is 12:50 as the Minutemen look to clinch the Yankee Conference crown.

JV Gridders Play URI at Kingston

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

The JV gridders are back in action this afternoon as they travel to Kingston, R.I., to face the Rams of URI after a long three-week layoff.

The squad will be bearing down, trying to pick up its second victory in as many games. The first victory came against the BU pups 33-13, in a game in which the stalwart Minutemen defense totally destroyed the BU combination wingbone-wishbone running game in the second half.

Rhode Island promises to be tough this time around, at least a little tougher than they were last year when the then Redmen led by Fred Kelliher's 3 touchdown passes, pulverized the Rams 44-7.

After tomorrow's game at URI, the schedule looks like this for the frosh laden JVs: November 5 at BC, November 10 at home against UConn, and the final game of the season at Durham, N.H., against UNH.

GORGEOUS MODELS

1 and 2-bedroom model apartments now open 7 days a week for your inspection. All have:

W-W carpet
Dishwasher and disposal
Private terrace
Individually controlled, central gas heat, A/C and cooling included in rent
Abundance of closet space
Convenient location close to UMass campus
1-bedroom units from $200; 2-bedrooms from $225

BRANDYWINE at Amherst
50 Meadow Street
Amherst 549-0600
(Between No. Pleasant & Rt. 116)

Rental Furniture Available from Putnam Furniture Leasing Company, Hartford, Ct.

Bad News?
Good News?
(you decide)

There are five OTHER audio shops in the Amherst-Northampton area. Not ONE of them is like us. We're TRIPOD AUDIO. Let us tell you a little about ourselves. We're new. Our sound studio is located at 219 Main Street in Northampton. It's on the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop.

We'll tell you right away — if you're looking for a COMPLETE stereo system for $199.95, we CAN'T help you. Now that's a pretty direct statement — but we hope you'll understand that we aim to be honest with you. We DON'T carry junk — we like music too much to do that. ALL of our equipment has stood the test of time and is well-known for its quality and reliability — equipment by Klipsch, Sony, Teac, Bang & Olufsen, Thorens, PE, and Watts. And we back up our stock with a sales force that knows what they're talking about. You may not like what we tell you, but we'll tell you the TRUTH.

Considering the quality of the equipment we carry, our prices are DAMN competitive. And we've provided a quiet and relaxing place to listen carefully and compare equipment without being hassled. You're also welcome to bring your own records and tapes. Why not drop over one of these days and take a look and a listen. Or call us at 584-6498 and ask for Jim. We might NOT be the place for you. But — then again — we MIGHT. Once again, that's TRIPOD AUDIO at 219 Main Street in Northampton. On the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop. You'll be hearing more about us in the coming weeks.

TRIPOD AUDIO
219 MAIN STREET — NORTHAMPTON, MASS. 01060
TELEPHONE 584-6498

TONITE AT THE RUSTY NAIL INN
LOBSTER SPECIAL $3.95
featuring "NO EXIT"
Rte. 47, Sunderland, 665-4937

Defensive back Ray Bouchard runs back an interception in the game two weeks ago against Boston University. Also in the picture for UMass are, from left to right, Ed McAleney, Paul St. Onge, Tom Bradshaw, and Johnny Jones. (MDC Photo by Doug Hurst)

Orr Sidelined Again by Knee

BOSTON (AP) - Bobby Orr, the National Hockey League's most valuable player the past three seasons, was declared lost indefinitely to the Boston Bruins Thursday because of lingering knee trouble.

The 24-year-old superstar underwent left knee surgery last June after leading the Bruins to the Stanley Cup championship. His recovery suffered a setback after he appeared in just three games this season.

Dr. Carter Rowe, the Bruins' surgeon, said Orr's knee "requires more strengthening excercises to build it up to meet the stress of game-type competition."

Orr, the NHL rookie of the year in 1966-67 and winner of the Norris Trophy as the league's top defenseman the last five years, began skating in early September, but had to sit out the Team Canada-Russia series.

He wanted to return to action against Pittsburgh Oct. 15, but Bruins Coach Tom Johnson vetoed the idea. He finally made his debut last Saturday in Pittsburgh and played against Vancouver Sunday and against Buffalo Wednesday.

However, he was used sparingly, mostly on the power play or when the Bruins were short-handed. He took a regular turn in the third period against Vancouver, but was unable to skate in his flashy style.

Orr refused to admit the knee bothered him much, but teammates told friends he was in a great deal of pain.

The loss of Orr is a severe blow to the Bruins, who are struggling with a 3-4-1 record. With him in uniform, they won one game, tied another and lost one in three appearances.

Although not fit to play, Orr will continue to skate with the Burins in practice while taking special exercises and undergoing therapy treatment.

To replace Orr, the Bruins called up rookie defenseman Ron Jones, 21, from the Boston Braves of the American Hockey League. Jones was a top selection in the amateur draft last year.

Booters Play UConn in Crucial Match

By DOUG FIDLER

The Yankee Conference leading UConn Huskies will invade Amherst this Saturday morning at 11:00 a.m. in what Coach Gerry Redmond terms "the biggest game of the year." UConn boasts a 4-0 record in the YanCon, while sporting a fine 7-1-1 overall mark.

The visitors are currently ranked fourth in New England behind Bridgeport, Brown, and Harvard. Their only loss came at the hands of Brown 3-2 last week. The tie resulted from a 1-1 contest against Amherst College, the team UMass defeated 4-1 in pre-season play.

"The players are definitely going to have to be ready for this match," said Redmond. "Our opponents are undefeated in conference play and have been very impressive in their play to date. They have a great forward scoring line and our defense will have to work very hard to stop their attack."

Forward Tom Coburn has scored six goals thus far, just one tally behind conference-leading Luis Carvalho of Rhode Island. Coalkeeper Carl CVercollone is fourth among net-minders, having allowed just 1.70 goals per game. All New England Yankee Conference goalie Jim Mueller of UNH leads with a mere 0.60 goals-against average. John Hackett of Maine is second, while the Huskies' John Demeter is third.

Rhode Island is tied for the YanCon lead with a 3-0 record. UNH follows closely with a 3-1 standing, losing only to Connecticut 2-1 three weeks ago. A UMass victory would not only enhance the Minutemen's chances of finishing high in the conference, but also tighten up the battle for first place.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Hoop at Cage

Wondering what to do after the game Saturday at the stadium? Well, you're all welcomed to come up to the Cage to see the annual intrasquad basketball homecoming scrimmage. It gets underway at 4:30 p.m.

Conference Title On Line Tomorrow

By EARLE BARROLL

The ingredients are just right for a David-Goliath rematch:

In this corner David -- 3-2, seventh in New England, no where in sight in the East and the nation and after its number one goal -- the Yankee Conference title.

In that corner Goliath -- 5-0, first in New England, seventh in the nation, third in the East and after its number one goal -- the Yankee Conference title.

It's no wonder then that Alumni Stadium may be sold out for the first time in its six year history tomorrow hen these two go at it for goal number one at Homecoming '72. (Kickoff is 1 p.m.)

Over the past few years when the subject has been Yankee Conference football, it's begun and ended with UMass and UConn. And why not? Last year they shared the title and battled to a 3-3 tie at Storrs. The year before they tied again, 21-21 and UMass won the title. And it goes on and on.

But, as indicated above UMass has come up with something really big on the gridiron this year and while UConn has only lost to undefeated Yale (tied with UMass for 3rd in the East) and Delaware (number one small college team in the nation) its performances against the rest of the conference have been inferior to those of UMass.

Last Saturday at the UConn-Maine game, Black Bear coach Walt Abbott was upset when pestered throughout the post game interview with questions relating only to UMass and UConn and not his own team.

In the press box according to chief UMass scout Bob Harris, the conversation centered around UMass and the only score that mattered to them was UMass-URI.

It makes you think that UConn must want something more than just a two-hour trip up here to Amherst.

And UMass has just that.

From this angle one could easily sit back and blurt out a score and say here it is and hope you come close. UMass-UConn in anything is almost impossible to figure out.

The records are here before you and we'll leave it at that: Homecoming '72, the Conference title at stake, a possible Stadium sellout and David and Goliath.

Bruins Lose

BOSTON (AP) — Chico Maki touched off a Chicago scoring barrage with a goal 21 seconds after the opening faceoff and the Black Hawks went on to defeat Boston's once-mighty Bruins 6-3 Thursday night for their first National Hockey League victory in the Boston Garden in nearly two years.

Six players shared in the scoring as the Hawks handed Boston's defending Stanley Cup champions their third loss in four home appearances.

Other Chicago scorers were Jim Pappin, Pat Stapleton, Bill White, Pit Martin, and Stan Mikita.

Chicago, leading the west division despite the loss of Bobby Hull, got the jump on the Bruins as Maki slapped a loose puck into the net for his first goal of the season.

The Bruins came back for a 2-1 lead on goals by Ace Bailey and Phil Esposito before their defense collapsed.

Chicago scored three goals in the second period and twice in the finale as the Boston defense became unglued just a few hours after star Bobby Orr was sidelined indefinitely because of his knee ailment.

Esposito scored Boston's other goal, his fifth of the season, in the second period.

The victory was Chicago's first in Boston since a 1-0 decision on a disputed goal in January 1970.

Harriers Run for Top Spot in YanCon Meet Tomorrow

The UMass Cross-Country Team travels to Orono, Maine tomorrow where the Yankee Conference Championship will be decided. And I'm not talking about football.

No, this is cross-country, and Ken O'Brien's team is going after its third consecutive conference title in the annual Yankee Conference meet. In 1970 the harriers set a conference meet scoring record of 19 points. Last year, with a comparatively inexperienced team, they won with a good thirty point margin. And this year it looks like more of the same.

To a statistician, UMass' record of three and five would not seem very impressive. In fact, it's only third best in the conference. But you might as well throw that record out the window, because two of their losses were very close and came against the top three teams in New England. Two others were giveaways, concessions made by Ken O'Brien in his drive to the New England championships. These were meets which caught the team fatigued at midweek and, rather than submit his team to jarring disruptions in training, he preferred to rest his top runners, and keep them on their normal workout schedule. So far this strategy has been very effective. Unlike last year when the team's weekly progress was erratic, they have improved steadily from week to week, and should enter the New England Meet next Saturday in peak physical condition.

The Minutemen will face some strong, though not overwhelming, competition. Most of it will come from URI and UConn.

URI has to be rated as the top contender. Two weeks ago, they shellacked a freshmen-laden UMass team. Paul Segersten, who took second in that race, had this to say about that meet, "It's hard to tell how good they really are, because our whole squad was hurting that day. Grundy is good, and they run strongly as a team."

UConn is good, but UMass clobbered them in Storrs, and they've lost their number one runner, Bob McCusker, sidelined with mononucleosis. Any team with Bill Cantin and Pete Bortolotti, however, can't be ruled out.

After UConn, the ranks begin to thin out. Vermont could give UConn a fight. They're strong as a team, but lack a front-runner. Holy Cross is just the opposite. Comparatively weak as a team, they have, in freshman Neil Coleman, a potential individual champion. BU, Maine, and UNH have had poor seasons so far, and cannot be regarded as contenders.

In the battle for individual honors, O'Brien is diplomatically optimistic. "It could be any of our top seven," said O'Brien. Bill Cantin and Pete Bortolotti of UConn, Tom Grundy, of URI, and Neil Coleman of Holy Cross should all be up there. Allieu Massaquoi of BU, the defending champion, is probably the best bet.

The course is short, grassy, and relatively flat. Coach O'Brien thinks it will benefit UMass. He said, "after two weeks on our tough, hilly, home course, this one should come a lot easier.

The Minutemen are in good physical condition, and are completely recovered from the BC meet. Bill Gillin, Chris Chambers, and Paul Segersten are just about over their troublesome colds. Rick Barry is still feeling the effects of an arch injury, but it isn't serious, and isn't likely to affect his performance.

Roy Lyons

Robinson-A Man of Courage

Occasionally an athlete transcends the stage of the ball park or the arena and touches all America. Jackie Robinson, dead at 53 of heart disease, was one such athlete.

Jackie shocked white America in 1947 when he signed Branch Rickey's contract and became the first black man to play major league baseball.

The impact of a black man in a Brooklyn Dodger uniform was tremendous. Three teams threatened to boycott the Dodgers. His teammates were disenchanted by his presence although their attitudes would later change. He was frequently denied service at hotels and restaurants on road trips. And worst of all, he was the target of countless racial slurs from bigoted fans.

But Jackie was a fierce competitor and a courageous individual. He showed whitey that he couldn't keep a good man down - black or white.

This trait I call courage would perhaps be called Uncle Tomism in our times, but I think to label Robinson an Uncle Tom would be grossly unfair.

For one thing Jackie deserves to be judged in his own time. Black revolutionaries did not become prominent on the American scene until the mid-1960's after the great civil rights movements. (Jackie and Floyd Patterson were at Birmingham in 1963.) To say he was an Uncle Tom would be like saying baseball wasn't exciting then because they didn't have astro-turf, exploding scoreboards, or double-knit uniforms.

Another point for Jackie is that he was proud, not ashamed, to be black. He resented intensely the racial slurs and the rampant discrimination he had to bear. He turned the other cheek not because he wanted to but because he knew he controlled the fate of all black ballplayers.

He was, then, aware of his mission - to break a color barrier that had existed for more than a century. He wanted to open the major leagues to his black brothers - the Satchel Paiges and the Josh Gibsons. He was upset with the inferior wages and conditions of the old Negro League. Maybe the best yardstick for measuring Robinson's success would be the 288 blacks currently on major league rosters.

And Jackie continued his mission to the end. He had one comment to make when he threw out the first ball at the beginning of this year's World Series. He wanted to see a black manager. To the discredit of major league baseball, Jackie Robinson was never able to see that day.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

So what else is new?

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 36 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1972

What is everyone so happy about, other than the fact that it's mid-semester, winter is coming, there are 53 shopping days to Christmas, UMass is 6-0, peace is not far off, Hershey bars are still only a dime and it still only costs a nickel to ride the Staten Island Ferry. There are a lot of other things, but then again, it all depends how you look at things. (MDC Photo by Karasu)

Bromery Vetoes Cancelling Classes Nov. 7

By STEVE SECHE

Chancellor Randolph Bromery, acting on the recommendations of the Faculty Senate Rules Committee, and the Provost's Office, has decided to veto a Student Senate motion that would have cancelled classes on Election Day.

The Rules Committee recommendation came after a 45-minute meeting Friday morning with members of the Student Senate, at which time the committee heard student arguments in favor of cancelling the day's classes. In an executive session which followed the meeting, the committee voted, 4-1, to maintain the regular class schedule on November 7th.

Larry Ladd, President of the S.G.A., who was present at the meeting, and who had originally presented the senate's recommendation to Chancellor Bromery, said he was "upset that the Chancellor seems to base his decisions on faculty recommendations, and chooses to ignore student opinion."

Chancellor Bromery, speaking last night by phone, said that he had been "convinced by the recommendations of the faculty committee and the provost's office that very little would be accomplished by the complete cancellation of classes."

"The Office of the Provost will strongly encourage all faculty to make whatever individual allowances seem appropriate, however," the Chancellor said, to allow as many students as possible to participate in the electoral process."

Responding to Ladd's criticism that his decision had been influenced heavily by faculty recommendations, Bromery said, "I felt it necessary to go to both parties before I made my decision. The original recommendation had come from the students; I was aware of their position. I then asked the Rules Committee of the Faculty Senate for their recommendation before reaching my decision."

Prof. Joseph Burroughs, who cast the only committee vote in favor of the student proposal, said that "the entire committee was impressed by the sincerity of the students' argument."

"I feel particularly strongly," Burroughs said, "that participation in the electoral process can be an important educational experience, one I would like to see every student have."

Burroughs said that the most persuasive reasons against the cancellation were contractual and legal. "The committee seemed to feel that there would be strong reverberations from both the legislature and the trustees if classes were cancelled," he said.

"It was pointed out that this semester's schedule, which this year is the shortest we have ever worked with, is essentially a contract, and there was the very valid question raised as to whether it is desirable, or even ethical, to alter a contract in a situation such as this," Burroughs said.

"The committee was told that every student at the University with the exception of one 17 year old girl, will be eligible to vote on November 7th," Burroughs said. This will be the first national election since the enactment of the Constitutional amendment guaranteeing the right to vote to anyone who has reached the age of 18.

On The Inside:

•Zen Circus — see page two

•Conferees Like It Here — see page three

•Hanoi Demands Signing — see page four

Look! Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No, it's only Fiore Verde, affectionately known as the "Green Monster". It has a styrofoam core and stands 6-1/2 feet with a base of 17" x 17". By all estimations, this lovely piece of sculpture will not be a fountain until next semester. Fiore Verde will not be a very powerful sprouting fountain, so that when it does get going outside the Campus Center coffee shop, the area will still be used as an eating area.

C.C.To Have Fountain

By CINDY GONET

Would you look a gift horse in the mouth? The new sculpture fountain near the Campus Center coffee shop is the gift to the University from the Class of 1970. Before being formally received, the fountain had to be officially accepted as a gift by the Campus Center Governing Board and the University.

Harold Watts, an official of the maintenance department of the Campus Center, said the fountain may be baptized this weekend, depending on the weather. Employees from the Physical Plant have been working on the base of the fountain for two weeks.

Fiore Verde, affectionately known as the "Green Monster" is a polyester resin and polymer cement sculpture. It has a styrofoam core and is made out of fiberglas. The "Green Monster" stands at 6-1/2 feet and its base measures 17" x 17". The total cost was $750.

Sheila McRevey of the RSO (recognized student organization) office, told the MDC that the sculptor of the fountain is Brenda Minisci, a former art instructor at UMass.

Fiore Verde will most likely not be sprouting water this semester. Beginning in the spring, the fountain will be in operation. The water emerging from the sculpture will not be very forceful, so that the area will still be used as an eating place.

Zen Circus To Be Held

By MARILOU BARSAM

The meaning of the phrase Zen Circus will most likely be unclear to most UMass students. Probably the only way to describe the Zen Circus to occur on this campus in two weeks, is as an unusual and different kind of happening.

When asked his reasons for producing a Zen Circus, organizer Stan Brody explained, "All the world is a stage, we are actors, always performing yet unaware of it. We should become aware of it and perfect our performance. Also, we thought a two day happening of visual, tactile-audio experience would be a fine way to celebrate an 'art gallery'."

Zen Circus will take place November 10th and 11th, all day Friday and Saturday, in JQA and Pierpont lounges and Hampden Dining Commons. If successful, it just might be the biggest stage happening offered at UMass, for the entertainer and entertained.

Stan Brody teaches Zen Photography and theatre at Project 10. His students have never had a way to exhibit their works, so recently they decided to have their own art gallery, thus enabling them to exhibit their work. However, Brody decided to have much more than an art gallery. He decided to offer the Five College Community what he calls, "a sensory overload of entertainment." Zen Circus should be similar to The Renaissance Festival put on by interested art people in California.

In three weeks Brody's students have co-ordinated a gala festival. One-hundred people have inolved themselves in the Zen Circus production. Brody hopes more will volunteer their creative talents to help in the production.

The Zen Circus will present a menagerie of events, including Rock Concerts, 2-4 groups, (which will cost only $.83 to attend), free jazz and classical festivals, films, guerrilla theatre, dances, parades, light shows, environmental sculpture, and puppetry and body massages.

Brody feels that if Zen Circus goes off well, his next course offered will be, "How to set up a Zen Circus." He hopes that all of UMass and the five college area will be present to be entertained and entertain at the circus.

He urges that anyone interested in contributing to the Zen Circus will contact him or Wendy Polluck at 6-5264 or Mike Forte at 6-5192, or drop in at his Zen Circus table on the Concourse level, Campus Center.

Activists Win Court Battle

Political activists won a preliminary battle last week in their court fight against extensive police surveillance of protest activities.

In a 14-page decision Tuesday in Federal Court here, Judge Edward Weinfeld rejected defense efforts to dismiss a lawsuit filed by 16 political activists, including Abbie Hoffman, challenging alleged police activities as a violation of their constitutional rights.

Judge Weinfeld noted that the lawsuit complained about the "chilling effect" of activities by the city Police Department's security and investigation section.

The complaint alleged that the constitutional rights of political activists were violated by the way the section used informers, infiltration, interrogation, overt surveillance, summary punishment, intelligence-gathering and electronic surveillance.

These activities inhibited freedom of speech, assembly and association, according to the complaint, which declared that the police conduct was designed to discourage political action groups from advocating unpopular views.

Judge Weinfeld also noted that Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy, a defendant in the lawsuit, had submitted an affidavit denying that the police unit infringed on constitutional rights.

"In sum," the judge said of the affidavit by Mr. Murphy, "he states that the practices and procedures followed by S.I.S. in carrying out its intelligence functions are within the scope of the duties imposed by the New York City Charter to protect the health, safety and welfare of the public.

"Nevertheless, the factual allegations contained in the commissioner's affidavit fail conclusively to refute those set forth by plaintiffs in their complaint."

Judge Weinfeld noted that Commissioner Murphy did not content that all the practices cited in the complaint were justified by legitimate law enforcement, but that the Commissioner maintained that any police excesses were "aberrations in violation of departmental policy."

According to Judge Weinfeld, however, if there were such "aberrations" amounting to a pattern of unconstitutional conduct, the political activists would be entitled to an injunction to prevent any continuation of this conduct.

Entitled to Hearing

The judge made it clear that he was not ruling on the validity of the allegations against the police, but he said the plaintiff were entitled to a hearing to present evidence against the section, which replaced an earlier police intelligence unit.

Citing a recent Supreme Court case, Laird v. Tatum, Judge Weinfeld said that the court's decision rejected the contention that the mere existence of the Army's surveillance of peaceful civilian activity violate constitutional rights in the absence of evidence showing actual or threatened harm.

Judge Weinfeld said that the current charges against the section's conduct included one of direct injury resulting from governmental action, bringing this complaint "beyond the pale" of the Tatum case.

The complaint against the police did not challenge the use of informers and undercover agents as such, Judge Weinfeld said; it alleged that the section "exceeds permissible limits and goes beyond legitimate surveillance activities."

Besides Abbie Hoffman, the plaintiffs are Barbara Handschu, Ralph Digia, Alex McKeiver, Shaba Om, Curtis M. Powell, Mark A. Segal, Michael Zumoff, Kenneth Thomas, Robert Rusch, Annette T. Rubinstein, Mickey Sheridan, Joe Sucher, Steven Fischler, Howart Blatt and Elli Beneoni.

(Reprinted from The New York Times)

Campus Police Say Students Demand More Protection

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. — College students, who are being mugged, raped and robbed with "alarming frequency," are now demanding more protection from the campus security officers they once called "pigs".

So said John W. Powell, executive secretary of the International Association of College and University Security Directors, at a conference that drew 85 campus security officials from leading Eastern campuses to Pace College here last week.

"The day of the sit-in, the mass demonstration, the take-over of the building, I think it's over," observed Mr. Powell, a former Federal Bureau of Investigation field supervisor and Yale University security director who now operates a consulting concern with institutional clients across the country.

He said the three most serious crimes on today's "open campuses" were theft, student assaults, and armed robberies. Many of these crimes are drug-related, he said.

Mr. Powell said there were no current figures on such campus crime, but a survey by the Burns Security Institute, which co-sponsored the conference with Pace, tended to confirm his observations. Survey results were based on questionnaires answered by 58 of the conference participants. Of these, 81 per cent said demonstrations had decreased over the lasy year and 69 per cent said bomb threats also had declined. At the same time, 50 per cent cited an increase in "serious crimes" on campus.

Another speaker, Col. Fred Davids, a retired Michigan police director who now supervises security at the University of Michigan's six campuses, called theft his "biggest problem," followed by crimes against the person. He urged security officers to make use of sophisticated crime-laboratory techniques available through some municipal police departments.

Others mentioned a variety of crime deterrents and detection devices used on their campuses, including walkie-talkies and photo identification cards, electronic alarms, closed-circuit television systems and guard dogs with handlers to protect women students from assault.

As a group, the security directors appeared to be mostly middle-aged. There was a sprinkling of young and black faces in the audience, chiefly among delegates from the New York colleges and universities.

A few wore the blazer-slacks outfit with college crest that has replaced the traditional police uniform on some campuses. Often, however, the blazer is fitted with an inside compartment for a .38-caliber revolver.

The blazers are in keeping with what Mr. Powell calls "the new soft image". Uniforms and police titles are unpopular in academic communities, he said, and, as a result, security personnel are seeking a low profile.

Other trends noted at the conference were as follows:

The use of student security college-educated security professionals to administer programs.

The use of student security services such as Syracuse University's "Eyes and Ears Program", in which student monitors, equipped with clipboards and two-way radios, patrol halls and parking lots.

The creation of public relations programs to explain the security operations to students and faculty members and to enlist their support in curbing crime.

(Reprinted from The New York Times)

"Cronopios"
is coming
An Alternative
Bookshop

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second-class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

THE JEANS STORE

LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE

MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS

ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women

201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)

WEAR-HOUSE

Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706

Joel Stoneham, director of Food Services, clears lettuce from his table at the "Bitch Day" in the Campus Center. It was dumped there by people protesting the use of non-union lettuce in the dining commons. (MDC Photo by Kevin Mack)

Conferees Enjoy Campus Stay

By BOB SCHEIER

They come off the elevators in the Campus Center and wander through the concourse, an island of sports jackets and ties in a sea of dungarees and work boots.

They leaf through the Colleglan, gawk at the students, and try to find the Blue Wall cafeteria. They are accountants, salesman, teachers, businessmen, government officials, and they all have one thing in common: they're at UMass for a conference.

Conferences, seminars, training courses, symposiums--they all come to the Campus Center to hold a meeting in an educational atmosphere and mingle with some of UMass's students in the "Waffle."

According to one of the men who plan the conferences, the visitors' reaction to UMass is usually surprise.

"When they (the visitors) come in from the parking garage and see those pinball machines going, it changes their image of what a college campus is," said Jim Tepper, director of conferences for the UMass division of Continuing Education, which arranges meetings for most of the 350 groups that come to mass each year.

He said most organizations came to UMass wanting to get work done and not play," although he said during the summer the school could offer visitors the use of several gymnasiums and swimming pools.

"Sometimes, a business wants a morale building program, to just let some of their top executives get away and unwind," he continued. "We've been able to do more of that kind of thing in the summer, where we can offer the gyms, pools, and tennis courts."

While some of the visiting businessmen referred to the tables set up in the Campus Center as a "flea market" or "tag sale", he said most of the visitors praised the "modern facilities, competitve prices, good food, and the work we can do putting together a whole program for them."

"A lot of the visiotrs like the involvement with youth," Tepper added," and there's not as much actual interactions as some groups would like."

"Some people go down to the concourse, and some people will forego paid luncheons to eat in the student coffee shops, or even in a dining commons," he said.

There is negative comment about the school as a convention center, Tepper said, but most of it comes from the directors of programs.

"There are complaints like the garage is too far from the hotel," he said, "and about the elevators not working, but there are complaints about every building."

William C. Venman, acting director of the UMass division of Continuing Education, said most reaction was "neutral or positive" from visitors about the school.

"There was a poor reaction, though, to things like seeing people sacked out in chairs in the Campus Center," he added. He also recalled a school superintendent at UMass for a visit two years ago, who left enraged after seeing an advertisement for a homosexual dance.

"Ninety-nine out of 100 programs we have talked to want the building," he said, adding that the division specifically approached events it thought would be suited to a school atmosphere.

"We have even turned down some events, such as several beauty pagaents and tradeshows," Venman continued. "We just don't have the facilities."

He added that many organizations had come back to the campus repeatedly, such as the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks and the Massachusetts Association of CPAs (Certified Public Accountants."—

Venman said "there's no other service on campus that makes as many friends as the food service."

"They're flexible with regard to the visitor's needs, the food is first-class, and they care about their customers," Venman added.

One visitor to the campus was Glenn H. Wing of Bingham, Maine, on campus for a conference of the New England Kiln Dryers.

Wing, who says he is a former sawmill operator and the president of the Maine Hardwood Association, said he had been to the campus before for conferences and liked it.

"I enjoyed the young people," he said and also said he had also found an experiment at a wood technology laboratory interesting.

When asked if he would have liked to attend UMass, he said "I'd rather take a short, tentensive course, and get to work with a master craftsman."

Trotman Sees Two-Fold Goals

By GARRISON ROUSSEAU

Since his appointment last year as the Area Director of the newly opened Sylvan Human Affairs Office, Thomas H. Trotman says he has come to see his goals and those of his office as being two-fold.

First, there is the carrying out of everyday routine duties: course changes, financial aid, academic counseling, etc., and then there is what Mr. Trotman sees as the educative role.

It is this second role that Mr. Trotman sees as the most important and fun aspect of his job: such things as counseling, tutoring, colloquia courses, experiments in living - (such as co-ed suites) and opportunities in area government.

Mr. Trotman sees himself working within a community, not a complex - that the dorms that make up Sylvan (Brown, McNamara, and Cashin) consist of people that must live and work together. However, he feels that it's essential that the community remain natural, and not become forced.

In addition, he feels that before one can become successful in the educative role within the community; it is necessary to have formulated some sort of educational philosophy. He further maintains that for this to be successful, administrators must start to be seen as educators, each with their own views. He does; however, consider it important to have the same basic goals.

Trotman insists that one must see the community on a realistic working level, not as an utopia. An example which he offered was on the problems that Sylvan has encountered with an insufficient janitorial staff. In recent budgetary cuts, Sylvan lost half of its staff; students in the area considered it not only unfair, but a threat to their health. Solutions are being sought by cooperation among the area government, the janitorial staff occies, and the business offices.

Although Trotman agrees there is a place in the Sylvan community for the student who just wants a place to study and sleep, it is for the majority of the students, who want much more, that the Human Affairs Office can do the most good.

For these students, he feels the best method is to allow them to run their own lives, and discover the best viable solutions with minimum interference from outside interests.

Trotman is quick to say that this has in many instances become a cliche; however, he feels that Sylvan has demonstrated itself to be different. He says there is a need for administrators even in student-run communities.

Students have classes he adds and more than enough work to do. Therefore, the need for skilled administrators to cut through the red-tape and inform the students of facts, that administrators are in a position to know about.

Trotman emphasized the fact that there is very little control by the administration in sylvan. All dorms, for instance, have volunteer floor represenatives; thus abolishing the practice of University selected and paid floor counselors. In this way, students can feel that their floor representatives are indeed their own.

For purposes of making the students more aware of what goes on in the Human Affairs Office, Trotman feels a need for a grass-roots movement, and the best way for carrying this out would be through the area government.

There are many problems to overcome, to which the Affairs office has been seeking solutions, Trotman adds. There is a fundamental problem of the lack of recreational space. The Human Affairs Office, with the area government, has planned for the construction of basketball and volleyball courts, and a picnic area in the near-by woods.

Inside the dorms, the one area allotted in each dorm has been used up by a snack-bar in MacNamara; area government offices plus the area newspaper in Cashin, and a pottery studio in Brown. Already, three suites are being used for students, including one with a computer terminal and professional-type darkroom.

In the future, there are also plans of study areas and more game areas by utilizing the lobby areas.

Thomas H. Trotman graduated from the University of Michigan at Detroit, and came to the University in 1963 to work for the now-defunct Dean of Men's Office. He left in '64, and returned to Detroit where he studied at Michigan's Center for Higher Education. Upon his return in 1966, he was sent by the Student Affairs Office to work in Southwest, which was opening tha year.

In 1970, he became an Assistant Dean of Students, a post he still holds.

CHAMPION TERMPAPERS
638 Beacon St. (#803)
Boston, Mass. 02215
617-536-9700

Research material for Termpapers, Reports, Theses, etc. LOWEST PRICES. QUICK SERVICE. For information, please write or call.

Senate Note Service
S.S.L.N.P.

2nd half of semester begins Oct. 30th

HALF-SEMESTER	$2.75	2 (50 minute lectures/wk.)
	$3.50	3 (50 minute lectures/wk.) or 2 (75 minute lectures/wk.)
DAILY	$.25	50 minute lecture
	$.40	75 minute lecture

All courses covered the first half of this semester are being continued.

Senate Committee Calendar

FOR THE WEEK OF 10/30--11/5

Committee & Chairman		Main topic of discussion
Services, Bob McGrath	Mon., Oct 30, 7 p.m., Room 903, CC	Bitch Day analysis
Women's Committee, Mari Earnest	Mon., Oct 30, 7:30, Room 802, CC	Committee reports
Rents & Fees, Mike Gregory	Tues., Oct. 31, 6:30, Room 802, CC	Women's directory and newsletter
Academic Affairs, Nick Apostola	Tues., Oct. 31, 7 p.m., Room 811, CC	Rent refunds
Budgets, Paul Doran	Tues., Oct. 31, 7 p.m., Room 165, CC	Southwest dog catcher
Financial Affairs, Paul Hamel	Wed., Nov. 1, 5:30, Room 177, CC	Tenure policies
Governmental Affairs, David Booker	Sun., Nov. 5, 7 p.m., Room 801, CC	Student publications
Student Matters, Elliot Sherman	Sun., Nov. 5, 7 p.m., to be announced	Financial Policy Act financial transactions Committee appointments RSO constitutions Student Affairs Staff Evaluation

Japan And China Sign Trade Pact

TOKYO (AP) - Japan and Communist China signed a private trade agreement in Peking on Sunday, calling for $120 million in two-way trade for 1973, up 30 per cent from the expected trade volume for this yar.

In a dispatch from Peking, Japan's Kyodo news service said the signing of the memorandum trade agreement came after five days of negotiations by Chinese trade officials and a Japanese delegation which included farm products and livestock feed importers and officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry.

FIVE COLLEGE
January Flight
December 29, 1972
January 20, 1973
Round-trip
Boston - Paris
$165.00
All UMass students, staff, faculty and dependents are eligible to apply.
Full payment required by November 22.
INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS OFFICE
238 Whitmore Building
Tel. 545-2710
Amherst

See UMASS. vs. BUCKNELL on Nov. 4th

Deluxe Peter Pan Bus ride near the beautiful Dutch Country area, leaving Friday Aft. and returning Saturday evening.

Spacious Motel accommodations — 2 people in a room with 2 double beds.

Tickets for the game.

All for the low cost of $24.95

Call 5-0585 or 5-0587 for information.
Ask for Russ Sobelman (No later than Nov. 1st)

In The Nation And The World

Hanoi Says U.S. Must Sign On Tuesday

VIETNAM PRINCIPALS--These are some of the principals in the Vietnam situation. Top, from left, are President Richard Nixon; South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and North Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong. Bottom, from left, are Le Duc Tho, North Vietnamese peace negotiator; Dr. Henry Kissinger, Nixon's adviser who said in Washington Thursday "peace is at hand" in Vietnam; and Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese delegate to the Paris peace talks. (AP)

(AP) — North Vietnam's spokesman at the Paris peace talks was quoted yesterday as saying Hanoi decided to disclose the secret Vietnam peace agreement last week as a means of forcing the United States to sign it this Tuesday.

The Nixon administration says a few more details must be worked out before the agreement can be signed and a cease-fire put into effect.

Hanoi is demanding that the agreement must be signed in Paris on Tuesday, claiming that President Nixon himself suggested that date.

The North Vietnamese spokesman in Paris, Nguyen Thanh Le, was quoted by the Hungarian Communist newspaper Nepszabadsag in Budapest as saying that once it appeared there would not likely be a signing by Tuesday, the Hanoi government decided to announce that an agreement had been reached by Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's special adviser, and the envoys from Hanoi.

The newspaper said in a dispatch from its Paris correspondent that it had been told by Le that the United States changed the signing date three times before Nixon proposed an Oct. 31 date in a message to the North Vietnamese premier.

"In his Oct. 20 message to Premier Pham Van Dong of the Dmocratic Republic of Vietnam, President Nixon suggested Oct. 31 as the igning date, referring to the draft agreement as "fait accompli'," Le was quoted as saying.

"He also proposed that plenipotentiaries of the two countries should initial the draft agreement in advance of that date in Hanoi.

"We have agreed that the agreement be signed in Paris Oct. 31. We demand that our accord to that effect be kept by the other side."

The North Vietnamese Communist party newspaper said Sunday the Vietnamese people will step up their fight to liberate South Vietnam so long as the United States continues its "war of aggression and refuses to sign the proposed peace agreement."

The newspaper Nhan Dan added that the United States "used a pretext of difficulties in Saigon" to delay what must be done according to the timetable already agreed upon.

In Moscow, Pravda urged the United States not to pass up a chance to end the Vietnam war and said there was no justification for delay in signing the agreement.

Vladimir Mikhailov, a commentator for the Soviet Communist party organ, wrote: "To miss again an opportunity for a peaceful settlement of the Vietnam problem is to assume a grave responsibility to the peoples of the world.

Pope Paul VI expressed hope the agreement would bring "true peace" in accordance with the desires of the Vietnamese people and the world.

Tran Van Lam, South Vietnam's foreign minister, said in an interview with The New York Times that his government will not accept a cease-fire agreement that does not provide for withdrawal of all North Vietnamese forces from South Vietnam and re-establishment of the demilitarized zone that separates the two Vietnams.

These are points that President Nguyen Van Thieu raised last week in a speech that seemed to balk at the U.S.-North Vietnamese agreement.

In Brief...

Britain Trying To Restore Relations With China

PEKING (AP)-Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home arrived here Sunday to try to restore British-Chinese understanding, with problems of peacemaking and peacekeeping in Vietnam high on a four-day work program.

Within an hour or two of arriving, Douglas-Home, his wife, and senior aides were strolling through and inspecting the splendors of the 500-year-old Forbidden City.

But the business side of the visit swiftly got under way when the first British foreign secretary ever to visit China went into session with his opposite number, Chi Peng Pei, at the Great Hall of the People in downtown Peking.

Reputation Of French As Lovers Suffers

PARIS (AP)-A new survey on sex life in France, described as a Gallice Kinsey report, damages the reputation of Frenchmen as expert lovers and shows similarities between the French sex scene of the 1970s and that of the United States in the 1930s and '40s.

3 Die In Aircraft Carrier Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) - A fire broke out aboard a U.S. aircraft carrier in Singapore Harbor Sunday and three Navy men died of smoke inhalation, the Navy said.

A spokesman said six navy men suffered minor injuries and six others were treated and sent back to duty.

The ship incurred only minor smoke and water damage and according to senior officers aboard, is still fit for operations.

The Navy spokesman said the fire broke out in one of the Saratoga's machinery rooms and was quickly contained.

An investigation has been started to determine the cause, the Navy said.

A number of Singapore civilians were working in the Saratoga at the time but were not hurt, the Navy spokesman said.

There have been other accidents recently on Navy ships in the Far East, the most serious being an explosion in a gun turrent of the cruiser, Newport News, in which over 20 sailors were killed.

Allende's 2nd Anniversary Hot

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - An impeachment threat against four cabinet ministers and continuing antigovernment strikes cast a closed Sunday over President Salvador Allende's upcoming second anniversary in power.

Sunday meant, however, a temporary letup in the political tensions that have sparked days of street violence in the capital since the strikes began three weeks ago.

Housewives, bundled up against chill breezes coming down from the snow-frosted Andes Mountains overlooking Santiago, purchased hot meat and cheese pies called "empanadas" that are a Sunday lunch staple in Chile.

But a Sunday afternoon drive up into the mountains or into the blossoming countryside was made difficult by a weekend ban on sales of gasoline made scarce by the prolonged trucking strike which began Oct. 10.

The anti-market opposition, President Allende and his advisers had meetings Sunday to plan for the crucial week ahead.

President Allende, a Marxist who celebrates the second anniversary of his inauguration on Friday, cut off negotiations with the so-called "Unified Command" of strikers Friday night, charging they made political demands he could not accept.

He accused them of wanting to be recognized as "co-legislators."

The strikers, in addition to the truckers, now include small businessmen, shopkeepers, bank employes, doctors, lawyers, engineers, dentists and private school teachers.

The Command's back-to-work demands include respect to medium and small industry and guarantees for freedom of the press and expression in Chile.

The president claims the strikes have cost Chile more than $100 million.

Allende's decision to cut off negotiations, the Command said in a public statement Sunday, "opens an abyss of uncertainty for the future of the nation."

In the opposition-controlled Congress, the Confederation of Democracy of all of Chile's anti-Marxist political parties decided to begin impeachment proceedings against four of Allende's cabinet ministers, claiming they have violated the constituion in carrying out their duties.

In Chile, a simple majority in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate is enough to impeach any or all of the president's 15-member cabinet, and the opposition has the votes.

The confederation said the impeachment proceedings would be taken against Jaime Suarez, minister of the interior; Carlos Matus, minister of the economy; Jacques Chonochol, minister of agriculture; and Anibal Palma, minister of education.

EXHIBITION AND SALE

ORIGINAL ORIENTAL ART

UMass. Campus Center

Monday, Oct. 30 11:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 31 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Arranged by Marson Ltd., Baltimore, Md.

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 12345

WANTS 4 U. MASS. FILM CONSULTANTS

to help promote our films on campus & get publicity

Enthusiasm, film knowledge, reliability.

Write your qualifications to —

John P. Lowe, Dist. Mgr.

c/o SHOWCASE CINEMAS

Worcester, Mass. 01608

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 12345

NOW PLAYING

Paramount Pictures Presents A Jalfilms, Inc. Production

"BAD COMPANY"

JEFF BRIDGES

BARRY BROWN

JIM DAVIS

DAVID HUDDLESTON

PG

JERRY LEWIS TWIN CINEMA

HAMP SHOPPING PLAZA - NEXT TO BIG Y RTE. 5 FITZ. 584-3704

CINEMA I

The Godfather

R Color by Technicolor A Paramount Picture

Mon. - Fri. 7:30

Sat. - Sun. 5:00 and 8:15

CINEMA II

'MELINDA'

Your Kind of Black Movie

Nitely at 7:00 & 9:00

MATINEE

Saturday - Sunday 2:00 and 4:00

KING KONG

Disc. With Student I.D.

With a free Godfather game Monday and Tuesday.

Canadian Election: Verdict On Trudeau

TORONTO (AP) - Canada's voters choose Monday from a record number of candidates for Parliament in an election whose outcome will be a national verdict on four years of rule by Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal party expects to win enough House of Commons seats to permit him to form another government. It hopes he will win another clear majority of House members.

The Liberals are expected to come out on top again, but they must worry about the margin of victory. They do not want to fall short of a majority in the House because that would make it difficult to rule.

Four years ago Trudeau's party made a spectacular sweep that proved to be a disaster for his chief rivals, the Conservatives. The Liberals won 46 per cent of the popular vote, 152 of the 264 House seats and a comfortable working majority, a clear mandate to the party to carry out its programs. This year Trudeau's campaign seemed to start sluggishly, though it picked up steam in the final laps.

The Canadian system is based on the British. The party winning the most Commons seats has the privilege of forming a government.

Should Trudeau emerge with the most House members but without a clear majority, he might feel impelled to call a new election before long. Elections must be held at least once every five years, but a prime minister can dissolve Parliament and call an election whenever he sees fit.

In all, 1,116 candidates are contending for the 264 seats, a new record. Four years ago there were 967.

Conservatives, led by Robert L. Stanfield, are running in all 264 districts. Liberals are running in 263, choosing not to oppose one Ontario independent. The socialist New Democratic party under David Lewis has candidates in 251 districts and the Social Credit party, now called by its French name, Crediteste, in 164.

The Trudeau government has had to be defensive on some fronts, especially with regard to the major issue of the campaign - rising unemployment at a time of soaring living costs.

The Toronto Star, for the first time in 50 years, has withdrawn its support of the Liberals, specifically on the unemployment issue and the question of Canadian economic independence from the United States.

Price Control Cutoff Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)-C.Jackson Grayson Jr., chairman of the Price Commission, says he sees no reason for continuing controls beyond their expiration date of next April.

Grayson said he has read arguments about the possibility of large wage increases and price pressures that might follow the lifting of controls but said:

"I don't think those arguments are persuasive enough to cause me to feel that controls should be continued-once the President has made the basic decision that stability has been reached."

Grayson gave his views in a copyrighted interview in the magazine U.S. News & World Report.

Grayson was asked if he wanted controls continued in any form. "None," he answered, and added that this is his personal feeling and the decision is up to the Prsident.

Answering another question, Grayson said he is concerned about wage increases that are coming up.

"We have wage agreements covering 4.5 million workers coming up next year," he said. "But on the other hand, when I look at the problems created by controls, I would rather return to the free market system for both labor and management than to continue the controls."

Controls are popular now, "too popular," he said. Polls show that about 60 to 70 per cent of the public favor retaining the controls," he said.

Grayson said the record on holding down prices has been very good in the year that he has been in office and, "a little bit better than we had hoped it might be at this point."

The rate of inflation the past six months has been 2.5 per cent, he said, within the range of 2 to 3 per cent by the end of 1972 set by the President.

"Our own figures indicate roughly that the rate of inflation has been at least 1.5 per cent below what it might have been otherwise," he said.

3 Olympic Terrorists Freed

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Three Palestinian guerrillas hijacked a West German jetliner with 20 other persons aboard over Turkey on Sunday, and under a threat to blow it up, won the release from Germany of three Arab commandos accused of taking part in the Munich Olympic massacre.

They took the three captive commandos aboard the plane in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, and then forced the plane to come to this Arab nation, which has expressed sympathy with the Palestinian terrorists.

The hijackers had ordered the plane to Zagreb after a smaller jet flew there from West Germany with the three captive commandos. The commandos then transferred to the jetliner and took off again for Libya.

West German officials said three Arabs, identified as members of the Black September organization, seized the Lufthansa 727 jet over Turkey early in the day and ordered it flown to Munich with refueling stops at Nicosia, Cyprus and Zagreb.

But police cars, ambulances and other vehciles at Munich's airport apparently frightened the hijackers away and they ordered the plane back to Zagreb, even though the West Germans had agreed to free the commandos.

The hijacked aricraft circled Zagreb while West Germany obtained permission from the Yugoslav government to turn over the prisoners at the Zagreb airport.

With this permission granted, an executive jet took off from Munich with the three comanndos on board. It landed a short while later at Zagreb and only then did the hijacked plane, running low on fuel, set down once again.

After negotiations between the hijackers and the Germans, the three commandos then walked from the executive jet to the three-engine Boeing 727, a short-range aircraft.

Once more the jetliner was refueled and it took off again with the passengers, crew and six Arab guerrillas on board. The plane had been hijacked after it took off from Beirut, Lebanon, en route to a stop at Ankara, Turkey.

The Israeli govenment appealed to West Germany not to free the three Arabs, saying this would "aggravate the Minich disaster" in which 11 Israeli athletes, a Munich policeman and five Arab commandos were killed.

The Black September organization claimed responsibility for the Olympic massacre.

When word reached Israel that the Germans had let the three commandos go, a senior Israeli Cabinet minister described Bonn's decision as a "dreadful, unforgivable act" and "an extravagant capitulation."

Israeli Galili told newsmen Israel will not reconcile itself to the freeing of terrorists.

Hijackers Kill Man, Then Fly To Cuba

MIAMI, FLA. (AP) - Four armed hijackers burst aboard an Eastern Air Lines plane carrying 40 persons and forced it to fly to Cuba early Sunday after killing one man and wounding another on the ground in Houston, Tex.

The shotgun-wielding leader of the four called himself "Prof. Klink" and boasted he was a businessman who had just quit a $28,000-a-year job, according to passengers arriving in Miami aboard the bulletscarred plane after spending more than seven hours in Havana.

The Boeing 727 rolled up to gate 46 at Miami International Airport Sunday afternoon with several bullet holes in the viewing window of the main entrance . Two other gunshots had penetrated the door itself.

The dead man was a gate agent for Eastern. Another Eastern employe was wounded in the arm.

None of the passengers or crew was hurt during the flight.

"In Houston, some of us heard and some of us saw a series of shots," said Dallas Morning News reporter Sam Kinch Jr., who was a passenger aboard the jetliner.

"They sounded like firecrackers. I saw three shots fired," he said, adding that he did not see the gate agent get shot.

Kinch said the "guy who called himself Prof. Klink said he wanted to go to Cuba...They ordered us to put our hands over our heads. This guy who called himself Klink came on the microphone and said that no one should move or they would be shot on sight."

The three-engined aircraft, crrying 33 passengers and seven crew members, was forced to make an intermediate stop in New Orleans for refueling before the predawn flight to Havana.

Mrs. George P. Franklin of Houston, one of the passengers. said on arrival here that the leader of the hijackers was armed with a shotgun and was about 45 years old. The other three hijackers, also armed, were in their 20s, she said.

Kinch described the elder hijacker as resembling "a Prussian infantry captain."

"He said he wanted to go to Cuba because that was 'the only place that a person could endure the benefits of freedom,'" Kinch said.

GIVE A LITTLE

Give to UNICEF

Today - Monday, October 30

10 - 3 Outside Hatch, Bookstore & Bluewall

6 - 9 in Dorms

Sponsored by Greeks

Make HALLOWEEN a fun time!

Join the crew of

THE Rusty Scupper

ON TUES. OCT. 31st

Enjoy the best in food & drink while being entertained by that titillating trio

The Deadly Nightshade

HAPPY HOUR from 12 Midnight 'til 1:00 a.m.! surprises for everyone in costume

Don't miss it!

529 Belchertown Rd. 256-8551

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.

They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____

(Signature) _____ (Date) _____

Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

McG-If Elected Would Honor Nixon Viet Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. George McGovern said Sunday he would be happy if President Nixon negotiated an end to the Indochina war even on election eve. But he said if he were elected he would move to renegotiate any settlement involving continuing military aid to South Vietnam.

The agreements tentatively reached by presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiators, information from both sides indicates, would permit the United States to keep South Vietnamese military equipment up to strength but bar unlimited military aid by this country.

McGovern was interviewed on the NBC television-radio program "Meet the Press."

"If an agreement is signed obviously I'm going to honor it," he replied. But he added he would reserve the right to try to renegotiate agreements of which he disapproved.

"I would, with consultation with Congress, call for termination of any military aid to the regime in Saigon," he said.

McGovern said he would "not rule out some economic and technical assistance," especially if the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu had been replaced, by January, by a "coalition representing various factions."

"Even if Mr. Nixon waits until the day before the election and we read that at long last the position I advocated has been vindicated...I am perfectly willing for Mr. Nixon to be given credit due for ending the war," he said.

"I can't prove the settlement was geared to the election timetable," he said. "I am only puzzled why it did not come earlier."

The Democratic presidential nominee said the central difference between his position and Nixon's is that "I always put the withdrawal of our forces and the release of our prisoners ahead of the continuance of Mr. Thieu in power of Saigon.

McGovern repeated his position on amnesty for those who went to prison or fled the country to avoid Vietnam service.

"I never at any time advocated amnesty for deserters, because in many cases deserters are people who committed crimes," he said. "But for those who on grounds of conscience have either gone to jail or into exile, I said once the war is over, the prisoners home, the soldiers back, then we should have amnesty."

Nixon Repeats 'No Amnesty'

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon repeated Sunday his "no-amnesty" pledge and sounded a call for a strong national defense as "an incentive for negotiation leading to peace."

In another in his series of paid radio network broadcasts, Nixon told the nation what he pledged Saturday to the parents of a soldier killed in Vietnam: "There will be no amnesty for draft-dodgers and deserters after the war."

His statement, the strongest yet on the amnesty question, came after he said that "as this long and difficult war draws to an end, it is time to draw the line on this issue once and for all."

"Millions of Americans chose to serve their country in Vietnam. Many gave their lives for their choice," Nixon said. "The few hundred who refused to serve or who deserted their country must pay a penalty for their choice."

Thus, in the broadcast from the White House library, Nixon repeated what he told Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lorence Saturday when he halted his campaign motorcade near their home in Mantua Corners, Ohio.

The references to amnesty came in a 15-minute address in which Nixon discussed defense policy, calling it "the most important single issue in this election."

He never mentioned Democratic nominee George McGovern by name, but said, "Our opponents have proposed massive new cuts in military spending-cuts which would drastically slash away not just the fat but the muscle of our defense."

The President ticked off McGovern's specific proposals and contended they would reduce the United States to the second-strongest nation and would mean "peace and freedom will be in deadly jeopardy everywhere in the world."

"Strength and resolution command respect. They are an incentive for negotiation leading to peace," Nixon said. "But weakness and naive sentimentality breed contempt. They are an open invitation to pressure tactics and aggression leading to war."

Unlike the other great powers, Nixon said, America is trusted with power by all the peoples of the earth.

"For the United States to abdicate its leadership role in the world, or to attempt to meet its responsibilities through good intentions alone, without the backing of a strong defense, would be one of the greatest tragedies of history," Nixon said.

"Let us never go down that road."

Campaign '72

AFL-CIO Reports Spending Up

WASHINGTON (AP)-Director Al Barkan of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education reports record spending of nearly $2 million on this year's elections despite holdouts by some unions opposed to the abor federation's neutrality in the presidential race.

"It's more than we've ever given in the past," Barkan said in an interview in which he reported that most of the money went to House and Senate candidates.

COPE would have collected and spent even more if some major AFL-CIO unions, including Communications Workers, Machinists, Retail Clerks, Meat Cutters and State, County and Municipal Employes, had not cut off all political contributions through COPE.

These unions support Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern and are handling their own political contributions in that race and in Congress.

"Sure they've hurt us," Barkan conceded, but denied reports that the big labor political fund is in trouble.

Barkan said COPE's income and political spending were the highest in the organization's 17-year history by any measurement.

Contributions to House and Senate candidates totaled $1,052,000 so far, compared with $824,436 in the 1968 congressional elections and $783,076 in 1970.

The rest of nearly $2 million raised this year is being sent to COPE's state organizations to help in voter registration and get-out-the-vote drives, and to some governorship candidates.

Barkan said total COPE income so far this year was $1,832,597 plus another $71,390 given by some unions against their 1973 quota, which could be spent this year.

The total includes $1,129,221 in union contributions of "non-voluntary" funds-that is dues money or other income- which under federal law can only be spent by COPE on nonpartisan activities such as voter registration and get-out-the-vote drives.

Collins To Campaign In Sylvan

James G. Collins, Democratic candidate for State Representative, will campaign tonight in the Sylvan residential area for votes in the November 7th general election.

Collins, accompanied by his campus coordinator Reid Fishman and Student Senator Skip Casper, will campaign door-to-door in Brown, Cashin, and McNamara dorms, beginning about 7 p.m.

Last night the 26-year-old Democratic candidate campaigned door-to-door in dorms in the Northeast Quadrangle.

Collins is scheduling a minimum of two campaign appearances in the Southwest residential complex before election day.

WMUA's 'Focus'

Tonight on WMUA's "Focus" program at 10 P.M., commentator Ken Mosakowski will host a discussion on local grass-roots efforts on behalf of Senator George McGovern's Presidential campaign.

Panelists on tonight's live, 60-minute forum will be construction worker Lloyd Middleton of Greenfield, City Charter Commissioner John Lawlor, Jr., of Northampton, schoolteacher Mrs. Nadine Gallo of Hadley, and UMass students Jo Ann Dominick and Sue Banford. All the panelists have canvassed door-to-door for McGovern, and they will offer some statistics on voter response to Senator McGovern's candidacy.

FINE ARTS QUARTET
Frank Glazer, Pianist
Thurs., Nov. 2

Perform Brahms Piano Quintet in F and Works by Haydn and Ginastera. Tickets $1.50 UM Undergrads/Others $3.00.

Ah Ahk: Performing Arts of Korea
Friday, Nov. 3.

Classical Courts and Chamber Music, Military, Religious and Folk Music and dances of Korea . . . Tickets $1 UM Undergrads/Others $1.50.

Young Artist Showcase

Daniel Adni

Thurs - Fri, Nov. 9 - 10

Exciting twenty year old pianist in his American debut performing two different programs including works by Beethoven, Ravel, Brahms and Prokofiev!

Tickets: $1.50
To UMass Undergrad and $3 others

Fine Arts Council/125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0202 for tickets.

Eastern's Leisure Class. Sometimes it's Coach. Sometimes it's First Class. Sometimes it's Free.

If Coach is full and First Class isn't, you get First Class.

You'll get a seat in First Class. Drink First Class drinks and enjoy First Class service.

And you still enjoy the Youth Fare.

11% of all the people who bought a Leisure Class ticket last year got a First Class seat.

Usually you pay Youth Fare and you get a seat in Coach.

After you buy a Leisure Class ticket at the regular Youth Fare, any of three things can happen.

Since Leisure Class is a Conditional Reservation, it's possible you won't get on the flight you made a reservation for. But, if you do, you'll usually get a seat in Coach.

If the plane is full, you spend time waiting but no money flying.

You get a seat in the lobby. Then we refund your money and send you off on our next flight with an available seat. Free.

We invented Leisure Class to solve the age-old airline problem of "no shows" (people who make reservations, but don't show up for the flight). Since Leisure Class saves us the money we would lose on "no shows," we don't mind letting Leisure Class passengers save their money when everybody does show up.

Last year, 95% of the people who bought a Leisure Class ticket got on the plane they wanted.

The rest (over 12,000 people) got a free ride.

To qualify, just make a Leisure Class reservation as you would a reservation for First or Coach. Then, be at the boarding gate with your Leisure Class ticket 20 minutes before flight time.

If you have to wait for a flight with an available seat, it might be anywhere from several minutes to several hours. Of course, the number of Leisure Class reservations is limited per flight and not available on all our flights to all destinations or on all fares. Nor when the plane itself is grounded due to equipment, substitutions or failures or weather conditions.

So call Eastern Airlines at 800 631-5720. Or call your travel agent. They're the only ones who can tell you about Leisure Class.

EASTERN The Wings of Man.

"The Wings of Man" is a registered service mark of Eastern Air Lines, Inc.

Ad No. PB-15485-NY
Boston University
Newspapers – October, 1972
1000 lines (5 cols. x 200 lines)
This advertisement prepared by Young & Rubicam, N.Y.

Copy – Sylvia Art – Carlisle

U. of Massachusetts

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL	Ed Fogarty
SPORTS	Bill Ballou
DARKROOM	Steve Smith, Marcia Lappin, George Withers
AD LAYOUT	Nadine Gray

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Reverse The Decision

Next Tuesday is a crucial day for America. After a long, hard campaign, Americans will be going to the polls to determine what direction the country will take for the next four years.

The Student Senate has asked that all classes be cancelled on this important day so that everyone will be able to take part in the democratic process. The Senate's suggestion then went to the Chancellor, who brought it to the Rules Committee of the Faculty Senate, where it was rejected. The Chancellor has decided to abide by the Faculty decision, and at this point in time classes are still slated to be held on the 7th.

The Chancellor should reverse his decision. While it is true that most people have their minds made up as to who they will vote for by election day, it does not mean that there isn't work to do. We feel that on November 7th a large body of students working to get people to the polls (and getting out to vote themselves) would be facilitated by the cancellation of classes. It is also worth noting that a number of other schools have already cancelled classes on the 7th.

We would also urge students not to abuse the privilege by doing nothing. While we do not anticipate this happening, it has been heard as an argument against cancellation. Even if one is not registered in Amherst he/she could still assist in getting out the vote. There are also other things that can be done, such as going home and helping out there, or working at the headquarters of the candidate of your choice, either here or at home. This is a critical election, let's hope we can be allowed to participate as fully as possible.

'LET'S FACE IT, GEORGE...WE'RE IN TROUBLE!'

Steve Tripoli

Dangerous Precedents

As I sit in the Collegian office on this rainy Sunday, T-minus nine days to the election and counting, and look at campaign coverage in the various newspapers spread before me, some very telling, very frightening commentaries on the state of the nation reveal themselves.

There probably aren't many people who have picked up a newspaper in the last couple of weeks who haven't seen a picture of one of the candidates for president eating pizza with the Italians, cabbage with the Irish, or swapping jokes with the Lithuanians. It's been a very ethnic campaign. The ethnicity of the campaign is one of the frightening comm.entaries I've noticed. Here we are in America 1972, with all the racial problems of the moment, and here are the people, still turning up at rallies for their candidate dressed the way people dress "in the old country" wherever that may be. And no one thinks anything of it.

But this bold display of misplaced nationalism is very telling and very frightening indeed. The fact that people in America still have the need to say that they're damn proud to be one of their race is one of the reasons that we stand today a nation divided. Until our puprose becomes one, until we all become Americans, not Polish and Franco-Americans, we will remain a nation divided. And no candidate is going to change it.

Another even more disturbing aspect of campaign '72 is the threat of repression hanging over everyone's head. The frightening thing is that no one cares. The fact that the average American considers Watergate "just politics" is a sympton of what can easily become a suicidal case of national apathy. No, America, Watergate is NOT "just politics" by any stretch of the imagination. When the headquarters of a major political party in a large democracy are bugged, this is not a case of political games. When the New York Times is moved to a state of near panic at the prospect of the election of a candidate for public office, claiming in a policy editorial that his election is a prelude to a police state, there is cause for alarm.

Of course, the Times is biased, because the fact of the matter is that their offices are bugged by the government, too. The only reason they don't raise hell about it is that they prefer having their offices bugged to losing their contacts in high places, which would happen if they complained.

In Time magainze magazine this week there's a story about the declaration of martial law in South Korea by President Park Chung Hee. Park stated that one of the reasons he declared martial law was to bring "irresponsible political parties" back to sanity. In Park's vocabularly "irresponsible political parties" are parties which don't see things the way Park Chung Hee sees them.

One of the first things the military did on taking over Greece was to suppress newspapers which disagreed with them. Of course, that's not the reason they gave for the suppression. The newspapers were probably acting "irresponsibility" in their version of the story.

So back in good old America (It can't happen here) we witness the bugging of the headquarters of a political party and the bugging of perhsaps the most respected nwspaper in the country, but we see no uproar. Maybe the country really doesn't care, but I can't see how the seriousness of the situation can escape people.

As things stand now there's a better than even chance that in nine days Richard Nixon will be re-elected President of the United States. Some even say he may achieve a record setting landslide. All that can be said is if that's what America wants, it's theirs. But bad precedents have already been set. Four More Years, and with a mandate at that, could make Richard Nixon start thinking like Park Chung Hee. But that doesn't matter. The President knows best, right? Anyway, it'll save everyone a lot of work. If the '76 elections are called off due to the "irresponsibility" of opposition we won't have to go through the bother of another tedious election for a long time.

Steve Tripoli is Executive Editor of the Collegian.

Only One Poll Counts

By KENNETH MOSAKOWSKI

They are saying that it's all over for George McGovern.

"They" are the pollsters, the columnists, the pundits, the bookmakers, even many erstwhile McGovern supporters.

After all, who can argue with the almight Newsweek (Oct. 11):

"In St. Louis last week, James J. Carroll, nationally known betting commissioner, disclosed the current betting odds against a Democratic victory in November are 15 to 1....From Princeton, New Jersey, George Gallop's Institute of Public Opinion continued to show a landslide defeat on the basis of polls."

Or U.S. News and World Report (Oct. 8):

"Campaigning, on the basis of the present line-up of States, appears to have had little or no influence upon the trend of sentiment or upon the probable vote. The G.O.P candidate, sensing the victory that seems to be his for the asking, has avoided a slam-bang type of campaign. He has tried, instead, to speak as the President and to avoid arousing the opposition. His Democratic opponent has sought to pick a fight, but without much success...The big question now is whether the Democratic candidate might have won if he had taken his stand on domestic issues less far to the left..."

The media are cranking out gloom like this about 1972 campaign every day, and I suppose that most people reading the above remarks can't help being negatively influenced about McGovern's chances.

However, the above comments were not written about the McGovern campaign, they are two representative samples of the sage predictions written about Harry Truman's assured defeat by Thomas Dewey in November, 1948. Despite the forebodings of the "experts" (like Fortune pollster Elmo Roper who gave Dewey a 52%-37% edge), Truman went on to beat Dewey by 2,188,054 votes. Truman carried 27 states for a total of 303 electoral votes, winning 49.6% of the popular vote to Dewey's 45.1%.

I believe that George McGovern can pull off a similar upset.

Despite the polls. Despite the Republicans $50,000,000 campaign fund. Despite the new Nixon-Kissinger "peace negotiations" which were impossible until just two weeks before the election.

It will require a lot of work, but I believe that the McGovern-Shriver ticket can carry 19 states and the District of Columbia, for a total of 313 electoral votes--43 more than the 270 electoral votes needed to win the election. The states are: Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

I know that a lot of people will prefer to believe the wisdom of George Gallop, Elmo Roper, and the rest of the "experts." But I can recall campaigning for McGovern in March, 1971, when only 3% of the nation's Democrats--according to the polls--thought McGovern should be the Democratic Presidential nominee.

Sissy Farenthold, the runner-up candidate for Vice-President at the Democratic National Convention, delivered probably the best evaluation I've heard about polls. "The only polls that count," she said, "are the polls that close at 8 P.M. on Tuesday, November 7th."

PEACE TIME ... PEACE TIME ....

The Next Four Years

(Editor's Note: The following is the New York Times endorsement of George McGovern of 9/28/72. It is reprinted here for your consumption.)

In less than six weeks, we, the American people, will be choosing the President and Vice President of the United States for the next four years. But we will be doing more than that; we will be determining whether we want this country to continue along the course it has been taking during the past four years, or whether we want to restore to American political life its traditional values of democratic liberalism and social concern.

In an America striving to realize its own vision of equality and liberty under the rule of law, the Presidency requires particular qualities of character, leadership and moral force that transcend the narrow bounds of personal ambition and of party politics. It requires a perception of the things that are wrong with America - politically, socially, economically, morally - as well as the things that are right; and a sense of priorities that gives precedence to human needs and public integrity over the panoply of wealth and the arrogance of power.

****

The New York Times urges the election of George McGovern for President of the United States. We believe that Senator McGovern's approach to public questions, his humanitarian philosophy and humane scale of values, his courage and his forthrightness can offer a new kind of leadership in American political life. We believe he can restore a sense of purpose to the American people as a whole, a sense of participation to their component parts and a sense of integrity to their Government.

In these respects, it seems to us, the Presidency of Richard M. Nixon had largely failed.

Mr. Nixon has indeed had his spectacular triumphs; and this newspaper has never hesitated to applaud the accomplishments of the President and his Administration when we thought that he was serving the best interests of the American people, even when in doing so he was adopting policies that he had spent a lifetime in opposing. But despite his best efforts - in regard to China, the Soviet Union, economic controls and so on - Mr. Nixon has failed both in principle and in practice in other areas of public policy even more vital than those in which he has scored his successes.

Not only has Mr. Nixon failed to carry out his explicit pledge to end the Vietnam conflict, on which he won the election by a hair's breadth four years ago; he has pursued a policy that appears to move in one direction while actually moving in another. Constantly emphasizing the winding down of the war and the withdrawal of American troops, Mr. Nixon has nevertheless enlarged the scope of hostilities, undertaken the biggest bombing campaign in history and committed American prestige to an increasingly authoritatirn regime in Saigon.

The Vietnam war is but one area where President Nixon has failed either to carry out his pledge or to give the nation the moral and political leadership that would indeed unite us - as he promised to do four years ago. This Administration appears to be without basic philosophy, without deeply held values, an Administration whose guiding principle is expediency and whose overriding purpose is to remain in office.

The pursuit of excellence has been subordinated to pursuit of the next election, as evidenced by some of Mr. Nixon's appointments in such ultra-sensitive areas of Government as the Department of Justice and the Supreme Court, In many of its social, economic and fiscal policies; in lax standards of probity and truthfulness in government; in favoritism toward special interests; in its addiction to secrecy; in its disregard to civil liberties and constitutional rights, the Nixon Administration has been a failure.

President Nixon has shown himself willing to exacerbate America's racial divisions for purely political purposes; he has countenanced and encouraged an ominous erosion of individual rights and First Amendment freedoms, and has demonstrated his indifference to such dangers by deliberately selecting Spiro T. Agnew as his potential successor to the Presidency. Protected by the White House curtain, he has stood above the political battle as the odor of corruption and of sleazy campaign practices rises above the Washington battlefield.

****

A McGovern administration, The Times believes, would reverse the unmistakable drift in Washington away from government of, by and for the people. It is undeniable that since his nomination Senator McGovern has been on the defensive, partly because of the Eagleton episode, partly because of ill-considered comments on specific points that he has subsequently modified or corrected, and partly because of the confused management of his own campaign. But on his record, and on what he has consistently stood for in his years of public office - a consistency in striking contrast to that of his opponent - it is clear that Mr. McGovern will fight for effective and necessary reforms in American social, political and economic institutions.

What this election comes down to is a decision on the direction in which the United States is going to move for the next four years.

Are we going to continue to pursue a foreign policy that, for all its success in certain areas, is essentially basd on military supremacy, on a strident nationalism and on a cynical power game that could alienate this country from substantial segments of the international community?

Are we going to continue to pursue a domestic policy that, in its fundamentals, is contemptuous of civil liberties, oblivious of deep social conflicts and racial and economic cleavages in the cities of America, and oriented toward that very "military-industrial complex" against which President Eisenhower perceptively warned us so many years ago?

On virtually every major issue from the war to taxes, from education to environment, from civil liberties to national defense, Mr. McGovern - faltering though many of his statements have been - seems to us to be moving with the right priorities, with faith in the common man, and within the democratic framework. While this newspaper does not necessarily accept his program in every detail as he has thus far outlined it or as the Democratic platform has structured it, we are convinced that the direction of American policy in the next four years would be in safer hands under a McGovern-Shriver administration than under the present regime.

There can be no doubt that Mr. McGovern is now far behind in the Presidential race. But if he succeeds in these next few weeks in getting his basic philosophy of democratic government across to the electorate, a philosophy that rejects the meretricious appeal of his opponents, Senator McGovern may yet touch a chord in the American voter that will respond to his own practical vision of an American society that cares and an American democracy that works.

Editorial Points

We wonder if, as a service to his country, Pell Pennington would be willing to give his job to Richard Nixon. It would fulfill Dick's lifelong dream, and get him off American's back.

***

Anyway, Nixon would be great for the job. He's been throwing bombs for years.

***

Is Boston College still claiming superiority in New England? Well, they said two years ago that they'd beat UMass at basketball. Final score was 85-77 UMass.

We wish someone would get things straight with the lights in the middle of campus. Last night they were off again. Physical Plant, are you there?

***

For those of you who are new here, we'd just like you to know that as far as the mud from the recent rain goes, you ain't seen nothing yet.

***

In case you haven't noticed, there aren't a heck of a lot of Letters to the Editor today. This is due to the fact that we didn't get many. Things aren't that good out there, are they?

Letters To The Editor

The Facts Need Help

To The Editor:

Most of you at the University probably won't be directly affected by the outcome of the November 7th presidential election. However there are millions of less fortunate Americans-children of subsistence and poverty level incomes, living in ghettos receiving second rate education and second rate medical care-who will be big losers if President Nixon defeats Senator McGovern as all the polls predict.

During the April primary, we were very fortunate to have many college students help canvass Holyoke and Chicopee for Senator McGovern's nomination.

We are sure that many of you want to help Senator McGovern overcome his position in the polls, but it will take work to disseminate the real facts to the voters.

If you have a few hours to spare, could you please give us a hand in canvassing these next two weeks. Please call and/or come to McGovern-Shriver Headquarters, corner Maple and Appleton Sts., Holyoke (533-0250).

Frances R. Abram
John Fitzgerald
Coordinators-McGovern-Shrive
Headquarters, Holyoke

Register Your Protest

To The Editor:

This letter is addressed to all Massachusetts voters of any political party who are dissatisfied with thier party's nominee for United States Senate and to all independent voters who find neither Mr. Droney, Mr. Gurewitz, nor Mr. Brooke an attractive candidate. We are encouraging all of you to vote, because of the importance of the other elections and referenda on the ballot. If you share our disappointment with the candidates for the important office of Senator, we urge you join us in our protest. Our write-in candidate is Eva Dinkin of 14 School Street, Beverly. We do not expect our totally unfinanced campaign to climax in her election; we rather wish to voice our protest at the choice offered by those candidates listed on the ballot. A vote for Eva Dinkin is a vote of protest against the mediocrities being offered us. Please join us in writing in the name of Eva Dinkin for United States Senator.

Incidentally, she is Cconstitutionally eligible to serve.

Edward Bryant
Amherst Chairman
Citizens for Eva Dinkin

A Plea For Help

To The Editor:

As many of you know, penny balloting for Las Vegas Nite Queen was held last week, October 24 thru October 27, at a table that was situated at the entrance to the University Store. The prime purpose was to raise money for the development of a Sensory-Motor playground at Belchertown State School. On Friday, October 27, between nine and ten o'clock, an ironically brief period following the start of the last full day of balloting, a green report by P. LaPalme entitled "Belchertown Nursery 11 Playground Project" was either intentionally or unintentionally taken from the balloting table. This report was not ours to keep but was to be used as a guide in our efforts to build the playground at Belchertown. As such it is essential to the ultimate success of this worthwhile and much overdo project.

On behalf of the unfortunate children at Belchertown State School and our brotherhood, I am pleading for the prompt return of this report that is so important to us and to the success of our planned playground.

Please bring it to the Lost and Found in the Campus Center or call either Ron at 546-9506, Charlie at 546-4648, Rick at 546-4390 or Jon at 546-5392 if you can help. NO QUESTIONS ASKED! Thank you very much.

Jonathan Weiner

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing either for content of space according to the judgement of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Tomorrow is HALLOWEEN gang... and your crass pals at FACES OF EARTH, not missing a bet, are dressing up their FALL CLEARANCE SALE... and calling it:

The FACES OF EARTH Halloween Party

next door to the Amherst Post Office

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 31

9:30 AM to MIDNIGHT

Costumes welcome ... apple bobbing contest

refreshments served

20% OFF on all Dresses Pipes Buck Knives

Here... Robbie the Robot models Indian print dress, pipe, & knife

Turkish Coats REG. 59.95 NOW 42.50

T.V. Star, THE BLOB tries one of these furry beauties on for size

5 only BEAUTIFUL, FULL LENGTH Leather Coats

...as seen below, worn by the: Invisible Man

REG. 149.50 NOW 89.50

CLASSIC!... LASTS A LIFETIME

Bedspreads REG. 6.95 7.95 NOW 4.95 5.95

Rugs... special selection 25% OFF

Bamboo Curtains REG. 8.95 NOW 6.50

Sheepskins REG. 8.50 NOW 6.25

Sleeping Bags

"Veeerry comfortable!" says our friend, the Count.

REG. 39.95 NOW 29.95

EARTHWARES

...Ghoulish yarns & weaving supplies!

SPECIAL on Vampire Vines & finespun wombats hair.

★ the EGGPLANT THAT ATE CHICAGO will sign autographs!

HEARTFELTS FRYE Boot Pen

HALLOWEEN SPECIAL REG. 38.00 NOW 30.00

this style in mens & ladies

2175 XI 8110

Clogs REG. 17.95 NOW 12.00

& last years sandals, never worn were 15.00 20.00 NOW 8.00

Soooo...

Why dont you make it down for some swell savings & a good time... stay until MIDNIGHT

Corduroy Jackets REG. 4.95 NOW 3.95

Pea Coats... warm as toast REG. 7.95 NOW 5.95

Blue Air Force Coats REG. 9.95 NOW 7.50

U.S. army sateen Overcoat with removable liner REG. 5.75 NOW 4.95

FACES OF EARTH

Funny Farm Dream Factory Offers 'Heavy Halloween'

FUNNY FARM DREAM FACTORY brings to you "THE HEAVY HALLOWEEN," a series of events especially conceived for Halloween Night at UMass.

First, at 8 P.M. will be the first showing of our series of HORROR FLICKS (described below) in the Campus Center Aud.

Secondly, and most importantly, from 9-11:30 comes the Most Maddening MASCARADE BALL that has ever happened! This happening will consist of many features. The Rock Group FEATHERBED (of Winter Carni '71 famed and enjoyed by many at the Blue Wall recently) will be playing for Dancemania. The comical Commonwealth Irregular Marching Band will be doing hilariously humorous skits, acts, and punchlines.

Naturally, at a mascarade ball, there has to be a Costume Judging Contest, so get your costume ready. For those who don't mind getting a little bit wet, there will be good old-fashioned Apple-Bobbing. Of course, due to the natural phenomena of hunger there will be candy, snacks, and our own Halloween Punch available to satisfy your natural needs. Also there will be various other appropriate activities condusive to macabre merry-making.

Admission is 69¢ with costume and 96¢ without. If you arrive in costume before 9:30 with one of our newspaper ads you receive a candied apple FREE.

Thirdly, and lastly, at MIDNIGHT the feature HORROR FLICKS will be shown again in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The feature Funny Farm Dream Factory Horror Flicks are: Edgar Allan Poe's macabre tale, "Fall of the House of Usher," which has been brought to the screen in a color production of blood-chilling suspense, lurking danger and dire dread. Against a melancholy and eerie background, an almost tangible creeping evil pervades the film as the climax builds in chilling suspense to its inevitable doom.

Also appearing will be Terror Trip #211 which is a special package series of short films consisting of Frankenstein, The Mummy, and a couple of Road Runner Cartoons.

All of these fabulous, fateful films will be brought to you by Funny Farm Dream Factory in the dark and mysterious confines of the Campus Center Auditorium, Tues. Night-Oct. 31st as part of THE HEAVY HALLOWEEN. They will be shown twice, to suit your convenience or your mood 8 P.M. AND 12 Midnight.

Center To Offer Steno Course

Everywoman's Center at UMass will offer an introductory lunch-hour course in stenography for non-professional women on campus beginning Nov. 1.

According to Mary LaSota of the center, the objectives are to give women in lower grade classifications the opportunity to learn the skills they need to be eligible for upgrading should such upgrading be available; and to act as a refresher course for those women who would like to renew their skills.

Classes will be Wednesdays and Fridays from 12 to 1 p.m. for ten weeks. If the students would like to continue this during the spring semester, arrangements can be made to do so.

The class will be limited to 25 students. Should the course not be filled by UMass non-professionals, the center will invite area non-professional women to enroll. There will be a small tuition fee and a book must be purchased. To register for the course, or obtain more information, contact Ms. Mary LaSota at Everywoman's Center, Munson Hall, 545-0883 or 545-0865.

HOW DOES YOUR CAR SAY HELP! QUICK!

IN AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION LANGUAGE?

Strange sounds . . . sluggishness . . . delayed response to shift changes . . . these are all SOS signals from your transmission meaning, "Quick, get me serviced before my ailments become serious."

We know the language well. And we've built our business on your confidence in us by applying "band aids" in time to avoid "major surgery".

WE'RE THE HOMETOWN GUYS WHO OFFER YOU: NEIGHBORHOOD REPUTATION; INTERNATIONAL GUARANTEE.

United Transmission Exchange, Inc.

389 King Street, Northampton

584-6790

Campus Carousel

Paper Offers 'Election Page'

By TONY GRANITE

18-YEAR-OLD VOTER SERVICE is being supplied by The Lumberjack of Northern Arizona U. in the form of an "election page" from now through the November decision.

"The Lumberjack believes it is the responsibility of every voter to be as informed as possible before stepping into the voting booth...we intend to clarify the promises, charges and superfluous rhetoric which accompany every election...Throughout the Fall, we will use this page to examine the candidates and the issues important to you (in local, state and national campaigns)..."

* * *

HEADLINE OF THE WEEK appeared in the Daily Reporter of Mankato (Minn) State U., after R. Sargent Shriver replaced Tom Eagleton as the Democratic vice-presidential candidate: "Half a Kennedy Is Better Than None."

* * *

HOT TERM PAPERS are still getting attention in the student press of the country. The North Texas Daily carried a letter to the editor from nine members of the faculty calling the paper-buying spree "creeping free enterprise. We think it is cheating and we will flunk anyone we catch."

The Oklahoma Daily editorialized that professional term paper usage is "A question of ethics." Pointing out that more than 300 students used such papers at OU during 1971-72, the editors opined that "Term paper services are legal enterprises. Whether of not a student turns in a plagiarized paper is his own decision, made on his personal code of ethics."

The University of Minnesota Daily said editorially that "While we do not endorse the misrepresentation implicit in the commercial term paper trade, the fact that it flourishes suggests that the assignment of term papers needs review (sic)..."

Talk On Nixon By Staff Aide At Smith College

Gregg Petersmeyer, 23 and a 1972 Harvard Graduate, is the youngest staff assistant to President Nixon. Mr. Petersmeyer has worked in the White House for the past 4 summers and is presently a surrogate candidate for the President. He will be speaking and answering questions on the character of the President and how he personally became an enthusiastic supporter on Wednesday, November 1 at Wright Hall, Smith College at 8:00 p.m.

Park St. Church Dedicates New Buildings

BOSTON (AP) - Historic Park Street Church dedicated its million-dollar New Ministries Building Sunday with city and church officials looking on.

The six-story concrete, glass and brick structure affords views of Boston Common and the Old Granary Burial Ground, resting place of some of the nation's founding fathers.

Park Street Church is 163 years old, and is the third stop on the Freedom Trail. Its Christopher Wren spire is considered a classic of Colonial architecture.

UMass Police 5-2121

WEAR HOUSE

COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by

LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER

201 N. PLEASANT ST.

Electrology By Ryan

"permanent hair removal"

Established 1969

* Member: A.E.A. & M.A.E. * Eves. by Appt.
* 1964 Mass. State Licensed
* Complimentary Consultations welcomed
* Daily office hours except Mondays
* Downtown location above: Sears Roebuck

JOHN V. RYAN, R.E. Ph: 586-2106
56 Main Street Northampton

What's Wrong?

CLASSES GOT YOU DOWN??

Come on!

Get up and take a break at the SNACK BAR!

Hampden & Worcester

7am-4am 7am-10pm

Paperback Book Sale

The Airmont classics series have been reduced in price for quick sale.

3 for $1.00

at the

UNIVERSITY STORE

HOMECOMING '72

By ALAN CHAPMAN

Well, Homecoming Weekend is past, and though not the rowdy extravaganza of yesteryear, it was a weekend worth looking at.

It started with a honk and a parade on Friday night. Not a good time to take pictures but a nice time to conceal that can of Schlitz. The parade rivaled any Fourth of July, and the kids dug getting a crack at a hunk of cotton candy - not to mention being entertained by a troop of slightly crazed clowns.

Not to overstate it, but the excitement never got a chance to ease. With the new day came the tension of our unbeaten streak in football being put to the test by Connecticut. UMass was confident until 'they' booted a field goal in the first period and the Minutemen were losin'. With the confidence of a pro Peil took over and it was neat to watch. There wasn't much doubt by the end of the first half as UMass got the ball into the end Zone three times with less than three minutes to go. (Only the last time counted)

Las Vegas Night. It was like great big game of monopoly and the participation was just as intense. There were no six shooters pulled but in the course of the casino activity there were heard a few threats and saw more than one genuinely disgusted gambler. The gaiety was climaxed by the crowning of Jean Ryder (Right Below) as Las Vegas Night Queen. Y'know there still may be a little yester-year around (photos by Alan Chapman)

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

BARGAIN BOB on 31st HALLOWEEN find your size
at the
SHOE BIN
187 N. Pleasant Amherst

Auto and Motorcycle Insurance
• all college students
• all drivers under 25
• all drivers over 25
• budget payments
ALL DRIVERS • ALL WHEELS
ALPHA insurance agency
29 So. Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-8505

FOUR POCKET LEE BELLS
A "classic" in jeans. Four-Pocket Lee Bells. Like fine-quality cars. Timeless. Priceless. Custom tailored with low rise, wide bell and four-button fly for the real "Me and Lee" look.
Blue Denim $6.50
Brown, Gold, Navy Wide-Wale Cords $10.00
Lowest Price in Town
ME & LEE
the PUT ON UNIVERSITY STORE

WHY PAY MORE?

MONDAY	79¢	Cutlet & Spaghetti
TUESDAY	79¢	Sloppy Joe
WEDNESDAY	79¢	Spaghetti w/½ lb. meatball
THURSDAY	79¢	American Chop Suey
FRIDAY	79¢	Beef Hash

HATCH CAFETERIA

Fine Arts Quartet To Perform

The Fine Arts Quartet will appear at UMass on Thursday, Nov. 2, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

This marks the second of five events in the 1972-73 Chamber Music Series and brings to the attention of Western Massachusetts audiences one of the country's most noted string quartets. Most of the ensemble's activities have been centered in the Midwest and the group's reputation is known to most area music-lovers through their extensive recordings.

Pianist Frank Glazer will join The Fine Arts Quartet in a performance of Brahm's "Piano Quintet in F Minor".

Members of the Quartet are: Leonard Sorkin, first violin; Abram Loft, second violin; Bernard Zaslav, viola, and George Sopkin, cello. All are artists-in-residence at the Milwaukee campus of the University of Wisconsin. For their first concert at the University of Massachusetts, the Quartet will be joined by pianist Frank Glazer in a performance of Brahms' "Piano Quintet in F Minor". Mr. Glazer, a soloist in his own right, is a frequent guest artist with The Fine Arts Quartet and in addition to his busy concert and recording career, is on the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester. The balance of the program will include Haydn's "Quartet in B minor" and "Quartet No. 2, Opus 26" by the contemporary Argentinian, Alberto Ginastera.

Contributing to performances of The Fine Arts Quartet is the collection of instruments the members use. The first violin is a rare and beautiful masterpiece by Guarnerius del Gesu, made in Cremona in 1731. The second violin was made by Tommaso Balestrieri in Mantua in 1772. The viola is a Carcassi made in Florence in 1748, and the cello is a Matteo Goffriller made in Venice in 1731.

Reserved tickets are available at $3 ($1.50 for full-time UMass undergraduates) and may be obtained by contacting the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202.

Faculty Recital To Offer Music For The Marimba

Works by Bach and Beethoven, transcribed for the marimba, will share the spotlight with an original concerto for the instrument when Peter H. Tanner, associate professor of music at UMass presents a faculty recital, Wednesday, Nov. 1, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium at UMass. The concert is open to the public, without charge.

A special feature of the program will be the appearance of Miss Dorothy Ornest, soprano, also of the University faculty who, together with Dr. Tanner, will perform four songs by Gitta Steiner for voice and vibraphone (texts by Emily Dickinson and Ms. Steiner). Also assisting in the program will be Miss Baycka Voronietzky, pianist.

Dr. Peter H. Tanner was born in Rochester, N.Y., and is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music, where he studied percussion with William Street. He has a Ph.D. in musicology from Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

He has played with the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, the United States Marine Band, and the Chautauqua, N.Y., Symphony Orchestra. As a marimbist, he has appeared on the Ed Sullivan and Arthur Godfrey television programs.

ROUND TRIP FLIGHT TO LOS ANGLES
via American Airlines for $175.00
Includes meals and drinks. Leaves Bradley Intl. Airport on Dec. 23, 1972 and returns to Bradley on Jan. 21, 1973. Money has to paid in full by Nov. 1, 1972. For payment or information: Call 5-0585 or 5-0587, ask for Russ Sobelman.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 Comet wagon, 6cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work, 549-6335 eves.

1961 Chevy Wagon. 327 w/holly four barrel, 1 F-70-11 Gd. yr. polyglass tires, ps/pb, new battery. Great winter car. $250.00, 546-7645.
tf10-30

1967 Malibu, low mileage. Asking $950. Call 253-2797.
tf10-30

1960 Fiat 850 Spider Convert. Red with black top; 25,000 miles, $1,000 or best offer. Call 584-2564, Ask for Bob.
tf10-31

(AW C'mon guys, honest Al) Is nearly (broke)? Save now during my (annual going out of business) sale 58 Ford panel truck (no rust)! good tires all new brakes and front end. This (little beauty) runs dandy but it sure do need rings I'm crying right now as I write down this ridiculously low price $1257. Takes it! 1-628-3291.
tf11-2

1965 Chevy Imp at., ps., has 196ⁿ engine good running condition, priced for $150 or best offer. Contact Anil at 256-8395 after 5 p.m.
tf10-30

1970 Simca $900 or best offer 32 miles per gallon in great shape, call Joe Tripp evenings, 546-6921.
tf11-2

'67 MGB-GT, grey, new exhaust system, r.&h. wire wheels, radial good for winter, excellent condition, call 665-1185 keep trying.
tf10-31

IHC metro van mailtruck equipped as a camper needs work best offer. Call Spfld. after 5 p.m. 739-7988.
tf10-31

1-67 BMW ldr. Sedan new exhaust syst revaive job new radials $1300 or best off. Call 773-9668 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
tf11-3

For Sale — 1963 Chevy Belair, ex. cond., mech. good body, fine deal, runs great, owner needs scratch, $175. V8 auto., new tires. Call 549-6316.
11-3

1972 Super Beetle VW, sunroof, FM stereo tape deck & tapes, 100% warranty, exc. cond. Must sell before Jan. 1. Call Greg 253-7362.
tf11-3

MGB-GT '67, fine cond., needs minor eng. work, looked after like a baby. Have to sell, $800. Call 527-0958 evenings, keep trying.
11-3

66 VW Bug., New engine, runs good, new tune up. Want $300. Call 549-6700.
11-1

1965 Volvo P1800, good cond., $850. Call Carol, 525-0162.
tf10-31

63 Jag XKE, 2 tops, new tires, new valves and guides, $800 or best offer. 665-2075.
tf11-3

68 Cougar, AT, PS, fact. air, low mi., excel. cond., 549-6718.
tf11-3

1970 Simca for sale, in great shape, 32 miles per gallon. Must sell, need money. Call Joe evening, 546-9921.
tf11-1

68 Cougar 302, auto, ps, many extras, Excellent condition, will consider trade & cash. Call Ray 256-6831.
tf10-30

1962 Oldsmobile, Super 88. Runs great. Must sell, $200. Full Inspected, 59,000 miles. Call Eric, 546-7781.
tf10-30

1969 Volkswagen Beetle. Very good condition, asking $900. 253-2815.
tf11-1

1960 Chevy Sedan, fall inspected. Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-7121.
tf11-2

1965 Mustang, V8, Standard 3 speed, snow tires and rims. Good condition. Call 545-6112 or 586-2779. Keep trying.
tf10-30

1971 Camaro, 3 spd. std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188.
tf11-3

LOST

Lost set of keys for Firebird. Need badly. Call 546-1726, ask for Larry or leave message.
tf11-1

Lost — English cigarette case in CCA Tuesday night. Reward $10. Phone Amos (Gilead) 545-2744, 8-4 p.m.
tf10-30

RIDE WANTED

Ride desperately needed to and from W. Springfield Mon.-Fri. 9 a.m. & 5 p.m. will share expenses.
tf10-30

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail. Nov. 1. Room in Puffton. Own room, everything incl. $70/mo. Call Lester or Neal 549-6399.
tf10-31

Room for rent in Farmhouse. For female, $70/mo., own room 5 mi. from Amherst in Belchtn. 1/1 mi. off Rt. 9. Avail. Nov. 1 or sooner. 253-7076.
tf10-31

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548.
tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3901.
tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-1336.
tf11-17

Part time. Foreign & American - light bods & mechanical repair. Reasonable rates. 323-7808.
tf11-1

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1100.
tf11-9

Passport photos, fast fast service. Lang's photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-9687. Located in center of town near Wearhouse.
tf11-6

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female graduate student preferred to share apartment. Walking distance/bus service to UMass — own room $80.00 a month. Call 549-1137.
tf10-31

Female roommate wanted to share Puffton Apt. starting Nov. 1. $85 a month. Call 515-2112 between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Ask for Sally in 315.
tf10-30

Own room in very large apt. near Smith & 5 College bus, 3rd floor. Quiet. Interesting room shapes. 584-1580. $47.50.
tf10-30

Quiet roommate wanted, 2-1/2 mi. from campus, own room, utilities inc., $65 a month. Call Dave 256-8649.
tf11-1

ENTERTAINMENT

Dustin Hoffman, Katherine Ross, and Anne Bancroft star in Mike Nichols, "The Graduate", Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9, & 11 in Mahar.
tf11-3

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1972 Honda CB-350 perfect cond. Must sacrifice 6000 well maintained miles $600. 253-2716.
tf10-31

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $100 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine runs very dependable. Asking $450-367-2762.
tf11-3

'70 Honda CL 450 ex cond. Buy now and save $$-must sell to stay in school $650. or best offer. Call Bob 546-4738.
tf11-1

Last call! 1971 Honda CL350 ideal on/off road bike meticulously maintained, helmets, chain, etc. $650 full price, 545-1309 a.m. 253-2412 p.m.
tf11-2

1971 Harley-Davidson, XLCH, sparkling America model, 1900 bucks. Call John Tocci 5-2412, 210 Wheeler 5-2417.
tf11-1

1972 Bultaco Alpina, 250 cc, 5 speed, street legal, $100 miles, new cond., $750. or best offer. Call John 546-7040.
tf11-3

HELP WANTED

Work for largest environmental movement in U.S. part & full time positions. Call 253-7793 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. daily.
tf10-30

Qualified registered nurse for coronary care, and/or nursing supervisor for full time position on 3rd shift. Please contact Mrs. Alice Goethel, R.N., director of nursing service, Wing Memorial Hospital, Wright Street, Palmer, Mass. Phone 1-283-7651, Ext. 83.
tf11-2

WANTED

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House.
tf12-13

Cash for 3speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5390.
tf10-31

Engine wanted for 1969 MGB, pref. a used one in good cond. Please call Bill at 546-7741.
tf10-31

Wanted: Experienced horse person to care for our horse when we're away. Especially Dec. 26 - 30. Must have car. Call 253-7373.
tf10-30

Ski boots, buckle, size 10-1/2, good quality. Please call Dino 665-1606 after 5 p.m.
tf10-31

FOR SALE

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now! Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door.
tf10-31

For Sale, RCA color TV, 21", $150 or best offer. Call 549-3688 during day.
tf10-31

Moving to Tex. Must sell snow tires from Maverick (6.95-11) w/walls, exc. cond. $25 for pair. Call Kenny 549-6399.
tf10-31

1 pr. Reiker buckle boots for lined, size 7 med. Worn once. $50.00 worth $90.00. Call 369-4412 in Conway, anytime. Keep trying.
tf10-31

Ecology minded? Buy Shaklee's Basic L for the laundry. 100% biodegradable. Buy natural vitamins too. Carol 253-2841.
tf10-30

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706.
tf-eem

1 pr. Head Ski boots used 1/2 season, comfortable high back, size 9, $50.00. Also 1 pr. Hachle red boots, size 10, Used $25.00. 323-7808.
tf10-30

New Skis. 72 K2-3's. Never been mounted. Were $160., asking $100. Also used look bindings, $20. Phone 546-9760.
tf11-1

For sale. A.G.E. Refrigerator. Works well. $25. Call 256-8688. Ask for Snow.
tf10-30

Child's swingset 2yrs. old, 6 legs slide, 2 swings, gliders was $80 will deliver $25. Call 217-5468 after 5:00.
tf10-31

Must sacrifice — Fender Dual Showman speaker cab. with JBL D140 excellent condition need bread, $400. Call Dave 628-3812 after 5.
tf10-30

For sale, hardtop for Triumph Spitfire, Mark II $100., or best offer. Ph 323-4415 after 5:00 p.m.
tf10-31

For sale Craig stereo tape recorder amp speakers tapes $125 - 546-7777.
tf10-30

Tape Recorder - AKAI (Roberts) M8 reel to reel cross field heads, good shape, used seldom, need cash $90. 253-8878.
tf11-1

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cubbards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550. 546-1555.
11-2

New Afganistan coat. 5'6" - 5'8". Originally $85, now 1/2 price, $42.50. Contact Ned at 615 Field or 546-6651.
tf11-3

Repainted Larleton frame. New derailleurs, cables, levers. Completely overhauled & greased. $65. See Andrew, SWP Campaign Table at Hatch.
tf11-3

Epiphone electric guitar, perfect condition, blonde finish, plush case, $275 or best offer. Call Don or Janice 549-6179.
tf11-1

SCM Galaxie deluxe typewriter w/power space, in excellent condition. Recently cleaned: $65. Call Alan at 253-5715 anytime. Lv. message.
tf10-31

PERSONAL

Sensuous cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S, till noon, 256-6272 47 S. Prospect, — Amh.
tf11-3

Adventure! Come fly with me. Respond Box 25 So. Deerfield, Mass.
tf11-2

Anyone with questions on homosexuality or wanting information, call 586-2811, ask for Paul, Eve.
tf10-30

1 horny guy desires relationship with horny girl. If seriously interested call Ron afternoons 6-4167.
10-30

My cup runneth over no more. It leaketh in a dozen places. Doc.
tf10-30

Campus Stub — I aim to please. Satisfaction gusranteed. Call anytime Joe Nowak at 546-1388, ask for the Big One.
tf10-30

The weightlifting team fearlessly accepts the Chenzos challenge to a game of volleyball. P.S. We're tough!
tf10-30

Happy Birthday Moma. Love The Keeds.
tf10-30

Mike Hunt is still looking for Crystal. Please call him.
10-31

Helloooo!! 2-fingered typists masters typing, drivers fast! 24 hr campus service. Call 5-40 p.m. — 7 days a week. 665-1636.
tf11-3

EMPLOYMENT

Yellowstone & all U.S. Nat. Parks. Booklet tells how & where to apply. Send $2.00, Arnold Agency, A206 E. Main, Rexburg, Idaho. 83440.
tf10-31

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2049-NH, Port Angelos, Washington.
tf11-22

MISCELLANEOUS

Amherst Elementary Program interviewing, Oct. 30, thru Nov. 2, for next semester. Sign up Sch of Ed Room 219 (545 1563) now.
11-1

Tan & white, 8 month puppy needs home. Call 549-6121.
10-30

TO SUBLET

One bedroom apt. to let beginning Dec. 1. Close to campus. Call 549-1407 after 6 p.m.
tf10-30

1 Bed. furn. apt., all utilities, $140. China, bedding, carpet, etc. Near University. Phone day 515-2806; evgs. 665-1294.
tf10-31

Apartment available Presidential apt., 950 No. Pleasant St. apt. 118. Two bedroom ac laundry in building. Interested contact C. Hayward 549-6885.
tf11-1

APT. FOR RENT

1 bedrm. all utilities incl. w/w carpet all rms. dshwsr-disposal 5 min. from campus, at Hlagreen $185/mo., call 256-8657 after 5 p.m.
tf10-30

One bedroom apt., $115/mo. Available at any time. Call 665-3183 after 6 p.m.
tf11-1

HOME FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $3,800. Call 253-5531 after 5 p.m.

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers, low cost, Spring vacation trips to Bermuda and Morocco. For more info., Call Rich Margil 317 Dwight 545-0790.
tf11-3

INSTRUCTION

Join the march back to the Renaissance! Take recorder Lessons. Exp. teacher, reasonable rates. Call Fred, John, 253-7126.
tf11-2

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 1225 may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with heavy duty sway bar, koni shocks and semperet steel belted radials, all with less than 5,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2050 after 5 p.m.
11-1

Notices

ANIMAL SCIENCE CLUB:
Beryl Allan of Wolfgang Kennels in Jaffery, N.H. will speak on the history of sled dogs tonight at 6:30 P.M. in Grinnel Arena. Everyone is welcome.

ART EXHIBITION:
Your photographs, paintings, prints, sculptures, films are needed for a student show. Call 256-8859 before Nov. 3.

CLOTHING AND INTERIOR DESIGN STUDENTS:
Get involved! There's a CID Liaison Comm. meeting tonight at 6:30 in Skinner Lounge. Come and find out what it's all about.

COMMITTEE ON POVERTY:
There will be a meeting to discuss present and future projects. Tonight in 902 CC!

FENCING CLUB:
The fencing club meets every Mon. and Thurs. in Rm. 8 WOPE, 7-9 p.m. The club is trying to form a competitive team for area tournaments, so come on down and try out.

HALLOWEEN CAN BE HEAVY:
Are you psyched for crazy costumes, weird wonders, and hilarious happenings? You should be; Funny Farm Dream Factory is bringing "The Heavy Halloween" to you, tomorrow night.

HALLOWEEN PARTY:
Come to a good ol' Halloween party. Just like when you were kids, at Sigma Sigma Sigma, tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. Call 253-9066 for rides.

HILLEL:
Meeting tonite at 6:15. Important!

INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION:
All International Ed. TPPC students interested in student teaching spring semester '73. Meeting Wed., Nov. 1 at 7:30 in the Center for International Ed.

KARATE CLUB:
Tae Kwon Do meeting will be held in Rm. 101 WOPE tonight from 8-10 p.m.

MARRIED STUDENTS:
Marriage counseling group for couples to meet afternoons. If interested, call Mental Health 545-2337 for an appointment.

OUTING CLUB:
Meeting at 6:30 in 165 CC. There will be a pre-trip meeting for the Chocora trip tonight at 9 in 165 CC. All going must attend or contact Herman.

SCIENCE FICTION LIBRARY:
All members with overdue books may return them this week only without fines, so check your bookcases.

SENATE WOMEN'S CAUCUS:
Meeting today at 4:00 pm in Senate office. Speakers will be Britt Guttmann and Sara Wolff from the Everywoman's Center. Please come.

SKI CLUB:
Meeting tonight 8:00 in Mahar Ski movies, trip info, and memberships taken!

STUDENT FILM FESTIVAL:
A student Film Festival will be held at Harvard Dec. 1, 2, 3. For further info call Jake at 5-2917 between 4-5 pm. Entry deadline Nov. 6.

STUDENT UNION DIRECTOR SEARCH:
A meeting of the CC/Student Union Director Search Comm. will be held on Wed., Nov. 1 in Rm. 802, CC at 7:00 pm.

THE WIZARD OF OZ:
Now on the big screen and in color, the print is sharp, the color is fantastic. Ballroom, Wed. 7 and 11 "Top Hat" at 9.

UNICEF DRIVE:
Happy Halloween! Make it happy for others. Collections; today from 10-3 outside Hatch, Bookstore and Bluewall tonight in dorms 6-9. Sponsored by Greeks.

VICTIMLESS CRIMES:
Debate on Victimless crimes in Pierpont Main Lounge today at 7:00 pm.

WOMEN'S SKI TEAM:
Meeting Nov. 6 at 7:00 in WOPE Lounge for all those interested. No previous racing experience necessary.

ZEN CIRCUS IS COMING:
To be an exhibition of all living and living art. Sign in Pierpont now or you may miss the parade. Watch out for baby elephants.

Jack Anderson
Carl Kalvelage
AMERICAN GOVERNMENT
...LIKE IT IS

"Today's successful lobbyists are more likely to be smooth professionals, skilled in the soft sell. They seldom engage in blatant currying of favor. Well tailored and turned out, they make their pitches subtly over martinis at the posh Metropolitan Club or over golf balls at the exclusive Burning Tree course. But they can also retain a Senator's law firm or deliver cash in a paper sack to those who prefer that sort of gross transaction."

No one knows Washington like Jack Anderson. Sometimes harsh, sometimes inaccurate, he scoops to redeem the American system. Presidents, admirals and crooners have felt the sting of his attack.

Now in American Government...Like It Is, from Warner Paperback Library, Anderson takes on the entire Washington power structure. Beware, Congressmen! American Government...Like It Is puts meat on the skeletons in Washington's closets. It tells the seamy side of the textbook America: the side that has the human dimension. The side that contains the kickbacks, the office buggings, the payoff appointments, the secret bank accounts and the still-active spoils system.

__American Government...__ Like It Is exposes the American Government the way it should be exposed: in lucid, convincing examples and straightforward language. Anderson and Kalvelage pull no punches in their battle with giant government. In the tradition of the muckraker, they continue to unstuff shirts and expose greased palms.

It's a revelation to any citizen who knows what American Government should be.

®

Now in Paperback from
WARNER PAPERBACK LIBRARY
$1.25

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Gemini is fun, puzzling, scintillating and can get involved in unbelievable situations. Gemini makes wise investments with Capricorn, can work well with Scorpio, is physically attracted to Libra and holds stimulating discussions with Leo. The two leading "horror film" stars are born under this zodiacal sign: Vincent Price and Christopher Lee.

•••

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Moderate pace. Avoid extremes, especially where work and diet are concerned. Adhere to resolutions made during time when you decided to help yourself to better health. Taurus and Libra persons may be involved in your affairs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Perceive actual meanings. Eschew wishful thinking. Affair of heart dominates. Emotions tend to "take over." Key is to strive for balance. Relations with children improve. Your creative endeavors ring bell of success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Practical matters dominate. Build, plan and evaluate. Older individual plays prominent role. Accent security. Heed voice of experience. Capricorn is likely to be in picture. Take inventory.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish rather than begin. look beyond the obvious. Ideas click. Key is to be enthusiastic. Confidence will follows. Special dealings indicated with close relatives, neighbors. Aries person figures prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spotlight is on money, payments and collections. New approach is likely to achieve best results. Imprint your own style. Originate rather than imitate. Your sense of showmanship surges to forefront.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get what you want through personal effort, direct approach. Don't delegate duties. Co-operate with Aquarius. Follow through on inner feelings. Share knowledge and impart enthusiasm. You will win!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appeared to be a deep, dark secret could turn out to be laughable. Sagittarian is in picture. Maintain balance and sense of humor. Accede to request to work behind scenes in special, charitable project.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friendly persuasion wins the day. Avoid being too insistent. What you want is likely to drop out of the blue. Minor obstacles are due to evaporate. Key is to exude optimism. Professional associate opens previously locked doors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be ready for change, opportunity for travel and a variety of experiences. Offer is upcoming. It could lead to bigger, better things. Be receptive. Gemini and Virgo play instrumental roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect now coincides with travel plans, personal beliefs, religious convictions, publishing and advertising projects. Domestic situation is accented. There is talk about remodeling or change of residence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone may be trying to sell you proverbial bill of goods. Bring powers of perception into play. Take nothing for granted. Dig beneath surface indications. You have right to know complete story.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain valid hint from Aquarius message. Take time to examine legal aspects of any proposition. Accent is on relations with public, special agreements and partnerships. Patience now is your ally.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine sense of humor. You are creative, possess penetrating sense of perception. If single, marriage could be on horizon. Way is being cleared for more productive, rewarding activity on your part. Married or single, you will be more secure shortly in your own home.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Secret agent
4 Horse power (abbr.)
6 Satiates
11 Choose
13 Buccaneer
15 Three-toed sloth
16 Learned
18 Thoroughfare (abbr.)
19 Saint (abbr.)
21 River in Germany
22 Group of three
24 Opening in skin
26 Wife of Geraint
28 Writing fluid
29 Move about furtively
31 Cease
33 Compass point
34 Ireland
36 Slender
38 Hebrew letter
40 Killed
42 Rent
45 Emmet
47 Page of book
49 Stalk
50 Sluggish
52 European herb
54 Printer's measure
55 Note of scale
56 Revives
59 Cyprinoid fish
61 Landed property
63 Fit for eating
65 Binds
66 A continent (abbr.)
67 Lamprey

DOWN
1 Resort
2 Jail
3 Old pronoun
4 Courageous person
5 Punctilious person
6 Liquors
7 River island
8 Allowance for waste
9 Babylonian deity
10 Blemishes
12 Symbol for iron
14 Summon forth
17 Lairs
20 Woody plant
23 A state (abbr.)
24 Postscript (abbr.)
25 Organs of hearing
27 Plaything
30 Slay
32 Baker's products
35 Sewing implements
37 Partner
38 Adhesive substance
39 Join
41 Lament
43 Pertaining to old age
44 Printer's measure
46 Preposition
48 Insects
51 Envelop
53 Mother of Castor and Pollux
57 Devoured
58 Spanish for "yes"
60 A state (abbr.)
62 Symbol for tantalum
64 Exist

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 30

Harriers Win YanCon Title

By WALT POWERS

Saturday morning on a flat, slightly muddy course at Orono, Maine, the UMass Cross-Country team barely eluded an upset - hungry URI team, and won their third consecutive Yankee Conference Championship meet, by a score of 34-42.

UConn was third with 83 points, followed by Holy Cross with 106, Vermont with 129, and Maine, with 181. B.U. had 184, and New Hampshire was last with 185 points.

UMass started fast, sending their whole team out in front. At the one-mile mark, UConn's Bill Cantin took off. He was chased, but never passed, by Randy Thomas and Tom Maguire of UMass, Allieu Massaquoi of B.U., and Tom Grundy of URI. Cantin's winning time of 23:06 set a new course record.

Randy Thomas took second in 23:15, followed by Massaquoi, the defending champion, in 23:17, and Tom Grundy, in 23:20. Freshman Tom Maguire of UMass ran a strong race and finished fifth in a time of 23:23.

The big move of the race came at the mile and a half mark, and nearly turned the race around. John Besset, Rick Schabowski, and Tom Pilhot, all of URI, moved past the big group of UMass frontrunners. They stayed in front until the last half mile, where Bill Gillin passed them in a desperate, last ditch, charge. Gillin's time of 23:28 was only a mere one second faster than Besset, who took second, and only three seconds ahead of Schabowski, who finished eighth. Tom Pilhot beat out Doug O'Connell for ninth place, and Chris Chambers ran well, finishing in eleventh place.

The result was a lot closer than most people expected.

Bill Gillin, whose strong effort at the finish assured UMass of victory, had this assessment, "We weren't really sure how strong Rhode Island was. It looked good for us when we had our whole team out in front so early in the race, but URI's move at mile and a half mark really surprised us, and had a somewhat of a demoralizing effect." Bill's assessment of the team's performance was honest and realistic. "I don't think we ran our best race; I know I didn't and URI ran a great race. That's why it was so close."

Yet the team still won.

UMass will run at home on Tuesday, in a tri-meet against Holy Cross and Central Connecticut. From there, it's on to Boston's Franklin Park on Saturday, where the team will run in its most important meet of the year: the New England Championships.

Pistons Fire Lloyd

DETROIT (AP) - The Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association have fired their first black coach after less than one year on the job and replaced him with another black man.

Earl Lloyd, 44, a former Pistons player, was released late Saturday night and replaced by Ray Scott, another former Detroit player who had been serving the club as an assistant coach and scout.

"Something had to be done," said Ed Coil, Pistons' general manager. Coil flew to Portland to tell Lloyd of his release after the club had dropped a 130-118 decision to Houston Friday, the club's fifth setback in seven starts.

Lloyd, who left a job in dealer relations with the Chrysler Corp. to become the Pistons' coach, was named head coach last Nov. 1 after Bill van Breda Kolff suddenly resigned after compiling a 6-4 record.

The Pistons broke to a 7-2 exhibition record this fall, best in the team's history, but once the regular season began the Pistons fell back to their losing ways and haven't been able to get untracked.

Scott becomes the Pistons' 10th head coach since the team came to Detroit in 1957.

Friday's sports head was Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds.

Pro Football

Pats Lose.....

NEW YORK (AP) - Joe Namath picked apart the New England defense with short pinpoint passes to set up three touchdown dashes by Emerson Boozer that carried the New York Jets to a 34-10 National Football League victory over the Patriots Sunday.

Namath, given as much time as he needed to find his receivers, completed 12 of 24 passes for 203 yards.

The Jets, meanwhile, hounded Plunkett all afternoon and the Patriots' quarterback was able to complete only seven of his 28 attempts for 120 yards.

Boozer, who had scored three touchdowns in the Jets' 41-13 romp over New England two weeks ago, finished with 91 yards on 19 rushes on the rainsoaked Shea Stadium turf.

After a sluggish first period in which the teams traded field goals, Namath cranked up the aerial attack and fired the Jets to a 17-3 halftime lead. He hit Eddie Bell over the middle for 23 yards and along the left side for 13 more on a drive that moved New York to the Patriots' 10-yard-line.

After a holding call against New England put the ball on the five, Boozer cracked over the right side for the touchdown.

Less than six minutes later the Jets completed a 65-yard march in eight plays for their second touchdown. A pair of seven-yard runs by Boozer, Namath's eight-yard toss to Caster and a pass interference call that netted 21 yards set up Boozer's 12-yard sweep around left end for the touchdown.

Boozer's final touchdown came on a 19-yard run in the third quarter.

JV Booters Dump UConn

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

The JV booters, apparently remembering their big victory over Greenfield CC one week ago, came on strong Saturday morning and went away with a 3-2 victory over previously unbeaten UConn.

It was another fine team effort by the JV Minutemen as they played good position soccer in chaulking up their fourth victory against one setback. The Minutemen retained the upper hand throughout the game with the exception of the late going when Coach Berryman cleared his bench and gave his substitutes a chance to see some action.

It was 30 minutes into the game when the Minutemen broke the ice with John Wright connecting on a long shot from about 20 yards out, assisted by Ron Plumb. The Minutemen had their chances in the last 15 minutes but were unable to add to their lead and the teams went into the dressing room for halftime with the Minutemen up 1-0.

The booters came out strong in the second half, putting pressure on the Huskie net and scoring at the 4 minute mark as Ron Plumb put a pass right up the middle and Charlie Polaro shot it into the lower right corner of the net.

Seven minutes later Gary Liberman had a penalty kick and yes, this time a Minuteman did not choke like once before. Liberman found the upper left corner of the net and the booters were up 3-0.

With a three goal lead, Coach Berryman decided to substitute, and the letdown came. Connecticut picked up goals at the 20 and 30 minute mark of the period and it was a contest again at 3-2.

The coach resubstituted his regulars and they held on to the one goal lead.

This past Wednesday afternoon, the booters played a real powerhouse, previously unbeaten Springfield Tech CC, and after falling behind in the early going 2-0, the Minutemen came back to upset STCC 3-2 in a fantastic effort on the part of the Minutemen. Tallies for the Minutemen were recorded by Charlie Palano assisted by Penza, Art Boyle from Lohn Wright, and Bill Belcher from Scot Smoller.

Yes, it was a good week for the JV booters with two big victories and they will carry their three game winning streak into games against Boston State on Tuesday and Springfield College on Friday afternoon. Both games will be played on the soccer field across from Boyden.

So Do Giants

By BOB ESTELLE

The Washington Redskins stopped a four game winning streak of the New York Giants with a 23-16 victory yesterday at Yankee Stadium.

The first incident that occurred, however, was not a score. In the second series for the Redskins, quarterback Sonny Jurgenson left the game injured. He has a torn tendon in his ankle and there is no indication of when he'll be back.

A break gave the Redskins their first score late in the first quarter. Redskin linebacker Jack Pardee picked up a Giant fumble on his own 43 and ran it back to the New York 36.

The Giants quickly came back with a drive to the Washington 36 and Pete Gogolak kicked a 43 yard field goal. The play highlighting this drive was a fake punt and run by Tom Blanchard.

In the middle of the second period, Washington scored on a seven yard pass play from Bill Kilmer to Larry Brown. But Knight missed the extra point to heighten Giant hopes.

The Giants added three more with Gogolak hitting from the 14 to make the halftime score 9-6.

The score was tied eary in the third quarter with a 23 yard field goal by Gogolak in a drive that should've resulted in a touchdown but a series of penalties prevented that.

The next Giant series brought about a controversial play that broke the game open for the Skins. The play was A Norm Snead pass to Ron Johnson and Chris Hanburger stole the ball from Johnson. The controversy was whether or not the ball was blown dead before the Redskin linebacker grabbed it.

The next play was a 38 yard touchdown run by Brown that all but put the game out of reach as far as the Giants were concerned.

After two exchanges of the ball, the Redskins put together a beautiful drive utilizing the talents of Larry Brown which ended with a five yard touchdown pas from Kilmer to tight end Jerry Smith.

The Giants came back in the final minutes of the fourth quarter with Snead throwing a ten yard TD pass to Bob Tucker but it was too late for anything else and all the Giants can do is try and beat Denver next week.

Miami, 23-0

BALTIMORE (AP) - Larry Csonka bulldozed his way for 93 yards and scored two touchdowns as the Miami Dolphins, the only unbeaten team in the only National Football League, trounced the Baltimore Colts 23-0 Sunday.

The Dolphins scored nine second-quarter points after blocking a punt and a field goal attempt and added a third period touchdown after Baltimore fumbled away a punt reception.

JV's Explode in Second Half; Bomb Rhode Island 53-7

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

The URI Rams made one big mistake Friday afternoon; coming out of the dressing room for the second half, as in the last 30 minutes the JV Minutemen tallied six touchdowns and 39 points on route to a 53-7 suffocation of the Little Rhodys at Kingston.

The defense led the way for the onslaught as they pressured URI into many mistakes and seemed to get stronger as the score piled up. The unit even scored 12 points of its own on interception run backs by Woods and Desmaris, as they turned out the big play whenever it was needed.

The team bus arrived late at Kingston, and, because the team didn't get its usual pre-game warmup, the gridders played rather sluggishly throughout the first half and at the end of the half the game was still a contest at UMass 14, URI 7.

"I don't want it, you take it", was the attitude of both squads toward the pigskin after the initial drives, as there were more turnovers in the first half than in you neighborhood bakery on a Saturday morning.

The Minutemen were not sluggish on the first two plays of the game as halfback Jerry Mondalto hit flanker Gary Warren on the second play from scrimmage and, after Kneeland added the point after, the Minutemen were up 7-0.

The Rams came back with a touchdown of thir own, after they got a break on a fourth down punting situation as the Minutemen came off side, letting URI keep possession of the ball. QB Crone hit Denato for the score, culminating the 75 yard drive which ate up about 8 minutes on the clock.

On the next set of downs fullback Bob Wolfe rambled 54 yards for UMass. on a beautiful scamper, outracing the URI secondary. The point after made the score 14-7.

The second quarter was played between the 30 yard lines with the ball going back and forth like a hot potato.

The second half began with a bang for the Minutemen as it took all of 10 seconds for Jerry Mondalto to run back the opening kickoff 92 yards for the third UMass touchdown of the game. It was a thing of beauty as Mondalto had the wedge set up the middle, and after he broke a tackle at the 35 he was gone toward paydirt. After the extra point was fudged the score was 20-7.

As the lead started to pile up, coach Billy Maxwell started emptying his bench and everyone on the squad saw action in the game. Among the substitutes who impressed coach Maxwell was QB Rohan who finished the game at that position after Pallone had also led the team to a couple of scores.

As the Rams fell behind, they seemed to crack at the seams, as they didn't possess the capability of catching up to the Minutemen and got desperate on their search for the end zone. The net result was a boomerang effect as Neal Desmaris and Steve Wood picked off passes and turned them in at the goal line for 6 points a piece.

Halfback Sel Semino scored twice in the second half on a 9 yard pass from Harriman and on a long 69 yard run in the closing minutes of the game. Steve Levine was the seventh Minutemen to reach the end zone as he tallied in the 4th period on an 11 yard scamper.

Coach Maxwell had praise for his team's performance as it was a real team effort and a great victory. The JVs are following the lead of the varsity Minutemen in putting points on the board at a brisk pace, now with 86 in 2 games and an undefeated 2-0 record.

They'll take their clean slate to Chestnut Hill next Sunday afternoon, where the JV Minutemen will face the Eagles of Boston College.

"I like Family Night at Ponderosa® because...

...it gives me great pleasure to see lots of people enjoying themselves, while they eat a complete dinner including an excellent steak, a luscious baked Idaho potato, a crisp tossed salad with a choice of four delicious dressings, and a hot roll with butter, all for only 99 cents. I go to Ponderosa every Tuesday night and cry a lot."

A Masochistic Competitor

King Street in Northampton

UMass Spanks Huskies, 49-16

GARY MIKA, (81), is about to grab a Peil Pennington bomb vs. UConn and score the first of his two touchdowns against the Huskies. (MDC Photo by Ken Sulin)

By EARLE BARROLL

Some showdown.

In what was supposed to be just that (it was more like a blowout for the victim), the UMass football team virtually wrapped up the Yankee Conference title (OK, there's still UNH to play, but...) by ripping through the Number One Imposter to the crown--UConn--49-16, on Saturday before 17,500 (and countless WTIC viewers) at Homecoming '72.

In the process the Minutemen upped their season record to 6-0--4-0 in the Conference--maintained their number one slot in New England and by virtue of Dartmouth and Harvard tying (21-21) and Cornell beating Yale have an opportunity of moving up behind Penn State in the Lambert ratings (UMass-Penn State, mmmmm).

UConn (the Huskies once beat the then Redmen in the mid-50's something like 77-0) is 3-3--3-1 in the YC--and destined for second place in the Conference which isn't really that bad when you consider theswaltz UMass has had this season.

Quarterback Peil Pennington (his name is probably in the little black book of every pro scout in the country--but breath easy, he's only a junior) was the chief architect of this demolition.

After getting over a shaky start--that seemed to engulf the entire team (i.e., missed passes, fumbles, etc.)--the rangy qb settled down to throw td passes of 66, 42, 39 and nine yards, run one in from three yards out and block on 95% of the sweeps in his three-quarters of service.

Actually UConn made a game of it for most of the first half as the Huskies led at two junctures, 3-0 and 9-7, but it is proven in the past that he who scores first against UMass (Harvard, Vermont, and B.U.) pays the price.

And indeed they did.

Steve Schubert (who broke the single season yardage record of Milt Morin with five receptions and 133 yards) darted in from the left sideline to combine with Pennington on an electrifying 66 yard touchdown play with UMass down 3-0.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Again with UConn on top, 9-7, Steve made a spectacular catch between two UConn defenders on a partial underthrown pass by Pennington on the Huskie nine. He was also injured on this play (a headache), didn't see second half action but was ready to go yesterday.

On the very next play Pennington found Gary Mika all alone for a 14-9 lead. The sophomore tight end had his biggest day ever with another 42 yard td reception and four catches totaling 92 yards.

But the play that produced the big Good-Night came with only a minute left in the half. The situation was fourth and 21 on the UConn 42. "We took a big chance," admitted Dick MacPherson after the game. "But the defense (super all day) wanted it."

Pennington lofted a mighty bomb that Tim Berra had overrun. He circled back and outmaneuvered the UConn defender, caught the ball and unbelievably stepped untouched into the end zone. The score, 21-9, and that was that.

"We needed it," said MacPherson. "It's much better going into the locker room up by 21-9, then 14-9. And on a play like that the best athlete will always come up with it when the ball comes down."

After the regulars were taken out--the old don't run it up trick--Mark Tripucka and company did just that as he led marches that resulted in Phil Roland bursting over from three yards out and Jim Mahaney doing likewise from the two.

The only reason that the 50 point mark (like 100 points in basketball) wasn't reach was that MacPherson put in a place kicker who rocketed a line shot into the centers rear.

And for you big-time lovers, the wait may not be as long as you think. The way the Minutemen have treated the Conference this season, they just may be thrown out.

Booters Stun UConn

By DOUG FIDLER

Tom Coburn scored two goals and Carl Vercollone performed stellar work in goal as the UMass varsity soccer team upset fourth-ranked in New England UConn before over 500 fans at the Boyden Fields.

UConn, now with a 6-2-1 record, sustained its first loss in the Yankee Conference after winning its first four games. UMass, which upped its record to 4-3 overall, now has a 2-2 standing in the conference. If the Redmond-men can defeat Vermont next weekend, and UNH two weeks after that, they will finish no lower than a second place tie in conference play.

The two teams played fairly evenly throughout most of the first half. UMass was able to mount several offensive threats which nearly accounted for scores.

Coburn, who now has eight goals in seven games, opened the scoring for the Minutemen at 28:30 of the first half. Coburn broke away on some fine dribbling and fired at Huxky goalie John Demeter, who could only slow down the shot before it slipped into the nets.

Lova Borisjuk tied the game for the visitors with just four minutes left in the half. Frantz Innocent vollied a corner kick to him and he smashed a shot past Vercollone.

Coburn notched his second goal with just five minutes gone in the final half. Mark Tyma crossed a perfect pass to Coburn after the goalie had committed himself, and the junior forward lobbed a shot over the goalie's head.

Vercollone, who was called upon to stop ten Husky offerings, played his best game of the year. While protecting his slim one goal lead against the powerful UConn scoring attack, he made several superb saves. One bordered on the incredible, as he leaped high to catch a blazing shot before flipping over onto his back, still hugging the ball.

Ken Banda and Jim Vollinger teamed for a desperately needed insurance goal late in the second half, spelling defeat for the Yankee Conference leaders. Vollinger dribbled into the penalty area with some fine footwork, but robbed of a goal by Demeter. The Husky goalie, however, failed to cover up the ball, and Banda hustled in from his left wing position to punch the ball into the goal for the score.

With the extra goal, the Big Red could play a defensive game to cinch the win. Coach Gerry Redmond took out one of his forwards, replacing him with Herman Rodrigo, who had the express order to kick the ball into the UConn half of the field whever possible. The strategy worked perfectly, as the Huskies were constantly forced to retrieve the ball from their zone. The visitors were never able to mount a serious threat in most of the final 15 minutes of play.

UConn outshot the locals 22-17, but most of these shots were very wide of goal. Demeter was forced to stop only five UMie shots, as his fullbacks made several stops for him.

"This was undoubtedly our best win of the season," summed up Redmond. "Connecticut was unbeaten in the conference and this was a must game for us. We knew they were skillful and well-coached, having watched them in a previous game."

"Our captains, Dave Ouellette and Ed Doherty, showed why their colleagues voted them as captains last fall with a fine display of leadership. Both played extremely well, but perhaps Dave deserves special mention as he played for the entire 90 minutes. I have never seen either of them play better."

"The same can be said of Carl Vercollone," added Redmond, "who ws simply outstanding when it mattered most and he deserved the cheers of the crowd for some good saves."

"Tom Coburn showed why he is one of the leading scorers in the conference with a fineperformance. Ken Banda also did well despite coming off on an injury. Tony King and Jeff Hague did exactly what was expected of them. They constantly worried the UConn defense by bringing the ball up the sidelines."

"Jim Vollinger and Mark Tyma did outstanding jobs on defense. I knew we could score goals on UConn, but I was worried whether we could stop them from scoring also. Vini Grandonico and Mike Nugent did great work also. It was also good to see Joe Cerniawski, Kurt Syer, and Matt Rowe coming back into form, and Gary McKenna continued to improve. In fact, no one played played badly at all for us."

Despite all the praise for his charges, Redmond still noticed areas for improvement. "The defense did have some anxious moments and made some bad mis-kicks at times. We still hesitated to tackle on occasion, even in or near our own penalty area. However, it was 1-1 at halftime, and unlike Rhode Island, this time the team held on to win."

"You know," Redmond philsophized, "all unbeaten runs come to an end sometime. I am naturally pleased that we were able to put an end to Connecticut's win streak in the conference. Our next opponents, Vermont, are having a different sort of run-one of defeats. In fact, they have yet to win a game. Sooner or later though, this run must also end, and I only hope this will not be at our expense. We must not become complacent now. Things are beginning to fit together and we should endeavor to maintain our momentum until the end of the season. There is no doubt that Springfield and New Hampshire will privde very tough competition in our last two games."

Frank Antosiewicz

Winning and Losing

You win some, you lose some and some are just rained out.

I don't know who first said these words, but they convey a certain feeling. Depending on the situation, these words could be interpreted differently.

There is a certain mystique that surrounds words and what they mean. Maybe, at first, these words were meant sarcastically, spoken by a loser, who tried to justify losing to himself. Maybe, it was the jubilant winner, who out of modesty, wanted to tone down his accomplishment.

Today, this expression means many things to many people. To the pros, it emphasizes the money involved for a job. At some colleges this may also be true, but at others it conveys a sense of sport.

True sport occurs at the lower levels. The pickup game after school, along with the Saturday afternoon competition illustrates what sport is all about--having a good time.

Nebraska last year was number one, but only eight out of 19 seniors on the football squad were eligible to graduate. It seems odd that the sense of winning supercedes learning. Sport, according to Webster's New World Dictionary, is any recreational activity, specifically a game, competition, etc., requiring bodily exertion.

Sport was meant as a form of relaxation, just a game. The Collegian—Senate mismatches are examples of sport. They relieve the frustrations incurred during the week, along with providing some exercise.

Excitement is forever prevalent in the watching of the pros on Sunday or Monday night on the television, but the idea of sport is lost. The physical exertion is lacking and Howard Cosell and Company is doing all the interpreting and exerting. It's a nice change once in awhile, but as a way of life, it is worthless.

What all this drivel has to do with the opening statement, is that sport is not everything, but it is a form of entertainment.

The concept of winning is not to be taken lightly. It is a commendable goal and if it can be achieved, then it is worthwhile. For some, this goal is unattainable. Some clubs, such as BU or Maine, have to have some other reason to continue playing. Besides an inferiority complex, what else can they expect? How do you continue the impossible dreams, after you lose so many? There must be something else involved.

Maybe it's pride or loyalty, or just maybe it's just a willingness to play. The sport aspect of playing for fun or recreation is also involved.

Why do you play any sport? The chance to be active, to compete or is it just a way to develop friendships. Only a few receive the applause, for the others there must be a reason.

For the same reason people play sports, the crowds appear to watch them. 17,500 arrive at Alumni Stadium, 50,000 arrive at a pro game, or maybe father watches his son in the backyard. The reason behind watching and playing are similar, but sometimes are hard to define. It has become a way of life.

Next time your team or you, yourself, start taking sports too seriously, remember, "You win some, you lose some, and sometimes you get rained out."

As long as you keep repeating this phrase to yourself, there should be no problems in your life. That is, as long as the Minutemen keep winning.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

JETS is a four-letter word.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 37 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1972

Wanda Witch is calling an organizational meeting of all sisters and brothers, who wish to participate in All Hallow's Eve activities, at Ye Olde Chapel at midnight. New members welcome; the public is invited to attend. It is the season of the witch. Be there. (MDC Photo by Al Chapman)

Students Accuse DC Workers Of Food Theft

By MARK VOGLER

Several undergraduate students have voiced concern in recent weeks over what they consider to be "blatant stealing of food from the dining commons."

These students have aroused suspicion and have circulated rumors that some food service employees have been seen stealing food regularly from the Worcester Dining Commons.

Food Services Director Joel Stoneham, in an interview last week, admitted that it was possible for food to be stolen from campus dining commons by employees, especially in Worcester. Stoneham added that D.C. theft has never occurred extensively.

"In the past, we've been alerted to specific incidents," Stoneham commented. "And we've reacted, in my opinion, positively. There have been employees terminated for this, one person as such for taking left-over meatballs.

"If such a problem is made aware to us, we will react to it. If they're doing it now, it's not blatant to us. I am the Director of Food Services on this campus, which means that I'm responsible for all operations of all dining commons. If this is happening, then it's my responsibility to make sure that it doesn't continue."

The Food Services Department restricts its workers from taking food out of the dining commons. There are said to be special security measures to assure this. Supervisors are assigned to watch over the workers. It's also the policy that all bags leaving the dining area must be inspected as a check procedure.

"It is a problem in all food establishments," Stoneham said. "It is something difficult to prevent....But you have to be perpetually aware of this and must be prepared to act in the event it happens."

Stoneham said that with 300 full-time employees in the department, coupled with 400-500 students, it would be virtually impossible to prevent theft in the dining commons.

In regard to Worcester Dining Commons, Stoneham remarked: "the place just has multiple exits, there are 10 that I can think of. Maybe I better start paying more attention to this place."

He said that there are only two dining commons on campus that are open to easy regulation, Hampshire and Berkshire. These two don't have the auxiliary extensions such as Munchies.

One undergraduate student, John Walker, a resident of David Grayson House and a regular patron of Worcester, had informed a COLLEGIAN reporter of frequently observing what appeared to him as "old ladies stealing food from the dining commons."

Walker said that he would like very much to submit photographs of the workers in the actual act of stealing the food. The COLLEGIAN has obtained pictures of the location and time where the thefts had been alleged to occur.

Walker claims that he has seen D.C. workers carrying big plastic bags through the parking lot shortly after 7:00. He said that he had been within close enough range to determine that bread and other food items were in the bag.

When he was later asked to review the photos which revealed D.C. workers carrying bags--some of which were plastic ones, Walker commented that they were identical to the ones which he claimed contained the bread.

Peter Arvinites, Walker's roommate, confirmed Walker's accusations.

"About 7:00 one night while on my way to the Grad Research Center, it was quite obvious as to what I saw," declared Arvinites. "I was walking by the experimental station and I spotted four or five ladies coming from the east entrance. One was carrying a Dreikorn's box, at least three feet by two, and a foot deep.

"I got close enough to see what was inside the box. And didn't like what I saw...bread, fruit, pie,...I've only been by that way twice this year, but both times I've seen this happen.

"I'm quite bitter about the whole thing. It only leaves me to believe that the prices for meal tickets are going up not only because students rip things off, but also because a certain group of workers are taking food home for their own useage--and we're paying for it."

Stoneham suggested that workers reportedly seen transporting paper bags which they purchased from Munchies, could have easily been mistaken for stealing.

But when asked whether a person carrying a large plastic bag might seem to indicate that theft had occurred, Stoneham agreed.

"I'd say that's true. There shouldn't be any plastic bags carried out of this building. There certainly shouldn't be any plastic bags involved."

Two student employees who work in Franklin Dining Commons, suggested that "there's plenty of baloney that goes on in here that most students don't know about."

They both agreed that although workers couldn't be blatant about taking food out, it's a relatively easy task. Their general consensus was that anybody could "rip off the whole place if he wanted to." The two employees wished to remain anonymous.

Dining commons workers walking out of Worcester D.C. after closing hours. One is carrying a plastic bag which is allegedly said to contain "stolen" food. Faces have been blocked out to conceal identity. (MDC Photo by Pam Perry).

On The Inside:

•Students Bitch see page three

•Israel Retaliates see page five

•Cease-fire Developments see page four

Many thousands of years from now, when all have perished from the face of the earth, someone will look into a waffle while the syrup drips ooozingly down and they will say, "Where did it all go?" but no one will know. No one will ever know. (MDC Photo by Jim Pappas)

Students To Protest Shepard Amendments

By JAMES E. GOLD

A demonstration protesting the Shepard Amendments has been planned at the State House in Boston for noon Wednesday by students at various public state colleges and universities.

The Shepard amendments were proposed during the state's budgeting process last Spring by then Commissioner of Administration and Finance, Charles Shepard. They said that in each state agency's spending categories, a certain percengage would be cut. This percentage differs from category to category but not from agency to agency. Few exceptions were allowed.

The money cut is now held in reserve. According to the amendments, 15 percent may be reallocated for needed materials by the various state agencies.

In the case of UMass, the Shepard amendment resulted in a total cut of $2.9 million dollars from the budget approved by the legislature.

This cut was made mostly in the 07, 03, and 12 accounts, according to a University spokesman. Money in 07 is used for equipment purchases, money in 12 is used for maintenance and repair of existing equipment, and 03 money, which has widely varied uses, includes all the funds for all student labor, including undergraduate jobs and graduate teaching assistants.

The University administration has been able to transfer money into the 03 account other accounts, said the spokesman, but this has resulted in the austerity program under which we now operate. One result of this is the current freeze on vacant positions.

The student government at Lowell State is providing buses to carry protesters into Boston on Wednesday.

Since the state legislature has already adjourned for the year, some UMass students expressed doubt as to what can be accomplished by going to Boston.

AA: 'New Approach To An Old Problem'

By MDC STAFF

A group of UMass students, with past alcoholism problems, started a young people's Alcoholics Anonymous group on campus last week.

"This is not a sudden response to a new problem; it's a new approach to an old problem," one member said.

Called the Campus Center AA, its meetings are open to all students and University community members with or without an alcohol problem or if they know someone who has.

AA members are alcoholics seeking to deal with their problems and helping each other.

Room to Move, an organization formed three years ago to deal with campus drug problems, has also expanded its outlook in order to deal with alcoholism.

John Barbaro, a UMass grad student and a member of Room to Move, said he contacted several AA members with the idea of setting up a AA group on campus not out of an "apparent need, but knowing there is a problem of alcoholism on campus."

A state Dept. of Mental Health study released last week revealed that 92.7 per cent of Bay State high school students have taken their first drink of alcoholic beverages, and more than half have been drunk in the past year.

Mental Health Commissioner Milton Greenblatt said the study "is a reminder that alcohol abuse is our most serious drug problem even among teenagers. We tend to forget that alcohol is a drug and getting drunk is drug abuse."

Persons who are interested in learning more about Alcoholics Anonymous may call Room to Move (5-0400).

All inquiries and meetings are treated confidentially and absolutely anonymously.

Hoi-Chan To Speak On Vietnam Damage

Vietnamese educator Nguyen Hoi-Chan will speculate on deveopments in South Vietnam, tonight at 8 pm in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union. She will also discuss cultural damage resulting from American intervention in Vietnam.

The United Christian Foundation Peace Action Group (UCFPAG) is sponsoring Hoi-Chan in a series of appearances in the five college area today.

Hoi-Chan is especially qualified to speak on the social and cultural damage in Vietnam because she has seen the effects first hand.

She has a BA and MA from Radcliffe College and is currently a PhD candidate in Asian Studies at Harvard University. She is co-founder of the Vietnam Resource Center at Harvard, and with her husband Ngo Vinh Long, is a leader of the Vietnamese Student Association in this country.

Following the talk "A Vietnamese Woman Talks About Peace and War in Her Land", Hoi-Chan will participate in open discussion with the audience. Related questions on the issues will be entertained.

This event is the third in a series of Tuesday night meetings sponsored by the UCFPAG in cooperation with the national American Friends Service Committee. Next Tuesday there will be a film on Quaker Rehabilitation in South Vietnam.

Third World Poet To Appear Here

Don L. Lee, an internationally known Third World poet, will be appearing here as a guest of the Distinguished Visitors Program. His presentation, "Art and Politics", is at 8:00 P.M. in the Campus Center Auditorium, Nov. 1.

Don L. Lee, one of the most respected Third World poets, is originally from Detroit, Michigan. The unique style and rhythm of his poetry has influenced much of the contemporary poetry of Black America. He has authored five books including four volumes of poetry (the most popular being Don't Cry Scream), and a criticism.

His poems and articles have appeared in BLACK WORLD, JOURNAL OF BLACK POETRY, LIBERATOR, MUHAMMAD SPEAKS, and FREEDOMWAYS. Lee has taught Afro-American Literature at Columbia College in Chicago, Cornell University, and Howard University.

Having founded the Third World Press in 1970, Don L. Lee is currently the Editor of this publishing firm located in Chicago, Illinois.

Also appearing on the program will be Andre' McLaughlin, a Black poetess doing graduate work at the University of Massachusetts, and Dayvid Nelsun. Nelsun is the founder of the Last Poets and author of Black Impulse. His other credits include the album "Right On" and film "Right On" which won the International Film Critics Award for best film in 1970. Nelsun's poetry and articles have appeared in JOURNAL OF BLACK POETRY, NEW YORK AMSTERDAM NEWS, and LIBERATOR magazine.

Abortion Action Coalition To Meet Tonight In C.C.

The Amherst Abortion Action Coalition will meet tonight in room 177 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss upcoming activities in the Abortion Law Repeal movement and specifically the work that can be done in this area. As an affiliate of the Women's National Abortion Action Coalition the aim of this group is the repeal of all anti-abortion and restrictive contraceptive laws and an end to forced sterilization.

WONAAC grew out of the class action suit, Women vs. Connecticut. The women involved in this struggle felt the need for a national organization which could unite struggles in various states. At the last WONAAC convention held this past summer in New York City, it was decided that regional centers would center their activities around building local Speak-Out Rages and petitioning for the Abortion Rights Act of 1972. Both of these activities will culminate with the International Tribunals to be held March 9-11 which will indite various people and institutions responsible for crimes against women.

All women interested in working for the repeal of abortion laws are welcome.

Halloween Sale!
9:30 AM to MIDNIGHT
Peacoats 7.95 5.95
blue air force coats 9.95 7.50
159 N. Pleasant St. next door to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Angela Davis Backs American Communists

BOSTON (AP) - Angela Davis said Monday that election of American Communists to minor offices would be a step toward a socialist takeover of the United States.

"It is possible for Communist candidates to win, and they will be able to fight more militantly for socialism," Miss Davis said as she endorsed Edward S. Teixeira, a Communist candidate for the state legislature from the city's Dorchester section.

"Electing socialist candidates," she said, "is a step toward overthrowing capitalism."

Miss Davis, who was acquitted last spring of kidnap and murder charges stemming from a California courtroom shootout, has been campaigning on behalf of American candidates after returning from a six-week tour of Communist countries.

"I am not under any illusions that it's possible to transform the fabric of United States into a socialist society by voting for Communist candidates," she told a news conference.

"We want to show that there really is no difference between Nixon and McGovern," she said. "We've been able to reach millions of people through the campaign and raise a movement for socialism."

"If we can't defeat Nixon, we can at least create a situation where they know that there are people in this country who realize the need for a basic revolutionary change.

Her trip abroad, she said, taught her a need for taking an international outlook on local problems.

"Our movement in this country is part of a vast movement that stretches to all parts of the world," she said.

D. C. Food Thefts

(Continued from P. 1)

Although they themselves admitted that they took food out every now and then, they indicated their resentment of the "ripoffs" by full-time workers.

As one student put it: "Some people who work here have two salaries--their regular salary and the food they take home. Some take home more than they make."

This student worker seemed to have little regard for the full-time staff.

"It's a big waste of time--all they do is sit around. They work together. These women know the supervisor, therefore they don't have to steal. They get it for the asking.

"And that's why the board goes up. Not because of the students--but because of inefficient management. It's a click that they have in here. And in order to get in good, you have to kiss somebody's ass."

Studen's have been accused in the past for contributing to the general hike in board. The policy of the dining commons is to restrict its employees from taking food out. The question is does that rule make any difference?

Barry Averill, Director of Health Services, and John Mueller, Vice-President of the Graduate Senate, attended last night's Graduate Senate meeting where ideas for a new student health plan involving more comprehensive coverage for married students were unveiled. (MDC Photo by Steve Schuster)

Averill Unveils Health Plan

By STEVE FINE

Barry Averill, Director of Health Services, reported to the Graduate Senate last night on a new comprehensive health plan recommended by the Faculty Senate. This plan would encompass pooling the monies of both faculty and students into on comprehensive health plan that would fill many of the gaps that now exist in the students' health plan, particularly for students with dependents.

The plan's crux, Averill explained, lies within helping the married graduate, or undergraduate student who is now paying $294 for limited coverage for his dependents. Under the proposed plan the cost would be around $300, with the coverage extending into areas that are now untouched by the present health care plan.

Averill said that the way in which revenue would be raised to cover this new plan would be by combining the monies of both faculty and students. Presently the Faculty is taken care of by the AETNA plan that is provided to state employees.

"Under that plan," he explained, "faculty pay $577 per year with the state paying 3/4 of this or $433. The cost of the new plan to faculty would be the same.

When asked if the state would also cover 3/4 of the $3000 cost the student would face under this plan, Averill replied he could not say. "This is a political question that the students would have to bring before the administration.

As far as single undergraduates go, there would only be a slight rise in cost. For a student now paying $104 for the basic health care package, plus limited coverage, the price rise would be approximately to $120.

In outlining the proposed program Averill listed the following benefits:

Preventive medicine, and full family care, mental health care, dental care, in-patient care that would include on-campus or off-campus general hospital care, extended care in the hospital and provision for emergency care, and community health education services that would include clinics in smoking, drug abuse, and nutrition.

Averill said that the main reason such a plan couldn't be instituted now, is because of general lack of people.

"A student complained to me on "Bitch Day" that he couldn't bring his wife or child into the infirmary now for care. At this time we can't do this. We need specialists for this, but we can't have them unless we have the people. With a lot of faculty and students we can have this," he said.

In other business, the Senate adopted a Task Force Report, that makes guidelines for grant requests from graduate departmental organizations and special interests groups. The purpose of this report is to give groups some idea as to what to expect when they go before the Graduate Senate asking for money for a certain project.

New Governance System Proposed For School Of Ed

By DON GLICKSTEIN

A new governance system for the School of Education which will increase faculty responsibility and retain limited student representation was proposed to the School of Education faculty yesterday.

Provost Robert Gluckstern, in the wake of protests last spring at the School of Education, had abolished the School's previous governing body, the School Council, during the summer. The Council had consisted of faculty, undergraduates, graduate students, and staff. In August, a Governance Task Force was created; it consisted of a graduate student, an undergrad, 2 non-School of Education participants, a minority student, a Dean, a faculty member, a minority faculty member, and a representative from the Provost's Office.

The Task Force propos d that a School of Education "Assembly" be created, comprised of all of the School's faculty, graduate and undergraduate representatives, and 3 staff members. Previously, faculty had been selected on an equal basis with graduate students.

The Assembly, as described by the Chairman of the Task Force, Dr. Ann Lieberman, would be advisory to the Dean in academic matters, undergraduate and graduate policies, admissions, and faculty recruitment. A minimum of 2 students would be on the standing committees, and all decisions would be made in consultation with minorities--racial and sexual--in the School. There would be no minority quotas.

In addition, a Review Committee would meet periodically to give feedback to the Dean on his decisions. The Dean of the School Dwight Allen, had been criticized last spring for several of his actions.

The Task Force proposal offered three alternatives to the present internal structure of the School. Currently, the faculty and graduate students belong to one of two dozen "Centers", ranging from Humanistic Education to Urban Education. The Centers must submit justifications for their existence every three yeas. They act like departments, except for their greater flexibility. A person can be working in more than one Center at a time.

The Task Force said that the Centers would have to find ways of working closer with each other, to provide greater coordination of programs. "Cluster groups"--large groups of people with similar interests--was one alternative. The Task also proposed the creation of "purpose units". These units would be focused on professional interests and would center around the faculty.

Dr. Lieberman, an Assistant Professor in the Teacher Educator Center, said that she did not view that proposal as a "faculty grab".

"The intent is to have student representation on all committees", she said. At the same time, she added, the proposal tried to "nail down some of the responsibilities that haven't been nailed down" by having the faculty provide greater continuity in the School.

Lieberman noted an example that in the past, when non-School of Ed faculty tried to contact the one person in charge of "field work", they could not understand why such a person did not exist. The School of Education runs 24 decentralized teacher field work programs. "We grew so fast", she said, "that no one was responsible."

The Governance proposal will be given a final revision and voted on by the Education faculty and deans within the next two weeks, in accordance with University policy. Student approval will be sought.

ON HALLOWEEN
Tues. Oct. 31st
BOB FOR BARGAINS
at the
SHOE BIN

Tax Protested

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - About 100 persons demonstrated outside Massachusetts Institute of Technology Monday to protest imposition of head taxes on Jews who wish to leave the Soviet Union for Israel.

Earlier, a letter and a petition signed by 150 MIT faculty members was presented to Dr. Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, in the office of MIT President Jerome Weisner.

Complaints Aired On Bitch Day

By JIM DEMPSEY

There may yet be relief for the complaining masses -- for the annoyed, the harrassed, the infringed-upon and dissatisfied students trying to survive another day here.

Many of the casually-mentioned complaints between friends about UMass and its services are now being brought to the attention of the department authorities for the appropriate action.

As a result of Bitch Day, those whose complaints have so often been shrugged off or ignored, now have a spokesman in the Student Senate Services Committee. Each member of this group is handling a specific field of complaints. They plan to analyze the problems and confer with the heads of each department to work out solutions.

Some 800-1000 persons came by the Bitch Day tables Thursday letting off steam in all directions. The heads of most of the major service departments were there all day to answer questions and field complaints.

Chairman of the Senate Services Committee Bob McGrath, noted that some of the administrators were skeptical about the effect the complaints would have. He said that "Some don't think it will do much good." They feel it would be more effective if people went directly to the departments with complaints.

The Services Committee hopes to add a little weight to these complaints. Today they are meeting with Food Service director Marie Cappadonna.

The Food Services seemed to be the most popular target for criticism. Many students attacked the compulsive meal ticket policy for those under-21. They felt that that they were old enough and should be able to decide what they will eat and when they will eat it.

Some people resented the fact that they could not let anyone else use their meal ticket. "We should be able to loan it out to someone who needs it when we are not using it," argued one person.

The disparity between high meal ticket rates and poor food quality was raised time after time. Overcooked vegetables, lack of variety in the foods served and salad that is usually not fresh were the chief complaints.

The Campus Center Concourse "bazaar" is another source of irritation to students. Several people felt that there should be a limit to the number of vendors allowed outside the Bookstore. They cited the tremendous overcrowding and rush hour congestion and the lack of space for non-profit information services to set up tables. For these reasons they suggested there be restrictions on the number of days vendors could hawk their wares in the concourse.

"Why should I pay a fee for the Campus Center when I never use it?" was a recurring question, particularly among commuters. This was another fee people felt should be optional.

The list goes on to include complaints about: the unfair allocation of financial aid and the extremely limited funds for the same; the early closing hours of the Craft Workshop; ripoffs; late buses; telephones if the study section of the music room; high prices at Munchies; mail service inefficiency--lost packages and delayed mail; 3-credit courses that should be 4-credit courses; and on and on.

The Senate Services Committee will be investigating all of these problems in the next few weeks and working to bring about solutions.

They plan to condense the complaints and have them delivered to each department administrator outlining the problems and possible solutions. They also intend to notify each student who registered a complaint on what is being done to relieve his problem.

Weather
(9) 256-6714

Top of the CAMPUS RESTAURANT

Airport Security Defended

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) - Airline and city officials defended Houston Intercontinental Airport security precautions Monday after a Sunday hijacking in which one man was killed and another wounded.

Stanley Hubbard, 34, a ticket agent, was the only man on duty at Gate 17 at Terminal A when Eastern Air Lines Flight 496 was being loaded to resume its flight from San Antonio to Syracuse, N.Y., via Atlanta.

Hubbard was shot to death and Wyatt Wilkinson, 26, a ground crew jet refueler, was shot in the arm.

Houston Aviation Director Joe Foster said four hijackers apparently forced their way onto the plane after waiting until they knew a security guard was not in the gate area.

He added that there is no airport regulation requiring a guard to stay with the ticket taker operating the magnetometer, an electronic detection device.

"We just don't have enough people," he said. "There are just too many planes taking off all the time."

Broiled
CHOPPED SIRLOIN
w/onion rings
$2.36

Halloween Sale!
9:30 AM to MIDNIGHT
Bedspreads 6.98 4.95 7.95 5.95
Rugs 25% off ENTIRE SELECTION
Bamboo curtains 8.95 6.50
159 N. Pleasant St. next door to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

In The Nation And The World

U.S. Withdrawal Seen As Goodwill Gesture

"PEACE IS AT THE TIP OF THE PEN", says Nguyen Thanh Le, spokesman of the North Vietnam delegation at the Paris conference during a press conference in Choisy-le-Roi, residence of the North Vietnam delegation, in the Paris suburb. (AP)

SAIGON (AP) - The United States has removed much of its powerful 7th Fleet in the Gulf of Tonkin, a strike force it built to its biggest level since World War II, informants disclosed Monday.

The withdrawal was seen as another gesture of good will in an effort to get a peace agreement with the North Vietnamese.

Dozens of carriers, cruisers and destroyers have quietly steamed southward below the 20th Parallel, and the Navy has halted all bombardment in new mining of North Vietnamese waters above the line, the informants said.

It had been disclosed earlier and confirmed by Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird that all air strikes had been halted above the 20th Parallel.

The 20th Parallel is just above the port of Thanh Hoa, 85 miles south of Hanoi and 210 miles north of the demilitarized zone separating the Vietnams. The U.S. reduction in effect halts all types of attacks against North Vietnam's heartland, including the major cities of Hanoi and Haiphong and the vital northeast and northwest rail lines connecting with China.

While placing of new mines has been halted above the 20th Parallel, informants cautioned that the waters are still dangerous to ocean going traffic since active mines still remain.

In Saigon, Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam said his government won't sign an agreement until North Vietnam withdraws its troops from the South and there is agreement on the exact role of a proposed National Council of Reconciliation and Concord. It is supposed to maintain a cease-fire and supervise elections.

Lam said that under the present wording of the agreement, the council is a coalition government in disguise. Saigon has steadfastly resisted a coalition government, saying it eventually would lead to a Communist takeover in South Vietnam.

While sharply curtailing activities above the 20th Parallel, the United States is still staging tactical air strikes in the southern half of North Vietnam but has limited the number of raids to about 100 a day, a two-thirds cut, informants reported.

A Navy A7 fighter-bomber was shot down by antiaircraft fire Sunday 26 miles northwest of the North Vietnamese port of Vinh and the pilot is missing, the U.S. Command said. The enemy continued to back up a threat to intensify the fighting until the United States signs the cease-fire agreement.

The Saigon command reported that Communist led forces launched more than 100 attacks across South Vietnam for the fifth successive day.

'Everyone Has His Fingers Crossed'

ANDERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Guam (AP) — The men who fly and support B52 bombers over Indochina don't see the fighting in the jungles below, but they're as anxious as soldiers on the ground for the peace talks to succeed.

"Everyone has his fingers crossed. I mean everyone, even the guys who say they like it here," said one young airman working underneath one of the B52s at Anderson Air Force Base. His friends nodded in agreement and one rolled his eyes at the understatement.

The airmen are not allowed to talk on the record to reporters about the cease-fire talks, but their feelings are not secret.

"I'll tell you they're ready to go home," said one Air Force information officer. At Anderson, the larger of two B52 bases for the Indochina war, the hope for peace seems to be split between a desire to end the fighting and a wish to get off Guam.

B52s were returned to this island base in February, more than a month before Hanoi began its new offensive, spokesman say. After March 30, more of the bombers arrived, bringing the Guam total to near 150.

Another 60 or so fly out of Utapao, in Thailand.

The six-man B52 crews fly a largely uneventful 12-hour round trip to Indochina. They might go three times a week, working "taxi duty" shifting around planes on the ground on other days.

Their targets are more than five miles below and, even without the usual cloud cover, the land is a vague blur. Anti-aircraft missiles offer little threat, and the tailgunners are chronically underemployed.

On an island 2,800 miles from Indochina, they have to depend on Vietnam transfers and the evening news for their taste of the war. Once here, they stay for nearly six months with the possibility of re-assignment for another tour.

In Brief...

6 Escape from Springfield Jail

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Six men waiting trial in Hampden County Superior Court escaped Monday night from Hampden County Jail, Springfield police said.

Police said the six men "are considered dangerous."

One of the men, Robert Neilson, 31, of Agawam, was said by police to be armed with a small hand gun.

Neilson was awaiting trial on charges of murder in the July 12 shooting death of Stephen Perrot of Indian Orchard and of robbery in the 1971 holdup of the Indian Orchard branch of the Valley Bank.

Pat at GOP Dinner in Hub Tonight

BOSTON (AP) — Sponsors of a Commonwealth Armory Salute to President Nixon's Re-election reported Monday the $25-a-ticket affair Tuesday night is a sellout with between 6,000 and 7,000 persons expected. Mrs. Patricia Nixon is expected to be the guest of honor.

Bob Hope will head the entertainers, who also include Ethel Merman, comedian Frank Fontaine and Lionel Hampton and his orchestra.

Italian Plane Crash

BARI, Italy (AP) — An Italian airliner carrying 24 passengers and a crew of three crashed near a farmhouse Monday night on a flight from Naples to Bari. Airline officials reported all aboard were killed.

Hanoi Blames U.S. For Cease-fire Delay

PARIS (AP)-North Vietnam and the Viet Cong have laid the blame for delay in a Vietnam cease-fire solely on the United States. Hanoi demanded Monday that Washington "stop stalling."

The Viet Cong said it was willing to go on with the peace talks later this week but will hold Washington responsible for failing to sign a cease-fire accord Tuesday.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, the chief Viet Cong negotiator, vowed at a news conference that the Communists will fight "until total victory" unless the Nixon administration forces Saigon to accept the U.S.-North Vietnamese draft agreement.

A North Vietnamese broadcast quoted Nguyen Duy Trinh, North Vietnam's vice premier and foreign minister, as saying responsibility for the delay in signing "rests entirely with the U.S. side."

"The United States is trying to fool the public by saying that it will take just another session to settle various minor matters..." he said.

Trinh claimed that, "since Oct. 11, the United States has many times demanded a revision of the contents of the agreement and of the signing schedule."

"If the United States does not stop stalling, the agreement can never be signed to end the war and restore peace in Vietnam," Trinh added.

Both North and South Vietnam raised the question of whether U.S. presidential politics were playing a part in the Nixon administration's peace negotiations.

The official Saigon radio criticized the United States' role in negotiations with Hanoi and charged the North Vietnamese were trying to lure Nixon into a quick settlement "in return for a few ballots."

Radio Hanoi, quoting the Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan, asked of the Nixon administration, "Do they want to use the negotiations to serve the political goals they pursue in their country."

The broadcast was referring to the U.S. request for more time before signing because of opposition in Saigon.

In Peking, Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei of China and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home of Britain agreed that both nations want to see the end of the Vietnam war and the stablishment of a lasting peace. They also agreed they were ready to take part in any international peace conference in Vietnam.

COMMUTER HEALTH EDUCATION SERIES

Psychological
Physiological
Practical Aspects of Contraception

JANE ZAPKA of the Contraception Clinic

TUESDAY OCTOBER 31 12:00
COLONIAL LOUNGE

Sponsored by Commuter Assembly and Health Education Service

Election Special
FREE
Archie Bunker for President Shirt
With purchase of regularly priced pants.
Hurry — supply is limited.
the PUT-ON
UNIVERSITY STORE

ROUND TRIP FLIGHT TO LOS ANGLES

via American Airlines for $175.00

Includes meals and drinks. Leaves Bradley Intl. Airport on Dec. 23, 1972 and returns to Bradley on Jan. 21, 1973. Money has to be paid in full by Dec. 1, 1972. For payment or information: Call 5-0585 or 5-0587, ask for Russ Sobelman.

Israel Renews Attacks

TEL AVIV (AP)-Israel launched its jets Monday against Arab guerrilla bases and an army installation in Syria following a guerrilla air hijack that won the release of three Black September terrorists awaiting trial in West Germany for the Munich Olympic massacre.

Resentment against West Germany spread across Israel and Foreign Minister Abba Eban said release of the three Arabs was a "desecration of the memory" of the 11 Israelis killed at the games.

"Three...experts in murder and robbery have been set free...Who knows how many Israelis and others have been condemned to death or injury by the release of these three from prison." Eban told the Israeli parliament.

The hijackers and commandos flew to Libya Sunday night aboard the commandeered Lufthansa jetliner. The passengers and crew returned safely to Germany aboard the plane on Monday. None was hurt during the hijacking.

Israeli jets swept into Syria twice during the day-once to attack four guerrilla bases within seven miles of Damascus, the capital, and again in response to a Syrian artillery barrage. The secone wave of attack planes poured rockets and machine-gun fire into a Syrian armored base and military warehouses near Homs, 80 miles north of Damascus.

An Israeli military spokesman denied the strike was in direct retaliation for the hijacking that freed the three Olympic terrorists.

A Syria communique said the jets struck at civilian targets and that an undisclosed number of civilians, including women and children, were killed or wounded. Israel claimed the atacks were confined to military targets.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency said 25 bodies were taken to Damascus hospitals after the raids near the capital and more bodies were being found in the debris. Arab reports put the toll among guerrillas at 45 dead and wounded.

Between the air strikes, the Syrians opened an artillery barrage against Israeli military positions along a 13-mile front in the occupied Golan Heights of Syria. The Israelis said one solier was wounded, but denied Syrian claims that several settlements and missile installations were set ablaze.

The Israeli military command said the barrage lasted about 30 minutes and the second Israeli air strike of the day in Syria was a retaliatory measure.

The Israeli government demanded that the Germans explain why they turned the three captive Arabs over to the hijackers in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Families of the slain Olympic team members voiced their bitterness.

Guerrillas attacked the Israeli Olympic pavilion Sept. 5.

One Israeli newspaper demanded the million dollars sent by West Germany to the victims' families as compensation be returned.

Prime Minister Golda Meir called the release of the terrorists "an insult to the spirit of man" and a "surrender to a brutal force."

A spokesman for Chancellor Willy Brandt said in Bonn that Israel's criticisms "are absolutely unjustified."

"The Federal Republic of Germany did not cause the conflict in the Middle East but rather fell victim to this conflict in Munich and also today."

Trudeau Confident Of Election Victory

TORONTO (AP) - Canadians voted Monday to determine whether Pierre Elliott Trudeau should get a new mandate to rule this nation of 21 million for four or five more years. The result seemed to be largely in the hands of the "undecided" who had kept their preferences to themselves.

The early turnout across the country was moderate, despite fairly good weather.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberal party were outwardly confident of victory by a good margin. But they kept fingers crossed, mindful of the maverick nature of the Canadian voter. Although a variety of polls had put the Liberals out in front, the samplings focused attention on an unusually large number - as much as 30 per cent - of undecided voters.

Trudeau, now 53 and a husband and father rather than the trendy bachelor of four years ago, seemed less able to engender crowd enthusiasm than he did in 1968.

Another imponderable element was that the voting age had been lowered to 18. There were almost 12.8 million eligible voters this year, about two million more than in 1968 when the Liberals buried their nearest rivals, the Conservatives, and emerged with 152 House of Commons seats.

This fall when Trudeau dissolved Parliament the distribution of seats was: Liberals, 147; Conservatives under Robert L. Stanfield, 73; New Democratic party, under Davis Lewis, 25; Social Credit party under Real Caouette, 13. The other seats were held by independents or were vacant. This time 264 seats were sought by a record 1,117 candidates. The leader of the party winning most places forms a government. Trudeau's Liberals had to win at least 133 to enjoy the luxury of a majority in the House.

The campaign was dominated by economic issues revolving about taxes, inflation and an unemployment rate around 7 per cent.

44 Killed in Train Crash

CHICAGO (AP) - A collision of two crowded commuter trains during the morning rush hour Monday killed dozens of persons and scattered mangled bodies through the telescoped wreckage.

Forty-four persons were killed and more than 300 were injured, hospitals reported.

President Nixon cancelled plans for a noon hour motorcade Tuesday in downtown Chicago. The President expressed his sorrow and concern "over the tragic accident..which cost so many lives and inflicted so much suffering."

Officials at the Cook County morgue said they expected more bodies to be brought in by ambulances. Several hospitals received the injured.

The collision of the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad trains occurred when a lead train-a four car, double-decked train called the High Liner-overshot the 27th Street station on the South Side and began backing up.

It was rammed by a second commuter train made up of five coaches. The second train was not scheduled to stop at the station across from the McCormick Place exposition hall on the Lake Michigan shoreline.

There were an estimated 500 passengers aboard each train.

The front car of the second train plowed through the rear car of the lead train. Both cars were crumpled and telescoped. Many of the riders in these cars met instant death. Witnesses in the second train said the engineer, who was not identified, shouted a warning.

"Run back! Run back! We're going to crash." The engineer was among the final trapped victims to be freed and was taken by helicopter to a hospital.

Dr. Edward Goldberg, a surgeon at Michael Reese Hospital - only a hundred feet from the wreckage site - said many victims were brought in with partly severed limbs.

The screams of pinned victims were clearly audible to rescuers who pried at the twisted steel. Doctors and medical teams crawled through the debris to administer morphine and give emergency aid.

Railroad ties were propped against the ripped open cars to prevent them from crushing victims and rescue workers.

Cutting torches and heavy wrecking equipment were rushed to the scene, but several persons remained trapped four hours after the crash which occurred at 7:38 a.m.

China Technologically Weaker Than U.S., Russia

LONDON (AP) — China is forging ahead with its nuclear weapon program to gain bargaining power with the Soviet Union in border disputes, an authoritative British reference annual said Tuesday.

Jane's Weapon Systems added, however, that the Chinese are still technologically weak and will need American and Japanese help.

"The relationship between the two great Communist powers is such that China cannot tolerate a situation that enables Russia to blackmail her--any more than the Russians could tolerate a similar relationship with the Americans," Jane said.

"Now that some of the heat has been taken out of the U.S.A.-U.S.S.R. relationship, China's need is to achieve a nuclear capability that is sufficient to form the basis for useful discussions with the Russians.

"Such evidence as is available however suggests that the Chinese are still too technologically weak to drive such programs forward with sufficient speed and this weakness is probably one of the reasons for China's new readiness to have dealings with America and Japan."

TRICK or TREAT with RICO FLASHBACK
and his SURPRIZE GUEST
SPECIAL DRINK NITE
Witch's Brew 50¢
The English Pub
MYRICAL MIDNIGHT MYSTERY
Free admission w/ a costume!

SENATE NOTE SERVICE

2nd Half-Semester

Oct. 30 - Dec. 13

Anthro 104(A)
Astro 100(2,3)
Botany 100 (1,2)
Botany 101 (4D)
Econ 100(1)
Econ 103 (1)
Food Sci 101
Hist 150(A)
Hist 151
Micro 140(A)
Poli Sci 100 (A,B)
Psych 101 (1,2,3,4)
Psych 201, 263, 265, 270, 280 (2), 325(B,C)
Soc 101 (1a,3c)
Soc 254
Zool 101 (A,B,C,D,E)
Zool 13.5
Zool 135

$2.75 * $3.50

Discover the World on Your
SEMESTER AT SEA
Sails each September & February
Combine accredited study with educational stops in Africa, Australasia and the Orient. Over 5000 students from 450 campuses have already experienced this international program. A wide range of financial aid is available. Write now for free catalog:
WCA, Chapman College, Box CC40, Orange, Cal. 92666

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.
They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____
(Signature) _____ (Date) _____
Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

20,000 Greet McGovern In Hartford

Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern and his wife, Eleanor, discuss the campaign prior to the senator's appearance Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" from Washington. (AP)

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - "We care enough about the people of this state to come out and talk with you," Democratic presidential candidate Sen. George McGovern told a responsive crowd at Constitution Plaza Monday.

The throng replied: "We want George!"

It was the windup appearance of McGovern's fourth-and apparently last-visit to Connecticut during the presidential campaign. It drew a downtown lunch-hour crowd estimated by police at 15,000 to 20,000 in crisp, sunny weather.

Connecticut is one of the McGovern campaign's target states-not only because of its eight electoral votes, but because it is traditionally the first state to announce its vote totals on election night.

"I came to Connecticut because it is an important state," McGovern said in an interview at Bradley International Airport before flying to Pittsburgh.

"I was tremendously heartened by that crowd" in downtown Hartford, McGovern said. "I leave Connecticut thinking we are going to carry this state."

McGovern repeated his pledge to find peacetime work for displaced employes from the defense industries-a pledge aimed at Connecticut which used to be called "the arsenal of democracy."

But it was his ad-libbed jibes at the Nixon administration that drew the liveliest responses from the crowd.

To refer to the Watergate "bugging" incident as a "caper" or a "prank," said McGovern, is like the capital of the sinking Titanic telling the passengers after the ship struck an iceberg: "We're just stopping to pick up a little ice."

President Nixon, who has yet to campaign in Connecticut this year, was described by McGovern as "sitting back there in the White House, resting comfortably on his Gallup polls."

McGovern said even a defense-oriented state like Connecticut can have prosperity in peacetime.

"I believe we do not have to send our sons to war in order to put their parents back to work," the candidate said. "We will find far more jobs in the building of America than in the destruction of Asia.

Campaign '72

"We need the labor of every engineer, every machinist and every aerospace worker."

If elected, McGovern said his administration "will plan for a peace in which they are employed. And we will take the necessary steps....to provide a job for every man and woman in this country who is able to work."

The crowd booed at the mere mention of former Treasury Secretary John Connally's name. McGovern said that if Connally had been at the battle of the Alamo he would have been cheering for the Mexican general, Santa Ana, instead of the embattled Texans. This was in reference to Connally's chairmanship of the Democrats for Nixon Committee.

The crowd at Constitution Plaza extended across the passenger bridge over State Street and lined the railing on the plaza of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. across the street. Observers who had been at a similar rally for Hubert H. Humphrey during his 1968 presidential campaign said the crowd was larger than the one which turned out for Humphrey.

Humphrey carried Connecticut by 68,000 votes in 1968, and there were predictions from some Democratic politicians Monday that McGovern would also carry this state although by a very narrow margin.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, who was with McGovern throughout the visit, told one newsman that McGovern was within 30,000 or 40,000 votes of Nixon in Connecticut and would catch up by election day.

After fielding questions on a three-state televised "telethon" in Hartford Sunday night, McGovern spoke to party officials and labor union leaders at the Sheraton Park Plaza Hotel in New Haven Monday morning.

McGovern contrasted what he called the "rhetoric" of Nixon's Veterans' Day speech with the President's veto of the Veterans Health Care Expansion Act. And he questioned how any President who carried on the multi-billion dollar war in Vietnam could veto domestic programs on the grounds that they would be "inflationary."

McGovern's wife Eleanor, who had appeared with him on television the night before, reminded people of President Harry Truman's upset victory in 1948.

Both Major Parties Canvass Boston

BOSTON (AP) - "Somewhere, out there," said a registered Democrat with a Nixon button on his hat, "there's a lot of people in my party who won't vote for McGovern. Our job is to keep finding them."

This belief that many Democrats in heavily Democratic Massachusetts may be disenchanted with their presidential candidate has sent canvassers of both major parties on a house-to-house walk across metropolitan Boston.

Results of the surveys depend upon who's talking. Republicans say President Nixon will win Boston. Democrats say that's absurd.

In any case, the canvassing effort is massive, particularly in upper middle class and in Italian, Irish Catholic and Spanish neighborhoods. Sen. Hubert Humphrey did well enough in these neighborhoods in 1968 to defeat Nixon in Boston 171,000-41,000. Over-all, Humphrey won the state nearly 2-1, compiling a 700,000-vote margin.

The estimated 20 per cent of registered Democrats and independents in Boston who remain undecided hold the key to Massachusetts' 14 electoral votes. Canvassers say the number of undecided is declining, however, and Sen. George McGovern is the apparent benefactor.

One man, answering a McGovern canvasser in an Irish Catholic neighborhood, said he had never been fond of Sen. George McGovern. But, he said, "If it's between McGovern and Nixon, this house of four voters will vote for McGovern."

A woman, peeking out from behind her triple-locked door, said, "I've always been a Democrat. I wouldn't vote for a Republican now."

She, and thousands of others, have been approached at their homes in Boston by Nixon and McGovern volunteers who identify themselves and ask either, "Are you favorable to the re-election of the President" or, "Will you support George McGovern?"

With the Republicans, party labels are conspicuously absent. With the McGovern volunteers, the theme is both one of coming home to the party and of supporting "the man for the people."

Generally, residents in the Irish Catholic Brighton sector and upper middle class West Roxbury area are cautious, but willing to talk; initially suspicious, but eventually receptive, and in some cases refusing to say who they'll vote for.

"I don't have to tell anyone who I vote for, and I won't either," was the response of about 10 per cent of the 300 homes to which a newsman accompanied canvassers.

Democrats appeared conscious of their party; Republicans, when they could be found, were more conscious of the man. "I remember when Nixon went crying in 1962 out in California about the press not being able to kick him around anymore," one woman said. "What it amounts to is whether we want this kind of man in the White House. I'm a Republican and I don't."

(Continued on Page 7)

See UMASS. vs. BUCKNELL on Nov. 4th

Deluxe Peter Pan Bus ride near the beautiful Dutch Country area, leaving Friday Aft. and returning Saturday evening.

Spacious Motel accommodations — 2 people in a room with 2 double beds.

Tickets for the game.

All for the low cost of $24.95

Call 5-0585 or 5-0587 for information.
Ask for Russ Sobelman (No later than Nov. 1st)

CARL ANDERSON'S
RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE
Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013

BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.

DAILY LUNCHEON SPECIALS

WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER

NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar included. $3.75

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night

Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar included. $3.95

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

TUESDAY NIGHT

The Endless Knights

8:30 - 12:30

McG Has Peacetime Employment Plan

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Sen. George McGovern said Monday he has a plan to keep people working after the Vietnam war ends but President Nixon doesn't.

The Democratic presidential candidate said his plan for peacetime employment is to rebuild America by providing a decent transit system for every city, by ending pollution in this decade and by spending more for housing, schools, child care centers, recreation and aid to old people.

"If we will set about the kind of a program of construction and rebuilding America, we will need the services of every engineer, every aerospace worker, every college graduate, every machinist and every electronics worker. We will require the labor of every man and woman in this country who is physically able to work," McGovern said.

McGovern elaborated on his domestic plans after proposing the title "Mr. Veto" for Nixon. At a breakfast session in New Haven with union and Democratic political leaders, he hit at Nixon's vetoes of a number of domestic bills.

McGovern returned to this theme in Pittsburgh after Nixon announced he is vetoing bills for a National Institute on Aging and to provide public service jobs and various services for low income persons 55 and older.

The candidate told newsmen on his campaign jet that he was shocked to hear Nixon had vetoed two bills to aid old people. He said this contradicts Nixon's earlier promises to expand programs of aid for the elderly.

"In an effort to obtain the votes of more than 20 million older Americans Mr. Nixon's TV campaign advertisements are filled with pious promises, most of which are plainly untrue and most of which have been flatly contradicted by this veto today," he said.

Campaign '72

He said in Hartford that Nixon employs only 13 people in the entire federal government, and none of the White House staff itself, to plan conversion of military production to peacetime employment.

McGovern spoke to a lunchtime rally, estimated by police at 27,000 people and by local newsmen at about half that figure, in Constitution Plaza in Hartford.

Earlier, in remarks released to newsmen, he conceded that Nixon may be ending the war. "As peace comes, I have a plan to keep people working and earning, and he has none," McGovern said.

One of McGovern's legislative proposals would require that a portion of all defense profits be set aside to plan for nonmilitary work and to provide benefits for workers who lose defense jobs. Another proposal would provide such benefits out of federal funds.

One local congressional candidate, Republican lawyer Richard M. Rittenband, has alleged that McGovern's proposal to cut defense spending would decrease by half the Connecticut payroll of United Aircraft Corp.

Campaign Ads Criticized

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Ten greater Springfield clergymen issued a statement Monday deploring the campaign tactics of incumbent state Sen. George D. Hammond, R—Westfield, in his campaign against Democratic opponent, state Rep. Alan Sisitsky of Springfield.

The clergymen singled out Hammond's political advertisements attacking Sisitsky's patriotism because he voted with the majority in defeating a bill that would have banned the flying of enemy flags.

"Mr. Hammond has attacked Alan Sisitsky's patriotism because he voted against legislation which he sincerely believed to be unconstitutional," said the Rev. Nevin M. Kirk of Springfield.

"At the same time, Mr. Hammond didn't see fit to point out" that the leader of his own party, House Minority Leader Francis Hatch, R—Beverly, voted against the bill.

"We call upon Mr. Hammond to cease and desist from these irresponsible tactics of which the flag issue is but one example," the clergymen said.

Parties Canvass Boston

(Continued from Page 6)

Vincent Casto, a leatherworker, said he usually votes Democratic but can't do it this year. "McGovern just seems to be too radical," Casto said, adding he could not vote for a man who favored amnesty and abortion. The Nixon canvasser did not tell Casto that McGovern had not come out in favor of abortion. He later admitted that he knew it, however.

In West Roxbury, and nearby Roslindale, 25 per cent of those canvassed by Nixon volunteers said they were undecided. But of the others contacted in the heavily Democratic area, about 60 per cent professed support for the President and a few said they were leaning in that direction, Nixon's canvassers said.

"I'm just not sure," one woman said. "This bugging Watergate disturbs me a little, but I suspect the Democrats would do the same thing if they got a chance. I don't think Nixon had done such a great job, but I'm afraid of all the unemployment we'll have if McGovern cuts the defense budget."

Early reports of Nixon's apparent strong position in the West Roxbury section led to increased Republican efforts throughout Massachusetts, where a poll taken in early October gave Nixon 48 per cent of the vote and McGovern 44 per cent. Paul Sullivan an attorney who has been working in the West Roxbury Nixon office since it opened seven weeks ago in what used to be a Chinese restaurant, said the President's lead in his area is dropping but by small margins.

"Whatever big lead originally occurred always diminishes," Sullivan said. "But we haven't had a canvass yet where Nixon hasn't had a good lead."

Nixon's people say the President is now winning 60 per cent of the Boston vote; McGovern staffers say the South Dakota senator will win Boston by 60 per cent or better.

They agree that the number of persons undecided voters is decreasing. In the areas where a newsman went, most of those people appeared to be coming back to their party, the Democrats.

"I know all I need to know about McGovern," one man in the Brighton section said. "We're Irish Catholics and Democrats in this house and a week ago the four of us were all undecided about McGovern. But now three of us are going to vote Democratic."

That response, and all the others, were duly recorded by the canvassers. The undecided can expect another visit, and they're likely to be flooded with literature.

Those who claim to be decided can expect another visit, and they're likely to be flooded with literature.

Those who claim to be decided can expect visits from party workers on Nov. 7. It is their job to get out the vote.

Both sides are continuing daily, house-to-house canvasses.

Springfield Union Endorses Nixon

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The Springfield Union announced its endorsement Monday of the re-election of President Nixon.

"Bold, pragmatic leadership of President Richard M. Nixon has brought the U.S. to a new era," the newspaper said in an editorial.

"The record to date is impressive. An imminent cease-fire in Indochina, a truce in the U.S.-Soviet cold war, an open China door, an economy on the upswing, a dropping unemployment rate, the campuses at rest, a draft all but ended, a swing to strict constructionism in interpreting the Constitution.

"This newspaper favors Mr. Nixon's re-election," the editorial said.

Labor Leaders Support McG

BOSTON (AP) - Officials of three major unions shook hands at Boston-area factories and met with state labor leaders Monday in an effort to drum up support for the presidential campaign of Sen. George S. McGovern.

The labor leaders, all based in Washington, included Sol Stetin, international president of the Textile Workers Union of America; Paul Jennings, international president of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, and Kenneth Bannon, international vice president of the United Auto Workers.

Infirmary (In An Emergency) 5-2671

Hallowe'ween Sale!
9:30 A.M. TO MIDNIGHT

Turkish Coats
REG. 59.95
NOW 42.50

151 N. PLEASANT ST. NEXT DOOR TO THE POST OFFICE
FACES OF EARTH

THE JEANS STORE

LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE

MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS

ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women

201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)

WEAR HOUSE

Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706

Lee

quilted nylon jacket

Beat the wind chill index with this all-purpose Lee jacket. Light weight, but super warm. 100% polyester fiberfill. Navy and maroon $10.39

the PUT ON UNIVERSITY STORE

dvp presents:

DON LEE

black poet and editor

"Art and Politics"

also speaking:
Dayvid Nelsun
Andre McLaughlin

Wednesday, Nov. 1
Campus Center Auditorium
8:00 p.m.

Coffee Hour Following in the New Africa House

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Jerry Lazar
NEWS STAFF	Pam Hyjek, Christine Olthoff, Jan Liva
EDITORIAL	Jeannette Martineau
SPORTS	Geoffrey Kurinsky
DARKROOM	Al Chapman, Bernie Pine, Steve Schuster, Jim Pappas, Mark Majeski
AD LAYOUT	Lisa Saunders

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Two For Reform

There are seven days left to election day and the pollsters are predicting that the gap between George McGovern and Richard Nixon is decreasing. Yet, the impact of a McGovern victory will be minimum and a Nixon victory drastic, if the men whose ideas are similar to those of the Democratic candidate are defeated in local elections.

It is on this note that the Collegian endorses the candidacies of state Rep. John W. Olver, D-Amherst, for state senator in the Franklin-Hampshire District, and Democratic hopeful James Collins of Amherst for state representative in the 2nd Hampshire District.

Olver, 35, has served two terms in the House with great distinction and accomplishment. In 1972, the senate hopeful sponsored 17 bills that became law including bills increasing the minimum wage, expanding voter registration and limiting campaign spending. He has also sponsored every legislative effort to grant full legal, social and political rights to 18 year olds. His record on women and elderly rights is equally impressive. The Amherst lawmaker has long been an advocate of reform at the Belchertown State School, and has worked for this purpose in his role as a member of a special legislative commission investigating conditions at the school.

Collins, 26, was the surprise candidate in the September primary when he finished a close second for one of the two spots on the Democratic ticket. Since entering politics, Collins has proved to be a man who is willing to listen, to learn, to work and learn from his constituents. He has backed reforms toward fairer taxes for the wage-earner, the homeowner, the small businessman, and the local farmer. He has also urged reform of welfare to reduce abuses and poverty. He has spoken out in favor of a woman's right to a free choice regarding abortion.

We feel that Collins and Olver will represent a strong, full-time voice for Western Massachusetts. These are the men that will be setting the state's priorities. These will be the men who will have to decide if public higher education, the Belchertown State School, and societal reform are going to have a higher priority over building highways or financing a junket for legislators to "study" the Florida Presidential primary system.

If we intend to continue to speak out in favor of reform then it is essential that we elect into office men who will implement these ideas into law. Until then, all we do will be rhetoric.

Reid Fishman

Work For George

Let's face facts--after bombing the hell out of a land and its people, Richard Nixon (through his pet intellectual, Henry Kissinger) has decided on a "peace settlement" with the Vietnamese (or, at least, the North Vietnamese) that just so happens to have taken place less than two weeks before the presidential election. Looking into the facts of the settlement, however, we find that if it is finalized, it will not be binding on the South Vietnamese government (presently under the dictatorship of our old friend Thieu), and that it will continue to provide financial and diplomatic support for that government. Therefore, calling this a "peace settlement" is tremendously ambiguous, and referring to it as anything more than a temporary cease-fire is pretentious.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, Mr. Nixon has vetoed a number of important bills during those last few weeks of Congress. Some of these bills provide for more money for such vital programs as education, veterans' benefits, and pollution control. One can see without too much effort that the occurrence of this "peace settlement" at this time is even more convenient in order to blind the American people to these recent presidential vetoes.

However, at this late time in the campaign, one cannot expect to sway anyone away from his or her chosen candidate. Most of the voters have made up their mind. Those who support the re-election of President Nixon feel it is a foregone conclusion and there is no real campaign work left to do. To the contrary, those supporters of George McGovern feel that he will render an upset victory on November seventh, but that there is still much work to be done.

The slogan of the McGovern election drive is, "FOUR MORE DAYS, FOUR MORE HOURS, OR FOUR MORE YEARS." This slogan describes the need for McGovern workers to go out of state for any period of time from the four days leading to the election, to four hours on election day itself. The days are Saturday, Nov. 4; Sunday, Nov. 5; Monday, Nov. 6; and Election Day, Nov. 7. Workers are needed on any or all of these days to canvass, leaflet, telephone, or just hand out cards on election day. Food, lodging, and transportation will be provided, and every volunteer is needed for any period of time. This Thursday will be, "SIGN UP FOR McGOVERN DAY", and there will be opportunities to sign up to work at various places on campus including the Campus Center, the Hatch, and every Dining Commons. There will be a sign-up card printed in the Collegian which may be returned to any of the aforementioned places. Previous to Thursday, there will be McGovern workers canvassing the dormitories and asking for volunteers. If you are unable to sign up at any of these places, call Ed Scully at 546-5730.

If Richard Nixon is the question, the George McGovern is truly answer. Answer the question, and work for McGovern on or before election day, this Tuesday, Nov. 7.

Reid Fishman is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Steve Anderson

A Dynamic Candidate

John Olver, candidate for state senate from the Franklin and Hampshire district, deserves the support of the voters. Mr. Olver has been a progressive and clear thinking state representative. He has been active in Youth and Women's Rights, education, Mental Health, Housing and numerous other fields.

As a state representative Mr. Olver has worked to lower the age of adulthood from twenty-one to eighteen. As Chairman of the Commission on Lowering the Age of Majority he hopes to achieve his goal. He feels that eighteen year-olds should be able to serve on juries and hold jobs that are presently restricted to people over twenty-one.

Mr. Olver's position on the disposal of solid wastes has been beneficial to the people of Western Mass. He has supported legislation that would mean that solid wastes created in one area would be dumped in that area. This legislation would mean that the Montague Plains would not be challenged again by the State to be used as a dump. Mr. Olver has also worked for better management of wetlands and a limitation on the amount of salt that can be used on the state's roads.

Rep. Olver has been a strong Women's Right advocate. He voted for the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. He has supported legislation to remove acts that discriminate against women from the state's laws. His votes to change the present birth control and abortion laws have shown him to be a dedicated Women's Rights advocate. He is in favor of removing restrictions on the dissemination of contraceptive devices. He has voted to give women more freedom on the abortion question.

The graduated income tax is an important plank in Mr. Olver's tax program. He feels that a graduated income tax along with losing tax loopholes will reduce the tax burden of over three-quarters of the taxpayers in Massachusetts. He supports a reduction in property taxes through an increase in more progressive taxes.

Mr. Olver has been a vigorous supporter of a better life for the workers of this state. He has voted for an increase in the minimum wage to two dollars. More benefits must be given to injured workers. The adoption of a graduated income tax and a reduction in property taxes would also benefit the workers of the state. Mr. Olver is aware of the high rate of unemployment in this state and has worked to combat it.

The Welfare problems of the state have received a great deal of attention from Mr. Olver. The management of the Welfare system must be improved. Almost ten percent of the money allocated for welfare is spent in payments to people who should not receive them or is lost in other forms of abuse. Mr. Olver favors a system that would save the Commonwealth money but also guard the privacy of the recipients when it comes to policing the Welfare organization. Day care centers are important if parents are to be able to work. The increase in the minimum wage until it is past the poverty level is essential if people are to be encouraged to find a job.

Mr. Olver has voted against increasing tuition at state schools. He favors increased scholarship funds. The talents of a large portion of our state must not be prevented from developing for lack of funds.

Senator Barrus and Mr. Olver differ on some basic issues. Mr. Olver favors a cut in the size of the House from 240 to 160. Mr. Barrus does not. Senator Barrus is against state funding of family planning services. Rep. Olver favors it. Senator Barrus has been active in the Senate since 1967. He has worked for the interests of Western Mass. However, he has not been as progressive and as innovative as Rep. Olver. John Olver has been a dedicated state representative and an important voice for Western Mass. He would be a dynamic state senator. He deserves your vote.

Steve Anderson is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Steve Tripoli

The Evolution Of Change

My father's friends are voting for George McGovern. My father's friends, with whom I've fought for the better part of my young adult life, are voting for George McGovern. For this reason, among others, I feel that George McGovern has a good chance of winning on November 7th.

The reason that it's significant that this small group of people are voting for McGovern is simply that they're not the type of people you'd think would be McGovernites. They have a lot of liberal ideas, but the word radical turns them off, and it's a word that's been heard a bit in relation to the Democratic Presidential candidate this year. Back in '68, which at this point in time seems like an eternity ago, these same people were telling me in no uncertain terms that Gene McCarthy was the most ridiculous thing to hit presidential politics since Harold Stassen.

Why the big change? Among other things, it's because the prospect of Four More Years of You Know Who even has my father's friends shook up. Yes, America has a conscience, and it's telling people that the war in Vietnam should have been over a long time ago. America also has a pocketbook, and it's telling them that there are two million more people unemployed than there were four years ago, and that prices are high. There is also the factor of the precepts on which this country was built. The Bill of Rights is screaming at America that it is being thrown out the window. The Constitution screams that it is being ignored. America is not deaf. My father's friends are America.

My father agrees with his friends, too. A few months ago my father told me that McGovern would have to show him more before he could claim his vote. Although McGovern didn't do this quite to my father's satisfaction, Nixon did something else. He decided to end the war two weeks before the election. This didn't impress my father. He thought Richard Nixon was trying to snow him under with political trickery. While it is better that Richard Nixon end the war now than at a later date, his last minute political dance has offended people by taking them for fools. They know the reasons for the settlement coming at this time, and they don't like the idea of being played to.

My father and his friends are sick of war, economic problems, and the threat of the repression of their rights. My father and his friends are sick of Richard Nixon. My father and his friends are America.

Steve Tripoli is Executive Editor of the Collegian.

Letters To The Editor

A Good Story, But...

To The Editor:

I should like to compliment your reporter, Mr. Robert L. Scheier, on his article, "Faculty Ponders Collective Bargaining" (MDC, Sept. 26). It was a clear and objective summary of a very complex situation. I regret the delay in responding, owing to my absence out of town.

There are, however, some points in the article that your readers might find misleading. First, it is implied that I am a professor at this institution. This is not so, my appointments were at the University of London, Rensselear Polytechnic Institute, and the University of Pennsylvania; I am currently a consultant in private practice, principally in the field of water pollution. Also, by singling out only my name for reference, somewhat less than justice was done to my MTA colleagues who are also working extensively on this campus, especially Mr. Eduardo Robreno and Mr. Arnold Schneider, both of whom have done graduate work at the University of Massachusetts Labor Relations Center. Mr. Robreno is a former faculty member at Rutgers University and is, in fact, the MTA staff member who is directly responsible to MTA for this campus; I am only his advisor.

Second, the Massachusetts Society of Professors is becoming an affiliate of the state organization, the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA), not the national one, the National Education Association (NEA). The MTA is the affiliate of the NEA. It cannot be stressed emphatically enough that the affiliations referred to take the form of services rendered or to be rendered; the Massachusetts Society of Professors is a completely autonomous affiliate of the MTA, not a lower level in a hierarchy of command. The policies and goals of the Society, which is the organization seeking to become bargaining agent, are those set by the faculty membership of the organization, not by the MTA or NEA staffs or by consultants such as myself.

The third matter for discussion is one which is perhaps the most important of all from the standpoint of the majority of your readers--the student body. This is, briefly, the relationship of the faculty to the students under collective bargaining. We believe that by forming a collective bargaining organization, which will have legal powers rather than recommendatory ones, the faculty will gain rights and benefits that will ultimately manifest themselves as improved rights and benefits for the students. One that greatly interests me is the right of a professor to be evaluated for merit awards, promotion, tenure, etc., on his total performance--in particular his right to have his teaching abilities considered as worth while as his research publications list. I hardly think further comment is needed in view of the recent concern on this very matter (expressed in regard to a specific case) in your own columns quite recently.

Another service provided by MTA faculty members which will ultimately benefit students is in the area of "governmental and legislative services". This is the work that our staff does at the State House, drawing up and sponsoring bills supporting education, lobbying for support for these and other beneficial bills, leading campaigns opposing bills that would be detrimental to education, and doing all the necessary research and public relations work to make these efforts effective. In these days of financial exigency, only a collective bargaining organization which can perform these lobbying functions effectively has any hope of preventing or even alleviating the arbitrary and drastic budget cuts that could destroy almost overnight the University's gains of the past decade.

Certainly, the Faculty Senate cannot do the job--the realization of this fact is the reason why the Massachusetts Society of Professors numbers among its adherents so many present and past faculty Senators.

On a less elevated plane, perhaps, but one which is not therefore any the less important, is the ability of a collective bargining agent, through the negotiation of a contract between the faculty and the Trustees, to protect both the professor and the students from the imposition of overlarge classes, excessive course loads, improper schedules, and other shortsighted "economies" that can result in an unrewarding job instead of a rewarding career for the former, and a four-year-grind instead of a satisfying educational experience for the latter. It is to matters like these, as well as to participation in an effective way in courses, curricula, faculty appointments and rewards, etc., that I was referring when I said that "in general, the faculty is less interested in the bread-and-butter issues like salary than in proper participation in the governance process." At the present time the faculty role, through its Senate, is largely advisory; the members of the MSP look to the Society to change the role into an effective partnership with the Administration, Trustees, students, and other appropriate bodies that together form the total University. Unlike the other two organizations, however, we are actually seeking to achieve this goal during the current academic year, not "as much as two or three years" from now.

My final point is the fact that my first name was misspelled, with a D instead of a C. Considering the anguish that such an error can cause on a list of examination results...!

Cyril Solomons

Puke For Nixon

To The Editor:

It wouls seem evident that Richard Nixon will be re-elected; therefore, in the event that such is the case, we propose that a massive Puke-in be held in response to Nixon's re-election. Said puke-in shall occur on Nov. 8, all day on the steps of the Campus Center facing Metawampe. Those with meal tickets should eat at the dining commons first- those without can find ample reason to puke their brains out at the thought of four more years. Join us Nov. 8 and PUKE FOR NIXON.

P.S. Perhaps the campus police can help us out with any problem pukers with a little nausea gas.

Chris Kirousis
Peter Lewicke

Editorial Points

Guest Editorial Point of the week: Death is a funereal disease.

***

Don't blame the Collegian if the first Editorial Point was bad, someone left it in our mailbox.

***

Oh, by the way, Peil, Dick Nixon doesn't really want your job. It looks like the only people who have to worry are Sonny Jurgenson and Billy Kilmer.

***

In view of the choice Massachusetts voters have for U.S. Senator this year, a write-in vote for Eva Dinkin doesn't look all that bad.

***

The Chancellor really ought to suspend classes November 7th. It may be his last official act before King Nixon declares ownership of the world.

***

Speaking of which, has anyone seen Pat Nixon lately? Rumor has it she may be ready to give Dick up for another man. Did you ever stop and wonder who's Kissing-er now, Dick?

Words Don't Lie

To The Editor:

Four years ago, during the Presidential election, I became interested in politics. I found myself following the campaigns of Humphrey and Nixon carefully and while disappointed in the election, I was quite anxious to see our new President in action.

He told us he had a plan to end the war and therefore the killing. But I was quite dismayed when this American, one of great distinction, refused to reveal it until he was elected President. I felt this made him an opportunistic man deceiving the people. After seeing that his plan was to kill by air and not by land, I was convinced that he was in fact deceiving the American people. Now he is telling us that the war will end after this election. Can we afford to trust him again?

President Nixon has had two excellent foreign policy programs working for him, both of which he soundly rejected while he was Vice-President. He has made our relations with the Soviet Union and the Peoples Republic of China better than ever. But looking at his other policies in a variety of areas, I see no reason why we should continue four four more years of his administration.

Consider the war. I remember President Nixon watching a football game on television while thousands were protesting the war in vain in Washington. I remember the 20,000 American lives lost since he has been President to say nothing of the thousands of Southeast Asian lives lost.

I remember Nixon was strong on crime in the streets during the campaign but crime and drug addiction have risen the past four years.

I remember that Nixon vetoed bills for hospital construction, medical schools and health care.

I remember that Nixon vetoed funds for education, and policies in that area.

I remember that Nixon opposed the latest Social Security benefits raise.

I remember that when Nixon took office, the unemployment rate was less that 4% and now it is over 6%.

I remember that the cost of living has gone up over 14% during the same period.

I remember that Nixon had a wage price freeze while prices still rose and wages were still inadequate.

I remember that the war in Indochina had spread as have our troops in the area.

I remember that Nixon withheld $12 billion of federal money already appropriated by Congress for social programs.

I remember also that Nixon opposed the creation of an Independent Consumer Protection Agency and vetoed the Landmark Child Development Bill.

And I remember the Kent State Commission which suggested changes in one area and was not abided by Nixon.

And finally, I remember that Nixon opposed the sale of arms to Israel in the 50s which helped the Israelis get in the precarious position that they are in now. I remember the arms sent free to Jordan and Iraq in these years.

On October 9, 1968 while in the heat of the last Presidential campaign Richard Nixon said, "Those who have had a chance for four years and could not produce peace should not be given another chance."

In his own words Richard Nixon suggests we vote for McGovern, his record proves that we must!

P.S. Remember the Republican spy scandal.

Elliott C. Margolis

Don't Give Up

To The Editor:

Disillusioned as many of us are by politics, we should not, in good conscience abandon the political process if for no other reason than the fact that government deeply affects our personal lives (viz., you are attending a state school). Take it from there.

You have a voice, however small it may be, and yes, I too, am tired of the semantic games that seem to have taken the place of significant political choices in this country. But there is a choice, and I believe that this time around it is a meaningful one.

My personal choice in past years lay in the American Independent Party of which so much has recently appeared on this page, and for whom I worked at one time. Most people are not aware that this party is supported in a large part by the same people who support the John Birch Society, one of this country's most effective right-wing extremist organization. I know because I also worked for and once was a member of the Birch Society.

I have since learned that extremism is not the answer, and here I make my point. Most of you, I'm sure, would not support a policestate which would be the eventual product of extremist politics. If not, then take a minute to stop and try to figure out why you would support an administration under which the following have occurred: 1. Four students at Kent State and three at Jackson State slain, and investigations in both cases quashed. 2. Regular army troops sent to Miami to stand by IN CASE of trouble at the political conventions. 3. The ITT investigation quashed. 4. Television cameras installed on the very streets of our nation's capitol, ostensibly as a crime deterrent. 5. The Watergate incident investigation quashed. 6. Influential congressmen (Sens. Muskie, Javits), who disagree with administration policies are investigated. 7. The My Lai case quashed. It certainly makes one think (double think?).

But can McGovern keep HIS promises, especially after the Eagleton affair? Is there a credibility gap? If so, then keep in mind the thought that Nixon is probably asking his psychiatrist the same thing! Can McGovern end the war? Perhaps Nixon has another plan!

You still have a vote. Exercise it while you still can. Four more years of Nixon? Seize the time! Vote McGovern!.

A. Michael Aroian

$1 Million Requested For Controversial Project

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LNS)- Sandwiched in among the voluminous pages of the Health Education and Welfare Appropriations bill which President Nixon just vetoed as "inflationary" was a $1,000,000 grant to Dr. William Sweet, to fund his project supporting brain surgery for individuals with "low violence thresholds". The Senate Appropriations Committee has recently rejected the grant but that isn't to say that Sweet won't get his money some other way. Now that the bill has been returned to the Congress to be reworked into a more acceptable form for the President, anti-psychosurgery forces are moving to prevent that million dollar grant or others like it from being included.

Already, in Boston, 100 people demonstrated to protest the grant and Boston City Hospital's involvement in the programs. Nationwide, women's and gay groups, prisoners' groups and some medical groups like the Medical Committee for Human Rights (MCHR) are launching an attack on the grant and on the resurgence of psychosurgery in general.

The $1,000,000 is earmarked for a project awarded last year to Dr. William Sweet, Director of Neurosurgery at the Massachusetts General Hospital at the Boston City Hospital.

Although the project and brain surgery in general have been the subject of nationwwide criticism recently, Dr. Sweet was the sole witness called by the Senate to testify about the appropriation.

Drs. Sweet and Mark particularly favor the use of amygdalotomy, a neurosurgical operation in which small portions of the brain are destroyed by electrodes, for the cure or control of violence associated with psychomotor epilepsy.

According to Peter R. Breggin, M.D., of the Washington, D.C. School of Psychiatry, the operation "has nothing to do with epilepsy and represents a newer form of the old-fashioned lobotomy."

Breggin cites scientific reports that the operation "blunts the emotions" in anyone whether they suffer epilepsy or not. He describes this as a "partial deadening of the individual, a partial murder of the living person," and believes that its use "heralds a new step toward 1984 and the Brave New World."

Dr. Breggin claims that neurosurgery for violence is a part of a larger wave of psychosurgery that is now sweeping the nation and which he has documented extensively in the Congressional Record. In the first wave of psychosurgery from 1937 through 1959, 50,000 patients were lobotomized in the United States. He estimates the current rate at 500 operations a year.

Psychosurgery for prisoners is not an entirely new idea. Earlier this year it was disclosed that three prisoners at the Vacaville Prison in California had had lobotomies performed on them in 1968. Said Marvin Overton, who at the time of the three lobotomies was a neurosurgeon at nearby Travis Air Force Base, "I don't think this is an experiment at all. It's a tried method of doing a procedure. There are a number of people in the prisoner system who are there for life simply because they have uncontrolled psychomotor seizures. I think it's very benevolent to offer it to prisoners."

A reporter who tracked down one of the prisoners who had a lobotomy said he complained of memory blockouts lasting as long as four days at a time, had aches in the area of his right eye, numbness and loss of feeling in his limbs.

The majority of individuals operated upon psychosurgically are not inmates in prisons or state hospitals. People suffering from anxiety depression and other disorders are the most frequent targets for psychosurgical operations. The predominance of women and gay victims has also brought considerable opposition from women's and gay groups throughout the country.

Considerable public attention has also been drawn to the use of psychosurgery to control "hyperactive children" in an experimental program at the University of Mississippi.

Sweet and Mark's research has elicited a lot of interest from law enforcement agencies because of possibilities it raises for large scale public behavior control. Drs. Sweet and Mark wrote a letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association after the Detroit roots in which they ask, "Is there something peculiar about the violent slum dweller that differentiates him from his peaceful neighbor?" and in which they suggest that ghetto violence is produced by "brain dysfunction". They received a grant this year for $108,930 from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration of the Justice Department to investigate "genetic causes" of violence and to deveop "techniques for the detection of such disorders in routine examination."

Drs. Sweet and Mark have had considerable difficulty finding support for their work from private foundations and from the National Institute of Mental Health and hence went directly to Congress. Last year Congress allocated $500,000 to be awarded through the balky National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH). The NIMH then approached the Massachusetts General Hospital as a possible recipient of the funds, but the hospital could not give NIMH assurances that they supported the project.

UMass
Police
5-2121

MDC Classifieds
Pay

Halloween Sale!
9:30 AM TO MIDNIGHT
20% OFF dresses pipes & buck Knives
157 N. PLEASANT ST. next door to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

WEAR-HOUSE
COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER
201 N. PLEASANT ST.

Make HALLOWEEN
a fun time!
Join the crew of
THE Rusty Scupper
ON
TUES. OCT. 31st
Enjoy the best in food & drink
while being entertained by that titillating trio
The Deadly Nightshade
HAPPY HOUR from 12 Midnight 'til 1:00 a.m.! surprises for everyone in costume
Don't miss it!
529 Belchertown Rd. 256-8551

© "COLUMBIA," ® MARCAS REG. PRINTED IN U.S.A.
★NOT INSANE★
THE FIRESIGN THEATRE
NOT INSANE OR ANYTHING YOU WANT TO
including:
Not Insane/Not Responsible

"Vote for Papoon! He'll give us the Guaranteed Annual Year. And More. Paid for by the National Surrealist Light People's Party. And the Firesign Theatre's new album
ON COLUMBIA RECORDS AND TAPES

2 Sonata Evenings Scheduled Next Week

Cellist Leopold Teraspulsky will play sonatas by Crumb, Debussy and Brahms, and the Bach G major suite Monday, Nov. 6, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

A UMass music professor, Teraspulsky has frequently participated in Casals Festivals and each summer performs at the Aspen Festival. Pablo Casals has written, "Leopold Teraspulsky does honor to his generation of remarkable cellists." Audiences in such music centers as London, Berlin, and Chicago have watched his career unfold.

He is a member of the New Friends of Music Piano Quartet, the Aspen Festival String Quartet, and the Pro Musica Trio.

Teraspulsky's Nov. 6 performance will offer a rarely heard solo sonata by George Crumb.

A sonata evening will be offered here by Julian Olevsky and Fernande Kaeser Wednesday, Nov. 8.

Olevsky, violinist, and Kaeser, pianist, will play at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on the UMass campus. Both are members of the UMass music department faculty.

The program will include: Mozart's "Sonata in A, KV 305"; Beethoven's "Sonata in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2"; and Faure's "Sonata in A, Op. 13".

Mr. Olevsky has performed in Europe, South America, and the Orient, in addition to the United States. His music career began at age seven in Germany where he was born. He has performed as a soloist with several major orchestras and chamber ensembles.

Miss Kaeser also began her musical studies when she was seven, in Switzerland. She is the only Swiss-born pianist to win the International Music Competition of Munich.

Contraception Clinic Offered

Information, counseling and prescriptions for contraceptives are available to all students through the Health Services. Members of the professional staff provide non-judgmental consultation to help you make your own decision in a safe, informed, and responsible manner. In order to meet the increased need for contraceptive care, the Health Service has expanded the services of the contraception clinic.

Every woman attending the contraception clinic for the first time must first attend an educational session. Men are welcome at this program and no appointment is needed. These hour-long sessions are held in Room 302 of the Health Services on Monday at 7:00 p.m., Tuesday at 3:00 p.m. and Wednesday at 3:00 p.m.

Clinic sessions are held on Monday-Thursdays. If a woman wishes to receive a new prescription for birth control pills or to be fitted with a diaphragm, she will be given an appointment on Monday or Wednesday evenings between 5:30-8:30 p.m. If she desires an IUD, she will be given an appointment for an initial consultation on Thursday between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m., which will be followed by an appointment at a later date for the actual insertion of the device.

Nurse Counselors are available for consultation at each of these sessions. You may see them at any time without an appointment.

The Health Services has also scheduled follow-up clinic session, call 5-0057 Monday-Friday for an appointment. If you have any questions, please call the Health Education Office 545-2492.

WFCR To Air Educ.Special

U.S. Commissioner of Education Sidney P. Marland Jr. will be a guest panelist during a 90-minute National Public Radio special, "Of, By and For the People," to be aired by National Public Radio member station WFCR at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 31, at 88.5 FM.

The program will seek to bring the public into the decision-making process on such issues as urban growth, failure of education, decay of the cities, environment and other areas of common concern where increased public participation can bring about possible solutions.

Representing the federal government during the discussion, Marland will bring his more than 20 years of experience as a teacher and school administrator to bear on the issues at hand. Before assuming his duties in Washington, Marland was president of the Institute of Educational Development (IED), a New York-based non-profit organization dedicated to study of reforms of inner city teaching and learning, the changing role of school leadership and the relationships between the business community and the public schools.

Marland has served on a number of national boards, commissions and special groups, including the board of directors of National Educational Television, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, the 1965 White House Conference on Aging, (as a vice-chairman), on Presidential Advisory Councils and others.

Fire
5-2111

Halloween Sale!
9:30 AM TO MIDNIGHT
Sheepskins
REG. 8.50 NOW 6.25
157 N. PLEASANT ST. next door to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

BEEF 'n BEER Nights
Wednesday & Saturday
Charcoal Broiled
Rib Steak
Pitcher of Beer
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Baked Potato
Roll + Butter
$3.50
The Pub

Where To Vote In Amherst

AMHERST POLLING PLACES
Open 8 a.m.-8 p.m., Tuesday, November 7

Precinct Place
1. North Amherst Parish Hall (across from Watroba's Store)
2. (S.W. Dorms) — Fire Station (next to Louis' Foods on N. Pleasant Street)
3. (Central, Quad, Orchard Hill) — Odd Fellows Hall (Kellogg Avenue, behind Post Office)
4. Masonic Hall (Main Street)
5. Old Junior High (Lessey Street)
6. Munson Memorial Library (on the green in South Amherst)
7. (Sylvan) Auction Gallery (Rt. 116, North Amherst)

For further information:
Amherst Town Clerk—253-3885
Belchertown Town Clerk—323-6901
Easthampton Town Clerk—527-0818
Hatfield Town Office—247-5684
Northampton City Clerk—584-0735
Sunderland Town Clerk—665-2989

Minority Awards Available

The Ford Foundation and the National Fellowships Fund have announced graduate fellowship programs for American Indians, Black Americans, Mexican Americans and Puerto Ricans for the 1973-74 school year.

These fellowship programs are for students (a) who plan to pursue full-time study toward the doctoral degree in the Arts or Sciences or (b) who hold a first post-baccalaureate professional degree--such as the MBA, MPA, MSW or M. Ed.—and plan to continue on to the doctoral degree in preparation for a career in higher education. These fellowships provide assistance up to maximum of four years and are available as Course of Study Awards or Dissertation Awards.

Additional information is available in the Financial Aid Office, Room 232 Whitmore.

SALE
This Week
JEWELRY
& other items
LOWEST PRICES
Tables between Hatch Cafe & Coffee Shop
Posters
Earrings
Bracelets
Necklaces
Watches
Chokers
Rings
Wrist Bands
Onyx
Onyx Ash Trays
Onyx Animals
F.U. Fingers
Wood Carvings
Horoscope Necklaces &
MANY MORE ITEMS

ÆTNA IS LOOKING FOR PEOPLE TO LOOK OUT FOR PEOPLE -- MILLIONS OF THEM.
This may strike you as an unusual way to describe an administrative job with a big company. But we're hardly typical of most "big companies."
As an action-oriented company, we're changing many of the stereotypes associated with big business in general—and the insurance business in particular.
We're committed to giving the consumer a better product and better services. And we've succeeded in coming up with exciting new plans and programs to do just that.
Right now, we're looking for people who can bring a distinctive, individualistic approach to a special kind of work.
Ætna has administrative jobs open both in the field and in the home office. Jobs that pay substantial salaries right from the start.
To learn more, we suggest you read the Ætna brochure "The Whole Truth" in your placement office. There's a special section called "Administration and Service" which gives detailed descriptions of jobs for you.
An average job? Hardly. But, then, we're not your average insurance company.
Ætna
LIFE & CASUALTY
You get action with Ætna.
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTERROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, WEATHER, AND SPORTS (3) (8) (22)
13 O'CLOCK HIGH—"I Am the Enemy" (18)
ZOOM (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST—"Night of the Colonial Ghost" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
MAGGIE AND THE BEAUTIFUL MACHINE (24)
MOVIE—"Lad: A Dog" (27)
ELLIOT NORTON (57)
7:00 KRESKIN (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES—Bob Barker, host (8)
DICK VAN DYKE—"The Ghost of A. Chantz" (18)
NEWS (22) (30) (57)
CPTV PRESIDENT'S REPORT (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
7:30 I'VE GOT A SECRET—Guest: Red Buttons (3)
THIS IS YOUR LIFE—Guest: Johnny Bench (8)
GOD OWNS MY BUSINESS (18)
DECISION '72—Debate: John D. Barrus vs. John W. Olver (22)
FAMILY GAME (24)
GOLDDIGGERS—Guest Host: Dom Deluise (30)
DRAGNET (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 MAUDE (3)
TEMPERATURES RISING—"Tenor Loving Care" (8) (40)
BONANZA—"The Twenty Sixth Grave" (22) (30)
FOURTH ESTATE (24)
THEONIE (57)
8:15 LITTLEST APOSTLE (18)
ERICA (57)
9:30 HAWAII FIVE-O (3)
MOVIE—"The Bounty Man" (8) (40)
DATELINE AMERICA (24) (57)
LAUREL AND HARDY (27)
9:00 700 CLUB (18)
THE BOLD ONES (22) (30)
BEHIND THE LINES (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
9:30 MOVIE—"The Dunwich Horror" (3)
BLACK JOURNAL (24) (57)
TWILIGHT ZONE—"Mr. Denton on Doomsday" (27)
10:00 MARCUS WELBY, M.D.—"Don and Denise" (8) (40)
NBC REPORTS (22) (30)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27) (57)
10:30 MOVIE—"The Abominable Snowman of the Himalayas" (27)
10:35 NEWS (24)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (22) (30) (40)
EL SUPER SHOW GOYA (18)
11:30 MOVIE—"The Haunting" (3)
DICK CAVETT (8) (40)
JOHNNY CARSON (22) (30)

75% Election Participation Expected In 5-College Area

Three out of every four students in the 5-College area of Northampton and Amherst will actively participate in next week's presidential election, according to the UMass McGovern for President Committee.

Voter registration in those Amherst precincts where University, Amherst, and Hampshire College students vote has doubled, and in some cases, tripled, from 1968. Registered voters in Precincts 2 and 3, where most UMass students vote, is now at 1615 and 1871, respectively, compared to 585 and 957 in the 1968 presidential election.

"The students will be voting in unprecendented numbers", said Mark Mawrence, Chairman of the McGovern group.

"Although Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery has refused to cancel classes at UMass on Election Day," Mawrence declared, "a preliminary canvass of dormitories indicates that thousands of students will be driving to their hometowns to vote on Tuesday, and thousands more will be working for candidates in Massachusetts and throughout the Northeast."

Mawrence said that 200 residents of Amherst will be working at the polls locally for the Democratic presidential candiate, George McGovern, and that UMass will send 1000 students to Connecticut and upstate New York on election day to work for McGovern.

In addition, Mawrence noted that students from Amherst, Smith, and Mt. Holyoke College, as well as the University, will be working for other Democratic candidates this weekend, including Allard Lowenstein, running for Congress in Brooklyn, N.Y., and incumbents Michael J. Harrington and Robert F. Drinan, both of Massachusetts.

During the past week and until election day, special platoons of Notary Publics will be available to help students vote by absentee ballots.

Armand Demers, organizer of the non-partisan Notary effort at UMass, said that in the first three days of the special Notary Public hours held last week (Oct. 23), more than 850 students voted. If the absentee voter rate remains the same, it is estimated that more than 2000 students will use the Notaries in the week before the election, not including those who get their ballots notarized outside of the special hours.

The preliminary McGovern canvass indicated that about 15% of UMass students will return to their hometowns to vote on election day. All but 5% of UMass students live in Massachusetts.

Anyone interested in working for McGovern should contact JoAnn Dominick at 6-7326 or visit the McGovern table in the Campus Center.

'Ow-sun-kwu-nu-slangnuxw-tsu-swuyuku' (It's Lummi For 'I don't see the man')

The American Indian and the university professor waited for the salmon to bite, and they talked--about the Lummi Indian Reservation in Washington State, about the dying Lummi culture, and about the Lummi language which they both want to preserve.

Asst. Prof. Richard A. Demers, of the UMass linguistics department, spent last summer on the Lummi reservation recording examples of the language so that he may test phonological theories, theories of sound changes within a language. And Mr. Al Charles, one of only eight remaining Lummi Indians who speak the language, was his informant.

So, in the old fishing grounds they fished for salmon (the "white man's way"--with poles), ate smoked clams, and discussed Indian legends. Dick recorded examples of Lummi, as he had the previous summer, and as he will in summers to come. His work has been supported by grants from the UMass Research Council and the American Council of Learned Societies, and the Society of Sigma Xi.

His "informant" (the term for someone whose language a linguist studies) has more than just a passing interest in the professor's study of the language. Al, who is 76, has tried to teach Lummi children to speak the language of their ancestors, and even devised a writing system. And it's possible that someday someone will take Dick's theoretical data of Lummi and construct the kind of grammar book used to teach a "foreign" language. Al is of the generation which forbade children to speak "anything but English", even in the home, according to Dr. Demers, and so even his own children do not speak Lummi.

But, the wave of ethnic awareness currently popular across the country is affecting the Lummis, who send their children to Indian culture schools on the reservation, as well as to off-reservation public schools. Last summer, as Al and Dick worked on the language, Al told stories of "How the Old People Lived", of his son the engineer, his daughter the wife of an Army man, and his other son who lives on the reservation. The 76-yearold Lummi is a retired janitor, and a retired tribal judge.

"Research on American Indian languages must be done before it is too late," says Dr. Demers, "native speakers of the languages are aging." He notes that the "ultimate goal of this kind of research is to gain insight into how the human mind is organized". A simple sentence translated from English to Lummi shows something of the difficulty involved in collecting data. "People who speak only English will naturally tend to have prejudices as to how sentences should be put together. For example, a simple sentence like 'I don't see the man' is 'ow-sun-kwu-nu-slangnuxw-tsu-swuyuku', which translates more literally into English as 'It is not with reference to me that my seeing the man (occurs)'."

A by-product of the linguist's work is the recording of Lummi folk tales in their own language, something which has never been done. When the recordings become available for study, folklorists may hear a rather wry sense of humor. Last summer a reporter for a national magazine visited the reservation.

Hallowe'en Sale!
9:30 AM to MIDNIGHT
5 only FULL-LENGTH Leather REG. 149.50 NOW 89.50
1ST IN PLEASANT ST., NEXT DOOR to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

EXHIBITION AND SALE
ORIGINAL ORIENTAL ART
UMass. Campus Center
Monday, Oct. 30 11:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m.
Tuesday, Oct. 31 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.
Arranged by Marson Ltd., Baltimore, Md.

WHY PAY MORE?

MONDAY	79¢	Cutlet & Spaghetti
TUESDAY	79¢	Sloppy Joe
WEDNESDAY	79¢	Spaghetti w/½ lb. meatball
THURSDAY	79¢	American Chop Suey
FRIDAY	79¢	Beef Hash

HATCH CAFETERIA

Hardee's®
430 Russell St., Rte. 9
Hadley, Mass.
DELUXE HUSKEE
tangy cheese melted
sesame seeds...
shredded lettuce crunch
Hardee's special sauce here. Mustard optional.
Buy One, Get One FREE with this ad

Teacher Preparation Programs

The following teacher preparation programs will be interviewing applicants to enter programs this Spring.

Juniors who are Education majors and not yet in a TPPC program should join a program now. Many second semester sophomores who have already taken the course, "Kids, Schools, and the School of Education: An Introduction," may also be ready to enter a program. Juniors who are majors in other departments and wish to work on a secondary teaching certificate in the School of Education must apply to a TPPC program now.

Secondary people must have recommendation from their major department before being accepted into a program. The forms for this, as well as a list of departmental advisors, are available from the School of Education Undergraduate Advising Office in Machmer E-26.

Interviews will be held at the times and places indicated. Lists of people accepted into programs will be posted outside Room 109 in the School of Education after 12:00 noon on Wednesday, November 8. Students who have been interviewed must come to Room 109 on November 8 or 9, check the lists, fill out a program information sheet, and see their program director for pre-registration advising.

AMHERST ELEM.	Nov. 6 - 11-12	Wildwood School
BILINGUAL/	Nov. 6 - 10-12	Media Center, Educ.
BICULTURAL	Nov. 7 - 10-12	Media Center, Educ.
COOPERATIVE ED.	Nov. 6 - 11:30-3	Room 2-A, Educ.
11 plus PROJECT	Nov. 6 - 10-4	Room 113, Educ.
	Nov. 7 - 10-4	Room 113, Educ.
FUTURE STUDIES	Nov. 6 - 9-12	Dean's Conf. Rm., Educ.
	Nov. 7 - 1-4	Dean's Conf. Rm., Educ.
INTERNATIONAL	Nov. 6 - 9-4	Montague House
EDUCATION	Nov. 7 - 9-4	Montague House
URBAN EDUCATION	Nov. 6 - 12-4	Room 222, Educ.
	Nov. 7 - 9-4	Room 222, Educ.
METEP	Nov. 6 - 9-4	interview sign-up sheet
	Nov. 7 - 9-12	outside Rm. 210, Educ.
		starting Nov. 1.
OFF-CAMPUS	Nov. 6 - 9-11, 1-4	Room 100, Educ.
	Nov. 7 - 9-11, 1-4	Room 100, Educ.
OFF-CAMPUS: Mass	Nov. 6 - 1-4	Room 101, Educ.
OMNIBUS	Nov. 7 - 1-4	information sheets in Room 210, Educ.
TASP (Alternative Schools)	Nov. 6 - 9-4	Room 212, Educ.
	Nov. 7 - 9-4	Room 212, Educ.
TEPAM (Mark's	Nov. 6 - 9:30-11:30	M.M. Principal's Office
Meadow)	Nov. 7 - 11-2	M.M. Principal's Office
SECONDARY	Nov. 6 - 10-1	Bartlett 474
ENGLISH	Nov. 7 - 9-1	Bartlett 474
SECONDARY MATH	Nov. 6 - 11-1	Room 230, Educ.
SECONDARY	Nov. 6 - 1:30-5	Room 103, Educ.
SCIENCE	Nov. 7 - 9:30-11	Room 103, Educ.
SECONDARY	Nov. 6 - 9-11	Room 106, Educ.
SOCIAL STUDIES	Nov. 7 - 9-11	Room 106, Educ.

Hallowe'en Sale!
9:30 AM to MIDNIGHT
thick, downy Sleeping bags 39.95 29.95
1ST IN PLEASANT ST., NEXT DOOR to the Post Office
FACES OF EARTH

Ghosted Term Papers Barred At Boston U

Boston University was granted a court order barring term-paper companies in the Boston area from selling term papers to students for submission by students as their own work.

Judge Harry Kalus in Suffolk Superior Court issued an order restraining the defendant companies from selling or providing, "directly or indirectly, any written or recorded term paper, thesis, theme or other research documents or materials to any student" if there is a reasonable likelihood that such papers might be submitted as the student's own.

On Wednesday, October 25, Judge Kalus issued an order requiring the defendant companies to make available to Boston University's legal counsel all their records of dealings with students.

In granting the injunction today, Judge Kalus compared the sale of term papers to someone's taking an examination for a student, and added that the termpaper business constitutes a fraud not only against colleges and universities but also against the vast majority of students who do their own work.

Judge Kalus said that if the charges were true, as they apparently are, the term-paper business is tantamount to aiding and abetting the uttering of forged documents.

Judge Kalus has ordered copies of the proceedings sent to the office of the Massachusetts Attorney General on the grounds the matters are fraught with public interest and concern.

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the Student Special 99¢

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1969 Dodge Dart "Swinger" — standard, two-door, excellent condition, AM/FM radio, $1400. Call 546-6687 after 6 p.m. tf11-3

1966 MG Midget, give-away. $200.00, 4 nearly new Michelin X radials. Call 546-5601, ask for Russ. 11-3

1966 Comet wagon, 6 cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work. 549-6335 eves. 11-1

1960 Fiat 850 Spider Convert. Red with black top; 25,000 miles. $1,000 or best offer. Call 584-2564, Ask for Bob. tf10-31

(AW C'mon guys, honest Al) is nearly (broke)! Save now during my (annual going out of business) sale 58 Ford panel truck (no rust)! good tires all new brakes and front end. This (little beauty) runs dandy but it sure do need rings. I'm crying right now as I write down this ridiculously low price $125! Takes it! 1-628-3291. tf11-2

1970 Simca $900 or best offer 32 miles per gallon in great shape, call Joe Tripp evenings 546-8021. tf11-2

'67 MGB-GT, grey, new exhaust system, r.&b. wire wheels, radial good for winter, excellent condition, call 665-1185 keep trying. tf10-31

IHC metro van mailtruck equipped as a camper needs work best offer. Call Spfld. after 5 p.m. 730-7986. tf10-31

1967 BMW 4dr. Sedan nw exhaust syst rrvalve job nw radials $1500 or best off. Call 773-9668 8 a.m.-5 p.m. tf11-3

For Sale — 1963 Chevy Belair, ex. cond., mech. good body, fine deal, runs great, owner needs scratch. $175. V8 auto., new tires. Call 549-6316. 11-3

1972 Super Beetle VW, sunroof, FM stereo tape deck & tapes, 100% warranty, exc. cond. Must sell before Jan. 1. Call Greg 253-7362. tf11-3

MGB-GT '67, fine cond., needs minor eng. work, looked after like a baby. Have to sell. $400. Call 527-0956 evenings, keep trying. 11-3

66 VW Bug., New engine, runs good, new tune up. Want $300. Call 549-6700. 11-1

1965 Volvo P1800, good cond., $650. Call Carol, 545-0162. tf10-31

63 Jag XKE, 2 tops, new tires, new valves and guides, $800 or best offer. 665-2075. tf11-3

68 Cougar, AT, PS, fact. air, low mi., excel. cond., 549-6718. tf11-3

1970 Simca for sale, in great shape, 32 miles per gallon. Must sell, need money. Call Joe evening, 546-8021. tf11-1

1969 Volkswagen Beetle. Very good condition, asking $900. 253-2815. tf11-1

1960 Chevy Sedan, fall inspected, Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-1124. tf11-2

1971 Camaro, 3 spd. std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188. tf11-3

1970 VW Bus, exc. cond., sun roof, new eng. & clutch, 5 exc. tires. 1967 Honda 160 street bike, best offer. 545-0268, days, or 665-4160 eve. tf11-6

MISCELLANEOUS

Amherst Elementary Program interviewing, Oct. 30, thru Nov. 2, for next semester. Sign up Sch of Ed Room 219 (545 1563) now. 11-1

Tan & white, 8 month puppy needs home. Call 549-6121. 10-30

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers, low cost, Spring vacation trips to Bermuda and Morocco. For more info., Call Rich Margil 317 Dwight 545-0790. tf11-3

LOST

Lost set of keys for Firebird. Need badly. Call 546-1728, ask for Larry or leave message. tf11-1

ROOM FOR RENT

Avail. Nov. 1. Room in Puffton. Own room, everything incl. $70/mo. Call Lester or Neal 549-6389. tf10-31

Room for rent in Farmhouse. For female, $70/mo., own room 5 mi. from Amherst in Belchtn. 1/4 mi. off Rt. 9. Avail. Nov. 1 or sooner. 253-7076. tf10-31

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3601. tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4436. tf11-17

Part time, Foreign & American - light body & mechanical repair. Reasonable rates. 323-7808. tf11-1

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1140. tf11-6

Passport photos, fast fast service. Lang's photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-9607. Located in center of town near Wearhouse. tf11-6

Two experienced ed. majors forming inexpensive day care group. 9 - 12 and/or 1 - 4. Will pick up children. 549-0056. tf11-2

ROOMMATE WANTED

Quiet roommate wanted, 2-1/2 mi. from campus, own room, utilities inc., $65 a month. Call Dave 256-6619. tf11-1

Female graduate student preferred to share apartment. Walking distance/bus service to UMass — own room $80.00 a month. Call 549-1137. tf10-31

F. roommate wanted for house in country, own room, $58. $50/mo. utls. Car necessary. Call Patricia, 586-2912, or 545-0085. tf11-3

FOR RENT

Room for rent in Conway, Mass., country house, all privileges, call Kathy, 369-4111, 7 - 9 p.m. tf11-3

ENTERTAINMENT

Spine-tingling, bone-chilling, Halloween horror flicks — free at the Bluewall, 10 p.m. tf10-31

Dustin Hoffman, Katherine Ross, and Anne Bancroft star in Mike Nichols, "The Graduate". Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9, & 11 in Mahar. tf11-3

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1972 Honda CB-350 perfect cond. Must sacrifice $600 well maintained miles $600. 253-2776. tf10-31

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $100 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine runs very dependable. Asking $450-367-2762. tf11-3

70 Honda CL 350 ex cond. Buy now and save $$-must sell to stay in school $650. or best offer. Call Rob 546-1738. tf11-1

Last call! 1971 Honda CL350 ideal on/off road bike meticulously maintained, helmets, chain, etc. $850 full price, 545-1309 a.m. 253-2412 p.m. tf11-2

1971 Harley-Davidson, XLCH, sparkling america model, 1800 bucks. Call John Tocci 5-2412, 210 Wheeler 5-2417. tf11-1

1972 Bultaco Alpina, 250 cc, 5 speed, street legal, $180 miles, new cond., $750, or best offer. Call John 546-7040. tf11-3

HELP WANTED

Qualified registered nurse for coronary care, and/or nursing supervisor for full time position on 3rd shift. Please contact Mrs. Alice Goethel, R.N., director of nursing service, Wing Memorial Hospital, Wright Street, Palmer, Mass. Phone 1-283-7651, Ext. 83. tf11-2

WANTED

Ski boots, buckle, size 10-1/2, good quality. Please call Dino 665-4806 after 5 p.m. tf10-31

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Cash for 3 speed 26" ladies bicycle. Call 253-5390. tf10-31

Engine wanted for 1949 MGB, pref. a used one in good cond. Please call Bill at 546-7744. tf10-31

APT. FOR RENT

One bedroom apt., $145/mo. Available at any time. Call 665-3103 after 6 p.m. tf11-1

FOR SALE

The holidays are coming, so take advantage of Avon's specials now! Call Jan at 6-6735 and have Avon delivered right to your door. tf10-31

Moving to Tex. Must sell snow tires from Maverick (6.95-14) w/walls, exc. cond, $25 for pair. Call Kenny 549-6399. tf10-31

1 pr. Reiker buckle boots fur lined, size 7 med. Worn once. $50.00 worth $90.00. Call 369-4412 in Conway, anytime. Keep trying. tf10-31

New Skis, 72 K2-3's. Never been mounted. Were $180, asking $100. Also used look bindings, $20. Phone 546-6700. tf11-1

Child's swingset 2 yrs. old, 6 legs slide, 2 swings, gliders was $80 will deliver $25. Call 247-5468 after 5:00. tf10-31

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf-sem.

Must sacrifice — Fender Dual Showman speaker cab. with JBL D140 excellent condition need bread. $100. Call Dave 628-3812 after 5. tf10-30

For sale, hardtop for Triumph Spitfire, Mark II $100., or best offer. Ph 323-1415 after 5:00 p.m. tf10-31

For Sale, RCA color TV, 21", $150 or best offer. Call 549-3088 during day. tf10-31

Tape Recorder - AKAI (Roberts) M8 reel to reel cross field heads, good shape, used seldom, need cash $90. 253-9878. tf11-1

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cabhards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550. 546-1555. 11-3

New Afganastan coat, 5'6" - 5'8". Originally $85, now 1/2 price, $12.50. Contact Ned at 615 Field or 546-6851. tf11-3

Repainted Lariston frame. New derailleurs, cables, levers. Completely overhauled & greased. $65. See Andrew, SWP Campaign Table at Hatch. tf11-3

Epiphone electric guitar, perfect condition, blonde finish, plush case, $275 or best offer. Call Don or Janice 549-0479. tf11-1

SCM Galaxie deluxe typewriter w/power space, in excellent condition. Recently cleaned: $65. Call Alan at 253-5715 anytime. Lv. message. tf10-31

Super reverb, amp., Gretch Tenn. guitar, Standel p.a. & amp., Gregg 310 tape rec., Philco T.V. Call John 256-8855. tf11-1

Try these Shaklee products, new concept, toothpaste, proteinized shampoo, basic 1, - laundry granules, 100% biodegradable, Carol, 253-2841. tf11-6

Air Force parkas cheap. You'll help a student & save bucks. 584-2417. tf11-2

1972 Yamaha, $400, must sell, best buy in paper, only 6 mo. old, 4,000 miles, babied, save 400 dollars. Not like new, it is new! Call, 527-6093. tf11-1

PERSONAL

Hellooooo!! 2-fingered typists masters typing, delivers fast! 24 hr campus service. Call 5-10 p.m. — 7 days a week. 665-1636. tf11-3

Sensuous-cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m., M-F, S, till noon, 256-6272 47 N. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

Adventure! Come fly with me. Respond Box 25 So. Deerfield, Mass. tf11-2

Are there witches and goblins in advertising. Happy birthday? Collegian. 10-31

Hudson Biologist, met Thurs. 4 p.m. VW back seat on Rte. 9 to Campus Pizza. Meet Tues. 4, or Wed. 3:45 p.m. S.U. lobby. Spfld. Entomologist. 11-1

Happy Halloween Ginny. (A dream come true!) From Ray, Tony, & Jeff. tf10-31

Barbara: Thanks for a really great weekend. Love, David. 10-31

Happy Birthday Tibber — You've finally caught up to me. Shall we "celebrate" together? Free drinks. Love you mucho — Coolidge GRL. tf10-31

Happy Halloween to my birthday Mama and the Kreed! Love, the little Kreed. tf10-31

M. — Let's catch the horror flicks at the Bluewall tonight to inspire our later deeds — C. P.S. Remember the shovels! tf10-31

Chris — We would be fated on Halloween! Happy first! Love always, Jeff. tf11-31

Pi Phi sisters: The Great Pumpkin will descend upon you today. "Scummy Pledges." tf10-31

Mike Hunt is still looking for Crystal. Please call him. 10-31

EMPLOYMENT

Yellowstone & all U.S. Nat. Parks. Booklet tells how & where to apply. Send $2.00. Arnold Agency, A206 E. Main, Rexburg, Idaho. 83440. tf10-31

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2049-MB, Port Angeles, Washington. tf11-22

INSTRUCTION

Join the march back to the Renaissance! Take recorder Lessons. Exp. teacher, reasonable rates. Call Fred, John, 253-7126. tf11-2

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with heavy duty sway bar, koni shocks and semperet steel belted radials, all with less than 5,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and malatained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2650 after 5 p.m. 11-1

TO SUBLET

1 Bed. furn. apt., all utilities. $140. China, bedding, carpet, etc. Near University. Phone day 545-2606; eves. 665-1294. tf10-31

Apartment available Presidential apt., 950 No. Pleasant St. apt. 118. Two bedroom ac laundry in building. Interested contact C. Hayward 549-6885. tf11-1

HOME FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $3,000. Call 253-3531 after 5 p.m.

ROOM WANTED

Couple needs room in private home or small apt. in Amherst, starting end of semester. Call 521-8136 after 6. tf11-2

APARTMENT

Seeking 3 bedroom apt. Jan. 1. Puffton, call 253-3821 between 5 & 7. tf11-6

Notices

ALL COMMUTERS
Commuter Assembly Executive Council meeting tomorrow night, Nov. 1, at 5:30 in 803 CC. All Commuters are invited.

BIRTH CONTROL
Important meeting today from 6-7 p.m. in 902 CC. Members should be there. All are welcome.

CHESS CLUB
Meeting tonight, 7:30 p.m. to midnight, in CC 904-908.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
Trick or Treat? You may think you have the trick, but we've got the treat! There are no goblins here! Come find out why tonight at 6:45 p.m. in 803 CC. All are welcome.

COLLEGIATE FLYING CLUB
Meeting Wed., Nov. 1, 7:30 p.m., 165 CC. Prospective members welcome.

CROSS CULTURAL WORKSHOP
A weekly seminar concerning cross cultural communications. Every Tues. night 7:30-9:30 in fifth floor lounge of J.Q.A. One credit available for S.W. undergrads.

CUSP
There will be a meeting on Wed., Nov. 1, at 8:00 p.m. in 622 Tobin Hall. Council members please attend. All Psych majors are welcome.

EMERGENCY FIRST-AID COLLOQUIUM
Organizational meeting to be held tonight in George Washington 5th floor lounge at 7:30. If you are unable to come or need additional info, call 546-8965.

ENVIRONMENTAL GROUP
Meeting of CEQ 7 p.m., Student Activities Area of CC. World Premier of media show "Green Beens". New members welcome.

EQUESTRIAN CLUB
Hay ride tonight, 7:30 Grinnel Arena.

G.S.S.
Meeting tonight at 6:30 in CC 905-909.

HEART FUND WALK
Sign up today, CC Concourse to pledge or walk to Cooley Dick for the Heart Fund. Sat., Nov. 4, at 10:30. Help yourself and others!

HEYMAKERS
The weekly square dance lesson will meet as usual tonight at 7:30 in the Governor's Lounge.

LETTUCE BOYCOTT
There will be a lettuce boycott meeting tonight in Rm. 166 CC at 7:00 p.m. Anyone interested in working is welcome.

MATH MAJORS
"Empirical Logic" will be discussed today by David Foulis at the Junior Colloquium 4:00, Colloquium Rm., Arnold. You are also invited to the coffee hour at 3:30, Math Lounge.

PARACHUTE CLUB
Tomorrow night we'll let you know what we're all about--our own film, facts, fun, come on out! CC 162, 8 p.m., Wed.

SCIENCE FICTION SOCIETY
The S.F. Society is running a short story writing competition. If interested, please stop by.

WOMEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE VOLLEYBALL TEAM
There will be a meeting for all those who signed up in WOPE Lounge Tues., Oct. 31 at 4:00 p.m.

FREE KITTENS
A brother and sister; gray with white markings--8 wks. old, take one or preferably both. 256-6011 - Miles.

LOST
Whomever stole my afghan Sat. night, where's your conscience? It took 5 months to make it! Please return to Terry, 408 Chadbourne or the Lobby.

FOUND
Peabody High School ring in middle of Quad. Call Rick 6-4623.

M.D. Seminar

In cooperation with the University Alumni Office, on Thursday, November 2, 1972 at 7:30 P.M., there will be a Student-Alumni Career Seminar in Room 174 of the Campus Center. The seminar will feature alumni who are physicians, dentists, and nurses as well as a student at the University of Massachusetts Medical School. All are invited to attend.

New Africa Photo Show

New Africa House will present the photography of Brother James Van Derzee. Mr. Van Derzee's work offers a view of Black people and Harlem at the turn and early part of the 20th Century.

The opening of the show will be Friday, November 3, 1972, at 7:30 P.M. in the New Africa House.

Mr. Reginald McGhee, Director of the James Van Derzee Institute and members of the staff will be present at the opening.

The show is open to the public. Daily Showings: November 3-November 17, 10:00 A.M.—6:00 P.M.

Teach Yourself

Study Skills
Quick Calculus
Math Shortcuts
Accounting Essentials
Interpreting Test Scores
Quick Medical Terminology
Clear Writing
Business Math
Business Statistics
Statistics
Money in the Economy
Logarithms

The quick proven way with

wiley Self-Teaching Guides

Paperback $2.95—$3.95

Look for them at your local bookstore

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆—by SYDNEY OMARR—☆

The Cancer native needs to be needed. Persons born under this zodiacal sign are the natural parents, the protectors, the individuals who save and conserve. The Cancer woman can intrigue, is emotionally responsive and makes money with the Leo man. The Cancer man knows how to create a home or business, imparts a feeling of well-being to the opposite sex and makes Pisces women especially happy in that department.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Perceptiveness is highlighted. You make changes based on instinct for survival. Don't permit others to disrupt schedule to point where health is impaired. Keep medical, dental appointments. Gemini, Virgo persons are involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Warm glow of affection is featured. What begins as apparent minor spark could be fanned into conflagration. Know it and don't play games with emotions. Young person could be careless.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Deception concerning basic issues could be involved, including quality of building materials. Know it and be on the alert. Strive for greater understanding at home. Pisces individual can aid in clearing debris.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relative who appeared flighty now may come up with solid proposals. Express willingness to listen and evaluate. Older person has your best interests at heart. Make up for recent insult. Say something kind!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money situation improves. You get rid of burden which has been draining you emotionally and financially. In effect, you receive proverbial second chance. You make most of it with aid of Aries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New starts, added independence these are featured. Apparent minor contacts could develop into significant relationships. Wear bright colors. Shake off any tendency to be lethargic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): One who should have kept a secret lets cat out of bag. Be prepared with alternatives. Dig deep to find the motives. Aquarius and Leo could be involved. You win by remaining calm in face of apparent adversity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cycle is high but don't be overcontident where finances are concerned. Protect possessions. Younger individual tends to be impulsive-at your expense. Keep check on money reigns. You'll be more secure as result.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with illusion, beauty, the ethereal. One in position of authority is seeking dramatic, unusual format. You are able to provide it. Don't fear the unknown. Trust your extrasensory perception.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Look beneath surface indications. Determine true values. By so doing, you set stage for greater happiness, prosperity. Pisces person can help show you the way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money and how it's handled-this could dominate. Check investment procedures. Take inventory. Be awdre of what comes in, what is expended. Closing your eyes to facts now would be costly. You will understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish rather than start-get rid of burden not rightly your own. Check with Aries. One who makes promises may not be in position to fulfill them. Know it and be ready for quick change of procedure.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, determined and dedicated. You seldom do anything halfway. You are thorough, loyal and passionate. Recent domtestic change will work to your advantage. By December, you will know that a new world of opportunity is opening.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Twirl
5 In music, high
8 Ponder
12 Diminish
13 Fish eggs
14 A continent
15 Wooden vessel
16 Aches
18 Unit of Siamese currency
19 Symbol for yttrium
20 Merit
21 Near
23 Pronoun
24 Water wheel
26 Lasso
28 Tetrarch of Galilee
29 Mountain pass
30 Devoured
32 Eyes (colloq.)
33 Chapeau
34 Dock
35 Greek letter
36 Weaken
37 Feeling
38 Narrate
40 Let it stand
41 Part of "to be"
43 Note of scale
44 Solar disk
45 Preposition
47 Once around track
49 Hinder
51 Eggs
52 Settles in advance
55 Mark left by wound
56 Peer Gynt's mother
57 Temporary shelter

DOWN
1 Oscillate
2 Mates
3 Writing fluid
4 Compass point
5 Macaw
6 Out of meat
7 Number
8 Parent (colloq.)
9 Land of the free (abbr.)
10 Locates
11 Dines
16 Remunerated
17 Go by water
20 God of love
22 Symbol for tantalum
25 Scope of influence
26 Decay
27 Blemish
28 Jump
29 Headgear
31 Before
33 Man's nickname
34 Point of hammer
36 Skid
37 Atmospheric disturbance
39 Printer's measure
40 Cubic meter
41 Mountains of Europe
42 Refuse from grapes
44 The sweetsop
45 Part of stove
46 Swift
48 Edible seed
50 Greek letter
51 Number
53 Physician (abbr.)
54 Pronoun

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

USC Remains Atop College Poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Southern California, Alabama and Nebraska held onto the top three positions Monday in The Associated Press college football poll while Michigan and Ohio State swapped the next two spots and Colorado dropped out of the Top Ten.

The Trojans of Southern Cal blanked Oregon 18-0 for their eighth consecutive victory and received 41 first-place votes and 980 of a possible 1,000 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Alabama, which ran its record to 7-0 with a 48-11 rout of Southern Mississippi, received three first-place ballots and 811 points while defending champion Nebraska whipped Oklahoma State 34-0 for its fourth straight shutout and earned four No. 1 votes and 750 points.

Michigan, fifth last week, climbed to fourth with 694 points following a 42-0 trouncing of Minnesota while Ohio State slipped to fifth with 629 points after struggling past Wisconsin 28-20.

Idle Louisiana State remained in sixth place but Colorado lost to Missouri 20-17 and skidded from seventh to 15th, that enabled Oklahoma, UCLA, Texas, and Penn State to move up one spot apiece to the 7-8-9-10 berths.

Oklahoma blasted Kansas State 52-0, UCLA turned back Washington State 35-20, Texas crushed Rice 45-9 and Penn State downed West Virginia 28-19.

Auburn nosed from 12th to 11th, followed by Notre Dame, Tennessee, Iowa State, Colorado, Missouri, Louisville, Texas Tech, Air Force and Arkansas.

It marked the first appearance of the season in the Top Twenty for Missouri, Louisville and Texas Tech. They replaced Florida State, Southern Methodist and West Virginia.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Penn State, Auburn, Notre Dame, Tennessee, Iowa State, Arizona State and Florida State with Arkansas, SMU and West Virginia all tied for 18th.

The Top Twenty, with first-place votes in parentheses and total points. Points tabulated on basis of 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8, etc.:

1. Southern California (41)	980
2. Alabama (3)	811
3. Nebraska (4)	750
4. Michigan (1)	694
5. Ohio State (1)	629
6. Louisiana State	558
7. Oklahoma	471
8. UCLA	379
9. Texas	301
10. Penn State	290
11. Auburn	238
12. Notre Dame	196
13. Tennessee	122
14. Iowa State	112
15. Colorado	92
16. Missouri	36
17. Louisville	20
18. Texas Tech	19
19. Air Force	17
20. Arkansas	10

No Expansion For BB

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Expansion of major league baseball franchises is not in the immediate future, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said here Monday when asked about a possible new franchise for New Orleans.

Kuhn, in town for a baseball general managers' meeting, told newsmen that he would like to see a team in the Louisiana Superdome when it is completed in 1974.

"However, realistically, I don't see a chance without expansion and I can't see any expansion at this time."

Asked about reports that Charles Finley, owner of the world champion Oakland Athletics, might be eyeing New Orleans as a possible new home, Kuhn said as he understands it, Finley is happy in Oakland.

Kuhn also indicated he takes a dim view of franchise transfers.

He also said he was against the split-franchise concept, something which New Orleans hoped to achieve if it couldn't get its own.

FLASHY STEVE SCHUBERT makes a fantastic reception of a Peil Pennington bomb in Saturday's mauling of UConn. In catching 5 passes for 132 yards while playing only the first half, Schubert broke Milt Morin's record for receiving yardage in a single year. (Photo by Ken Sulin)

TAKE A TRIP TO "OZ"

TOMORROW NOV. 1 S.U.B.

IT DIDN'T HAPPEN OFTEN ENOUGH--The New England Patriots' front four sacked Joe Namath on this particular play Sunday but Joe Willie had the last laugh as his New York Jets dumped the Pats 34-10. (AP Wirephoto)

Buczyk Scores 400th, Shepard 3 As B's Top Hapless Islanders

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — T'was a time for the young and the old Sunday night at Boston Garden. And the Boston Bruins did all right at the same time, thank you.

Especially, though, it was a night veteran Johnny Bucyk and rookie Greg Sheppard are not likely to forget. Ever.

Bucyk, now 37 and in his 18th National Hockey League season, scored two goals to join the exclusive 400-goal ranks and Sheppard tallied his first three NHL goals Sunday night as the Bruins whipped the fledgling New York Islanders 9-1 at the Garden.

"Winning our first Stanley Cup a couple of years ago still is my greatest thrill, but this still is something great," said Bucyk after becoming only the eighth player in NHL history to score 400 goals.

"What can I say: This is going to be great," said Sheppard, called up only last Friday from the Boston Braves of the American League to give the Bruins some hustle in a poor start. "This is only my second hat trick as a pro. I got one last spring with Oklahoma City in the playoffs."

Bucyk virtually dived into the net to retrieve the puck after his 400th goal late in the third period. Then he was swarmed by happy teammates, who came off the bench to offer congratulations.

Bucyk, who broke into the NHL with the Detroit Red Wings, scored one goal in the 1955-56 season, while Sheppard was just about able to walk, before being traded to the Bruins the next season.

"I don't really remember the first one except that it was against the New York Rangers in December, 1955," the popular "Chief" said. "I remember 100, 200 and 300, though, because they all were on the road. This is the first big one I've scored at home."

Bucyk joined exceptional company with his 400th goal-Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, Maurice Richard, Jean Beliveau, Frank Mahovlich, Norm Ullman and Alex Delvecchio. Howe tops all scorers with 786 goals, with Hull next with 554.

Sheppard, who says he weighs "about 170 pounds" but looks much smaller, made a strong bid to nail down the third line center job. He dressed for two games but did not play for the Bruins in the Stanley Cup playoffs last spring after scoring 41 goals at Oklahoma City in the Central League.

"That new line of Sheppard, Don Marcotte and rookie Terry O'Reilly gave us the spark," Johnson said. "I just threw them together to shake things up on the team in our win at Toronto Saturday night. It wasn't anything planned-just you, you, you get out there.

"They all played well tonight. Sheppard is a heady hockey player. He may look small, but he's rugged. He doesn't hesitate to go along the boards or into the corners."

Marcotte was credited with a goal, breaking a 1-1 tie in the second period, when his passover from the sideboards struck a New York defenseman and bounced into the net. O'Reilly had a goal and three assists.

Virtually overlooked in Boston's biggest assault of the season was a goal by Phil Esposito, his sixth of the season. He now has 349 goals while playing in just his 10th NHL year.

Ross Brooks, the Bruins' rookie goalie who claims he is 33 but who is listed as 35 at NHL headquarters, turned aside 10 shots before being injured midway through the third period.

Friday's Sports Head featured Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs.

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 320-66
20 MID FEL 752 5131 WEST SPFLD

WANTS 4 U. MASS. FILM CONSULTANTS

to help promote our films on campus & get publicity

Enthusiasm, film knowledge, reliability.

Write your qualifications to —

John P. Lowe, Dist. Mgr.

c/o SHOWCASE CINEMAS

Worcester, Mass. 01608

JERRY LEWIS TWIN CINEMA
HAMP SHOPPING PLAZA - NEXT TO BIG Y
RTE 5 STEL 584-3200

CINEMA I

The Godfather
R Color by Technicolor A Paramount Picture
Mon. - Fri. 7:30
Sat. Sun. 5:00 and 8:15

CINEMA II

'MELINDA'

Your Kind of Black Movie
Nitely at 7:00 & 9:00
MATINEE
Saturday - Sunday 2:00 and 4:00

KING KONG

Disc. With Student I.D.

With a free Godfather game Monday and Tuesday.

For Cummings It Was His Best Move

By EARLE BARROLL

To fullback Dick Cummings "there's nothing more beautiful than throwing a block to spring Paul (Metallo) for a touchdown or give Peil (Pennington) the time to throw a touchdown pass."

His coach, Dick MacPherson, says of him, "Hey, isn't he something. You just can't say enough about him. He's a completely unselfish ballplayer. And this is the mark of a great athlete."

But, for almost a year you couldn't say a thing about Dick Cummings. He just wasn't here.

After a sparkling sophomore year that prompted visions of greatness, he vanished from the UMass campus. A personal problem that left him confused and unsure of where to turn is the cause he refers to.

Dick went to North Adams and took a position as a residence counselor at "Self-Forty" where he worked with young people who for some reason or another were in trouble in school or with the law.

As it turned out, Dick Cummings made the right move.

"It was great for me," he remembers. "I always wanted to work with kids and help them if I could and, it really helped me to mature being in this responsible position."

If you talk to the players on the team, they'll tell you he's not the same Dick Cummings of two years back. Cummings himself feels the same.

"I had a lot of time to think during my year away from school. And I learnt a lot of things. I looked back at my problem and realized that it was over something very insignificant. But the biggest difference is that it made me more mature. Before I was quite loud (said with a cynical snicker)."

You've probably heard of football players who eat glass. And you've probably heard of the infamous "razor-blade" sandwich. But what Dick Cummings went through this past summer to get himself ready for this season is in a category all by itself.

Dick owns a Volkswagen and every day during the summer, he put on a horse collar, fastened it to his car and pulled it a quarter-mile.

"It's really good for you," he smiles. "You pull that for awhile and you know you've pulled something."

Success has helped to speed his comeback. "It feels great to be on a winner," he says. "I've never had this feeling before. It would have been a lot tougher getting myself motivated if the team was losing."

Now the press boxes ring with the same sounds of awe that followed the Dick Cummings of 1970, and more. They speak of putting him in a room with a bulldozer and betting on him. They put themselves in the cleats of the linebacker he's just demolished on a sweep and say they're glad to be a sportswriter. (Can't figure that one out!)

They erupt when he unleashes all 6' and 230 pounds of himself on a carry (ball, players and anything else that gets in his path). And yet, Cummings doesn't get the call that often. "It's difficult to share the load with Paul's running, and Peil's throwing," explains his backfield coach George Flood.

"As far as I'm concerned," says MacPherson, "to me this is one of the reasons we can be better. We have to get the ball to him more to utilize his running talents."

In the meantime though, Cummings readily excepts his responsibilities. "It feels great to block for Peil and Paul. And it makes running with the ball no longer a chore," he says.

And for Peil and Paul and the rest of the Minutemen that's fine with them.

GOALIE CARL VERCOLLONE leaps high into the air to make the stop off the foot of a UConn booter Saturday morning as Vercollone's stellar work in goal was a key in the Minutemen's upset 3-1 victory over the Huskies of UConn. (MDC Photo by Karasu)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

UMass Sportsweek

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 1

CROSS-COUNTRY: Holy Cross at UMass. Starts in back of WoPE at 3:30 p.m.

FRIDAY, NOV. 3

JV SOCCER: Springfield at UMass. Game time 2:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, NOV. 4

FOOTBALL: UMass at Bucknell (Lewisburg, Pa.). Game time 1:30 p.m.
SOCCER: UMass at Vermont. Game time 11:00 a.m.

SUNDAY, NOV. 5

JV FOOTBALL: UMass at Boston College. Game time 2:00 p.m.

MONDAY, NOV. 6

CROSS-COUNTRY: New England Cross-Country championships in Boston starting at noon.

Marty Kelly

Peil, Steve, Paul Make Minutemen Go

CHAPTER SIX—They brought the refs and the chain gang all the way in from Pennsylvania. they placed TV cameras at vantage points around and atop the Stadium. They lured the Alumni from retirement from all corners of New England and as a treat, one of the Conference's best was booked to perform. And they also signed a kid out of Manchester and a lanky one out of New Canaan and when it was over chapter six or better yet, Homecoming 1972 made mere strides in a year than Wottle did at Munich.

You probably had to be there at Memorial Stadium a year ago to actually believe that this was most of the offense that produced a hackneyed 3-3 offensive showing to UConn for the Conference flag (or a share of it) last year. Yes, believe it or not, Peil, Steve, and Paul, the trio that is mostly responsible for producing a 38 points per game average, could only save face with a Mark Palau field goal at Memorial a year ago. What a difference a year had made. It's like the kids came back from sabbatical.

For one thing, Peil calls his own game. He keeps control over the action constantly from beneath his helmet. He's a leader. And that can be personified to a greater extent than simply four TD passes and a scamper for three against Connecticut. But don't get me wrong, I, like you, will accept this one-man show against the Huskies as a criterion for good leadership. But there's more to Pennington than that which meets the eye. He also blocks.

At this stage of the game, the casket had pretty much been sealed for the Nutmeggers. But Pennington had his mates marching again. They were hungry, he was hungry. That's the way football is played. No time for friendships. And Tim Berra was running his curl pattern only the way that a Tim Berra can do it, fast, to the spot, and confident. But this particular time Timmy came up to the spot too quick. The ball was there but as a result it was overthrown and it cost Peil and his drive a first down at the Husky twelve.

Off came the chinstrap and from under the battered helmet came a belated shriek, "Timmy, get the hell up. Where were you?" Then poor Kevin Moran was trying to get together some facsimile of a huddle when No. 11 just pranced frustratingly around the perimeter like someone wouldn't give him change for a pay toilet.

"That's one thing I don't like about Peil," said Bill Sancster, a student trainer and a good one at that. "He gets mad out there and I'm afraid he's going to lose control of the situation."

But that's exactly the Pennington MacPherson wants to know. He's got to be a take charge guy, a kid who's going to make the decisions out there and if things aren't going the way they should, he's got to correct them. That's why you see Peil take the time to talk to Berra, Schubert, Gary Mika (how about this guy), and Steve Hajdusek. He's a leader and this type of encouragement and mental help as well as scolding by Pennington are all variables that under the rug help produce 49 points, where a year ago it was only three.

Now we all know that Mark Palau had his problems on Saturday. Now I don't know if it was his upcoming marriage or his next exam that bothered him, but he was off. Who do you think was there to not only console him, but show him how he was dragging his leg, yes sir, it was reliable No. 11. What the hell does Peil know about kicking? Not much, I'm sure, but he's concerned and Peil knows that to build a winner Mark has to have his confidence and Pennington was the first to offer his to the pensive Palau.

You know Mac was furious when Mark hit the post with his second PAT. "What are you doing?" screamed MacPherson into Palau's not so innocent face. "We just can't have this, Mark." And I can't blame Mac for being disturbed. He wants Mark to find his rhythm as bad as Mark does for an extra point could mean an undefeated season. Don't bet that Peil didn't figure that out when he was the first to run to Mark's aid.

When Pennington lumbered into the endzone for the fifth score that he was responsible for, he wasted little time in sprinting to the man who got him into the endzone. At this state of the game, only the cheerleaders cared. But Mr. Pennington also cared and grabbed Clarence Brooks by the shoulder pads to let him know. Yes, I'm sure as hell glad that a guy with the character and the integrity as that of Peil is running this club on the field. What a difference a year makes.

And talk about character, how about Schubert? I might have blasted him two months ago, and I think from that point on, he's carried the article in his helmet. Now we've seen the incredible feats he's performed. And to most of us Steve is simply an impressive statistic after a win. But there are stats that won't show up on a score sheet, like pure guts, and I mean pure, unadulterated guts.

He made Gary Mika's first touchdown look easy as he somehow held onto a Pennington missile between the arms and legs and the blindsided helmet of Brian Herosian at full steam. God, that hurt, and I still don't see how Steve held on.

That's the type of competitor Steve Schubert is. It may be a very long time from now and maybe not in yours or my Homecoming lifetime will we ever see another No. 19 with his finesse.

But time certainly has made a difference and character the margin of victory, and I just can't wait to see the brass of Pennington, Schubert, and Metallo take over the Dutch Country of Lewisburg, Pa. for Chapter seven....

It'll be well worth the copy.

IM Notice

ATTENTION VOLLEYBALLERS

A volleyball clinic, sponsored by the intramural office in cooperation with the Volleyball Club, will be held Tuesday, October 31 and Wednesday, November 1 at 8:00 p.m. in Boyden's main gym. All volleyball officials are required to attend one of the clinics and all intramural volleyball teams are strongly urged to have a representative in attendance at one of the clinics.

Rule clarifications as well as playing methods will be discussed and demonstrated. Emphasis will be placed on legal and illegal hits (carries, double hits, etc.).

Dr. J Leads ABA

NEW YORK (AP) — Julius Erving is back in the American Basketball Association, and he's making his presence felt.

Erving, who tried to jump to Atlanta of the NBA during the off-season only to be sent back to Virginia by a court edict, leads the ABA in scoring with an average of 25.2 points per game. Erving had tallied 151 points in the six games he's played for the Squires.

Monday Night FB:

Dallas 28, Detroit 24

YOU'LL NEVER GET THE BALL FROM ME, says flanker Tim Berra as he outfights the UConn cornerback for the ball on a reception from Peil Pennington and goes on to score for the UMass. The play gave the Minutemen a 21-7 lead going into the dressing room at halftime. (MDC Photo by Ken Sulin)

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

I couldn't quote you no Dickens, Shelly or Keats.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 38 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1972

India Nite-A cultural program from the exotic orient featuring folk and classical dances from all parts of India will take place Saturday, Nov. 4, from 7 to 11 at the Campus Center Aud. Lower photo is from the dance Raas from Western India. Top photo is from the dance Bhangra a Northern Indian Folk dance signifying the harvest time. It should be a good time! (MDC photo by John Neister)

On The Inside:

•Vietnamese Speaker see page two

•Dog Catcher For SW see page three

•Trudeau Magic Gone see page four

•Big Brother May Be Watching see page five

UMass To File Against State On Office Space Agreements

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

BOSTON - The University of Massachusetts will file today a suit in State Superior Court asking that the state be forced to honor rental agreements negotiated by the university for office space in Boston.

Frank Philips, UMass vice-president for financial affairs, acknowledged that the suit would be filed in order to secure a decision on the validity of a ruling by Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, who ruled in an advisory opinion that the university had the right to contract the rental agreements.

But, Secretary of Administration-designate William I. Cowin has refused to authorize payment on two 1971 leases involving properties at 262 Washington Street.

He has also ased the state comptroller to withhold payment on a recently signed $700,000 five-year lease that relocated the president's office at 1 Washington Mall, two blocks from the president's former office on Devonshire Street.

UMass moved into its new facilities Oct. 1 after the attorney general overruled state Building Superintendent George A. Luciano, who refused to approve the lease.

Philips said the university's fiscal autonomy permitted it to enter into the lease, and therefore obligated the Commonwealth to honor the lease.

Cowin said his action was based on records which indicated that the university entered into the agreements in a manner contrary to established authorization procedures.

He said the agreements in question lacked the proper approvals and therefore imposed no legal obligation on the state.

However, he said there may be a moral obligation to pay something for use of the property, and he would be willing to discuss a fair rental.

"The ramifications of the decision were extensive in light of the fact that it not only applied to UMass, but it also applied to all other public education segments that have fiscal autonomy," he said.

Cowin said in a telephone interview that the lease raises a significant question over the right of a public agency to spend "enormous amounts of money in ways divorced from the fiscal constraints that apply to most governmental agencies in Massacusetts."

He said many people have an emotional view toward the educational agencies because of the subject matter that they deal with. There is a feeling he added, that these agencies should be more independent of the political process than the normal state agency.

"The fact of the matter is that they are governmental agencies," he continued. "They still are spending taxpayers money. They still are subject to the legislature to the extent of the maximum amount of money they are given to spend.

"I question the wisdom of relieving them of normal administrative constraints on how money is expended."

The lease dispute comes in the midst of a growing fiscal battle between the state and UMass over the university's fiscal 1974 budget. Early last month, Gov. Francis W. Sargent rejected a $98 million budget request submitted by the trustees.

When UMass resubmitted the entire $98 million budget, the governor expressed regret.

UMass based much of its request for a $26 million increase over this year's appropriation on the opening of the new campus at Columbia Point, the move into the Basic and Clinical Science Building and steam plant at the UMass Worcester campus and the first graduating class of the Medical School.

The university is planning also for a seven per cent jump in enrollment at its three campuses: 860 additional students at Amherst, 1,000 at Boston and 40 at Worcester.

Investigation Of DC Thefts Begins

By MARK VOGLER

The University security forces have begun investigating claims of employe thefts at Worcester Dining Commons.

Saul Chafin, assistant director of security, told the Collegian last night that the investigation was requested by the Food Services Department in response to complaints of alleged thefts taking place in the dining commons.

It comes in the wake of Tuesday's page 1 story which quoted some undergraduates and student employees as claiming that some dining commons workers have been taking food from the buildings.

In the meantime, there were several other developments:

--Food Service sources said that the photo which appeared on page 1 showing two commons workers walking through the parking lot after closing hours--one carrying a plastic bag which is allegedly said to contain stolen food, were false and misleading.

--The Food Service sources stated that the employees were easily identified even though their faces were blacked out. They claim that the photos have caused considerable embarrassment and discomfort for the two workers.

--Food Service confirmed that they will cooperate with the University security forces in their current investigation.

The Collegian story Tuesday quoted two students and two employees as saying that some individuals who work at Worcester and Franklin Dining Commons have been taking out food. The two students were identified in the story while the employees requested to remain anonymous.

Joel Stoneham, Director of Food Services, had stated in an interview last Wednesday that D.C. management was aware of the problems and the possibilities of theft, and that they were doing their best to solve them. However, he did not see theft at Worcester Commons as a blatant and major issue.

Last Friday, Stoneham told the MDC that he had contacted the security office and had them checking out the alleged thefts. But when the office was contacted Monday, security sources declined to make any comment. Yesterday, Chafin told the Collegian he could not reveal the details of the Campus Police investigation.

Arthur Warren, assistant director of Food Services, said yesterday that the two ladies shown in the photo accompanying the Dining Commons story were easily identified.

As Warren put it: "One need not block out the heads of those workers. It was perfectly obvious as to who they were. In fact when one came to work, one of the student employees made the comment 'hey, you got your picture on the front page.'"

Warren said that the woman carrying the plastic bag which was allegedly said to contain stolen food, was grossly incriminated. He said that what was in the bag were "just paper plates which she was taking home for constructing Christmas decorations for the dining commons."

Stoneham had previously reported that employees walked out of the Worcester Commons with food items that they purchased from munchies, might easily be mistaken for stealing food. But when he considered employees carrying plastic bags instead of paper bags, he agreed that it was conspicuous and theft was a likely possibility.

The students who were said to have witnessed D.C. workers walking out of the commons with food, did see plastic bags carried out on several occasions. One of the students said that the plastic bags which he saw were identical to the one in the photo. He said that the bag contained items of food.

Warren admitted that plastic bags might be a good indicator to theft, but that in this one instance, the evidence has been completely destroyed.

"All we've got to go by, is the pictures," Warren commented. "And if that's the only thing, then we haven't much to go on at all. The damage has been done. And the only possible thing that we stand a chance of losing is an employee who decorates with plates."

Warren said that the dining commons management will conducts its own investigation. He says that he will contact the two students who were quoted in yesterday's Collegian and suggested that the police might also question them in regard to what they claimed to observe.

"We'd like to get to the bottom of things," the assistant director of Food Services declared. "We'd like to find out who and if anybody is taking food and to what degree. The main thing is what to do about it. We are going to look into the matter and we would like the help of the police."

Ms. Hoi-Chan, a native Vietnamese, spoke last night about peace and war in Vietnam. She said, "the most precious goal of the Vietnamese is independence and a chance to decide what we want." (MDC photo by Kevin Erkkila)

Vietnamese Speaker States The Goal Of Her People

By ROBERTA MARTONE

"The most precious goal of the Vietnamese is independence and a chance to decide what we want. We would pay any price for independence." This statement was made by Nguyen Hoi-Chan in a talk given last night in the Commonwealth room of the Student Union. It centered on the recent developments in South Vietnam.

Ms. Hoi-Chan opened her speech by focusing on the recent talks of peace. She then went on to explain what would happen if total support by the US was eliminated in Vietnam. According to her, the Thieu Regime would probably be allowed to stay but the "ills would remain also. It leaves a lot of room yet for unsettlement and upheaval."

Next, Ms. Hoi-Chan went into the various benefits and drawbacks of the National Council of Reconciliation in Concord. She said its powers are limited and it will not provide the ideal situation for the Vietnamese; rather, the ideal situation for the US. Ms. Hoi-Chan said, "At the last minute, the US is walking out and trying to change the position and deny the council its power."

The speech was then opened to discussion. The first question concerned whether or not the Vietnamese want the National Council enforced. Ms. Hoi-Chan said that the majority of the people were ignorant of the terms due to the recent, strict press laws being enforced. Ms. Hoi-Chan doubted very much that the people were being given the true picture.

When asked what was the impact of the war on the Vietnamese culture, Ms. Hoi-Chan stated that it was "completely overturned; there is no longer an economy; there is no respect, no dignity, no family left to think of. What kind of culture can be transmitted when this happens?"

Ms. Hoi-Chan continued by saying there is an effort on the part of the US to change the Vietnamese culture. She said many studies were being made on the Vietnamese educational system and scholarships are now being offered by the US. But, it is the "pride in their culture holding them back."

Various questions were raised concerning the different groups of power in Vietnam. In answer to the question: Will there be a difference if the bombing is stopped and the Thieu Regime stays? Ms. Hoi-Chan said it depends on the aid of the US and how long it will remain. However, she said she doesn't think Thieu has that much power because he is not supported by a majority of the people.

Ms. Hoi-Chan said their main goal is independence from all, even the US. When asked what type of government Vietnam would prefer, she answered: "Labels do not matter to us. We look to the essence because all the various governments have only imposed more ills on us and never solved anything."

Finally, Ms. Hoi-Chan said that the Vietnamese needed their land. "The land is a sacred place. It gives us a place to lay when we die."

Nguyen Hoi-Chan is co-founder of theVietnam Resource Center at Harvard and, along with her husband, is a leader of the Vietnamese Student Association in this country. She is currently a PhD candidate in Asian Studies at Harvard University.

Candidates Tour Belchertown

The four candidates for state representative in the 2nd Hampshire District will take a tour of the Belchertown State School today.

Dr. Benjamin Ricci, president of the Belchertown Friends Association, said Democratic candidates James Collins of Amherst and incumbent James Nolan of Ware and Republicans Nat Reed of Amherst and Gerry Whitlock of Belchertown have all indicated that they will take part in the tour.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Third World Alliance Communique

3rd World Homecoming Events

Homecoming weekend, Oct. 27, 1972, was the first time the Third World Community had sponsored any cultural events by and for Brothers and Sisters.

On Friday night, brother Roy Ayers and the Ubiquity performed at Bowker Auditorium. Ubiquity means to be anywhere and everywhere at the same time. Just as Black and Third World peoples fight for freedom and emancipation is anywhere and everywhere as long as exploitation of many by man exist.

His group was comprised of five brothers and himself but to listen to them, it sounded like a dozen artists on a musical voyage. The messages from his music was food for thought for many of us. From the first rhythmic note to the last note, his tunes were very forceful, energetic, clear and clean.

Many of his selections carried political messages which need to be incorporated into our struggles here in carnation land.

"Ain't Got Time to Be Tired", a tune from "He's Comin'", his latest album, illustrates this. The message, which is today's and tomorrow's message, sings out "We ain't got time to be tired, for the tired move too slow. We ain't got time to be tired, for we got a long, long way to go. We ain't got time to be tired for the war has just begun. What war? The war for freedom, the war for equality. We ain't got time to be tired for the fight must be won."

To quote from his album cover, "Roy Ayers is bringing new energy and fire to the music spectrum. His approach is different and his concept refreshing."

Like the late Cal Massey, Archie Shepp, Max Roach and many other artists, Roy Ayers is bringing new blood into the music of today. The titles and lyrics of their music bring out the Black experience as we live it and know it. The Third World Alliance at this time thanks Roy Ayers and the Ubiquity for the sharing of their musical experience with us in our first Homecoming. As a last note, at the end of the performance one of the members of Ubiquity said, he was coming back to check us out, to see if we were carrying out the messages from the tunes. He was serious in what he was playing and saying. And it's time for all of us to be serious and substitute playing with performance, and recognize the need to check each other out. For WE AIN'T GOT TIME TO BE TIRED, FOR THE TIRED MOVE TOO SLOW.

Dorm Co-op System Proposed

By IMELDA ROJAK

"We're trying to develop a system where the dorms can become co-ops," said Mike Gregory, Chairman of the Student Senate Rents and Fees Committee Tuesday night. "Joel Morse, a doctoral student, has been hired to study co-ops around the country and report back to us. There is a possibility of student run dorms."

Also discussed at the meeting was a possible faculty activity fee. The faculty now use some student subsidized organizations such as WMUA, the Collegian, and the Campus Center.

A new policy on rent refund was discussed also. The committee was in favor of a liberalized refund policy.

Right now, a student will get no refund after the first week of school. The new proposal requests that the student forfeit a minimum of $100 security deposit the first week of school for the 2nd through fifth weeks, $100 plus 20% of the remaining balance would be forfeited if the student withdraws from UMass. No refunds on rent would be made after the fifth week.

The Fine Arts fee was investigated by one committee member. Terry Schwartz, the business manager of the Fine Arts Committee, reportedly said that the fee subsidizes the events such as concerts; and that there should be no student discount without the fee.

Feminist Speaks Tonight

Delphine Welch, a founding member of Female Liberation and Cell 16 in Boston, will speak tonight at 7:30 in Thompson 106 on "Women and the '72 Elections.

Female Liberation was a pioneering women's activist organization, raising issues of importance to all women, which are today becoming more and more a part of a rising level of female conciousness. Her work in this area soon brought her face to face with the necessity for developing an all-encompassing political perspective which is reflected in her membership in the Young Socialist Alliance.

Presently Ms. Welch is National Chairperson of the YSA and is active in the Abortion Law Repeal movement.

Tribute To Dr. Charles Hurst

There will be a tribute to Dr. Charles Hurst, President of Malcolm X College in Chicago, Illinois, on Channel 8 (cable television) tomorrow night at 7:30.

The guest speaker during the tribute will be the Reverend Jesse Jackson.

Hurst built Malcolm X College virtually from scratch into the educational institute it is today.

Mr. Jackson is the former head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's Operation Breadbasket.

AMHERST CINEMA

Wed. to Tues.

Gone With The Wind

with Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh

Evenings at 7:45

Wed. to Sun. 50c
Discount with College I.D.

Mon. & Tues. - Adults $1.00

V.W. - FORD - TOYOTA - CHEVY - BMW - CHRYSLER - CIA

STUDENT AUTOMOTIVE WORKSHOP

LEVEL 1 CAMPUS CTR. GARAGE

5 to 11 p.m. ★ MTUWTHF

WE HAVE TOOLS & MECHANICS TO ADVISE & ASSIST YOU

To use the workshop, have our waver signed & notarized, then make your reservation at least one day in advance and order parts.

RATES

$1.50 First hr. or fraction
0.75 each additional hr. or fraction

MAXIMUM CHARGE $4.00
OVERNIGHT FEE $2.50 extra

SAAB - PORSHE - DATSUN - CADDIE - PEAGOT - ROVER - JAGUAR

DODGE - MERCEDES - BUICK - FIAT - OPEL - OLDS - TRYUMPH

JEEP - PONTIAC - MG - STUDEBAKER - EDSEL - VOLVO

Interested in playing at the Bluewall Coffeehouse?
call Fig or Karen 546-7393

Absentee Ballot Center Enables Everyone To Vote

By A. KENT BEST

Voting is something that everyone eighteen years or older has the prerogative of exercising and there's an allout effort being conducted on campus to allow everyone to vote that is eligible.

The purpose of the absentee balloting is to set up a centralized location, the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union, for the student who cannot get home or wherever they are registered for the upcoming election.

The other reason for the absentee balloting is to relieve various administrative offices on campus of the burden of having to supply absentee ballots.

Thirty notary publics from the academic community as well as the administrative have made themselves available in the Cape Cod Lounge from either 12-5 pm or 12-9 pm, depending on the days they work.

As for the turnouts, so far on October 19 only 42 people voted, on October 25th, 387 voiced their choice, while on October 26th 450 people signed their ballots. Yesterday between 900 and 1000 voted in the Lounge.

As for the remainder of the week, on Wednesday, Nov. 1, the Lounge will be opened to voters from 12-5 pm. On Thursday and Friday, Nov. 2 and 3, the Cape Cod Lounge will be open to absentee voters from 12-9 pm.

Coordinator of the program, Bud Demers, commented that volunteer assistants have not turned out in droves, but they certainly have appreciated those who have. The staffs have been made up of secretaries from Whitmore as well as other student offices on campus.

Demers wanted to stress the point that volunteer help is necessary under such a program because the notary publics must do much of the work themselves that could be done easily by someone else.

One persistent problem is that this is the first year for the 18 year olds to vote and the absentee ballots had not been sent out by October 19, the first day of the absentee service.

When Bud Demers was asked if the program was successful up to this time and if the purposes of the project been realized, he responded with, "If we can accomodate the students who need this service, then we have provided a worthwhile effort."

Demers continued, "We already know that we have helped the administrative offices on campus. This has not been a one-man effort by any means, rather it has been community from the academic to the administrative offices combined."

Provost Asks OK On 7th Skips

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

In a memo yesterday Provost Robert Gluckstern urged faculty members to allow students absences from class on election day provided they have "legitimate reasons" connected to the election.

The memo also asks faculty to give absent students opportunity to make up "examinations and special work" due that day without penalty.

Gluckstern said the memo is not University policy nor an order to the faculty. Gluckstern said it was in everyone's best interest "not to issue orders but to use persuasion."

In the memo Gluckstern "strongly urges" faculty to consider requests from students asking to be excused from class next Tuesday to participate in the election.

In an interview provost said he felt legitimate excuses would include working in the election process November 7th and returning home for the day to vote.

Larry Ladd, SGA President, said he was satisfied with the memo, though he wished the provost had been more specific as to what constituted "legitimate reasons" for absence from class.

Ladd considered poll watching, working to get out the vote, canvassing and leafletting to be legitimate reasons to skip class on election day.

Ladd said student government would not renew its request that classes be cancelled on election day. Ladd said that since the chancellor had not received "any new evidence" to cancel classes, there would be no point in "fighting futile battles."

Last week the chancellor vetoed a request from student government to cancel classes November 7th.

Provost Gluckstern said if any student absent on election day has a "problem" he or she should bring it to their department head, dean, or the provost's office.

Mario DePillis, on the Faculty Senate Rules Committee, which advised the chancellor not to cancel classes, said he thought the memo was "excellent and reasonable."

DePillis said he does not expect the faculty to object to Gluckstern's memo; neither does he expect any faculty senate or rules committee involvement unless there is some "serious problem."

Southwest Business Manager Cites Need For Dog Catcher

By LINDA CRAVEN

Last night, John O'Connell addressed the Rents and Fees Committee on the necessity of employing a dog catcher in Southwest.

John O'Connell, Southwest Business Manager, cited several reasons for his request, one being that dogs travel in packs through Southwest. Also he stated that many people have been bitten or badly frightened by the dogs, and also that there are numerous complaints about them from the dining commons.

O'Connell continued by saying that most of the dogs in Southwest are not even Southwest dogs. Many are Amherst resident dogs.

O'Connell also explained that Southwest is a "dumping ground" - a place where people bring their dogs and leave them, with hopes that they will be found and cared for by students.

The qualifications for the position of dog catcher are numerous. First, one must have experience in dealing with dogs - plus, his own truck. UMass will gladly furnish cages. He will be paid $3.50 per hour and work fifteen to twenty hours per week. Also there is job security. Even if all of the dogs are gone within a week, he will keep his position for at least one semester.

O'Connell implied that employing a dog catcher for Southwest would help enforce the law that prohibits the keeping of animals in the dormitories.

After the dogs have been caught, they will be taken to a pound in Leverett, O'Connell explained. If not claimed in two weeks, they will be put to sleep. During those two weeks the town pays the pound for the dog's room and board.

The Campus Center has effectively hired a dog catcher, O'Connell confirmed. He's a retired Barnum and Bailey trainer and has helped to alleviate the problem of the "chronic dog", an animal who is caught on Tuesday and is back on Thursday. All of the dogs entering the Campus Center must now be on a leash.

Funds for the employment of the dogcatcher in Southwest will come basically from Rent fees.

Task forces are being organized to visit dorms and explain the reasons why dogs should not be kept in student's rooms.

O'Connell describes the relationship at hand as a "human bond between man and dog."

Black Author Speaks Tonight

Don L. Lee, the author of five dynamic books about Black life and a criticism of Black poets of the 1960's will speak tonight at 8 in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Lee has taught at Cornell University, Chicago Community College, Howard University and Morgan State.

Lee has also founded a publishing house - the Third World Press - in Chicago of which he is the editor and publisher.

His literary genius is best described by Pulitzer Prize winner Gwendolyn Brooks: "Don Lee knows that nothing human is elegant. He is not interested in modes of writing that aspire to elegance. He is well acquainted with 'elegant' literature (what hasn't he read?) but while certainly respecting the advantages and influence of good workmanship, he is NOT interested in supplying the needs of the English Department at Harvard or Oxford, nor the editors of Partisan Review, although he could mightily serve as fact factory for these."

"He speaks to Blacks hungry for what they themselves refer to as 'real poetry'. These Blacks find themselves and the stuff of their existence in his healthy, lithe, lusty reaches of free verse. The last thing these people crave is elegance. It is very hard to enchant with elegant songs, the ears of a fellow whose stomach is growling. He can't hear you. The more interesting noise is too loud."

Preceding Lee's lecture will be a dinner served at New Africa House in the Coffee Shop (no charge). All Third World Community members are urged to attend.

McG Campaign Asks For Local Area Help

By WALTER LALIBERTE

Francis Abrams, Coordinator of the McGovern-Shriver campaign in Holyoke, asked for student campaign help and predicted a McGovern victory in Massachusetts last night.

In an MDC interview she asked for UMass students to help out in the Holyoke-Chicopee area. This will entail both door to door and telephone canvassing she said.

On election day she hopes to have students covering the polls and checking the voter lists so that those who have not voted may be brought to the polls.

In spite of the fact that about 45 UMass students worked for McGovern during the primaries, only about a dozen or so have been canvassing recently in Holyoke she said.

Mrs. Abrams stressed that students need only give an hour or two of their time to be helpful and added that there is no formal amount of time that must be given.

When asked how many students she would like to help, Mrs. Abrams replied, "As many as possible," but added that 60 would be a very good number.

Canvassers have noticed a decided swing to McGovern, especially after his television programs, Mrs. Abrams said. Further, the undecided voters and traditional Democrats will vote for McGovern. She said, "The people will vote for the party."

When asked who would win, she said she felt McGovern would carry Massachusetts.

"I DO NOT BELIEVE IN AN AFTERLIFE, ALTHOUGH I AM BRINGING A CHANGE OF UNDERWEAR."

ALLEN GETTING EVEN

AVAILABLE IN PAPERBACK FROM WARNER PAPERBACK LIBRARY
95¢ 95¢

HELL

Why pay more?

BLUE PLATE SPECIALS

eat 79c enjoy

HATCH CAFETERIA

THE JEANS STORE

LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE

MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS

ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women

201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)

WEAR-HOUSE

Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706

In The Nation And The World

N. Viets Blame US For Treaty Delay

The U.S. has removed much of its powerful 7th Fleet from the Gulf of Tonkin in anticipation of a peace agreement with the North Vietnamese. (AP)

PARIS (AP)-North Vietnam has yet to set a date for resuming peace negotiations with Henry A. Kissinger, sources close to the U.S. delegation to the Paris peace talks said Tuesday.

The North Vietnamese were noncommittal on the question, but assailed the United States for failing to sign an accord worked out between Kissinger and Hanoi negotiators Tuesday, as originally scheduled.

The sources stressed that the presidential security adviser's remark that "peace is at hand" remained as true now as when he made it in Washington last Thursday.

The sources said a great deal of activity is continuing behind the scenes to clarify various points in the Hanoi-Washington agreement. They declined to specify whether this activity was with the North Vietnamese, with other Communist governments, or merely between the United States and its allies in Vietnam.

Kissinger has said he needs one more secret session with top North Vietnamese negotiators to finalize the draft agreement.

The sources disclosed that one of the subjects under discussion was the withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam.

The agreement apparently contains no specific provision for such a withdrawal and has been sharply criticized by the Saigon government for this and other reasons.

The sources said it was expected that the semipublic Vietnam peace talks would continue for some time after the signature of a cease-fire agreement.

The four-sided talks have continued in stalemate for four years and played no role in the agreement drafted in secret sessions between Kissinger and the North Vietnamese.

Blaming the "nonserious attitude of the Nixon administration" for failure to have a peace agreement signed Tuesday North Vietnam demanded that the United States "proceed rapidly" with the signature.

A statement issued by North Vietnam's delegation to the Paris peace talks said: "All pretexts invoked by the United States are indefensible."

The Viet Cong said that the U.S. refusal to sign by this date "seriously threatens" the chances of ending the war.

In Saigon, a television commentator declared that Nixon has advocated peace with honor "and this we shall have, not peace in humiliation."

The commentator reported the South Vietnamese government had been advising the United States against haste in signing an Indochina peace agreement.

The political future of South Vietnam has always been a major issue at the peace talks. And this may be the biggest obstacle when Kissinger and Tho meet again, possibly this week.

Trudeaumania Loses Its Magic

TORONTO (AP) - The Conservative party led by Robert L. Stanfield emerged Tuesday as the apparent winner of an election which repudiated the administration of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. The hairbreadth margin at latest reckoning was 109-108.

The result, leaving the major parties at almost a standoff, was one of the most incredible in Canada's political history. With recounts to come in some areas, it remained to be seen whether Stanfield could form a new government displacing Trudeau's Liberals.

In any case, the Liberals had lost the majority they had in the last Parliament and could rule only with minor-party help. That was true of the Conservatives, too.

For the time being Trudeau remained prime minister, although the voters had given his party only 40 per cent of the House of Commons seats it sought.

Stanfield is a former premier of Nova Scotia. As a graduate of the Harvard Law School he is the first Harvard man to be in line for leadership of the Canadian government.

Stanfield is 58, Trudeau 53.

Trudeau told supporters he was sorry things turned out as they did and advised them to cheer up and hope for better days.

The election was for 264 seats in the House of Commons. Late standings gave the Conservatives or Tories 109, the Liberals 108, the New Democrats 30 and Social Credit 15-with two seats going to independents or undecided.

A new federal election is probably just around the corner, perhaps in the spring. It is dolorous news to the political parties, already nearly broke from the expenses of this campaign.

The Canadian system, like the British from which it is derived, requires the party with the most House of Commons seats to form a government under the party leader, who becomes prime minister.

In 1968 a political bulldozer powered by a fuel called Trudeaumania flattened the Conservatives in a triumphal sweep that left the Liberal leader in command of a majority.

The Trudeau magic disappeared this time and the result is political chaos, at least temporarily.

The virtual standoff was unprecedented. Constitutional experts reckoned that Trudeau had a duty to face the new House of Commons, and see how it lined up, before admitting defeat or deciding what other course to take.

The socialistic New Democrats, under the leadership of David Lewis, were in a balance of power situation. Addition of their 30 seats to those won by either of the major parties could give the Conservatives or Liberals a working margin in the House. A majority is 133 seats; the Liberals held 155 after the 1968 elections.

Allende's Cabinet Resigns, Unrest In Chile Continues

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - All 15 members of Chile's Cabinet resigned Tuesday to give President Salvador Allende a free hand in figuring out a way to end three straight weeks of strikes, street demonstrations, sabotage and political conflict.

Allende, ill with a bad cold, accepted the resignations of Interior Minister Jaime Suarez, the No. 2 man in the government, and Education Minister Anibal Palma. They were among four Cabinet members whom anti-administration congressmen sought to impeach for "violating the constitution."

How many more resignations the president would approve was not known. Rumors have persisted that Allende will appoint politically neutral high-ranking military officers to the Cabinet in a move to calm this South American nation of 10 million people, at least until next March's congressional elections.

Chileans will vote then for all 150 members of the House of Representatives and 25 of 50 senators.

Police in the southern city of Puerto Varas said Tuesday that unidentified persons blew up a power pole. It was typical of incidents of recent days, which Allende has labeled "sabotage."

In Brief...

Hell's Angels' Burying Ground

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Three bodies have been recovered from a rumored "Hell's Angels' burying ground" and officers are searching for more possible grave sites, officials said Tuesday.

Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger said in Sacramento that the search for the bodies on a tree-screened ranch three miles southwest of here was started "in response to rumors that the area was being used as a Hell's Angels' burying ground."

VC Claim U.S. Pilot Killed by Own Men

HONG KONG (AP) — Radio Hanoi reported Tuesday that American fighters strafing a North Vietnamese boat killed a U.S. pilot who had been shot down and captured in North Vietnamese waters.

EASTHAMPTON HARLEY-DAVIDSON
(Authorized sales & Service)
GRAND OPENING
Sat., Nov. 4, 1972
SNOWMOBILES * MOTORCYCLES
See the New 1973 Models
New & Used Cycles * Service on all makes
2 Adams St. Easthampton 527-1556
(Across from Lemay Motor Sales)

UMass Police 5-2121

PARACHUTE CLUB
"What We're All About" MEETING
OUR OWN Movie
CC 102 Wed.
Nov. 1 8 p.m.
TONITE

CARL ANDERSON'S
RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE
Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013
BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.
— Daily Luncheon Specials —
WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.
THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night
Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar included. $3.95
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

1984 Is Just Around The Corner

WASHINGTON (AP) - A secret White House study of plans to wire every American home, car and boat into a central communications system under government control was made public Tuesday by Rep. William S. Moorhead, D—Pa.

The study, prepared for President Nixon's Domestic Council, envisions a "weird nation" that would provide the government with a disaster-warning system and a means of dispensing a wide variety of services and information.

It provides also, said Moorhead, a blueprint for a government-operated propaganda and spy system. He asked Nixon to inform the nation about the administration's intent and to make available more information about the plan.

The study in Moorhead's possession is stamped "Administratively Confidential" on each of its 300 pages. It is dated August 1971 and is described as a preliminary response to a request for the study by Dr. Edward E. David Jr., Nixon's science adviser.

David said Moorhead's suggestion that the Domestic Council "advocates some kind of 'big brother' communications link to every house" is absolutely wrong.

He said the suggestion is one of many received every year of which "some are good and some are terrible." David said this idea was rejected because it "did not take account of the right of privacy of citizens, nor of the social acceptability of such a scheme."

David said Moorhead could have had the facts if he had asked. "But I guess he was more interested in a headline than a fact," David said in a statement.

The study contains detailed descriptions of systems for sending letters by satellite; disseminating educational, cultural and social services through a public broadcasting network; alerting the nation or any locality to an impending disaster, and providing local police with information they need to combat crime.

The basis of the disaster-warning system discussed in the study is the required installation of a special receiver in every home radio and television set and in every car and boat sold in the United States. The receivers could be turned on by the government to broadcast warnings and advice about disasters.

The study contains also charts of a proposed television network linking every state, city and home which would be the heart of wide-ranging system of public-service programs, including special educational programs for children.

It says such a system could be launched by 1975 with two full time broadcasting channels, expanding to six channels by 1978 and to 10 by 1980. One channel would be devoted entirely to children's programs, the study says, and the others could be targeted to special groups.

Throughout the study the authors, described merely as members of "working groups on government and commercial services and communications capabilities," described their efforts as aimed at making the most effective use of modern communications techniques in dealing with national problems.

They make only one brief reference to any concern that might arise over the issue of government invasion of privacy.

"There may be opposition to requiring receivers to be built into all radios and televisions," the study says. "This issue should be considered before the disaster-warning system proceeds to the development and investment stage."

Moorhead said that regardless of whatever good the proposed system may contain its potential for abuse requires a thorough airing in Congress before any steps are taken to implement it.

Special Force Planned To Supervise Cease-fire

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tentative, nine-point agreement to end the war in Vietnam remained unsigned Tuesday but plans went forward for having a 1,000-man force in place to supervise the cease-fire when it comes.

Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland have agreed to provide 250 officers each for what is expected to be the complex and difficult job of seeing that terms of the peace accord are carried out in the field, informed diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

As the Oct. 31 deadline originally set by the North Vietnamese for signing of the pact passed, the White House continued to withhold any hints on when this ceremony might be carried out.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen that the objective remains "to achieve the right kind of agreement-one that will last" and one that "does not leave the seed for future conflict."

Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's chief foreign-affairs adviser and principal U.S. architect of the pending agreement, said last week that one more meeting of three or four days with the North Vietnamese is required to iron out all the details of the agreement which would provide for an in-place cease-fire and withdrawal of all American troops within 60 days, accompanied by release of all prisoners of war over the same span.

The reported new international policing agency would line up two Communist nations with two noncommunist countries, supplanting the old, ineffective commission created under Geneva agreements and made up of India, Canada and Poland.

At the State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray neither affirmed nor denied the new watchdog commission is taking shape.

The United States would like to see the International Control Commission put in place at the same time the Vietnam ceasefire is promulgated.

The timing of the cease-fire announcement appeared to be drawing nearer. According to diplomatic sources Kissinger and Le Duc Tho. Hanoi's Politburo member who has negotiated for North Vietnam in Paris, will meet again this week. The final accord could come by Sunday, according to some diplomatic sources.

In Japan, South Vietnam's special envoy Pham Dang Lam, Saigon's chief delegate to the Paris peace talks told Deputy Prime Minister Takeo Miki there are still some points to be ironed out before the cease-fire agreement could be signed. Lam said the Saigon government wants further clarification on the withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces from South Vietnam.

In the Jan. 25 proposal put forward by the United States and South Vietnam jointly, there was no mention of withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces from the South. It said there would be a total withdrawal of "all U.S. forces and other foreign forces allied with the government of South Vietnam within six months of an agreement." The Saigon government has never renounced that offer.

Clues Hunted In Train Wreck

CHICAGO (AP) - Railway specialists began Tuesday a detailed investigation of the commuter train collision that killed 44 persons. One of the train engineers said an erratic braking system may have contributed to the rush-hour crash.

Nearly 60 of the 350 people injured in Monday's collision of two Illinois Central Gulf Railroad electric commuters remained in hospitals. Six people were reported in critical condition.

The engineer of the lead train in the collision, James A. Watts, 51, said in a story copyrighted by the newspaper Chicago Today: "The brakes didn't work like they should."

Watts was operating a four-car, double-decked train - new equipment - which overshot the 27th Street station on the South Side by 320 feet. He was backing up to the station when a train of six cars of old one-level equipment rammed into the rear of his train.

Watts said the brakes on the double-deck cars, four of 130 put into service last year by Illinois Central Gulf, "are a little erratic. Sometimes they work fine and sometimes they don't."

A spokesman for General Steel Industries' St. Louis Car Division, manufacturer of the coaches called Highliners, said the cars have a dual braking system. He said it would "almost be impossible for both to fail at the same time."

The braking systems of both trains and the structural safety of the double-decked cars will be high on the agenda of the investigation initiated by the National Transportation Safety Board.

John H. Reed, chairman of the agency, told a news conference that the adequacy of the equipment, the signal system used by the railroad and competence of personnel involved would be included in the study which he said would require several months.

Reed said it was apparent from the wreckage that the new cars "didn't measure up to the old equipment."

The lead car of the second train, made up of six 1926 single-level coaches, telescoped through the last half of the rear car of the lead train. Most of those killed and injured had been riding in these cars.

The manner in which the older car sliced through the newer models prompted questions about the double-decked cars' safety.

Early reports said the new cars were made of lightweight steel and aluminum. A spokesman for the IC said Tuesday, however, the new cars were made of high-tensile, low-alloy steel.

"There's not enough aluminum in them to wrap a sandwich," the spokesman said.

It was noted that the smaller size and lower center of gravity of the older cars may have allowed them to slam through the newer train.

Robert W. Cavanaugh, the engineer of the second train, was pinned in the wreckage for several hours and was removed from the critical list Tuesday. He had not yet been questioned.

Almost all the passengers on the two trains were commuters from the South Side and southern suburbs to jobs in the downtown area. The IC carries 35,000 commuters daily.

The collision occurred at 4:35 a.m.

Weather (9) 256-6714

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the Student Special 99¢

Rani
211 Main St. Northampton
63 N. Pleasant St. Amherst
Velvet Maxi Dresses
Sheepskin Coats
All Bodyshirts at $6.95
10% DISCOUNT on all purchases over $10 when accompanied by this ad.

Auto and Motorcycle Insurance
• all college students
• all drivers under 25
• all drivers over 25
• budget payments
ALL DRIVERS • ALL WHEELS
ALPHA insurance agency
29 So. Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-8505

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.

They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____
(Signature) _____ (Date) _____
Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

ENDORSES COMMUNIST CANDIDATE–Angela Davis throws her support behind Edward Teixeira, left, at a Boston news conference. Miss Davis has spent much of her time since the trial endorsing local Communist candidates around the country. (AP)

GAO Reveals Watergate Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A General Accounting Office report released Tuesday said a $25,000 contributor to President Nixon's re-election campaign named two of the President's top aides as references in winning a prompt federal bank charter.

The report prepared for Chairman Wright Patman's House Banking Committee said the contributor, Kenneth Dahlberg, named former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, finance chairman of Nixon's Re-election campaign and Clark MacGregor, then the President's chief adviser on congressional relations and now his campaign manager, as references in his application for the charter for the bank in Minnetonka, Minn.

The GAO report was ordered by Patman, a Texas Democrat, after his committee refused to authorize a full scale probe before the Nov. 7 election of Republican campaign financing connected with the alleged bugging of Democratic National headquarters at the Watergate.

The GAO report, which did not go into the actual bugging incident, was incorporated into a wide-ranging report by Patman's committee staff.

The staff report said the bank charter was awarded in 89 days, a month faster than normal, and was awarded before a scheduled hearing at which two other applicants were to compete for the charter.

The staff said it charges no wrongdoing by the contributor but said federal Comptroller of the Currency William B. Camp should have recognized the "political implications" and investigated further before rushing into an approval of the charter.

The staff report said newspaper publicity that Dahlberg's $25,000 contribution check had wound up in the bank account of Watergate bugging defendant Bernard Barker should have "rung a bell" on the bank charter application. And so, it said, should have Stan's and MacGregor's names on the charter application.

The General Accounting Office report quoted Camp as saying he had not connected the newspaper stories with the bank charter application before him. As for the question of Stans and MacGregor being named as personal references, the GAO said Camp's staff replied that such references were not required and thus were not forwarded to Camp's headquarters by the regional office.

Nixon To Finish Campaign With Radio, TV Broadcasts

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon will wind up his re-election campaign in California, make some cross-country stops Friday and Saturday and deliver a series of radio and television political broadcasts with a major address to the nation on election eve.

The White House announced Tuesday that Nixon is reinstating a canceled visit to Chicago Friday, going there for a midday rally at O'Hare Airport.

The President will visit Oklahoma and Rhode Island later in the day to boost Republican governor and Senate candidates in all three states.

Originally scheduled to make a campaign swing in the Chicago area Tuesday, Nixon cancelled because of Monday's train wreck tragedy.

On Saturday, the President and Mrs. Nixon will fly to California, where they will remain at the Western White House to vote Tuesday morning in San Clemente. They will return to Washington later in the day to receive the election returns in the White House.

On the way across country, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said there may be "a stop or two on the way," which will be announced later.

An airport rally is scheduled at Ontario International Airport, 45 miles east of Los Angeles, where the Nixons will land Saturday evening on the way to San Clemente.

The President's re-election campaign has been carefully programmed and has included very few public appearances. He will have a busy windup in the next six days, however.

Campaign '72

McG Undismayed By Polls

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) - George McGovern, campaigning on his 29th wedding anniversary, remained publicly undismayed Tuesday in the face of bad news from the public-opinion polls.

The Democratic presidential nominee termed "inaccurate information" a Louis Harris poll in Tuesday's newspapers that showed President Nixon has widened his lead to 28 points.

"We're more convinced than ever that a week from today that people of this country are going to demonstrate that they will not be dictated to by the polls or by anybody else," McGovern told a crowd of several thousand in front of the Onondaga County Courthouse in Syracuse.

Remarking on the poll later to newsmen inside the courthouse, he called it "another wrong and inaccurate piece of information which we will have to disprove on next Tuesday," election day.

At the rally McGovern attacked President Nixon for vetoing domestic spending measures while proposing to increase money for the "gold-platers and the big wasters in the Pentagon."

McGovern accused Nixon of hypocrisy for championing the environment while vetoing a federal measure to clean up waterways, and for promising to aid old people while opposing a 20 per cent increase in Social Security and vetoing measures to aid the elderly.

Instead, McGovern said, Nixon spends money for military "boondoggles."

Crowds Protest GOP Fund Dinner

BOSTON (AP) - An overflow crowd estimated by its sponsors at 7,000 attended a $25-a-person Republican dinner headlined by Pat Nixon Tuesday night as at least that many demonstrators stood outside.

The crowd of demonstrators, estimated by one city police sergeant at 8,000, blocked a busy Boston Street and a trolly line and were encircled by several hundred police.

Police reported five arrests as disorderly conduct charges as horses and dogs moved on several occasions to back the crowd 100 yards away from Commonwealth Armory, site of the dinner.

Inside, the dinner began at about 8 p.m. with Mrs. Nixon and a list of political and Hollywood celebrities on hand.

Among them were comedian Bob Hope, Jazz musician Lionel Hampton, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Eliot Richardson, Transportation Secretary John Volpe, Sen. Edward W. Brooke and former Sen. Leverett Saltonstall.

A small crowd of demonstrators gathered outside the armory at about 6 p.m., but there was no trouble with police until a crowd of 6,000 anti-war protestors marched up to the armory at about 7:30 p.m.

After an initial confrontation, in which police herded the crowd to one side of Commonwealth Avenue, the demonstrators were generally peaceful, reciting anti-war poems and slogans.

"Cronopios"
is coming
An Alternative Bookshop

Exotic Fish & Pet World
at
The Hadley Village Barn
586-3362

- Very complete selection of pet and aquarium supplies.
- Largest selection of small mammals and birds.
- Over 1,000 gallons of fresh & salt water fish.
- New England's largest reptile collection - and soon to become even larger.

10 - 9 Daily 12 - 6 Weds. & Sun.

See UMASS. vs. BUCKNELL on Nov. 4th

Deluxe Peter Pan Bus ride near the beautiful Dutch Country area, leaving Friday Aft. and returning Saturday evening.

Spacious Motel accommodations — 2 people in a room with 2 double beds.

Tickets for the game.

All for the low cost of $24.95

Call 5-0585 or 5-0587 for information.
Ask for Russ Sobelman (No later than Nov. 1st)

Television Tonight

5:00 AFTER SCHOOL SPECIAL (Follow the North Star (8)
JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH "Grant Me No Favor" (18)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST "Night of the Deadly Blossom" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
EIGHT STEPS TOWARD EXCELLENCE (24)
MOVIE "The Quiet Man" (27)
CARRASCOLENDAS (57)
7:00 WHAT IN THE WORLD "England" (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES Bob Barker, host. (8)
DICK VAN DYKE "The Lady and the Baby Sitter" (18)
NEWS (22) (30)
THE JUST GENERATION (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
STATEHOUSE CANDIDATES (57)
7:30 PRICE IS RIGHT (3)
PARENT GAME (8)
MOVIE "Masterson of Kansas" (18)
WAIT TILL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME "The Victim" (22)
BOOK BEAT (24)
CIRCUS "Circus of the Tigers" Bert Parks, host. (30)
DRAGNET (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 CAROL BURNETT Guests: Peggy Lee, Jerry Stiller, Anne Meara. (3)
PAUL LYNDE "To Wed Or Not To Wed" (8) (40)
ADAM-12 "O'Brien's Stand" Pete's apartment house manager pickets police headquarters to protest their failure to capture a purse snatcher. (22) (30)
A PUBLIC AFFAIR–ELECTION '72 (24) (57)
8:30 MOVIE "That Certain Summer" (8) (40)
NBC MYSTERY MOVIE Banacek: (22) (30)
TBA (24)
LAUREL AND HAROY (27)
SPECIAL: WHAT SHALL WE DO FOR THURSDAY'S CHILD? (57)
9:00 MEDICAL CENTER (3)
700 CLUB (18)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
GOMER PYLE (27)
9:30 TWILIGHT ZONE "The Sixteen Millimeter Shrine" (27)
10:00 CANNON (3)
JULIE ANDREWS Guest: Sid Caesar. (8) (40)
SEARCH "The Bullet" (22) (30)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
10:30 MOVIE "Ambush at Cimmaron Pass" (27)
REALIOADES (57)
10:35 NEWS (24)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (18) (22) (30) (40) (57)
11:30 MOVIE "A Matter of Innocence" (3)
DICK CAVETT (8) (40)
JOHNNY CARSON (22) (30)
12:00 NEWS (27)
1:00 NEWS (8) (22) (30) (40)
1:25 MOVIE "The Impossible Years" (3)
3:25 NEWS (3)
10:00 "THE RAIDERS" (3)
12:30 "LITTLE MISS BROADWAY (27)

Raja To Speak In C.C.

His Excellency Raja Tridev Roy, Pakistan cabinet minister for minorities and tourism, will speak at the UMass today.

The talk, titled "Ethnic and Religious Minorities in a Nation-State", will be at 3 p.m. in rooms 168-170-172 of the Campus Center, under sponsorship of the UMass anthropology department.

The minister is chief of the aboriginal Chakma tribe of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, which are now in Bangla Desh. He is a Buddhist in an Islamic Republic, a tribal chief in a nation-state, and a Pakistan cabinet minister whose home and family are in Bangla Desh.

SBA Seminars Said To Succeed

The first annual School of Business Administration Alumni College at UMass last Saturday brought faculty members and about 60 alumni together to exchange information.

For the alumni, it was a chance to attend one of four concurrent seminars, and for the faculty members it was a chance to meet alumni and learn of their jobs and outlooks.

The seminars were: "Marketing in the 70s", conducted by Assoc. Prof. Parker M. Worthing; "Investment Possibilities Today", by Assoc. Prof. M. King Deets; "Management and the Computer", by Prof. Van Court M. Hare; and "Environmental Pollution and Economic Growth", by Assoc. Prof. Arthur Elkins, who organized the program.

According to Prof. Elkins, the response of alumni and faculty members to the seminars this Homecoming weekend was so favorable that a similar program will be offered at next year's UMass Homecoming.

Zen Circus Schedule

Friday, Nov. 10th:
4:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m. Film Festival — $1.00
9:00 p.m. "Montague" Jazz group — 75¢ — Pierpont Lounge
11:00 p.m. "Pure Sound Collective" — Pierpont Lounge
Food all night and a multi-media happening with theatre, photos, slide shows, dance, paintings, etc.

Saturday, Nov. 11th:
Continuing all day; multi-media gallery.
2:00 p.m. Jazz Workshop, featuring resident jazz artists and "Pure Sound Collective".
Workshops in theatre, puppeteering, massage, music, dance, etc.
8:00 p.m. Film Festival — $1.00.
8:00 p.m. ??? "Une Soiree en Hampden" — 75¢
Flight
Fast Eddie and His Raf Pals
Pure Sound Collective
Further information can be obtained in Pierpont Lobby.

Cast of Characters, Zen Circus, Workshop Heads and Personnel:

Event	Head	Room and Phone
Publicity	Eric	360 Pierpont 6-5252
	Joyce	241 Pierpont 6-5207
	Roger	256-8859
Art Gallery	Peggy	1314 JQA 6-8444
Theatre & Dance	Stan	01 Pierpont
Parade	Sharon	902 Coolidge 6-8046
Gospel Meeting	Bill	308 Putnam 549-6105
Coffee House	Steve
Film and Video		425 Pierpont 6-5275
	Wendy	412 Pierpont 6-5262
Jazz	Mary	334 Pierpont 6-5233
Folk Dance	Sunshine	222 Pierpont 6-5318
Massage	Robin	318 Pierpont 6-5222
	Joe	32 Pierpont 6-5175
Light Show	Peggy	1314 JQA 6-8444
Classical Music	Bob
Sculpture		30 Pierpont 6-5169
Env. Display	Ronnie	42 Pierpont 6-5175
Puppeteering	Corky	18 Pierpont 6-5165
Cooking	Cliff	18 Pierpont 6-5165
	Bob	Head of Residence 6-4507
Talent Show	Eric	360 Pierpont 6-5252
Security	Mike	222 Pierpont 6-5192
Silk Screen	Stan	01 Pierpont
???????????

Korean Ensemble To Demonstrate

The Korean ensemble, Ah Ahk will hold an informal lecture demonstration in Bowker Auditorium on Friday afternoon, November 4th as an adjunct to its evening performance at 8 p.m. whichis under the sponsorship of the Fine Arts Council in cooperation with the Third World Alliance and the Department of Asian Studies. The troupe is expected to demonstrate the wide variety of Korean musical instruments and describe the program to be performed later that evening.

FINE ARTS QUARTET
Frank Glazer, Pianist
Thurs., Nov. 2
Perform Brahms Piano Quintet in F and Works by Haydn and Ginastera Tickets $1.50 UM Undergrads/Others $3.00.

Ah Ahk: Performing Arts of Korea
Friday, Nov. 3.
Classical Courts and Chamber Music, Military, Religious and Folk Music and dances of Korea . . . Tickets $1 UM Undergrads/Others $1.50.

Young Artist Showcase
Daniel Adni
Thurs - Fri, Nov. 9 - 10
Exciting twenty year old pianist in his American debut performing two different programs including works by Beethoven, Ravel, Brahms and Prokofiev!
Tickets: $1.50 To UMass Undergrad and $3 others
Fine Arts Council/125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0202 for tickets.

weekend it somewhere
Wherever you're going . . . there's a bus going there too. And the trip to somewhere starts with Peter Pan. Schedule or Charter Buses.

Peter Pan
STUDENT UNION BUILDING
Tel. 545-2006 or 545-2528

NEW ENGLAND'S LEADING NIGHT CLUB
WAREHOUSE ONE
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129
Off Parker Street Near Railroad Bridge
Near Eastfield Mall-Behind Lechmeres
U. MASS. COLLEGE STUDENTS 21 YEARS AND OVER
TOP ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY at the
WAREHOUSE ONE
NEW ENGLAND'S FINEST NIGHT CLUB
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129
THE NOW SOUND OF MUSIC
Welcomes You 7 Nights a Week to the Greatest Sound of Music.
ROCK - JAZZ
AND THE TOP 40 HITS
2 Dance Floors and a Seating Capacity For 800 People.The Greatest Place You Can Go and Meet the Swinging Set Around.
Our Groups Are From
VEGAS — NEW YORK — CALIFORNIA
NO ADMISSION, COVER CHARGE OR MINIMUM

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF	James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR	Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER	William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR	Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR	Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR	William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR	Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR	Robert Nesti
ASST. MANAGING EDITOR	Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER	Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR	Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR	Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR	Steve Ferrara
NEWS STAFF	Dick Fitzgerald, Tom Borkowski
EDITORIAL	Jeannette Martineau
SPORTS	Frank Antosiewicz
DARKROOM	John Neister, Kevin Erikkla, Al Jagoda

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

The Questions

The most important questions on state and federal constitutional amendment on the Massachusetts ballot this November are questions four, five, six, and seven.

On all of these questions the Collegian feels a YES vote by all citizens is needed.

Question four would authorize the legislature to make it legal for the state to provide state students with loans no matter what institution of higher education they attend, be it private or public, in any state. As it stands now only state students going to state institutions can receive loans.

Question five would provide an environmental bill of rights in the state constitution; it would also authorize the legislature to adopt legislation to take land by eminent domain where required to fulfill the purposes of the amendment. This bill of rights would provide the constitutional and legal backing for more powerful and effective environmental laws within the state.

Question six would authorize the state legislature to revise the state tax laws from the present system where everyone pays a certain percentage to a graduated income tax system. If predictions are correct, a graduated tax would lower the burden on lower and middle income families, and up it on high income families who are more able to pay. In addition it would increase tax revenues for the state.

Question seven would require that all state judges step down once they reach the age of 70. This would be a first step in the direction of court reform, something badly needed in Massachusetts and throughout the nation. It would prevent judges from getting stagnant on the bench and force new blood, and hopefully new ideas, into the judicial system.

The Collegian feels that YES votes are a vital necessity on these four questions. If they become law these four proposals would be the first step towards total state government reform so badly needed.

On questions one, two, three, eight and nine, this newspaper urges the following:

Question one, a proposal that would tax farm land according to it's actual use, not assessed value. This would help provide for the continued existance of small farms in the state. We urge a YES vote.

Question two would bring the state constitution into line with the national constitution, and national law, on the 18-year-old vote. We urge a YES vote.

Question three would allow paupers to vote. In a democracy everyone should have the right to vote, irrelevant of any factors other than citizenship. Especially irrelevant are economic factors. We urge a YES vote.

Question eight; approve the 18 year old drinking age. If 18 years olds can vote, die etc., etc., they might as well be able to get drunk. We urge a YES vote.

Question nine would approve voluntary prayer in public schools. We would urge a NO vote on this question. If a student wants to pray he can do it any time he so desires, without permission, so to speak, from any instructor or teacher. If prayer was said orally it would have the effect of forcing all students in class to pray, irrespective of their actual wishes.

Gabe Imperato and Ed Fogarty

A Spiritual Conversion

All hailed King Richard as his great black carriage stormed along Main St., Mantua Corners, Ohio. He stood in His seat with His hand stretched skyward in recognition of His Mighty Mandate, and the people cheered. Lady Nixon was seated next to Him with her hands folded in her lap. A placard caught His eye which read, NO AMNESTY, and His hand lowered and the Voice said, "–they are never, never, going to get amnesty."

America, prepare for peace. Take pride in your sons that have died, and scorn the cowards in Canada or Switzerland or Sweden. Our King is a harsh King, but He is a just King. He has weighed and deliberated for four years and has decided that they have sinned and must be damned. To achieve the dispensation of King Richard you must endure the trial of death, you must be cleansed, you must be pure.

America is the land of saints, and has no room for sinners. The King Himself is a Quaker and has already demonstrated his ability at recognizing evil spirits in America. The list of revelations include Father Berrigan, Sister McCalister, and the Kent State Students.

But King Richard was not alone in revelations that day in Mantua Corners, Ohio. Mrs. Frank Lorence pierced through the Holy Veil and saw that death was good and that King Richard had brought the best to the U.S.

King Richard halted his carriage to lead Mrs. Lorence to her experience. With furrowed brow He said,

"You should be proud that your son is dead."

"I am proud," said Mrs. Lorence.

"You know what it's all about," He said.

Mrs. Lorence was lead to see that King Richard had brought her son to a lasting and enduring peace, and that all those who had fled were denying the Truth of His Word.

Nor are these revelations of a singular nature. The great augur George Gallup has split the guts of a donkey to prophesize that over fifty-nine per cent of Americans are experiencing the revelation of King Richard's Word. The Priestess Yankelovich has had a similar vision in the waters of the Hudson River, where the unstopped flow of yellow and red chemicals has shown the power of Nixon's truth.

Who knows how many more people may undergo a similar regeneration. On each of His stops many young people gather, their faces aglow in the wash of His Powerful Truth. People of every denomination and nationality are swayed by His wisdom.

King Richard tells the story of a formerly unregenerate group who now have wholly converted.

"Yes, these people were particularly lost. Their priests and leaders were of the cult of the Donkey, and had been for many years. Then I had a meeting with their leaders and their conversion was complete, as I have said many times. It was a beautiful experience."

When pressed on who the people might be-Italians, Jews, Irish?-King Richard grows angry and says that he does not differentiate between people.

"It does not matter to me if I eat corned beef, knishes, or antipasto, thus it should not matter who eats of my Spirit." So it is impossible to determine which cult it is that has converted, since none will admit to it. But it must be one of these three, for King Richard repeatedly mentions them in His Incantations.

Let us remember tonight that King Richard is leading the dead and dying of America to a new light. And he is not like the Icarus who would lead us only near the source, rather he is like the moth who would lead us to the hot and burning center.

Gabe Imperato and Ed Fogarty are MDC Editorial Columnists.

The Death Of Humanitarianism

By MARK MAJESKI

Had President Nixon signed the peace treaty with North Vietnam as he agreed to there would have been peace today. However, now the President and his advisor Henry Kissinger want further negotiations to iron out some difficulties before any signing. These talks will consist of things like "Why did you make public the treaty we have agreed on? Had you not done that leaving us open to criticism, our American people would have welcomed it wholesale and could not have questioned it as they do now. All we can do is drag this out till after the elections and blame you for refusing to sign."

The President accomplished his main purpose regarding these current peace talks. He has kept us at the edge of our seats with hope and expectation that at long last peace will come, regardless of form, to SE Asia. His indubitable diplomacy in this "honorable" peace has strengthened his office and enabled the "undecided" vote to decide to vote for his gallant efforts.

President Thieu in South Vietnam can only go along with our President and face, at worst, secret trips to his Swiss bank and still have a hand in the local opium traffic. He insists on having a say in the signing since the ground war is being fought in his part of the country. His demands will be the tool used in the coming days to put off signing or negotiating and it will be entirely believable.

The North Vietnamese are sticking to their maxim that "peace is at the tip of a pen". The US is not going to sign, however, because it is of no practical use anymore. Our massive media coverage of the matter will impress our point of view, cover it up or make it more credible. We will simply accuse the North Vietnamese of refusing to negotiate the "delicate" points of the treaty (mentioned above) which will therefore prohibit the signing on our part. This public fact then coupled with the increased awareness of our President's diplomacy should now give him what he has hoped for during these most recent secret talks, votes, votes, votes. We will believe our media and public spokesmen and be angry with the North Vietnamese for destroying our hopes. We will be ripe for consent when retaliatory measures against the North are announced.

North Vietnam will simply adhere to the agreed terms and refuse to change their stance. They have already granted concessions and won't award anymore for fear of being known as "pansies" in the eyes of the administration. They won't give another inch because they already made their move toward peace and seem to be ready to "fight for 1000 more years" as they have been saying. Thus, we will all "know" who backed down from this one and won't regret the consequences.

We will soon hear Mr. Nixon or his cohorts say that the North Vietnamese have broken off talks and refuse to negotiate. There can be no treaty. Nixon has his votes and his honor. He can only launch retaliatory air strikes and feed the South weapons after the election. He will have enhanced his image as a sincere peace seeker before all our eyes. We will not see him grant any more privileges to North Vietnam. They made their mistake releasing the truth. We will not see Nixon end the war. He is not humane. He has no reason to anymore.

We are very good at war now, though. We have perfected our weapons of destruction on Vietnam's testing grounds. We make hotter napalm and smaller shrapnel for more permanent injury. We're real good with laser guided bombs. We're testing the laser as a portable infantry piece. We don't make any sense, though, since we know that all these weapons will be rendered obsolete if there were any major confrontation between the big world powers.

Any pressure put on the President by the peace movement has helped bring about these current peace talks. That pressure is waiting for a chance to speak its mind on Nov. 7. Anyone who can falsely lift our spirits and hopes over peace in the egotistical quest for votes is not worth pulling a lever for. While Nixon is in office, we will never see peace or any other modes of humanitarianism.

Mark Majeski is a Guest Columnist.

Editorial Staff Meeting Sunday At 4 P.M. All Staffers Should Attend. Please Come!

'HOW CAN YOU ELECTIONEER THIS CLOSE TO THE POLLING BOOTH?'

Letters To The Editor

Abortion-A Woman's Right?

To The Editor:

Henry Armitage's article, "Devaluation of Life" (from MDC 10/27/72) was an excellent example of how statistics can be irresponsibly used in order to lend a certain "legitimacy" or basis in "FACT" to what is actually only one individual's opinion.

First, and most importantly, Dr. Armitage completely ignored the basic issue involved in whether abortion should be legalized: will women be denied the right to determine what happens to their own bodies by an almost entirely male legislature? Rather, he feels it's more important to cite statistics and ask irrelevant and misleading questions.

In his article, he compares the N.Y. City maternal mortality rate (i.e., # of women who die during childbirth per 100,000 live births) to that of Massachusetts. He not only neglects to mention the source of his Massachusetts figure (and refers to the date as 'current') but he considers it logical and valid to compare a cities health statistics (N.Y. City especially?!) to those of a state without any adjustment or explanation! Additionally he feels that N.Y. cities rate is more than double Massachusetts' as a result of legalizing abortion. Yet his statement regarding New York's rate reads as follows:

'Mr. Gordon Chase of the N.Y. City Department of Public Health, reporting on the two year New York City abortion experience, announced a reduction in maternal mortality.'

This statement, despite the Doctor's assertion, seems to indicate that N.Y. City's rate has dropped regardless of legalizing abortion; and since there isn't any data to further explain this, it seems apparent that Dr. Armitage's interpretation is distorted and incorrect.

He later tries to re-classify abortion using the deaths per live births format - which is obviously ridiculous since the purpose of abortion is to abort childbirth, not assist it. (he'd prefer 18 deaths per 73 live "births" than 18 for 400,000-plus abortions.) And he even has the audacity to consider Mass. state figures regarding illegal abortions as realistic and accurate.

It seems obvious that his article is so poorly formulated (many other inadequacies aren't listed that could easily be) that it is not even worth considering. I, for one, am sick and tired of irrational messiahs insulting my intelligence with their childish and irrelevant attempts at garnering my support for laws which eliminate my freedoms. I ask you sir; would you like to be legally forced into being an unwed mother of a child, perhaps fathered by an aggressive future doctor or legislator? Did you know that rape is an all but impossible case to successfully prosecute? That the rich have always had easy access to relatively risk-free abortions? What of the unwanted child that is forced to live in an atmosphere of hate?

ABORTION - a woman's right to choose.

Larry Barr

Estelle Speaks

To The Editor:

I have been reading all that has been said about George McGovern and I have one question to ask the "liberals": How can you vote for a candidate who is obviously in favor of:

1) Surrendering South Vietnam and all the P.O.W.'s to Communism.

2) Supporting what will be the seat of a one world socialist state. What I mean by this is all out support of the corrupt United Nations. I say it is corrupt because it is so pro-Communist it makes me sick. But what makes me sicker about it is that the U.S. taxpayers, many of whom would vomit if they knew the truth about this organization, are paying 70% of the U.N. budget.

3) Busing children from decent neighborhoods with decent schools to areas with a high rate of crime and poor schools in the name of "achieving racial balance".

4) Favors making Israel another Vietnam. There is nothing wrong with giving aid in the form of arms and advisors to Israel but the line must be drawn there.

5) Weakening our defense levels so that Russia would be able to successfully invade The U.S. anytime she wished.

6) Favors taking guns away from honest citizens while releasing more criminals from prison. One thing to remember: IF GUNS ARE OUTLAWED...ONLY OUTLAWS WILL HAVE GUNS. I also should mention that any gun control act is unconstitutional as it goes against the provision stated in the Bill of Rights for the rights of citizens to keep and bear arms.

I am sick and tired of hearing all this crap praising McGovern which is just leftist and Communist propaganda. Unfortunately, I must agree with what has been said about the Republican Socialist Candidate Richard Nixon as well as what I feel about the Democratic Socialist Candidate George McGovern. This is why I have cast my vote for the American Party Candidate: John G. Schmitz.

Bob Estelle

Homecoming Chaos

To The Editor:

Why? Why do we let it happen? Homecoming arrives and everyone invites their friends up. What happens - utter chaos. People get so screwed up they do strange things - like driving down Mass. Ave. the wrong way or yelling obscenities at people without the slightest provocation. What about all the damage that happened this weekend? Chances are these outsiders did a lot of it, after all they don't live here, why should they care? But who pays for it? We do kiddies. That's why you pay a high CC fee and why our room rent goes up. Did you try to find a place to park this weekend? Everyone and his grandmother who came here had a car. And about cars - did you get parts ripped off yours too? It cost my girl $10 for plug wires some bastard stole off her car. Gas stations around here had a picnic selling parts to replace those stolen.

Ask yourself why all this trouble this weekend and you too will see it can be blamed, in a large part, on outsiders. Smarten up all you Umies. Tell your friends if they come, to try not to screw up everyone else's lives. Better yet, let's forget Homecoming next year. It only makes much worse a situation which at times is bad enough.

Tim Lamprey

'Misstatements'

To The Editor:

We feel a responsibility to correct the misstatements of facts contained in Mr. Wiley's recent letter.

(1) We did not misinterpret the ad, as Mr. Wiley stated. In fact, Mr. Aldrich, the theatre manager, offered to refund our overpayment only after he reviewed the ad and admitted he, too, could interpret it as we did.

(2) We did not "shout across the lobby at the employees," as Mr. Wiley stated. Rather, we spoke softly and only within earshot of Mr. Aldrich.

We question the veracity of Mr. Wiley's remarks: He writes as though he was an eyewitness, when, in fact, the only employees present were Mr. Aldrich and the female box office attendant.

The fact remains that Mr. Aldrich's actions are indefensible and any more mendacious attempts to vinidicate him will prove equally futile. Indeed, such attempts surely reinforce the readership's understanding of our grievance.

Cindy Razin

Editorial Points

The question of having a dog catcher for Southwest was a topic of conversation at the Rents and Fees Committee meeting last night. It probably would be good to get them off campus. After all maybe they're the ones stealing the food from the Dining Commons.

* * *

Who the hell would want to steal food from the Commons, anyway?

* * *

Shock of the Week: The Springfield Union endorsed Richard Nixon for President officially. We were all waiting with baited breath for that one.

* * *

Brilliant observation of the year award goes to none other than Tricky Dick himself. Yes folks, in a rare moment of deep perception Our Leader declared that the main issue of the '72 campaign was defense spending. That's like saying the main purpose of the Three Stooges is social commentary.

Apology Demanded

To The Editor:

The recent article on dining commons workers theft from the dining commons is irresponsible reporting, based on as it is hearsay and consisting of outright defamation of character. That woman in the picture on the front page, the supposed "thief", happens to carry her knitting in a plastic bag and happens to buy bread on the way home at Munchie's. The people who saw all this theft are not the main object of my concern--they are obviously suffering from severe situational maladjustment. What bothers me is the Collegian's blasting this nonsense all over the front page in the best tradition of Randolph Hearst and yellow journalism.

Collegian, this has happened before. Remember last year your sensational scoop about janitors in the Campus Center stealing a keg of beer a night. You had to print a retraction of that. We want another apology.

Why is it that every time some price goes up the workers on campus suffer. Dorm rents go up–lay off janitors. Food Service prices go up–lay off dining commons women (23 full time workers are now on lay-off). Prices go up, state and federal aid is reduced, so charge University employees a parking fee. Dining commons prices go up again, blame the workers' theft. Wake Up!!!!!

Prices are going up all over-go check at any grocery store. Put the blame where it belongs and stop making up dirt about the employees.

Collegian in the future remember there is a union on this campus.

You go to students for information:
You go to management. I suggest
You check with us occasionally.

Carol A. Drew
President, Local 1776

'Society...Bellevue'

To The Editor:

Peace is a personal experience. In order to make war a personal experience we should pass a law stipulating that every projectile fired from now on must fly parallel with the ground, avoid every obstruction over the circumference of the planet, and return to its shooter, striking the latter in his ass. The full impact of such an experience can then be appreciated on a personal level, as it should be. Are we ahead of our time? Or is our time behind us? Whichever, I advocate the generosity of spirit here. Understanding the desperation of adolescents in search of self-truth, for instance, we allow them plenty of slack-forever, if they need it-to learn to deal with life: to choose, to reject, to shake heads helplessly-this type of thing. In this way everyone is still eligible for Uncertainty Compensation. If you're certain, you can nevertheless play dumb and collect. Courage is its own reward. If fighting in Vietnam has been courageous according to anyone's reality, it's been so for those who were confident enough in the national policy to risk all (South Carolina, 1967: "You guys are McNamara's Supermen!!?") How about the confused, frustrated, aimtoplease, loving a beautiful woman, distraught, nicetogetaway, exuberant adolescents of the mid-sixties who fought? Or didn't? We're a country which inspires personal development, aren't we? Recognizing that an institution can't be all-encompassing? How can any sane person stand up and declare melodramatically: "Those heroic young men... their lives for... gratitude of America... minority of a few hundred... undesireable... their choice... their choice... Americans' integrity... patriotism... you can be certain...", simultaneously fingering a bright political feather in his hat band?! Number one statesman. Why not make a claim which has been historically resolved? One of the Louis kings? Help me, please, historians. Society... Bellevue.

Thaddeus Fitzpatrick

Project 10 Art

To The Editor:

Recognition of the abundance of young artistic talent has always been left to the powerful few gallery owners, theatrical and film producers, rich patrons, and publishers. The dilemma of the young creator today is the same as it was for the young French Impressionists. In direct response to this, artists are becoming their own outlets, their own proteges, and their own exhibitors, just as the Impressionists opened their own "Salon de Refuse" after being turned away by established galleries. Even in such mass market fields as film, theatre, and commercial art, the energy of acknowledged talent can be thwarted for lack of a large enough scale of recognition.

The results of such exhibitions are a less elite and more alive atmosphere for the gallery, a greater scope of participation and appreciation for the viewer, and a constant source of inspiration for the artist. Just such an effort is being organized by student artists in the lounges of Pierpont. It is slated to be permanent, diversified, and hopefully self-perpetuating. On Nov. 10 and 11 there will be a "Zen Circus" of music (Friday night, jazz with "Montage"; boogie Sat. night with "Flight" and "Pure Sound Collective"), films (including oiginal "Dracula" and "Cabinet of Dr. Calagari" and original work), theatre groups, food, and student art.

It is the years of high production rather than high quality, of off and on masterpieces, and the experimental building rather than stylistic perfection that shape what we later call success. So perhaps such an alternative as this one in Project 10 can negate the increasingly accurate rule of thumb, that it is whether or not a man's name is known which predestines his work to be art.

Frances Forte

MORE LETTERS NEXT PAGE

Letters To The Editor (Cont'd.)

A Proposal

To The Editor:
The social scene at UMass.

What comes to your mind? A freshman timidly smiling in a classroom? A junior trying to talk to someone at the Bluewall? Five towers of twenty-two stories with the inhabitants hiding in the cubby-holed security of their L-shaped rooms? Whatever the actual experience, it seems to us that interaction (the ability to talk to each other) between people is minimal at this university. And without this verbal outlet, students have to keep everything to themselves. This, as we all know, is not the healthiest of all situations.

But this situation shouldn't have to exist; it doesn't have to exist. To lessen this problem, we are going to initiate a program to help students meet each other without having to be on a trip, physically ill, or about to commit suicide. As we envision it, this program would help people meet each other so that they can talk.

The actual procedure for achieving this goal will go something like this: As each person calls us, they will be asked for their first name and phone number. The person will then be asked if they are looking for a male or female. Any other information they give is up to them. The caller will then be given up to three names of people who have called in before. The responsibility for further action rests with the individual callers.

To accomplish the goal of helping people meet each other, we will need student initiative. People must be willing to call us. But, we believe just as "drop-in" type centers have succeeded, we will succeed. Since we are sponsored by the Southwest Student Affairs Office, people should realize that this is a serious program, not just some overworked dating game.

We will also need student volunteers to help answer phones. Anyone interested should come to help answer phones. Anyone interested should come to the organizational meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 1st at 6:30 pm. Please come to the Southwest Student Affairs Office in the JQA Lobby.

The regular hours of service will be from 8-11 pm on Sunday through Thursday; on Friday and Saturday from 8-12 pm. The number to call is 545-1552. If you have any questions or suggestions about this service, please call Dave at 546-9731 between 5 and 6 pm.

Dave Levine

Walk 10 Miles

To The Editor:
The Sisters of Gamma Sigma Sigma, Service Sorority invites all the people of the University, students, professors and employees, to participate in the 10 mile Heart Fund Walk. We need people who are willing to walk and others to pledge those walking. All proceeds are given to th Heart Fund. Last year we raised $600. We hope to do a lot better this year. The walk will begin at the Infirmary around 10:30 Saturday, Nov. 4. There will be ten check points along the route and will end at Cooly Dickinson Hospital. Coffee and donuts will be provided at the hospital for all those who walked. If the Student Senate doesn't give us a bus for the return trip, we will have to depend on people with cars. There will be a "Pledging Table" at the Campus Center, 9-4:00, Mon.-Wed. (30-1) for people to pledge a walker. People wishing to walk may get their pledge cards at the table and sign up. Care a little. Walk 10 miles for the Heart Fund. For further information, contact Paula, 6-6768.

Paula Cunningham

Free Flick

To The Editor:
I regret the inconvenience caused to the University community by the misrepresentation of times and admission prices for the film on last Thursday and Friday nights. There were two sets of advertising, one by the Movie Committee of Program Council, advertising (correctly) only the movies. A second set by the Homecoming Committee of Program Council advertised (incorrectly) all the weekend events. The Movie Committee was unaware of the Homecoming Committee's advertising until it appeared in print.

To compensate in part for the confusion, I will run the film "Bullitt" on November 9 for free.

Bill Dotson, Chairman
Program Council Movie Committee

Hassles about
AUTO INSURANCE
SEE THE MAN WHO CAN HELP
Frank D. Lawrence
Insurance Agency
584-0164
304 King St. Northampton

"JOHANNA WILD"
WEDNESDAY
Nov. 1
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
BLUEWALL

Round Trip Flight To Los Angeles
Via American Airlines - $175.00
Includes meals and drinks. Leaves Bradley Intl. Airport on Dec. 23, 1972 and returns to Bradley on Jan. 21, 1973. Money has to be paid in full by Dec. 1, 1972. For payment or information: Call 5-0585 or 5-0587, ask for Russ Sobelman.

ENGINEERS
ENGINEERING AND CONSTRUCTION OF FOSSIL FUELED & NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS
For the Following Disciplines:
MECHANICAL ELECTRICAL CIVIL ENVIRONMENTAL CHEMICAL NUCLEAR CONSTRUCTION

Stone & Webster Engineering builds Professional Engineers. Join the pioneer and leader in the field of nuclear and fossil fueled power generation. You'll find a challenging opportunity at Stone & Webster to grow professionally day by day. You'll be working on projects of major scope, solving the nation's increasing energy requirements. You'll be part of a team that has made environmental engineering an essential part of its activities from preliminary planning to detailed engineering.

Our representatives will be on campus
Monday, November 20

* For more information re: campus interviews contact the placement office or write directly to: Mr. Edward J. Devin, Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation, P.O. Box 2325, Boston, Mass. 02107

We are an equal opportunity employer.

STONE & WEBSTER
ENGINEERING CORPORATION
NEW YORK • BOSTON • CHICAGO • HOUSTON • LOS ANGELES
LONDON • PARIS • THE HAGUE • TORONTO

What's the story ...?

By JAY SAVEREID
University Ombudsman

(Editor's Note: WHAT'S THE STORY will be a regular feature of the Daily Collegian, so long as it is supplied with student questions. If you have any questions or problems within the University system and you're having a hard time finding answers then send or bring your written questions to the WHAT'S THE STORY box in the Collegian office Student Union.)

CORRECTION:

In "What's The Story?" of October 24, 1972, the following sentence appeared: "Bankruptcy has been declared and the matter is now in the hands of a bank."

1. The house at the corner of North Pleasant and Phillips Street is owned by Mass Beta House Corp., not Pi Beta Phi.
2. Mass Beta House Corporation is not bankrupt.
3. The house is available for sale or long-term lease. Further information may be obtained by calling 256-6604.

Q. Is it true that one credit of Marching Band is equal to one-half (1/2) credit of Physical Education?

A. There have been revisions of the policy for Marching Band credit in recent years but the present policy is that one (1) semester of participation in Marching Band is awarded one (1) graduation credit in Music; Mr. Joseph Duchi, Assistant Director of the Marching Band, states that those who administer the Marching Band Program hope to re-open the question of granting Physical Education credit for Marching Band participation.

Q. Will the dorms be open after the UMass-B.C. football game on November 25th?

A. We are informed by the Dean of Student's Office that the residence halls will re-open on Saturday of Thanksgiving weekend. The precise hour of opening is being decided in the areas, so students should consult with the Area Director's Office for details.

Jay Savereid,
University Ombudsman

Voter Information For Amherst

Polling Places and Hours - The Amherst Board of Selectmen have set the hours for voting on November 7, 1972 from 8:00 A.M. to 8:00 P.M. at the following polling places:

Precinct I, Parish Hall, No. Congregational Church.

Precinct II, Amherst Fire Station - rear.

Precinct III, Odd Fellows Hall (Senior Community Center) Kellogg Ave.

Precinct IV, Masonic Building, Main St., ground level, left rear.

Precinct V, 'Old' Junior High School - Gym, Lessey St.

Precinct VI, Munson Memorial Library, So. Amherst.

Precinct VII, Auction Galleries, Meadow St., No. Amherst.

Voters using the Partial Ballot will vote between 3:00 P.M. and 8:00 P.M. in the Board Room of the Town Hall.

Any voter who does not know his polling place or wants to see if he is still on the Amherst Voter List should call the Town Clerk's office - 253-3885 from 8:00 A.M. through until the polls close at 8:00 P.M. or consult the official voting list which is posted outside the Town Clerk's office.

Absentee Voters who have not already applied for absentee ballots have until before noon on November 6th (the day before the election) to apply for an absentee ballot. Ballots must be received in time, however, to be voted before a notary public and mailed back to the Town Clerk's office to be received there before the polls close at 8:00 P.M.

Physically disabled absentee voters who need the services of a Notary Public may call either party headquarters for assistance:

Democratic Headquarters - 253-5282
Republican Headquarters - 253-3728

A voter who will be out of town on election day, but who has no address outside Amherst from which the ballot may be seasonably returned, may obtain a ballot from the Town Clerk and vote before he leaves right in the Town Hall. Again, the deadline to apply for this absentee ballot is noon of the day preceding the election.

VOTE EARLY! Waiting until the last minute to vote will result in long lines and the resulting frustration for all concerned. The Board of Registrars urges all voters who can get to the polls during the morning and early afternoon hours to do so.

Infirmary
(In An Emergency)
5-2671

PAUL McKINLEY
plays at
THE CHEQUERS
TUES. thru SAT. 9:30 til close

Ah Ahk Troupe Performs Friday

The Ah Ahk Troupe, a company of 17 dancers and musicians from Korea, will perform Friday evening, Nov. 3, at UMass. This event, scheduled for Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m., is part of the Fine Arts Council's Third World Cultural Series, a group of events depicting the life styles and cultures of members of the Third World peoples.

The Ah Ahk Troupe comes from the National Classic Music Institute in Seoul, a school formed in the 10th Century to perpetuate the music of Korea. Although Ah Ahk is a name for the classical court music of Korea, the Troupe's performance represents the full history of Korean performing arts: court and chamber music (some of it originating in the Sung Dynasty China and long-dead on the mainland and on Taiwan), Confucian music, military music, Buddhist music, and folk music; with several dances, including the Sword Dance and two masked dances. Authentic costumes are worn.

As part of its program to encourage the appreciation and study of the many cultures of Asia, the American Society for Eastern Arts of San Francisco has arranged the Ah Ahk tour of the U.S. and Canada. Local sponsors are the UMass Fine Arts Council in conjunction with the Third World Alliance. Tickets are available for $1.50 ($1 for full-time UMass undergraduates) and may be obtained through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium one hour before the performance.

ALL THESE VEHICLES CARRY A 50-50 GUARANTEE FOR 30 DAYS.

1970 Pont. GTO, V-8 a real cream puff	$2495
1969 Toyota Corona Real Sharp	$1095
1965 Ford Mustang Red V-8 Std.	$595
1967 Ford Galaxie V-8 Auto.	$795
1967 Olds Delta 88 V-8 Auto-air	$895
1965 Ford Custom V-8 Auto	$495
1971 Std. Beattie Orange	$1595
1970 Sq. Back Clean car	$1695
1965 VW Sedan Black	$595
1963 VW Bus 17,000 orig. miles	$1095

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.
OPEN EVES. 'till 9.
NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN
Your Authorized VW Dealer
246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton
FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers
Call 584-8620

PLANNING A YEAR OF STUDY ABROAD?
Tel Aviv University Overseas Student Programs offer credit-earning programs open to American students.
■ One Year Programs for Freshmen, Sophmores, Juniors including special divisions in the Exact Sciences & Jewish Studies.
■ Spring semester at Tel Aviv University.
■ Summer Sessions & Archaeology Programs.
■ A unique & meaningful life experience.
Send coupon for more information and application.
American Friends of Tel Aviv University, Inc.
41 East 42nd Street
New York, N.Y. 10017
(212) MU 7-5651
Name
Address
City State Zip
TEL AVIV UNIVERSITY
ISRAEL 1973-74
For immediate information contact our regional representative.
DONALD GOLDSTEIN
240612 Peabody Terrace
Cambridge, Mass. 02138
(617) 492-2584

Tonight!!!
DON LEE (black poet, author, publishing editor)
"Art and Politics"
Campus Center Auditorium
8:00 p.m.
also speaking:
Dayvid Nelsun
Andre McLauglin
Coffee Hour following lecture in the New Africa House
a dvp presentation

Your Head

Dating Habits Worry Student

By DRS. McCASHIN AND KLEIN

Q: "I'm a single, 26-yer-old grad student. I've wondered more and more about my dating habits. Often on the same weekend I'll go out with a 19-year-old undergraduate and a 32-year-old woman on consecutive days. I wonder what this says about me?"

A: The dating pattern you describe need not reflect a psychological problem. The somewhat flexible social structure of the University community allows for considerable contact between single students (as well, of course, married students) within a wide age range.

Beyond this there has been a rapid change of societal values which serve to guide personal dating and sexual behavior. Old stereotyped notions about sex roles (e.g. male agressive-female passive), the relative ages of partners (male usually several years older) and the proper context for sex (partners develop deep relationships) are not the only alternatives. The emerging ethic of the "sexual revolution" is that the individual chooses his or her own circumstance for dating and sex. This puts considerable pressure on the individual to examine his or her own motivations, for in the absence of consistent external guidelines, decisions are usually made on the basis of personal needs at any given time. Your writing to us suggests that the choices you have made might reflect some concern and conflict.

Your tendency to regularly choose significantly younger heterosexual partners might indicate an attempt at dealing with strong unresolved dependency needs through the reversed role of parent. The wish to be a child; taken care of an nurtured by a parent could be denied from consciousness because such needs are often unacceptable to a young adult's self concept. Such wishes, then, are symbolically played out through the inverse role of parent. Involvement with someone obviously younger and less experienced can make the older person feel more secure while at the same time he or she participates in a parent-child drama (in a disguised form). The preference for someone significantly older could suggest a more direct and perhaps more conscious way of satisfying dependency needs.

Your vacillation between these two people could reflect conflicting feelings in this area. We might also add that similar psychological factors are likely to be involved in the partners who choose to engage you in a relationship.

It is quite positive that you are seeking to clarify your feelings, for today many people are faced with the task of having to make personal choices in areas where society's values are being questioned.

Drs. McCashin and Klein will answer your questions or discuss any issue on your mind. Send or bring your questions to Mental Health, 303 Machmer Hall. All inquiries are strictly confidential.

Economics Dept. Works To Help Its Students

The Economics Department has announced a plan to improve communications with its undergraduate majors. As the first step, a newsletter for undergraduates was published; this is being followed up by a gathering for all undergraduate majors tonight at 7:00 in Thompson Hall 6th Floor lounge.

The purpose in holding this meeting is threefold: (1) to find out from the undergraduates what kinds of advice and counseling they might be able to provide (in addition to simply providing courses and a major); (2) to explore ways in which they can improve communication between majors and the department (the newsletter being an obvious example); and (3) to provide information on post-graduate employment and graduate school options available to economics majors. A representative of the Career Planning and Placement Office will be at this meeting to outline employment opportunities for economics majors.

Refreshments will be served.

Ed. Ombudsmen Solve Problems

The School of Ed's Ombudsman's Office exists to provide help to all members of the School of Ed community and facilitating a better understanding and working relationship. Problems, misunderstandings and complaints that students, faculty or staff may have within or connected with the School of Ed are their concern.

Assistant Bill Gibson's office is in Room 230, phone 5-0914, and he is there Tuesday 9-12, Wed. 9-12, Thurs. 9-11. He also checks his office daily for messages.

George Urch is located in Room 215, phone 5-0945 and his office hours are Mon. 1-3 and Wed. 9-11, and he is also in his office daily.

The Ombudsmen can help you if you bring your problems and suggestions to them.

Boys in the Band

Nov. 3 C.C.A.

7, 9:15, 11:30

75¢

MDC Classifieds Pay

TOMORROW!

Sunday Bloody Sunday

7 and 9:30 S.U. Ballroom

50¢

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1-2-3-4-5
ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.
24 HR. TEL. 733-5131

Jim Brown is SLAUGHTER! R
Wed. Mat 2:00 Daily 7:00-9:30 Sat-Sun 2:3:50-5:40 7:00-9:30
JIM BROWN SLAUGHTER STELLA STEVENS · RIP TORN

THE 2 BIGGEST BONDS OF ALL..
SEAN CONNERY in REPEATS "THUNDERBALL" Daily 9:50 Wed-Sat-Sun 4:15-9:50 PG
SEAN CONNERY IS JAMES BOND YOU ONLY LIVE TWICE Daily 7:30 Wed-Sat-Sun 2-7:30

"JOHN KNOWLES' CLASSIC BEST-SELLER BECOMES A CLASSIC MOTION PICTURE" "A SEPARATE PEACE" ★★★½★ New York Daily News
"ONE OF THE BEST FILMS ABOUT YOUTH EVER MADE." Rex Reed New York Daily News Syndicated Columnist
Daily 2-7:30-9:30 Sat-Sun 2-3:50 5:40-7:35-9:40
PG A SEPARATE PEACE

When The Legends Die
Wed Mat 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:35 Sat-Sun 2:3:45-5:25-7:30-9:35 PG

YOU'LL LIKE a thriller MY MOTHER PG Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30-9:40
Sat.-Sun. 2-3:55-5:40-7:35-9:45
"THE VALACHI PAPERS" STARTS NOV. 8th

THE WIZARD OF OZ

A COLOR TRIP AT 7:00 & 11:00 TONIGHT S.U.B.

also TOP HAT at 9:00

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1-2-3-4-5 ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD. 24 HR. TEL. 733-5131

WANTS 4 U. MASS. FILM CONSULTANTS

to help promote our films on campus & get publicity

Enthusiasm, film knowledge, reliability.

Write your qualifications to —

John P. Lowe, Dist. Mgr.
c/o SHOWCASE CINEMAS
Worcester, Mass. 01608

World Series Sweeps Television Ratings

NEW YORK (AP)-Baseball's World Series swept the battle for television ratings for two consecutive days, dislodging even CBS' "All in the Family," according to Nielsen reports made public today.

The ratings, for the week ending Oct. 22, showed that World Series telecasts by NBC on Oct. 18-19 came in first and second in the national Nielsen rankings, with "Family" in third place.

CBS' "Bridget Loves Bernie" came in fourth, while fifth place was taken by "How to Handle a Woman," an NBC special starring Dinah Shore and Burt Reynolds.

The weeks' other entertainment winners, in order of their ranking, were CBS' "Hawaii Five-O", ABC's "Marcus Welby," CBS' "Country Music Awards" special, NBC's "Sunday Mystery Movie" and CBS' "Gunsmoke."

The regularly scheduled shows ranked 10th through 20th were CBS' "Maude" and "Mary Tyler Moore Show," NBC's "Walt Disney," CBS' "Cannon," "Doris Day" and "Medical Center" shows, ABC's "FBI", NBC's "Saturday Night Movie," CBS' "Bob Newhart Show," ABC's "Monday Night NFL Football" and NBC's "Monday Night Movie."

NBC's "Bonanza," which slumped badly after a highrated start this season, was pre-empted the week of Oct. 22 for a World Series game that was rained out.

Film Company For Five College Area

A Five College Film Company to unite student film talents and interests will hold its first meeting tonight at 8 in room 175 of the Campus Center.

Students with experience in any of the many aspects of film production, from writing, acting, and directing to camera operation and editing, and who wish to join energies are invited.

Company objectives are to raise funds which will be used to produce professional quality 16mm film, and to establish a lasting outlet for five college area student film talent.

The lack of equipment and facilties for film making in the Valley can be overcome by a joint student effort. For further information, call Robert Cohen, 546-2412, room 301 Wheeler. Please come if you have talents, experience or ideas.

IN COLD BLOOD FRIDAY!

DUSTIN HOFFMAN in Mike Nichol's THE GRADUATE Sat., Nov. 4 At 7, 9, 11 in MAHAR Sponsored by the Cinema Club

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD Only American Film to be so Honored

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE 7:00 & 9:00 (R)

Elvira Madigan At 8:45

The Virgin & the Gypsy At 7:00 Both Rated (X)

Campus Cinemas 256-6411 AMHERST-HADLEY LINE DOLLAR NIGHT Every Monday Admission $1.00

The Godfather Daily at 8:00 (R)

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1969 Dodge Dart "Swinger" — standard, two-door, excellent condition, AM/FM radio, $1000. Call 546-6687 after 6 p.m. tf11-3

1966 MG Midget, give-away. $200.00. 1 nearly new Michelin X radials. Call 546-3601, ask for Russ. 11-3

1966 Comet wagon, 6cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work. 549-6235 eves.

1 AW C'mon guys, honest. All is nearly (broke)! Save now during my (annual going out of business) sale 58 Ford panel truck (no rust)! good tires all new brakes and front end. This (little beauty) runs dandy but it sure do need rings I'm crying right now as I write down this ridiculously low price $125! Takes it! 1-628-3294. tf11-2

1970 Simca $900 or best offer 32 miles per gallon in great shape, call Joe Tripp evenings 546-8921. tf11-2

1967 BMW 4dr. Sedan nw exhaust syst revalve job nw radials $1500 or best off. Call 773-8668 8 a.m.-5 p.m. tf11-3

For Sale — 1963 Chevy Belair, ex. cond., mech. good body, fine deal, runs great, owner needs scratch. $175. V8 auto., new tires, Call 549-6316. 11-3

1972 Super Beetle VW, sunroof, FM stereo tape deck & tapes. 100% warranty, exc. cond. Must sell before Jan. 1. Call Greg 253-7362. tf11-3

MGBGT '67, fine cond., needs minor eng. work, looked after like a baby. Have to sell. $1400. Call 527-0956 evenings, keep trying. 11-3

66 VW Bug,. New engine, runs good, new tune up. Want $300. Call 549-6700. 11-1

63 Jag XKE, 2 tops, new tires, new valves and guides, $800 or best offer. 665-2075. tf11-3

68 Cougar, AT, PS, fact. air, low mi., excel. cond., 549-6718. tf11-3

1970 Simca for sale, in great shape, 32 miles per gallon, Must sell, need money. Call Joe evening, 546-8921. tf11-1

1949 Volkswagen Beetle. Very good condition, asking $900, 253-2815. tf11-1

1960 Chevy Sedan, fall inspected. Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-4121. tf11-2

1971 Camaro, 3 spd, std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188. tf11-3

1941 Chevy Coupe, good running condition, call 1-467-8962. tf11-3

1964 Chevy Wagon, 3 speed, 6 cylinder, new clutch; pressure plate; 4 good tires, R & H, burns little oil. Must sell by Fri. $ 0.95, 546-7934. 11-1

1966 Tempest, rbit 326 eng., 3 sped Hurst, MA6S, stereo, $650.00, Call Steve 6-6284. tf11-3

69 V.W. Bug, clean, R & H, fog lights, bumper guards, tel. 772-0662 after 5:30. tf11-2

4 WD - Jeep — Wagoneer, new eng., clutch, trans., springs, tires, stick, ps-pb, more. $1250. Firm, call Jerry 549-1422 eves. tf11-3

Chevy Impala 65, 4 bri 283, 3 speed Hurst 200, needs new tires, fail sticker. Call 549-3706 and leave name and number. tf11-7

1970 AW Bug, exc. cond., sun roof, new eng. & clutch, 5 exc. tires, 1967 Honda 160 street bike, best offer. 545-6788, days, or 665-4100 eve. tf11-6

68 Triumph GT-6, after 6, 323-0541 or 788-7919 days. tf11-7

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cupboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window. $550. 546-4555. tf11-7

67 Ford, 6 new tires, no inspection sticker. Nds ball joints, otherwise good condition. Paul 253-7136. tf11-3

MISCELLANEOUS

Amherst Elementary Program interviewing, Oct. 30, thru Nov. 2, for next semester. Sign up Sch of Ed Room 219 (545 1563) now. 11-1

Make the fat cat pay his fair share. With a graduated income tax. Vote YES on question 6. tf11-4

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers, low cost, Spring vacation trips to Bermuda and Morocco. For more info., Call Rich Margil 317 Dwight 545-0790. tf11-3

LOST

Lost set of keys for Firebird. Need badly. Call 546-4728, ask for Larry or leave message. tf11-1

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private home. Women preferred. Call 584-8742. tf11-3

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 Hatfield St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3061. tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4136. tf11-17

Part time, Foreign & American - light body & mechanical repair. Reasonable rates. 323-7008. tf11-1

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1140. tf11-9

Passport photos, fast fast service, Lang's photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-9637. Located in center of town near Wearhouse. tf11-4

Two experienced ed. majors forming inexpensive day care group, 9-12 and/or 1-4. Will pick up children, 549-0056. tf11-2

Do you need a haircut? Experienced person will do shags, trims, layers . . . Call for appt. Ask for Jill 6-7995. tf11-3

ROOMMATE WANTED

Quiet roommate wanted, 2-1/2 mi. from campus, own room, utilities inc., $65 a month. Call Dave 256-8619. tf11-1

F. roommate wanted for house in country, own room, $58, $50/mo. utils. Car necessary. Call Patricia, 586-2942, or 545-0883. tf11-3

ROOM WANTED

Couple needs room in private home or small apt. in Amherst, starting end of semester. Call 524-8436 after 6. tf11-2

ENTERTAINMENT

Dustin Hoffman, Katherine Ross, and Anne Bancroft star in Mike Nichols "The Graduate". Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9, & 11 in Mahar. tf11-3

Bluewall Coffeehouse, Thur. Nov. 2 with the "South Street Rhythm & Blues Band", an All-Star Jug Band, and much more! 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. FREE. tf11-2

Jim Kweskin returns! Sunday at 7:30 & 10:00 at the Folklore Center tickets can be bought in advance or at the door. Info 253-9264. tf11-3

Robbie Basho in concert this Friday & Saturday at 8:00 p.m. at The Folklore Center, 16 Spring St., 253-9264. Robbie is on Takoma Rec. tf11-3

Mr. immense presents "In Cold Blood" this Friday nite in the S.U. Ballroom, at 7 & 9:30. A real chiller! tf11-3

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1969 Norton Commando, 8000 mile, excellent condition, $800.00. Call 256-8687 p.m. tf11-3

1972 Norton 750 Roadster with full ferring. 1100 mil, $1000. Call 253-2821. tf11-7

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $100 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine runs very dependable. Asking $450-367-2782. tf11-3

'70 Honda CL 150 ex cond. Buy now and save $1-must sell to stay in school $650, or best offer. Call Bob 546-4738. tf11-1

Last call! 1971 Honda CL350 ideal on/off road bike meticulously maintained, helmets, chain, etc. $650 fall price, 545-1599 a.m. 253-2412 p.m. tf11-2

1971 Harley-Davidson, XLCH, sparkling America model, 1800 bucks. Call John Tocci 5-2412, 210 Wheeler 5-2417. tf11-1

1972 Bultaco Alpina, 250 cc, 5 speed, street legal, $400 miles, new cond., $750, or best offer. Call John 546-7040. tf11-3

HELP WANTED

Qualified registered nurse for coronary care, and/or nursing supervisor for full time position on 3rd shift. Please contact Mrs. Alice Goethel, R.N., director of nursing service, Wing Memorial Hospital, Wright Street, Palmer, Mass. Phone 1-283-7651. Ext. 83. tf11-2

WANTED

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-6716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

APT. FOR RENT

One bedroom apt., $115/mo. Available at any time. Call 665-3182 after 6 p.m. tf11-1

$50 cash to people who will rent my 2-bedroom apt., all appliances, immediate occupancy, $190.00 inclusive. 665-4721. tf11-3

FOR SALE

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf.noon

New Skis. 72 K2-3's. Never been mounted. Were $180, asking $100. Also used look bindings, $20. Phone 546-9700. tf11-1

1970 Rosemount ski boots, excellent condition, fastback model, size 10 w, asking only $90.00. Call Bill @ 549-6506. tf11-6

Tape Recorder - AKAI (Roberts) 3M reel to reel cross field heads, good shape, used seldom, need cash $90. 253-9878. tf11-1

1965 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cubbards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window. $550. 546-4555. 11-3

New Afganastan coat. 5'6" - 5'8". Originally $85, now 1/2 price, $42.50. Contact Ned at 615 Field or 546-6651. tf11-3

Repainted Larleton frame. New derailleurs, cables, levers. Completely overhauled & greased. $65. See Andrew, NWP Campaign Table at Hatch. tf11-3

Epiphone electric guitar, perfect condition, blonde finish, plush case, $275 or best offer. Call Don or Janice 549-0479. tf11-1

Super reverb, amp., Gretch Tenn. guitar, Standel p.a. & amp., Gregg 310 tape rec., Philco T.V. Call John 256-8855. tf11-1

Try these Shaklee products, new concept, toothpaste, proteinized shampoo, basic L - laundry granules, 100% biodegradable, Carol, 253-2841. tf11-6

Air Force parkas cheap. You'll help a student & save bucks. 584-2417. tf11-2

1972 Yamaha, $400, must sell, best buy in paper, only 6 mo. old, 4,000 miles, babied, save 400 dollars. Not like new, it is new! Call, 527-4093. tf11-1

2 175 x 14" snow tire Radial, used 1 winter, $30. Call 665-4719, keep trying. tf11-3

Guitar, 12 string Yamaha, FG-180, with extra set of strings $100. Call 665-4220. tf11-3

Hitachi car stereo cassette player, only 1 yr old, in like new cond., complete with lock mount, only $45. Call anytime 665-2949. tf11-3

Realistic 4 and 8 track tape player, complete with two speakers, looks like new, only $40. Call 665-2949. tf11-3

1971 Fender reverb amp, good for guitar and harp and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279. tf11-7

Metal skis, 205 C M, W Solomon 40 bndas, Henke buckle ski boots, hw, plus boot case & tree, $100. Will sell sep. Call George at 665-4140. tf11-3

Book: "Modern Portugese" for Portugese 126. Excellent condition. Free Port. & Eng. dictionary. Al Cook, 404 MacKemmie, 546-9816. tf11-7

1966 Chevy Impala, great condition, 4 new tires, low mileage, 283, auto., stereo tape deck, $600. Call Jeff 6-8913. tf11-3

1966 Ford Mustang, perfect running order, 6 cyl., auto., very economical, good interior, $385. Call Steve 6-8018. tf11-3

Snow tires, G78-14, w/w Sears Dynaglas, only 1500 miles of use, call 549-1617. tf11-3

AKAI Tape deck, Model X150-D, complete overhaul, like new, $100. Call 549-6425, ask for Kent. tf11-3

Toyota Corolla 1600, new radials, tach snows, driving lights, $DELETE

Toyota Corolla 1600, new radials, tach snows, driving lights, $1350. Call 549-6415 after 6:00. tf11-2

Pair of VW rims, coffee table and tool kit for cars. All good condition and reasonable. Call eves 253-7533. tf11-3

FOR RENT

Room for rent in Conway, Mass., country house, all privileges, call Kathy, 369-4411, 7 - 9 p.m. tf11-3

1 Bedrooms and 2 baths in Northampton. Now vacant. Call 584-3428 Skibiski, Realtors between 6:30 - 7:00 p.m. tf11-6

Ski people, bedrooms avail. in warm house near Mt. Snow, Vt. For Season. Fire place, etc. $300., covers all. Call 549-6128 Scott. tf11-7

PERSONAL

Helloooo!! 2-fingered typists masters typing, delivers fast! 24 hr campus service. Call 5-10 p.m. — 7 days a week. 665-4636. tf11-3

Sensuous-cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S, till noon, 256-6272 47 S. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

Hudson Biologist, met Thurs. 4 p.m. VW back seat on Rte. 9 to Campus Pizza. Meet Tues. 4, or Wed. 3:45 p.m. S.U. lobby. Spfld. Entomologist. 11-1

Adventure! Come fly with me. Respond Box 25 So. Deerfield, Mass. tf11-2

Happy Birthday Nancy B. Gee, a celebrity twice in 2 weeks. Love, your Fans. 11-1

Rural Gay Commune near Amherst wants 18 Beautiful Freak people. Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf11-14

Drew of Northampton. I enjoyed the other night. Please call — Don't be shy. Linda. tf11-2

A vicious team deserves praise! Good work Koalas! Thanks for everything, Spike & Rick. 11-1

Will Cathleen who worked at Hampden Snack on Sat. nite, please call Mike at 6-6219? Don't waste time! tf11-2

Happy Birthday K.O (skunk)! Hope it's a succient day. Cathy & Diana. tf11-1

EMPLOYMENT

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2040-MB, Port Angeles, Washington. tf11-22

INSTRUCTION

Join the march back to the Renaissance! Take recorder Lessons. Exp teacher, reasonable rates. Call Fred, John, 253-7126. tf11-2

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with heavy duty sway bar, koni shocks and semperet steel belted radials, all with less than 5,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic, $950. Call Pete at 253-2030 after 5 p.m. 11-1

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom apt. in Sunderland, avail. Dec. 1 $165/mo., will pay $50 toward 1st month's rent, lease required to June 30. Call 665-4918. tf11-6

Apartment available Presidential apt, 950 No. Pleasant St. apt. 14S. Two bedroom sc laundry in building. Interested contact C. Hayward 549-6085. tf11-1

HOME FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $23,000. Call 253-3534 after 5 p.m.

APARTMENT

Seeking 2 bedroom apt. Jan. 1. Puffton, call 253-3621 between 5 & 7. tf11-6

Notices

BAHA'I FAITH
Parallel with the industrial revolution occurred a spiritual revolution! What did the late 1800's hold? Come and hear, Rm. 811 at 8:00 tonight in CC.

COLD SELF CARE CENTERS
Subcommittee meets today, 1st Nov. at 10 p.m. in 178 CC. Members and observers to attend. Important- all areas must be represented.

ECOLOGY SEMINAR
Durland Fish, Grad student in Entomology, will speak on the population dynamics of the pitcher plant mosquito Wyeomyia Smithii, today at 3:00 in Fernald Hall.

FIVE COLLEGE FILM COMPANY
First meeting Wed., Nov. 1, Rm. 175 CC. Anyone interested in film production is invited.

INDEX FREE BOOKS
Leftover 1971 books available for Free in the Index office, S.U. 401.

HEART FUND WALK
Sign up Thurs., CC Concourse to pledge or walk to Cool Dick for the Heart Fund Sat. Nov. 4 at 10:30. Help yourself and others!

INTERNATIONAL ED
Meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Center for International Ed for all I.E. TPPC students interested in student teaching next semester.

KUNG FU CLUB
Class Thurs., 7:30, 151 Goessman. Girls welcome, new members welcome. 7:30 sharp!

KREATIVE KOSHER KOOKERY
We are compiling a Kosher Cookbook for students and need your recipes. Bring your own, your mother's and grandmother's favorite hashes and stuff to S.U. 420.

PERFORMERS
Performers wanted for Country Comfort Coffee House Sat. Nov. 4, 8 p.m. New ideas welcome. If interested call Sogo, Rm. 401, 545-2302.

PROGRAM COUNCIL
There will be a Program Council meeting tonight Wed., Nov. 1, at 6:00 in Student Activities Work Area. Please attend.

PSYCH GRAD SCHOOL INFO
Meeting to be held to discuss applying to graduate schools in Psychology on Thurs., Nov. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 231.

SCUBA CLUB
Classes tonight at 6:00 and 8:00 p.m. More plans for the Fla. voyage will be discussed. Deposits due.

SIMS
TM meditators; pick up membership cards at 409b S.U. office.

S.F. MOVIE
All Science Fiction Society members who wish to get in Free to see the THING Mon. night must bring their membership cards.

SPANISH MESA
A Spanish Mesa will be held today in Hampshire Dining Commons at 5:00 (regular food line). All interested in practicing Spanish welcome.

STRATEGY GAME CLUB
There will be a meeting in CC 805-809 at 6 p.m. tonight. New members welcome.

STUDENTS FOR MCGOVERN
Help make Senator McGovern President McGovern! Do your part in ending the Nixon Regime. Restore the quality of life; work and vote for McGovern.

STUDENTS FOR NAT REED
Meeting tonight, Wed. Nov. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at Amherst College Converse Hall assembly rm. Call Dave for ride 256-6632.

SWAP MEETING
There will be an important meeting for all committee members at 5:00 in Rm. 905-909 CC.

TERTULIA
Tertulia will be held this Wed. beginning at 2:30. Herter 4th floor lounge. Come practice your Spanish.

TONIGHT
Don Lee, black poet, speaks tonite on "Art and Politics", CC Aud., 8:00 p.m. Also appearing Dayvid Nelsun and Andre McLaughlin.

WILDLIFE SOCIETY
Conclave Committee meets at 6:30, Holdsworth 202 tonight. Films will be shown at 7:30 during the regular meeting.

LOST
White 1/2 Siamese kitten in Colonial Swiss Village Area for several weeks. If found, call Toby at 256-6179 or bring to 72 Colonial Village.

One Genetics Notebook, Orange. Call John, 6-4726 Chadbourne

Basset Hound female, black, tan, white answers to "Eloise". Please contact Pam and Peter McDonald at Riverglade Apts.

FOUND
A lightweight maroon sweater between v-lot and Alumni Stadium before the game Sat., Call 546-5381.

Black and White female kitten in the Quad. Sun. Call Carolyn, 112 Dwight, 5-2304.

Brass house key in front of Arnold House with 3-digit number on it. Call 6-8954.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ by SYDNEY OMARR ☆

Scorpio can retreat and take offensive almost simultaneously. The native of this zodiacal sign comes from behind, is a fierce competitor but also is willing to aid the underdog. These persons are mysterious and courageous. Among famous individuals born under Scorpio include Spiro Agnew and Sargent Shriver.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be trying to go in too many directions. Settle for course which leads to ultimate goal. Moderate pace. Older relative could be helpful if you are receptive. Don't permit pride to block progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hold reins on extravagance. Fine to purchase item which makes family more comfortable but don't smash budget. Be a comparison shopper and choose quality. Genuine bargain is available especially where luxury item is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't attempt to duck responsibility. You gain if you are aware of potential. You lose if you delegate duties, skip details. See situation in realistic light. Be patient. All facts have yet to be evaluated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain hint from Gemini message. What appears elusive is actually quite solid. Do some investigating. Older individual can aid if approached correctly. You won't get something for nothing. Know it and proceed accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you insist on chasing losing proposition, be prepared to pay price. Wise course is to finish, complete, tie loose ends and digest lessons learned in recent past. New horizons are about to open.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have more in your favor than is apparent. Refuse to be bluffed. Make others show their hands. Circumstances now provide you with good timing. Make new starts. Emphasize original approach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): One who taught you in past could make reappearance. You gain by sharing knowledge. Co-operate with Aquarian. Accent is on being quiet within. You have no need to keep up with those who run but don't know why.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid scattering forces. Check diet. Pace quickens but proper nutrition remains essential. Don't risk health for a lark. Friend who advocates otherwise is misinformed. Some of your fondest wishes can become realities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check fine points read between the lines and be aware of subtle nuances. Leo and Aquarius individuals could play prominent roles. One in authority may not have legal right to grant you special concession.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Change is featured in form of transformed ideas, travel, communication with one who had been incommunicado. Gemini and Virgo could play featured roles. Take careful steps, but do take them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Change in home condition is indicated. This comes as family member makes gesture of conciliation. Be diplomatic, receptive. Emotional responses are intensified. You find out how others actually feel.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Gather and evaluate information. Take nothing for granted. Aura of glamor, mystery is apt to prevail. Cut through clouds of pretense. See picture as it actually exists. Then you can do something about improving situation.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, have individual style, are willing to battle for principles and now you are getting ready for basic change. If single, you will soon marry, with March and December of 1973 spotlighted. Married or single, travel is much in picture.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Narrow openings
6 Foot lever
11 Injury
12 A state
14 Printer's measure
15 Clayey earth
17 Whale
18 Swiss river
20 Natives of Latvia
22 Expire
23 Heavenly body
25 Leaks through
27 Hypothetical force
28 Warm
30 Nuclei
32 Sacred image
34 Portico
35 Broadened
38 Satiates
41 Paid notice
42 Nerve networks
44 Tissue
45 Drink slowly
47 Babylonian hero
49 Catch (slang)
50 European
52 Omit from pronunciation
54 Symbol for tellurium
55 Stationary part of machine
57 Fixative
59 Antered animals
60 Go in

DOWN
1 Lawmaking body
2 Legal seal (abbr.)
3 Lubricate
4 Instrument
5 Dirks
6 Billboards
7 Teutonic deity
8 A month (abbr.)
9 Matured
10 Medicinal preparation
11 Smallest number
13 Wants
16 Walk
19 Swift
21 Blemishes
24 One borne
26 Ermine
29 Recipient of gift
31 Made of oats
33 Missives
35 Insects
36 Imbeciles
37 Face of watch
39 Click beetle
40 Sword
43 Herb
46 Real estate map
48 Algerian seaport
51 Greek letter
53 Dine
56 King of Bashan
58 French article

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

S	P	I	N		A	L	T		M	U	S	E
W	A	N	E		R	O	E		A	S	I	A
A	R	K		P	A	I	N	S		A	T	T
Y	T		E	A	R	N		A	T		U	S
	N	O	R	I	A		R	I	A	T	A
H	E	R	O	D		C	O	L		A	T	E
O	R	B	S		H	A	T		P	I	L	E	R
P	S	I		S	A	P		S	E	N	S	E
		T	E	L	L			S	T	E	T
A	M		M	I		A	T	O	N		O	F
L	A	P		P	E	T	E	R		O	V	A
P	R	E	D	E	T	E	R	M	I	N	E	S
S	C	A	R		A	S	E		T	E	N	T

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Doug Fidler

Rating the Ratings

Support for the rating of teams in various sports has always been at two extremes. Those who are ranked love the rating system. Those who are not ranked detest it. Alumni put extreme pressure on the coaching staff if their alma mater's team is not ranked where they think it should be. Whole seasons are based upon these ratings-does State U get to go to the Mudpie Bowl or does City College play the big post-season tourney?

Although most know that the ratings actually mean nothing, it is still very important to the students, alumni, followers of the team- and especially the players themselves. It gives them something to talk about-to be proud of.

The UMass campus is alive with talk of Pennington, Metallo, Schubert, et al. It should be, as the Minutemen squad is the number one team in New England and number two team in the East. Ratings are very important to the Aggies. what with talks of a great football team and a possible (?) bowl bid.

There is one other fall team sport on campus. The soccer team, under the guidance of first year head coach Gerry Redmond, is making great strides back into the N.E. soccer picture after graduation had depleted one of the better teams in the area of talent. The booters have won four of their seven games, which is not too bad considering the large number of young players on the starting team. They are 2-2 in the Yankee Conference, and have a remote (in fact a way out) chance of gaining a tie for the league championship.

UMass pulled off what has to be considered one of the biggest upsets in the New England soccer scene last Saturday with a well-played 3-1 victory over fourth-ranked in New England UConn. The Huskies, who were then sporting a 6-1-1 record, were also 4-0 in the conference, with just UMass and URI in their way for a YanCon championship. Then came the Aggies. But the victory means nothing if you can not continue to win, and the Redmond-men are preparing for their next "big" game against Vermont in Burlington on Saturday morning.

The Minutemen were confident going into the UConn game because the team they had beaten in pre-season scrimmage, Amherst, had tied the Huskies 1-1. According to the Oct. 23, 1972 New England Rating Release, "Amherst moved back into the 'top ten' for the first time in a few weeks, landing eighth, after tying Connecticut."

So, the Redmond-men were looking forward to this week's release after beating the UConns so decisively. They were denied, however, seeing their team's name in the standings. Not only in the "top ten", but in the standings, period. The locals had not received even one vote! To top that off, the release of Oct. 30, 1972 reports that "...Connecticut, after losing to Brown and being upset by Mass., slipped to fifth place."

Does all this sound right to you? It certainly does not to me. Bad enough that our UMies were not even rated after their fine victory, but Connecticut dropped only one place after losing two straight games.

Still another interesting fact is that five of the top ten teams on the list are represented on the ranking board of 12 coaches. UMass, in fact, is not represented on any of the several New England Intercollegiate Soccer League committes, while BU, for example, is on three. It is the largest academic institution in New England and it has never been invited to sit on one of the committees. "Invited" is the key word; the Board is a self-perpetuating unit and, for some reason, does not want UMass represented on it. The whole situation stinks of politics.

I am truly interested in knowing upon what criteria membership on this board is based. I would also like to know why the board is not on rotating system, where every school has a chance to be on the board. Obviously, something has to be done for justice's sake.

This is not just another "sour grapes" story. It is based upon fact that is readily available just by looking at the releases that Coach Redmond tacks up on his Soccer Bulletin Board. Amherst, BU, and UConn, all of whom UMass has beaten somewhere along the way are ranked, while the Minutemen are not at all. A team such as UNH, which has a good team, in fact 3-1 in the YanCon, just barely makes the standings. Don Heyliger, the Wildcat coach, is not on the rating board either.

It appears that someting is indeed wrong with the manner in which the board performs its duties. The members should stop scratching their own backs, and start looking at the facts. Who beat whom is such a "good" fact. UMass defeated UConn. Albeit that one game does not a great team make, it still seems that UMass should have received some acclamation.

Old Sox Swapped

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies bolstered a paper thin pitching staff Tuesday with the acquisition of starters Jim Lonborg and Ken Brett and two relievers from the Milwaukee Brewers for third baseman Don Money, pitcher Billy Champion and a minor league infielder.

Phillies' general manager Paul Owens announced the seven-player swap, the first in what he hopes will be a wholesale shakeup of the Phillies who were last in the National League East with the second worst record in baseball last season.

In addition to Lonborg and Brett, the Phillies obtained relievers Ken Sanders and Earl Stephenson. Owens threw in good-field, no-hit John Vukovich from the Phillies' Eugene, Ore., farm team in the Pacific Coast League to sweeten the deal for the American League Brewers.

Gaylord Perry, Cy Young Winner

NEW YORK (AP)-Gaylord Perry, rangy Cleveland righthander accused by opponents of throwing spitballs, was named winner Tuesday of the 1972 Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the American League.

The 34-year-old Indian ace had a 24-16 record and an earned run average of 1.92, second to the league's best, the 1.91 by Louis Tiant of Boston.

In winning the Cy Young Award, Perry duplicated the feat of his brother, Jim, who was voted the AL's top pitcher at Minnesota in 1970. That was the year Gaylord and Jim became the first brother combination in major league history to win 20 games each.

Perry narrowly edged Wilbur Wood, Chicago White Sox knuckleballer, in the vote of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

He received nine first place votes from the 24-man committee, two from each AL city, and finished with a total of 64 points compared with 58 for Wood.

Under the voting system, five points are awarded for a first place vote, three for second, one for third. Wood was picked first on seven ballots. No one pitcher was named on all 24 ballots.

Perry's achievement was remarkable because it came with a losing club. The Indians finished fifth in the AL's Eastern Division.

The tall righthander won one-third of Cleveland's games. He pitched 29 complete games in 40 starts and never missed a turn.

Besides Perry and Wood, four other pitchers received first place votes for the Cy Young trophy. They were Mickey Lolich of Detroit, who got three and a total of 27 points for third place; Jim "Catfish" Hunter of Oakland, two, for 26 points; Jim Palmer of Baltimore, two, 20 points and Tiant, one, 16 points.

Harriers Home in Tri-Meet

By WALT POWERS

The UMass Cross-Country team, fresh from its victory on Saturday in the Yankee Conference championship meet, will take on Central Connecticut, and Holy Cross in a tri-meet this afternoon at three o'clock. This race will be run at home, and starts down by WoPE.

The two teams should provide some fair, to excellent competition. H.C. finished fourth in the conference meet on Saturday. Their record includes losses to mutual opponents Providence, UConn., and B.C.

The team will be led by Freshman Niel Coleman, who finished twelfth in the conference, and last year's No. 1 runner, Dennis McCormack, who was right behind him in thirteenth. In their last meeting, UMass won by a big margin.

In Central Connecticut, UMass will be facing one of the strongest small-college teams in the East. In Saturday's Eastern Championship meet, they finished second to Providence. They boast an 11-3 record that includes victories over St. Johns, UConn., and Holy Cross.

Cent. Conn. will rely mostly on the strength of their two frontrunners. In Steve Ellis and Bob Lees, they've got one of the best one-two punches in New England. Ellis was a close third in the Eastern Meet and Lees took sixth in that race. Other than these two runners, the team isn't especially strong, and their time split is more than twice that of UMass. Last year, UMass beat Cent. Conn. 15-40 in what Coach Ken O'Brien called "One of our best meets of the year." How does he rate Cent. Conn. this year? "Better than UConn., on the strength of better frontrunners, and not quite as strong as U.R.I. Definitely in the New England top seven."

All three teams are coming off hard races on Saturday, and are preparing for important meets this weekend. So it doesn't figure to be an especially fast race. Only Tom Wilson, Paul Segersten, Mike Conlin, Pete Crisci, and Mike Roy will run in the varsity race for UMass. Conlin, Roy, and Wilson have already won berths on the starting seven for the New England J.V. championships. For them, the race will primarily be a competitive, learning experience. Peter Crisci recently won the seventh spot on the starting varsity roster. He did not run in the conference meet.

Why such a small squad for this race? Ken O'Brien was clearly thinking ahead, when he reiterated his strategy. "I've said all along that we would train for the important meets. It worked for us in the Conference Championships. At this point in the season, a third-week race like this is just an aggravation."

The toughest competition of the meet could conceivably come in the junior varsity race. There are four spots up for grabs on the starting J.V. championship squad, and eighteen runners will compete for them. O'Brien's final decision on who makes the team, will be based largely on the results of this race. The J.V. team currently owns a record of 5 and 2.

Court Favors Owners

WASHINGTON (AP) - A National Labor Relations Board hearing officer recommended Tuesday that National Football League owners be ordered to rescind an automatic fine of $200 against any player leaving the bench during a fight on the playing field.

Administrative law judge Marvin J. Welles, who heard the case, said the provision for automatic fines is an unfair labor practice, a charge brought by the NFL Players Association.

However, after a hearing in Minneapolis, Welles said the Players Association failed to prove its contention that the owners were guilty of unfair labor practice when they refused to bargain over the use of artificial turf.

Either side may appeal the recommendation within 20 days to the full five-man NLRB. If there is no appeal, the recommendation of the administrative law judge becomes final.

Yesterday's sports head featured Roberto Clemente of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

No-Names Named

NEW YORK (AP) - Miami's "no-name" defense keeps making a name for itself-even though the players don't want one.

"We love that 'no-name' business," says the Dolphins' veteran middle linebacker, Nick Buoniconti. "We hope nobody hangs a label like 'Fearsome Foursome' or 'Purple People Eaters' on the front four or a tag on the entire defense."

Well, the defense has a tag of its own now. For its latest heroics in a season full of them-Sunday's smothering of the Baltimore Colts that paved the way to a 23-6 victory and kept Miami unbeaten at the halfway mark of the season-the Dolphins' entire unit was named collectively Tuesday the Defensive Player of the Week in the National Football League by The Associated Press.

'HELLOOOO!!
2 - FINGERED TYPISTS.
MASTERS TYPING DELIVERS FAST
ANYTHING - ANYTIME
24 Hr. Campus Service includes proofreading
CALL 665-4636

WEAR HOUSE
COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER
201 N. PLEASANT ST.

THE CHOPPING BLOCK

Where S — —, Dianne, Beth, Carlo, and Guy will go to your head. If it has anything to do with hair, they can do it — perfectly . . . for both men and women. 26 Main St., Amherst. Mon. - Fri. 9 to 7:30; Sat. 9 to 4. 253-9293 & 253-9271.

Our staff is available for free hair care classes or demonstrations any evening for men's or women's groups.

Also 807 Maple Road, Longmeadow 867-9414

OK, LET'S BE TRUTHFUL ABOUT IT, so, first look at the top of this picture and see if you can identify yourself in the crowd. Then, if you still have some time take a look at Peil Pennington (11) and Paul Metallo (44) executing one of the 83 offensive plays UMass ran at UConn on Saturday. (MDC Photo by Ken Sulin)

JV Booters Whip Boston State

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

The JV booters had an easier than anticipated time against Boston State yesterday afternoon as they came up with five goals in the second half on route to a 6-0 whipping of the Staties. In beating Boston State, the JV Minutemen have now won four straight, going into Friday's contest against Springfield.

The ice-breaking goal, which turned out to be all the JVs needed was tallied by Bob Snow as he put in a rebound off of a shot by Scot Smoller.

The Minutemen came out for the second half with their scoring shoes on and tallied five times in the half.

Gary Lieberman started off the jamboree as he scored, assisted by Ron Plumb. Bill Belcher made it 3-0 as he was set up by Tom Corbin. Ron Plump tallied next, finishing off a pass from Brian Maxfield and the Minutemen were solidly in command 4-0.

With about 22 minutes remaining and with a four goal cushion, Coach Jack Berryman cleared his bench and let his subs show what they could do against Stage. The substitutes performed admirably as they won their part of the ballgame 2-0 on goals by Jeff Nelson and Bob Doyle, with Doyle assisting on the first and Tom Corbin on the second. All this spells an easy Minutemen triumph of 6-0.

The Minutemen move on to face Springfield College Friday afternoon, when they will face a team which a UMass soccer squad has never beaten. No, never. Last year, in the best effort ever by a UMass team, the varsity tied Springfield 2-2.

Could this be the year for the Minutemen to break the Springfield hex?

Come out and see on Friday afternoon at 2:45 on the soccer field across from Boyden.

UMass Still No. 1 in AP NE Pigskin Poll

Undefeated Massachusetts, coming off an easy 49-16 victory over prime Yankee Conference challenger Connecticut, has taken a firm hold on first place in The Associated Press New England College football poll by taking all 18 first place votes.

The Minutemen, 6-0 on the season, widened their lead over second place Dartmouth and third place Harvard by picking up the four first place votes they did not receive last week.

Dartmouth, 4-0-1, got all but four second place votes following last Saturday's 21-21 tie with Harvard, which left the Crimson with a 3-1-1 record and a firm hold on third place.

Yale, which lost its first game of the season Saturday to Cornell, 24-13, maintained fourth place while idle Boston College, 2-4, stayed in the poll's fifth slot.

The remainder of the top 10 included Holy Cross, Bridgeport, Vermont, Boston University and Middlebury in that order.

The only newcomer to the poll is BU, which owns a 2-5 record after successive victories over Temple and Rhode Island. Connecticut dropped from the top 10 after is resounding defeat to

1.	Massachusetts 6-0	186
2.	Dartmouth 4-0-1	159-1/2
3.	Harvard 3-1-1	143-1/2
4.	Yale 4-1	130
5.	Boston College 2-4	108
6.	Holy Cross 3-2-1	89
7.	Bridgeport 7-0	56
8.	Vermong 3-3	50
9.	Boston University 2-5	27
10.	Middlebury 6-0	23

Others receiving votes: Amherst, Colby, Connecticut, Maine, Northeastern, Williams.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Hal Greer Asked To Retire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hal Greer, one of the all-time greats in the National Basketball Association, is considering retiring as a player to scout and work with younger players of the Philadelphia 76ers, the team said Tuesday.

Greer has been told by 76ers' Coach Roy Rubin that the team is going to go this season with younger players. Rubin has been using No. 1 draft choice Freddy Boyd to direct the 76ers' offense.

A 15-year veteran, Greer has conferred with the 76ers on a possible settlement of his contract should he accept Rubins' suggestion to retire. He signed last season for two years at a reported $135,000 per year. The contract also made him an assistant coach to then coach Jack Ramsay.

The 36-year-old Greer is the fifth leading scorer in pro basketball history with 21,410 points. He did not play in Saturday's defeat by Milwaukee, and last week saw limited service in the loss to Cleveland.

MDC SPORTS HOTLINE 5-0344

Al Key Tomorrow

IM Notice

Attention Volleyballers

A volleyball clinic, sponsored by the intramural office in cooperation with the Volleyball Club, will be held tonight at 8:00 p.m. in Boyden's main gym. All volleyball officials who did not attend last night are required to attend and intramural volleyball teams are strongly urged to have a representative in attendance at one of the clinics.

Rule clarifications as well as playing methods will be discussed and demonstrated.

Bill Ballou

"Sour Grapes"

It isn't enough that for years the Boston press has pretended UMass doesn't exist. And it isn't enough that Boston College's sportswriters get their kicks dumping on the "Mass Aggies."

No, it isn't enough.

Now the campus newspaper at the University of Connecticut is dumping on UMass sports.

In his column "Campus Sports", a UConn sportswriter named Dave Solomon has this to say in regard to the UMass soccer team (which beat UConn 3-1 on Saturday): "The reason stems from the fact that Connecticut still hasn't learned to consistently beat the weaker teams, which the UMass Minutemen must be considered.

"No team can be emotionally up for every game. But that is certainly no excuse for losing. Hardly a Husky booter would deny that the Minutemen really had very little as far as soccer talent was concerned."

This isn't all. The game story, by Bob Vacon, includes a quotation from UConn soccer coach Joe Morrone that goes: "I personally feel that UMass is the poorest team in terms of both personnel and style of play that we've faced this year."

Now the coach has every right to his opinion. But just what is his opinion? UMass soccer coach Gerry Redmond says that after the game Morrone came over to him and the UMass soccer team and gave them a "well done." Either Vacon is a liar or Morrone is two-faced.

What about Solomon and his opinions about the quality of UMass soccer?

Redmond doesn't particularly agree with them. "Rubbish", he says. "As far as our personnel being poor goes, I've seen a lot of soccer in my career and I can say that there isn't a finer forward in the Yankee Conference than Tom Coburn." Redmond also praised people like Jim Vollinger, Bob Merrill, Carl Vercollone and Ed Doherty. Redmond is not a man who lavishes praise upon those unworthy of it. This team does have talent.

And as Redmond says, "if we're so bad and our style of play so poor, then it doesn't speak too highly of the UConn team for us to beat them 3-1."

It wasn't the UConn team that said these things, just like it wasn't the Boston College players who called us the Aggies in the Erving days and who still don't think UMass is a good football team. It's the sportswriters. I guess the question is why do they say what they do?

Maybe people just don't like UMass. I don't see why they wouldn't. We don't have a classic history like the Yankees or Celtics that would give us a reputation of always winning and saying "Ha, Ha."

Maybe the guys who say this stuff are simply stupid. The Boston College "Eagles Eye" had to be somewhat dense to write disparaging remarks about the UMass football team after having the same strategy backfire in the Erving days. And, after all, isn't this "sour grapes" stuff kind of bush.

Redmond thinks it might be "Jealousy. UMass is the biggest institution in the state and has had a record of good sports teams and maybe some people resent this. But Connecticut, of course, doesn't come from the state so that can't be their problem. Maybe the fact that we've beaten them 4-0 and 5-2 over the last two seasons has something to do with it."

Maybe jealousy is the answer. For the sake of those at the UConn newspaper and the Eagles Eye, I hope it isn't. Because the 3-1 soccer upset and this year's football team aren't the only successes UMass is going to have in sports. These cry babies are going to have to live with the bad as well as the good and not search for tired phrases like "poorest personnel" and "those Aggies" to explain their problems.

4 Field Hockey Stars Named

By AVIS YUNI

Four members of the UMass Girls Varsity Hockey team placed on the Northeast 2nd team at the Northeast College Tournament at Yale held October 28-29. They will go on to compete in the Northeast tournament on November 11th and 12th in Northfield, Mass. for a chance to go on to the National tournament to be held in California.

Although no UMass team members were selected for the Northeast 1st team, on the 2nd team will be Dolly Lambdin, a Senior Physical Education major from Pennsylvania as left wing; Roberta Garr, a Junior Honors major from Dedham, Mass. as center forward; Sue Chapman, a Senior Physical Education major from Oakdale, Mass. as left full-back; and Lori Nazar, a Sophomore Physical Education major from Western Mass. as right fullback.

While Jennifer Edminster, a Freshman Physical Education major from Orange, Mass., was not good enough for the Northeastern 1st or 2nd team, stated Coach Jane Farr, she was good enough to be named for Honorable Mention. As such, if someone on the 1st or 2nd team becomes sick or injured prior to the Northeast tournament and can't play, she will step in for her.

At the Northeast tournament there will be 18 participating teams representing the various field hockey associations in this area of the country. Each association, such as the Northeast College Field Hockey Association to which UMass belongs, will have previously held its own tournament such as the one at Yale to choose its best 22 players from its participating colleges to compose a 1st and 2nd team. In Northfield, these teams will each play three games, and the best 44 players will be selected. The following weekend these 44 will play again and the top 22 will be chosen for the Northeast 1st and 2nd teams that go to California and participate in the National tournament.

Last weekend at Yale, ten minutes into the UMass game against the University of Bridgeport, Connecticut, Wendy Alpaugh, "our star player" stated Coach Farr, injured her knee. She was unable to play the rest of the weekend and could not be chosen for either the 1st or 2nd team since they didn't know whether or not she'd be able to play. Her knee is being checked by a doctor and provided that it is better, Wendy has been told that she may go the second weekend with the top 44 from the Northeast tournament to be considered for the nationals, Coach Farr stated.

The Coach explained that Wendy has been on the Northeast 1st team for the last two years. This fall the Northeast team held some matches and she played with them. On the basis of how she's played this fall, the selectors are giving her an opportunity to make the Northeast 1st and 2nd team that will go to the nationals.

The UMass Varsity team finished its season with its game Thursday, October 26th against Smith College and its three games at Yale this past weekend against the University of Bridgeport, Yale, and Southern Connecticut which count in its season record. Beating Smith College 4-0 (Wendy Alpaugh and Roberta Garr each scored one goal and Jennifer Edminster two goals), the University of Bridgeport 2-0 (Jennifer Edminster and Roberta Garr each scored one goal), Yale 4-0 (Roberta Garr and Wendy Small each scored one goal and Jennifer Edminster two goals), and losing in a rematch with Southern Connecticut 1-0, the Varsity team ended its season with an 8 win-3 loss-1 tie record.

Coach Farr stated that the team dominated in each of its last three shut-out games. Of the loss to Southern Connecticut, she said it was "probably one of the best games of the whole tournament. We had a lot of scoring opportunities. They got a goal in when we didn't." They both missed many times, she pointed out, but "it was an excellent game. We played very well as a team in all four closing games." Coach Farr feels that the loss of Wendy Alpaugh in the game against the University of Bridgeport hurt in the game against Southern Connecticut since she couldn't play and "she is our leading scorer."

The game against Smith College was the last one for the JV team. They won 2-1, with Kathy O'Neil scoring both goals and finished their season with a 7 win-1 loss record.

Summing up the season, Coach Farr stated the "JV's had an exceptional season. They could have played some of the Varsity teams and beat them. I think the Varsity team also played well.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

Don't cry, please don't cry. I'm not worth crying over...oh, you're laughing.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 39 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1972

Black poet and author Don L. Lee (on the right) stressed the need for Blacks in this country to define themselves in terms of a Pan-African identity. Lee's speech in the Campus Center was preceded by poetry readings from Andre McGlaughlin and Dayvid Nelsun (at and left). (MDC Photos by Bill Beggs)

Lee: Need For Black Pan-African Identity

By DON BISHOP

The need for Blacks living in this country to define themselves in a "positive", "an-African" framework has the theme stressed by Black poet and author Don L. Lee in a DVP sponsored lecture last night in the Campus Center Auditorium.

In his speech, attended by about 100 people, Lee also placed special emphasis on the education experience for Blacks in living in the US, the question of effectiveness of blacks as a minority group, and the role of Blacks as college students.

Lee was preceded by poetry readings from Black poet and poetess: Dayvid Nelsun and Andre McLaughlin. Nelsun is a newly designated Program Advisor in the Campus Center and Ms. McLaughlin a graduate student.

Lee began by stating the need for Blacks to define themselves in a positive manner. This is done according to Lee by recognizing that "we are an African people living in a white European country."

As Pan-Africans, Blacks in this country must relate to the culture and heritage of Black Africa and resist "the colonizing nature of the white European culture we are living in." Pan-Africanism must necessarily be concerned then with survival for American born Blacks.

Lee stated that "We have a common past, we have a common presence now and we will have a common future."

Lee stressed the fact that "Black nationalism is not racism." This was explained in context of Jewish nationalism and Italian nationalism not being regarded as such.

Black nationalism to Lee means a serious movement towards controling the controllable. This would include such things as school systems, police departments, etc. In a worldwide context, Black nationalism means among other things, getting back land which is controlled now by white Europeans.

Lee also addressed himself to the question of why Blacks have been ineffective as a minority in comparison to other ethnic minorities. He saw this as largely coming from the inability of Blacks in this country to develop a "nationalistic consciousness" such as that possessed by the Jewish community. He felt this nationalistic consciousness can only come through a serious commitment and dedication by the Black African community.

The educational experience for Blacks was given considerable attention by Lee. He stated that a large part of the disunity of Blacks in the US stems from the influence of the "white educational system". It has been feeding Blacks the white cultural system, which comes into conflict with that system coming from Africa.

To create an "African mind in this white setting" Lee feels that Blacks must begin at the primary educational level, in teaching their children. In this way Black Africans will "not arrive in college with no purpose."

Lee feels that the whole process of revolutionary change will not be an "overnight operation". The biggest "asset" in this struggle will be the current generation of Black college students. While he stressed the importance of serious Black studies in the college experience of Blacks, Lee gave particular emphasis to the necessity of Black students taking their education experience as an absolutely serious business.

The 4 elements needed in this "Black education dealing with Black people" according to Lee, are 1) work (long and hard); 2) study (including mistakes of the past); 3) creativity (putting work and study into practice and 4) organization.

After his speech, Lee read some of his own poetry.

On The Inside:

•Senate Vs. Finn see page three

•Ham Radio see page two

•Ezra Pound Dies see page five

Come In Ecuador, Come In Ecuador...

By CAROLYN CALDWELL

"HC1UM, this is W1PUO," is a voice from UMass heard in an underdeveloped area of Ecuador.

It is part of a weekly conversation made possible through the Amateur Radio Assocation with equipment running on three times the power of WMUA according to club officer Ladd Hull.

Bill Smith, a graduate student from the School of Education finds "the radio setup almost invaluable" to an experimental educational program in rural Ecuador.

"The telephone is very difficult and very expensive," he said. "Letters take from 10 days to never. Radio is a reliable form of communication that we use not usually for business but to chat to get the feeling of what goes on there and what goes on here."

Just what is going on? "We are working on a year long experimental project designed to develop new educational materials for use in the rural areas of Ecuador," Smith said.

"Our job is to come up with the bright ideas here in Massachusetts," Smith said. "Then they are transformed to Ecuador where our staff pilot tests the program."

One such idea took the form of Monopoly in a game called "Hacienda" (Spanish for plantation). "Hacienda attempts to show factors influencing Indian life on a hacienda," Smith said. "Instead of buying a hotel on Boardwalk, the game includes decisions about fertilizing, irrigating and using insecticides on the land."

Smith described the materials used as "simulations, educational games and novellas" - local comic books with photographs.They are designed for "basic literacy, mathematics, problem solving and self image".

"The rural people have a need of an increased self image," Smith said. "Rural people tend to downgrade themselves and need more positive self confidence."

As an example, Smith talked about one community in which casette tape recorders were introduced. People recorded themselves and played it over the radio. "This gave them the satisfaction of heaing themselves rather than ome unknown voice."

Smith called this first year of the Ecuador Informal Education Project "very experimental" because it involves testing the feasibility of material not tried before on rural people. "Adults and children participate together," Smith said. "The people are either out of school or school is not available at the moment. "The classes are held in evenings and run by locals who are selected by the community at large," Smith said.

Smith explained that once the material is in a community a member of the staff will visit and see how the material is being used. In one community a game like Spill & Spell "with Spanish letters on large wooden blocks was introduced. A month later four or five games were made. It is simple to make - just chop out the wood and make the letters."

"We will move out of the experimental stage when we have finished the evaluation effort," Smith said. "We want to know what kinds of things they learn and to try to measure the spread effects of materials."

The Ecuador Informal Education Project is on a contract with USAID and the Ministry of Education in Ecuador. Dr. David Evans of the Center for International Education is the principal investigator.

His excellency Raja Tridev Roy, speaking before a Campus Center gathering, termed the Pakistanis POW's in India "emotional". (Photo by Bill Beggs)

Pakistani POW's Termed 'Emotional' By Roy

By JEANNETTE MARTINEAU

His Excellency, Raja Tridev Roy, Chief of the aboriginal Chakma tribe of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, (now in Bangla Desh), described the problem of the 90 thousand Pakistani POW's in India as "emotional".

Speaking to a gathering yesterday afternoon at the Campus Center, the Minister For Minorities and Tourism in the Pakistan Cabinet said that: "Pakistan wants peace and amity with the people of India and the former State of India now Bangla Desh."

"The people of Pakistan say that we have been dismembered by external aggression...not by referendum or secession...With regard to Bangla Desh we say let us forget the past. We are sorry for the mistakes of the last regime. We have offered a million tons of rice to Bangla Desh, which was spurned.

"We are trying through the U.N. to bring about peace in the subcontinent." The question of the admission of Bangla Desh into the United Nations was vetoed in the Security Council by China. Roy felt that this meant that "the right of self-determination was being denied".

Roy said that rather than bringing the question of the POW's to the United Nations, that Pakistan would try to sort it out with India and avoid a floor debate.

Roy's position, at this point is described as "unique...in our world: a Buddhist in an Islamic republic, a tribal chief in a nation-state, himself a cabinet minister in one country, separated from his home, his family and his people, all of whom now dwell in what for him is a hostile country."

Elaborating on the governmental structure in Pakistan, he said: "It is a bond of love rather than of power. We try to serve the people rather than rule the people."

Roy described Pakistan's relation with the United States as "excellent. Some countries accuse the United States of leaning towards Pakistan. Pakistan's relations with Russia have improved. But if the U.S. is tilting toward Pakistan, Russia is more than tilting towards India. And Pakistan's relations with China are exceedingly good."

Accroding to Roy, the Soviet Union is building a steel mill in Carachi, but he elaborated that there are not a great number of foreign investors in the area. "Pakistan is eager for foreign investors...to get the economy back on a steady footing." Roy also encouraged tourism in Pakistan.

Job Possibilities Slim

By BRIAN COYNE

With the decrease of funds from the state budget and the Federal College Work-Study Program, the chances of a student finding a job through the Financial Aid Office at Whitmore this year are slim.

Mr. Gerald Miller, a staff assistant in charge of student employment at the Financial Aid Office, said that of the approximately 5,000 students actively looking for jobs on this campus, about 2,600 are employed.

A letter that the office sends in response to incoming students desiring jobs reads, "Presently we cannot assist you in obtaining part-time employment at the University of Massachusetts. Most jobs that are available to students are usually taken at the beginning of each academic year by students who have already held these positions or by upperclassmen who know where to look for the jobs...We do not encourage you to believe that there will be part-time employment available to you when you come to the University."

Mr. Miller emphasized, though, that he does not do all the hiring of students on campus. Places like the Dining Commons and the Campus Center have their own trust funds which they use to pay employees. They hire many of their employees themselves. Also, individual departments and professors with Federal grants employ people independently.

Most of the employed students have jobs at the DC, CC, library, day care center, computer center and the physical plant, or as dormitory counselors, professor assistants and intramural officials. The legal minimum wage is $1.85 per hour. The average student earns between $2.00-2.15 per hour.

The criteria for selecting students for jobs at the office is based mainly on financial need, but occasionally a particular skill or experience is required to fill a job. In that case, Mr. Miller said he usually advertises for someone on the bulletin board located in the office.

VOLUNTEER
Call
Outreach
545-2021

Ms. Welch Calls For Support

The chairperson of the Young Socialist Alliance (YSA) called for student support of the Socialist Party, in a speech delivered last night at UMass.

Feminist Delphine Welch spoke to fifteen students about the benefits to be gained through the election of a Socialist presidential candidate, Linda Jenness or Andrew Pulley, and through the conversion of our capitalist government to a Socialist system.

YSA supports the "female" liberation movement, said Ms. Welch, and if a socialist system of government were initiated the demands of women would be met. Women would be much freer in many areas of their lives. They would not have to play the dual role of career woman and homemaker, as there would be "masses" of child care centers. She added that women would have greater control over their own bodies and reproductive systems. Abortions would be available for any woman wanting one.

Ms. Welch discussed the history of the female liberation movement, pointing out major advancements, such as the gain of the right to vote and the start of the trend toward legalized abortion. She said, however, that women can only gain equal rights through a complete change in government, from capitalism to socialism.

Ms. Welch said that in our present capitalist system 2.2 per cent of the population is controlling 86 per cent of the nation's wealth. Women of low status, who labor for free in the home and for very low wages on the job, said Ms. Welch, are beneficial to the small, wealthy, ruling class.

YSA supports the immediate and total withdrawal of troops from Vietnam, the Black and Chicano liberation movement, and revolutionary struggles around the world, including Vietnam, Ireland, and Palestine, said Ms. Welch.

Heart Disease Leads

By SUSAN HABEEB

Do you know what causes 54% of the deaths in the United States today? It Kills more than Cancer, accidents and all other causes combined. You should have a hint by now-It's the very popular Heart and Blood Vessel diseases. One out of every 8 Americans are afflicted with diseases in this category. The cost of medical treatment annually for the purpose of treating these diseases is estimated in excess of $17.3 billion! Are you shocked? Even more important-would you like to help?

You can play an important part in contributing to the cause. What are you doing Saturday November 4 between say 10 and 12 or 1? Probably nothing that important, right? Well, how about taking a walk? This walk will not only be beneficial to your health but also to your peace of mind. This walk is the 10-mile Heart Fund Walk. You will be joined by 50 to 100 other students who are also enthusiastic about helping the Heart Fund.

The Walk will start at the Infirmary at 10:00 and will go the 10 miles to the Cooley Dickenson Hospital in Northampton. Every mile or so there will be a stand for any possible first aid needs or to relax for a few minutes. Free Coffee will be offered at Howard Johnson's on the way and fruit and fruit drinks will be a contribution of Poleto's Fruit Stand.

Students who are walking are trying to get sponsors to pay a certain amount of money for each mile walked. So, if you can't make it Saturday why not pledge a little money for the Heart Fund?

The Walk is being sponsored by Gamma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Phi Omega. They have a table in the Campus Center for any interested hikers or pledgers to sign up.

Remember-In order to fight this #1 killer we need research and that takes a lot of money and a lot of time. Which are you willing to part with?

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0721 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

THE JEANS STORE
LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE
MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS
ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women
WEAR-HOUSE
201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)
Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706

Finn speaks. (Photo by Bill Beggs)

Senate, Finn Clash

By BOB SCHEIER

The Student Senate grilled an aide to Governor Francis . W. Sargent and tabled several important issues in last night's meeting.

Chester Finn, a special assistant to the governor on education, told a mostly skeptical senate that the state's budget crisis, trends in educational reform, and a possible reorganization of the state government could work together to improve education.

Finn said the governor had made many recommendations for educational reform based on the Carnegie Commission report on higher education, and asked to senate for suggestions.

He defended Sargent's rejection of the Amherst campus' proposed $98 million budget for fiscal 1974, adding that Massachusetts had reached a point most other states either have or will come to soon: "After a period of intensive growth, the state is out of money."

The problem could be eased, he added, by raising taxes, diverting money from other state programs, or raising the tuition and other fees paid by students.

"Taxes are unpopular," he said, "tuition increases you know about, and if you divert money from other state programs the question is divert the funds from what?"

"Does the Governor take us for fools?" he asked senator Nick Apostola. "He clouds the issue of educational reform in quotes from the Carnegie Commission. He doesn't seem to understand that innovative education costs more, not less."

"It's easy to undertake educational reform that costs more," Finn replied. "It's harder to stop doing old things that are obsolete or ineffective, and start new things."

In response to a question on whethr Gov. Sargent had any specific plans for scholarship aid for black students, Finn said he would not make a "racial distinction" in discussing scholarship aid.

At one point during the question and answer period after the speech, former senator Matt Tackeff, a conservative, walked up to Finn and chanted, "One, two, three, four, Sargent is a liberal whore."

Finn made no comment.

The Senate, in other important business, tabled amendments to the new Student Union-Campus Center Board of Governors which had been worked out by the undergraduate and graduate senates.

Committed to the Services Committee was a motion asking it to investigate and draw up a plan for using Senate Transit Services buses to transport students to the polls November 7.

The committee was charged to report its plans to the service by tomorrow.

A bill to create a holding account for fines imposed by the student judiciary for persons found guilty of shoplifting from the Campus Center store was passed.

The Student Matters committee was also charged with finding a permanent account for the funds.

A number of other important measures were tabled or committed to committees and a number of minor category changes were passed.

Fac Sen To Meet

By KEVIN DOWNEY

The Faculty Senate session this afternoon begins at 4:00 p.m. and is held in Herter 227. The meeting is open to the public.

At long last, the Faculty Senate will meet to make its decision on the proposal to abolish the Rhetoric requirement.

The Faculty Senate debate today will conclude almost a year of discussion on the question. Last January, initial hearings were held by the Academic Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate. The committee voted to recommend abolishment of the Rhetoric requirement last January, and again this fall at its meeting of October fifth.

The Faculty Senate recessed its meeting last Thursday afternoon before the proposal could be seriously discussed. A motion was made at the close of Thursday's meeting, therefore, the first business on the agenda for today's Senate session will be the Rhetoric vote.

The Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate has also recommended to the Faculty Senate that the requirement be abolished. Nick Apostola, chairman of that committee, will present the Student Senate's position to Faculty at this afternoon's meeting.

The English Department however, which directs the Rhetoric program, has launched a strong campaign opposing the recommendation for abolishment. Joseph Frank, Director of the English Department, has circulated to every faculty senator a position paper that outlines the goals and failures of the Rhetoric program. Dr. Frank proposes the need for "a more University-wide Rhetoric advisory committee" and "stricter supervision of Teaching assistants", rather than the outright abolishment of the program.

It is difficult to predict the outcome of this afternoon's Senate vote. When questioned as to his prediction, Robert Wellman, Faculty Senate Secretary, replied that "not one recommendation passed by Academic Matters last year was overturned by the Faculty Senate", but he added, "this is no guarantee that the Faculty Senate will not oppose the motion".

SWAP Program Seeks Understanding

By TOM BARNES

S.W.A.P. stands for students workshops on activities projects. It's a program with the purpose of achieving an understanding between the different groups on campus and the hope of bringing some ideas that can be effective steps toward improving university life and more clearly establishing the role of the University of Massachusetts in the local community.

Representatives of the faculty, staff, students and administration will meet together on a person-to-person basis in a series of workshops to discuss different aspects of these problems. Emphasisis placed on the idea of personal interaction among the groups with a serious attitude toward the problems that students and non-students face in relating to campus and community life.

Participants were chosen subjectively on the basis of applications or interviews. The idea was to try to gather together representatives from a variety of backgrounds so that the discussions could deal with as many different types of life experiences as possible.

The program this year is unique in that there was much more campaigning in the community and a much greater response. Of approximately 240 applications, 160 were accepted. The breakdown includes 14 staff members (including graduate students), about 100 students, 20 faculty members, and 30-35 administrators (including trustees, legislators, and townspeople).

The conference will be held at the Oak Spruce (vacation) Resort in South Lee, Mass., November 17-19. Participants will arrive Friday night to register, and the conference officially gets underway with a keynote address by Seymore Shapiro, a faculty member at UMass, who will talk about the University environment.

Saturday is planned as a day of hard work beginning with an early breakfast and four 75 minute sessions during which up to six workshops will be going at once. The participants will have the opportunity to choose workshops that relate to that area of University life that they are most concerned with.

Saturday night there will be an address given by Ethel Case, a member of the faculty at Greenfield College and a graduate student at UMass. She will talk mainly about the role that the university plays in the community and its involvement in community service activities.

There will be two more work sessions Sunday morning with the conference closing after lunch and the bus leaving at 2:00 p.m.

Topics to be discussed over the weekend range from the situation that a new student, or non-student, faces in his first semester at the University, to the political aspects of University organization (such as budgets, funds, trustees), to University employment (administrators, work-study), to the question of whether or not community service should be an integral part of the curriculum.

One of the topics to be discussed is the idea of the communications media and its relationship to the University and community.

Four State Rep Candidates Visit Belchertown School

By MDC Staff

The four candidates for state representative in the 2nd Hampshire District yesterday toured the Belchertown State School. All four candidates agreed that if elected next Tuesday the school will be a top priority.

Democratic candidate James Collins of Amherst said the state is running a "very hypocritical Dept. of Mental Health when they would allow the terrible conditions at the school to continue to exist.

"If elected," he said, "I will call for a state-wide invstigation into why the department's official releases don't match up to these conditions."

Republican Nat Reed of Amherst said, "Belchertown would be his number one priority since it is the 'most pressing problem in the district'."

He said the legislator has to "lobby and work hard to make certain that mental retardation gets its fair share of supervision, leadership and the funds that it needs."

The incumbent, Rep. James Nolen, D—Ware, said he has supported in his 14 years of office every type of appropriation and program designated for the school.

It would be a good idea, he said, if Belchertown was given fiscal autonomy similar to that of UMass, but he refused to make any committment on whether he would pursue that goal in the next legislative session.

William "Gerry" Witlock of Belchertown, the Republican candidate, said he would serve as a lobbyist in the legislature to insure that Belchertown is given the necessary money and attention needed to correct the "deplorable" conditions.

Wood's New Office Causes Harassment

By JAMES E. GOLD

"The University has been subjected to bureaucratic harrassment for more than two years," according to UMass President Robert Wood, who was speaking at his weekly press briefing yesterday.

The harrassment has come from the move to the new President's office at One Washington Mall in Boston. The University filed suit yesterday in State Superior Court in order to force the state to honor the rental agreement.

Secretary-designate of Administration and Finance William I. Cowin has refused to authorize payment of two 1971 leases involving 262 Washington Street property and has asked the state comptroller to withhold payment on a lease for the new Washington Mall property.

Wood opened the conference with three announcements:

--the opening of the new field house at Columbia Point,

--the release of the joint nursing review and steering committee, and

--that UMass was one of the three colleges chosen by the National Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities as being very outstanding in the field of innovative education.

He went on to talk about the budget, his office controversy, and classes on election day.

Wood said he did not expect to fail in the court suit. "If one operates on the Attorney General as the chief legal officer, the Attorney General's opinion will prevail."

He then made the claim of bureaucratic harrassment. "For two years we have let Administration and Finance know what our intentions were," he proclaimed. "We've been cautious and conservative in terms of our own space utilization," he said.

Wood said the next step in the budgeting process will come on November ninth when hearings are scheduled. He added more information will be coming before then.

About cancelling classes for election day, Wood said, "if we had been able to receive from (political) parties that this be undertaken, we could have gone to the faculty and have another outcome." He said that he had consulted with the campus chancellors about the decision. Concerning the "impact on the practical outcome of the election," he said, "I don't think it's very important."

Wood also compared office prices with his new office in Boston. He said that the rate was similar to that of the nearby Saltonstall and Kennedy buildings. He agreed that his office price is higher than the state average, but is that it is similar to the costs of other college presidents' offices in the Boston area. "We must compare educational facilities to educational facilities," he said.

PAUL McKINLEY
plays at
THE CHEQUERS
TUES. thru SAT. 9:30 til close

KA-LA
WHEN YOU SHIFT INTO REVERSE?
Two things you can do about it: (1) have it serviced immediately while a minor adjustment can correct it; or (2) put it off until it becomes a serious and expensive problem.
This is the way we've built our business on your confidence in us . . . by helping you avoid major troubles when we can.
WE'RE THE HOMETOWN GUYS WHO OFFER YOU: NEIGHBORHOOD REPUTATION; INTERNATIONAL GUARANTEE.
4-WAYS
United Transmission Exchange Inc.
309 King St.
Northampton, Mass. 584-6790

In The Nation And The World

22 Perish in Viet Crash

SAIGON (AP)-As the pace of the Indochina war quickened in anticipation of a cease-fire, 22 Americans were killed in the crash of U.S. helicopter into a flooded Mekong Delta rice paddy, field reports said Wednesday.

The U.S. Command reported nine bodies had been recovered from the wreckage at dusk, more than 24 hours after the twin-rotor CH47 Chinook went down Tuesday about 35 miles southwest of Saigon.

Officers in the field said they believed the helicopter shot down, possibly by a Soviet-built Strela. This is a hand-fired guided missile recently introduced in Vietnam. The cause of the crash was officially listed as unknown and under investigation.

The Chinook was on a courier mission between Saigon and the delta city of Can Tho, 80 miles to the southwest. Field reports said most of those aboard were American military personnel, although a few may have been civilian employes of U.S. contract firms.

Such a run isn't normally considered dangerous, but there has been heavy fighting recently in the region where the crash occurred.

American aircraft and South Vietnamese troops cooperated in the recovery operations.

The crash was the worst American loss since May 10, when another Army Chinook went down due to unknown causes 20 miles northeast of Saigon, killing 32 U.S. troops.

Both North and South Vietnamese forces intensified efforts to take and hold territory should an in-place cease-fire be announced. The Saigon command reported more than 100 enemy attacks across South Vietnam for the seventh straight day.

At Tan Phu Trung, a hamlet on Highway 1, 12 miles northwest of Saigon, government reinforcements claimed they shattered an enemy battalion that has been ordered to take and hold the town as a Viet Cong showpiece. It is almost within shelling range of Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport. Renewed enemy attacks were reported Wednesday in the Mekong Delta and in the far north.

Associated Press correspondent Dennis Neeld reported from the northern headquarters city of Da Nang that the Citadel in Hue was shelled for the second time this week. Three Vietnamese were reported killed and 11 wounded.

The United States stepped up its military aid program to South Vietnam in what sources said was an effort to beat any cease-fire agreement that would curtail the turnover of American equipment to the South Vietnamese.

The U.S. 7th Air Force announced that it last tactical airlift squadron stationed in Vietnam was inactivated Wednesday after nine years in the war zone and that its remaining four C7 Caribou transports were given to the South Vietnamese Air Force.

Henry A. Kissinger

No. Viet Troops in South May Be Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) - The administration envisions a pullback of some of North Vietnam's 145,000 troops in South Vietnam under the proposed Vietnam peace even though this is not specified in the publicized nine-point plan.

Informed sources said the question came up during presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger's secret talks with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho. Washington has long pressed for a North Vietnamese withdrawal.

The American side gained the impression, the sources said, that the North Vietnamese understand the need to reduce the number of their forces in the South.

At the same time, the sources said no hard and fast agreement has been nailed down on this nor is there an "understanding" as part of the nine-point plan comparable to the claimed "understanding" linked to the 1968 halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu Wednesday repeated that a Hanoi troop pullout is needed for "a just peace and a secure cease-fire." His demand has been one of the main issues in U.S. efforts to win Saigon's agreement the nine-point plan.

He proposed separate conferences between his government and North Vietnam to work out a cease-fire and between Saigon and the Viet Cong to negotiate a political settlement. He made no mention of U.S. participation.

In Peking, Chinese Premier Chou En-lai said he has been in contact with the United States and North Vietnam over the talks and "the news is not so good" although he still hopes for early signatures.

Chou told British newsmen that Thieu objected to seven of the nine points and that Thieu had said "there will be no peace" unless he signs the pact.

Washington officials continued to voice confidence an agreement will be worked out, though the likely timetable for a peace pact signing seems to be slipping well beyond next Tuesday's U.S. election.

Kissinger is expected to do more negotiating with the North Vietnamese in Paris, and perhaps go again to Saigon, before all details are wrapped up.

Presumably, Kissinger is seeking reassurance from Hanoi on the force withdrawal at the same time he presses for a common position with Thieu.

The nine-point plan worked out by Kissinger and Tho as published last Thursday provides for a U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam without saying North Vietnam's forces must go, too.

President Nixon dropped reciprocal U.S.—North Vietnamese withdrawal as a specific peace condition more than a year.

As explained here, the North Vietnamese do not acknowledge they have forces in the South so as a practical matter it would be virtually impossible to negotiate an agreement under which they would publicly agree to withdraw.

Barker's Sentence Suspended

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Watergate defendant Bernard L. Barker on Wednesday received a suspended 60-day jail term after being convicted of unlawfully notarizing a $25,000 Republican campaign check.

The former Central Intelligence Agency operative was found guilty of the misdemeanor after a three-hour nonjury trial before Dade County Criminal Court Judge Paul Baker.

Witnesses included Kenneth O. Dahlberg, President Nixon's Midwest campaign finance chairman, and Hugh W. Sloan Jr., 32, former treasurer of the President's re-election finance committee.

Baker repeatedly halted prosecution efforts to explore the connection between the $25,000 check and the bugging of Democratic national headquarters in Washington, D.C., last June, but assistant state attorney David Goodhart did elicit from Sloan testimony that he last saw the check in April when he turned it over to G. Gordon Liddy, then finance counsel for the Committee to Re-elect the President.

Liddy is one of seven Watergate defendants.

Dahlberg testified that he picked up $25,000 in campaign contributions while at a Bal Harbor, Fla., golf course and used the money April 10 to purchase a cashier's check in the same amount from a Boca Raton bank. He said he gave the check to Maurice H. Stans, finance chairman of the Committee to Re-elect the President, the next day during a meeting in Washington.

The Minneapolis industrialist said he endorsed the check on the back but knew nothing of any notarization of his signature by Barker.

Dahlberg said he was not aware Barker had cashed the check April 20 at the Republic National Bank in Miami.

Asked by Goodhart if he knew how the check got into Barker's hands, Dahlberg answered: "I have no knowledge of the disposition or expenditure of the money."

Democratic party officials and Dade County state attorney Richard Gerstein contend the $25,000 was part of $114,000 in GOP campaign contributions used to finance the Watergate break-in.

Barker, 55, was arrested inside the Watergate complex along with Frank R. Sturgis, Virgilio R. Gonzales, Eugenio R. Martinez and James W. McCord Jr.

In Brief...

McGovern Endorsed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The afternoon Philadelphia Daily News today endorsed Democrat George S. McGovern for President, asserting "the issue here is honesty."

"Honesty is missing in the man President Nixon," the News said in an editorial.

Coast Guard Cutter Decorated

BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Boutwell will be presented a Navy decoration Thursday for its part in aiding a stricken Soviet nuclear submarine earlier this year, a Coast Guard spokesman reported.

McGovern Lends PBS Poll

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern's campaign proposals received greater support than those of President Nixon in a nationwide poll conducted through the Public Broadcasting System.

Van Meter Appointed Manager

WASHINGTON (AP) — William G. Van Meter was appointed executive manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, succeeding the late Charles W. Harbaugh.

CBS Faces Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System on Wednesday faced the threat of a strike before Election Day by some 1,200 employees.

Sanders Pleads Guilty

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Michael David Sanders, 18, pleaded guilty to murder charges Wednesday in the torch and shooting death of Mrs. Kathleen Matzilevich of Worcester, Mass., and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Whipple Retires

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Fred L. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory since it moved to Massachusetts in 1955, will retire July 1, 1973, the institution announced Wednesday.

EASTHAMPTON HARLEY-DAVIDSON
(Authorized sales & Service)
GRAND OPENING
Sat., Nov. 4, 1972
SNOWMOBILES * MOTORCYCLES
See the New 1973 Models
New & Used Cycles * Service on all makes
2 Adams St. Easthampton 527-1556
(Across from Lemay Motor Sales)

FIVE COLLEGE
January Flight
December 29, 1972
January 20, 1973
Round-trip
Boston - Paris
$165.00
All UMass students, staff, faculty and dependents are eligible to apply.
Full payment required by November 22.
INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS OFFICE
238 Whitmore Building
Tel. 545-2710
Amherst

WALK for the HEART FUND
Saturday, Nov. 4 at 10:30 a.m.
Sign up to Walk or Pledge.
C.C. Concourse
TODAY!

Ezra Pound Dead At 87

VENICE, Italy (AP)-Expatriate American poet Ezra Pound, praised for his esoteric verse and once criticized for his "Fascist leanings," died Wednesday night at the age of 87.

Pound died at Saints John and Paul Hospital at 7:30 p.m., 1:30 p.m. EST. He had been taken to the hospital only a few hours earlier. The cause of his death was not immediately known.

Until his death, stooped by age, beard growing white, Pound had steadfastly denied he was a traitor to his country. In 1943, he was indicted for treason for broadcasting for Fascist Italy. But he was never tried before the American courts because he was deemed mentally incompetent.

In 1958, after 12 years in a Washington, D.C. hospital, Pound returned to Italy. He had lived here ever since, dividing his life between an ancient castle at the foothills of the Alps and a residence in Venice.

Pound was best known for his lengthy "Pisan Cantos," a series of more than 100 songs in verse that combined cynicism and lament. But he also wrote experimental verse and literary criticism and translated poetry by Italy's Dante Alighieri and other poets.

Carl Sandburg once hailed Pound's work as "the greatest single influence on American poetry." But another poet said: "Ezra would rather perplex his readers than enchant them."

Pound succeeded in both perplexing and enchanting.

The bearded expatriate won a prize for poetry he completed while held in an American military prison in Italy on treason charges. The award for the "highest achievement of American poetry" was made in 1948 while Pound was in the mental hospital in Washington. It caused a congressional uproar.

His literary reputation flourished despite criticism and his long confinement. Ironically, much of the demand for Pound's writings came from American colleges, which he contemptuously damned when he left the United States in disgust in 1907.

By then the brilliant young man with red hair and an eccentric flair already had a reputation as a poet. Except for two short visits, he did not return to the United States until he was brought back in 1945 to face treason charges.

The pro-Fascist broadcasts in Italy during World War II led to the treason indictment. Pound was declared mentally incompetent to defend himself and confined to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington.

The treason charges were dropped in 1958, allowing Pound to return to Italy.

"I do not know how it would be possible to live in America outside of a madhouse," Pound said.

Born of Quaker stock Oct. 30, 1885, in Hailey, Idaho, Pound was educated at Hamilton College and the University of Pennsylvania. He taught briefly at Pennsylvania and at Wabash College before leaving for Europe in 1907.

During his 38 years in England, France and Italy, Pound built a formidable reputation as a poet, editor, translator, critic and iconoclast, although his verse sometimes defied interpretation.

His prize-winning "Pisan Cantos" employed combined English words, Chinese figures, music, Greek script, phonetic spellings, Southern and Jewish dialect, and Latin, French and German slang.

After returning to Italy, Pound lived in near seclusion with his daughter, Mary, wife of the noted Egyptologist, Prince Boris de Rachewiltz, in their 12th century castle near Merano in the Italian Alps.

He told an Italian interviewer he had become "an illiterate literary man" and was no longer writing.

"I would like to explain," he said, "but everything is so difficult, and so useless."

US-CAN Relations Changed By Upheaval

TORONTO (AP) - Canada's contankerous voters, by delivering a punishing blow to Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his Liberals in Monday's election, may have heralded some changes in official Canadian attitudes toward the overwhelming influence of U.S. power and money.

The vote carried a message to Canada's politicians: the electorate has been in an irritable mood and insists that its leaders listen.

Mitchell Sharp, Prime Minister Trudeau's foreign secretary, says the election results, a virtual standoff between Conservatives and Liberals in Parliament, will make planning ahead for foreign and domestic policies a good deal more difficult.

The difficulties will be compounded by inability to judge with any high degree of accuracy what issues made the voters act as they did. They had lots of gripes. Thus, the leaders are likely to be wary on all counts.

One thing biting on Canadians has been the extent of U.S. ownership of Canada's resources and industries.

On the surface it seemed that economic nationalism had little to do with the election outcome. Commentaries have singled out Trudeau's support of a duality of official language - French and English - for Canada's government and his trouble with the economy, notably unemployment, as factors in the setback which jolted him from majority to minority.

The issue of economic nationalism lurked behind scenes in the campaign. Trudeau earlier was on record that Canada's high living standard was linked to foreign investment. His backers said it didn't matter who owned the resources and industries if they were "good corporate citizens."

Still, Trudeau had trouble with the issue. His revenues minister, Herb Gray, brought out the Gray report recommending measures to limit foreign ownership. Trudeau's critics said he virtually ignored it.

Foreign investors - and politicians - now must contemplate that any government that emerges in Canada, either Liberal or Conservative, will need support from the socialistic New Democratic party.

One Canadian economist, W. Allen Beckett, says the socialists' balance of power position suggests a frightening outlook for foreign investors.

The NDP socialists have been on record as in favor of an allout effort of economic repatriation - to bring Canada's industries back home, as they would put it. Influential elements in both major parties also favor a phased program to eliminate U.S. ownership within 10 years.

The waters of Canadian-American relations are likely to be muddied, at least for a while, in a period in which economists predict that Canada will experience confusion and indecision because of the closest election in her history.

Two POW's Criticize Nixon

TOKYO (AP) - Radio Hanoi broadcast today what it said were the comments of two U.S. prisoners of war, one of whom criticized President Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu.

A dispatch of the Vietnam News Agency identified them as Lt. Col. Edison W. Miller of Tustin, Calif., and Capt. William Glen Byrn of Missouri. They were commenting on the proposed U.S.—North Vietnamese peace accords.

The broadcast said the two prisoners made their comment in an interview with a correspondent of Voice of Vietnam Radio, but the date was not given.

Miller was quoted as saying "President Nixon's refusal to sign these agreements did not surprise me. We are now confronted with an evasive, insincere President Nixon who is continuing the slaughter of Vietnamese and the killing of American airmen and the waste of American resources by violating pledges made in the name of the U.S. government and in the name of the American people."

According to the broadcast, Miller said that Thieu "cannot oppose the restoration of peace in Vietnam without president Nixon's approval and support." Thieu was depicted as "only a tinhorn puppet and no American is so naive that he does not know that President Nixon has a life-and-death hold on Thieu and his so-called government.

"President Nixon is only again showing his lack of integrity, his disregard for America's real interests and his willingness to sacrifice American and Vietnamese lives."

"It is not up to Thieu to decide the fate of the U.S.A. or the fate of the American military men or POWs. I agree wholeheartedly with Sen. McGovern's statement that if Thieu wants to continue the war, let him fight it alone.

Burns was quoted as saying: "The recent proposals we've heard brought me and my fellow prisoners happiness and an answer to our prayer because we maintain that the war would be over and peace will come.

"Not only peace to the Vietnamese people and the American people but freedom to POWs to return back to our families, and our families, too, would be happy.

"We were a bit frustrated because the schedule for signing the agreements was delayed a couple of times, and now it looks like it won't be signed by Oct. 31.

"We hope that our administration will sign the agreement, which sounds fair and just, which sounds great of course.

"We POWs don't want it to slip through the American's hands. We can be home by Christmas - we can be home by the end of the year.

"The war will be over, peace will come. It is a great thing for mankind to have peace now in Vietnam.

"The Vietnamese can go back to their business. The Americans can live their lives, and the POWs go back to their families. It's a wonderful thing and all our prayers and hopes are put into the American people's hands that they may bring about an end to this war. It's so close, don't let it slip away."

US Legislation Attacked

LIMA, Peru (AP) - Chile, Ecuador and Peru have accused the United States of adopting legislation which would apply economic reprisals against nations that fine U.S. fishing boats.

The three South American nations, all of which claim 200-mile territorial sea limits unrecognized by the United States, issued a joint statement Tuesday night in which they "condemned and rejected" the amendment to the U.S. Fishermen's Protective Act.

The statement accused the United States of failing to recognize "the right of coastal states to exercise their maritime sovereignty and jurisdiction to protect legitimate interests of their populations."

The amendment, signed recently by President Nixon, requires the secretary of state to ask a fining nation to reimburse funds the U.S. government pays to compensate fishermen fined for fishing in territorial waters not recognized by the United States.

If the country does not reimburse the amount of the fine, the secretary is required to deduct an amount equivalent to the fine from the U.S. aid to the fining nation, unless the President specifies the action is not in the U.S. interest.

The three nations charged the amendment "places the eagerness for profit of a small group of U.S. fishing companies above the sovereign rights and development and well-being of other nations."

Fashion Focus On Soft, Blousy Dresses

NEW YORK (AP) - Oscar de la Renta has turned his back on pants for his spring boutique collection. He focuses instead on soft, demure dresses in a rainbow of pastel colors.

Only two daytime pants outfits were shown at the collection Wednesday.

But there were scores of girlish shirtwaits, chemises and tents in gentle pinks, blues and yellows. The dresses were often topped with matching cardigans and sweaters.

A pretty update of the traditional shirtwaist was a pink crepe dress with white, yellow and green stripes and a mohair cardigan of the same design.

The little-girl look was carried out well in a short, flowing smocked tent dress with a green, pink and blue diamond design.

A little more tailored and striking was a series of navy linen suits and dresses heavily trimmed with white.

The covered-up shirt look was carried over to much of the collection's clothes. There were lots of long shirtwaists, often with the same fabrics and designs used for the short daytime wear.

For those women who like to change their minds about bareness, opting for the covered look one evening and the bare look the next, de la Renta obliges with cardigan jackets and sweaters over dresses with abbreviated fronts and backs.

One of his more daring evening dresses-without a jacket-was a short lavender shirt-dress with a see-through bodice and bunches of ruffles surrounding a plunging V neck.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

COLD FEET?
The BOOT CELLAR is open!
Downstairs:
BOLLES SHOE STORE
8 MAIN ST. AMHERST

Experience Art Exhibit
Moved to
Dukes Room
(Rm. 310) Student Union

TONITE
is Penny Night
at the Rusty Nail Inn
featuring
"Cuckoos Nest"
Rte. 47, Sunderland
TONITE

McGovern Doubts Quick Peace Chances

Senator George McGovern holds up the hand of his wife Eleanor and announced to the crowd gathered in downtown Syracuse that today is the 29th wedding anniversary of the couple, and "that it has been a treat for the past 29 years" in a reference to the Halloween date. McGovern began the final week of his battle for the presidency.

NEW YORK (AP)-Sen. George McGovern, still voicing doubts about chances for quick peace in Indochina, was cheered by thousands Wednesday at a New York garment district appearance which has become a Democratic candidates' tradition.

McGovern rode through crowds as thick as 20 deep in Manhattan streets. But then he slackened his campaign pace to nurse a throat made raspy by campaign overwork.

McGovern spoke only about 10 minutes to the rally in Manhattan's garment district. He canceled an appearance in Hibbing, Minn., later in the day and headed instead for Chicago, where he was to rest overnight before resuming the campaign trail on a political telethon Thursday morning.

In New York McGovern covered a parade route of more than 20 blocks, sitting with his wife Eleanor atop the back seat of a red convertible. Crowds lined the route along Fifth and Seventh Avenues, sometimes pushing in so close that the Democratic presidential nominee's motorcade was at a standstill.

McGovern began his campaign day with an appearance on NBC's "Today" show.

He said he has doubts that a quick peace will be worked out in Vietnam, although he hopes President Nixon, his opponent, will be able to settle the war before Election Day, next Tuesday.

McGovern says he believes that Saigon's President Nguyen Van Thieu is blocking a settlement because he is "afraid of any kind of coalition government...he doesn't think he has enough power within South Vietnam to survive any arrangement in which he would have to share that power with other political forces."

McGovern also said if he were president he would favor breaking up the Department of Health, Education and Welfare into three separate departments.

McGovern said that his hoarseness resulted from "too much shouting at outdoor rallies."

Although the candidate appears healthy, the rigors of the long presidential campaign have tken a toll. He said he has lost seven or eight pounds since winning the nomination.

Nixon Backers Agree To Reveal Money Sources

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's campaign money raisers consented Wednesday to reveal the source of a large chunk of previously unreported contributions rather than face a pre-election trial.

A consent decree signed by U.S. District Court Judge Joseph C. Waddy means the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President must identify contributors for most of the period before the new Federal Elections Campaign Act went into effect last spring.

The disclosures are to begin Thursday night.

The committee and its affiliates raising money for the Nixon campaign also were ordered to hand over to the court records of its collections and expenditures pending final resolution of the case, which is expected to continue after the election.

The surprise agreement, in a suit brought by Common Cause, probably cuts off the last chance for a public hearing on Nixon's campaign financing practices before next Tuesday's presidential election.

"They did not want to go to trial," Common Cause chairman John Gardner said after the signing. "I don't think they could stand to have Maurice Stans and Hugh Sloan testifying."

Stans, formerly Nixon's Commerce secretary and now chairman of his campaign finance committee, and Sloan, former financial adviser to the committee, both had given depositions in pre-trial proceedings and were likely to be subpoenaed witnesses in any full-scale trial.

Stans said the Common Cause suit "was a partisan political ploy from the beginning."

"Indeed," Stans said in a statement issued by the committee, "the reason Mr. Gardner agreed to settle this case was his fear that the court would label it as an unauthorized political lawsuit subjecting him to heavy personal damages and costing Common Cause the loss of its tax exemption.

"Judge Waddy's order is a compromise that will eliminate one more political harrassment for the Finance Committee to re-elect the President," Stans said.

"For months," Gardner said, "representatives of the Committee to re-elect the President have asserted they had no legal obligation to tell the American public where the President's money came from that had been contributed before April 7. Today in court, they in effect have admitted they had been wrong."

During the legal battle, lawyers for the Nixon committee sent a letter to the Internal Revenue Service challenging Common Cause's tax-exempt status. Common Cause said this was an attempt to intimidate the suit.

Campaign '72

Ziegler: Nixon Consistent on Amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon "has never changed his position on amnesty," his press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, declared today.

In response to questions at the White House on recent statements by the President that seem to be in conflict on the subject of amnesty, Ziegler told reporters Nixon "has been more specific and direct in his comments recently-he has not changed his position at all."

Nixon said on a campaign trip in Ohio last Saturday that "the few hundred that deserted this country, the draft-dodgers, are never going to get amnesty....They are going to have to pay a penalty for what they did." He also said in a recent political radio broadcast that "there will be no amnesty for deserters and draft-dodgers after the war."

But, in a television and radio interview in January, the President had said that under the American system amnesty has always been provided.

"I for one," Nixon added, "would be very liberal with regard to amnesty, but not while there are Americans in Vietnam fighting to serve their country and defend their country. And not when POWs are held by North Vietnam. After that we will consider it, but it would have to be on the basis of their paying the price, of course, that anyone should pay for violating the law." Ziegler was asked about those statements and Nixon's reference to being liberal. The press secretary continued his contention that Nixon has not changed in this respect: "His definition of being liberal is that those who deserted and those who dodged the draft will pay a penalty."

Ziegler would not spell out what the President might have in mind regarding penalties.

WHY PAY MORE?
EAT AT THE
HATCH CAFETERIA
• GRINDERS
• SUB SANDWICHES
69¢
11:30 a.m.
2:00 p.m.
m-m-m-good

"Cronopios"
is coming
An Alternative
Bookshop

McGovern—Shriver
Volunteer CANVASSERS
Urgently Needed In Holyoke
Call 536-4373 or 533-0250 or come to corner of Maple and Appleton St. Holyoke; local McGovern Headquarters
Political Advertisement
Francis R. Abrams
28 Dunn Ave., Holyoke

McGovern Work
(Please return to McGovern table in Campus Center, Mon. - Fri., or in any Dining Commons, Thursday)
I pledge to work for George McGovern on:
Friday 11/3 —— Monday 11/6 ——
Saturday 11/4 —— Tuesday 11/7 ——
Sunday 11/5 —— ELECTION DAY ——
Name _____ Phone _____
Address _____
I do _____ do not _____ have a car.

Third World Alliance Communique

National Black Theater: A Rare Experience

We as Third World People were exposed to a rare experience this past Saturday evening at the University of Massachusetts' Student Union Ballroom. An attempt was made, and most successfully accomplished, by thirty-seven brothers and sisters whose commitment is preserve, maintain and perpetuate the richness and beauty inherent in the form and feeling of Black life style", for the purpose of liberating the minds and spirits of Black people.

The total involvement of all who were present was created by Sister Barbara Ann Teer and the National Black Theater. This was a vivid example of what total Black Theater truly should be about, mainly because these brothers and sisters were true liberators; intent on educating us and raisingour levels of consciousness, instead of coming to entertain us on some prepared platform as actors where we would be observers as opposed to being involved participants in a continual learning experience.

At different periods throughout this spiritually moving "revival" these brothers and sisters brought the entire mass congregation to a certain level, with their edcation and expansion of our minds and then all of us one step further. The vibrations existing throughout the ballroom could be sensed by everyone; from the small children dancing and clapping, to brothers and sisters dancing and verbally expressing their feelings while moving around the room.

The members of the National Black Theater receiving the vibrations of the people continued to heighten the feelings of the people by this inter-action. Everyone there began to move higher and higher to near exhaustion, with each leap bringing about more awareness as the momentum of the spiritual, political messages was conveyed by the liberators; who represented various elements from the Black community, negative and positive.

The entire revival was indeed religious and political from beginning to end. This marriage of religion and politics flowed with the clapping of hands, the songs and the embracing with those nearest to you and also brought about a magic which hooked you up with someone fifty seats away.

A significant part of the "revival" was the part dealing with the exploitation of the Black community. The sisters and brothers of the National Black Theater pointed out how we as Black people comprising only eleven per cent of the total population are exploited into spending anywhere from two to five times that percentage on everything from deodorant to grape soda to wine. The mass media has programmed us to the extent that some of us feel a certain tooth polish will help us GET OVER!! Are we really about just getting over? Or are we abour redefining ourselves and our people, developing; new values, ideas and positive images while casting aside all of the negative images and values that have filtered through to us via this oppressive society?

The Third World Alliance must say thank you to Sister Barbara Ann Teer and the National Black Theater; Brother Roy Ayres and Ubiquity, and the Third World community for their bringing together of that creative reservoir of energy that is so rich and essential in Black life.

The political messages we received this weekend must now be put into positive action through working and fighting in the daily struggle of Black people. This can't be done by trying to GET OVER; THINK ABOUT IT! The Present is a Time for Struggle!! The Future is Ours.

Health Officials Must Produce Records

An old and worn cupboard in the kitchen of K Building at Belchertown State Hospital, visited yesterday by the four State Representative candidates. See related story on page 3. (MDC Photo by Bob Callahan)

State Mental Health officials have been ordered by a U.S. district judge to produce the medical records of 28 residents of the Belchertown State School, it was reported yesterday.

Last February the parents of residents at the school filed a suit in U.S. District Court charging that the Dept. of Mental Health has been negligent in the care of the residents at the school.

Judge Manuel Real, of California, sitting in Boston by designation, ruled that their attorney, Beryl Cohen must be given access to the records of the 28 plaintiffs, but must not make them public.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Terrace O'Malley argued that production of the records would be burdensome and that the medical records were confidential.

Real has set Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. as the time for a hearing on Cohen's motion to obtain the medical records of all Belchertown residents.

Marxist Scholar Bowles To Speak At Project 10

Tonight at 8 p.m. Project 10 is presenting a leading Marxist scholar, Sam Bowles, in a lecture and discussion on the role of schooling in class inequality in America today.

The past two years have seen much debate in academic circles on the causes and definitions of inequality in U.S. society. Psychologists such as Richard Herrnstein of Harvard and Arthur Jensen of Berkeley have argued that intelligence is fundamentally dictated by genetic inheritance, placing "nature" over "nurture" in explanations of individual achievement, suggesting that if Blacks do not succeed in schools the cause may not spring from inequality of opportunity so much as from a lower racial predisposition for abstract thinking. The debate, seen by some as part of a Nixon-style retreat from the compensatory educational programs and school integration of the 1960s, rages in both scholarly and popular journals and this month was given national attention in Christopher Jencks' book, Inequality.

Less attention has been given to the role schools play in reinforcing the privileges of certain social classes at the expense of others in a capitalist society. Tonight's meeting in the main lounge of Project 10 (Pierpont House, in Southwest) on "Schools as Capitalist Institutions--a Marxist Perspective" will be led by Bowles, a Harvard economics professor and member of the Union for a Radical Political Economics.

Bowles, one of the most published radical economists in the country, is currently writing a book on schooling and class structure and is teaching in the campus Labor Relations Center this semester. The public is invited.

Pool Champ To Demonstrate

Pocket billiards world champion Jimmy Caras will give a free exhibition with UMass champion pool player Paul Brouillette at 8 p.m. on November 7 in the Student Union Ballroom.

Sponsored by the Program Council, Caras will also give a demonstration with Gregory Falson UMass runner-up, at noon in the Ballroom, and will conduct a clinic from 2-3 p.m. in the Games Area next to the Hatch.

Jimmy Caras has been the World's Pocket Billiard Champion five times since 1936, when he won the title at the age of 26, the second youngest in the tournament's history. He has starred in two MGM documentary movies, and has appeared twice on ABC's Wide World of Sports" program.

Caras played his first game of pool at the age of 5 on a miniature table. At 17, he earned the title of "Boy Wonder of the Billiard World".

The champion will first demonstrate billiard fundamentals, and conclude with an exhibition demonstration of his skill and trick shots. After the exhibition, he will give personal instruction to those who request it.

UMass students will be admitted free of charge. There is a general admission charge of one dollar for non-students.

McGovern Volunteers Needed

One thousand UMass volunteers, working in Connecticut and upstate New York, will be the goal for the last weekend and Election Day McGovern for President Drive.

Mark Mawrence, Chairman of UMass Students for McGovern, announced that buses and private cars will be available beginning tomorrow, Friday, to transport student volunteers to the Hartford and Albany areas where the students will man telephone banks, canvass, and pass out leaflets for the Democratic presidential nominee.

"Four hours of work on election day by every McGovern supporter on campus may well help to rectify the four years of the Nixon administration", Mawrence said. "We can afford to volunteer one day of our life in order to protect the Bill of Rights that Nixon has so arrogantly flaunted."

Tables will be set up in the Dining Commons today to recruit volunteers and answer questions, according to Mawrence. In addition, the McGovern table in the Campus Center Concourse will be manned today and tomorrow for recruitment and information. The McGovern people have also bought an advertisement in today's Collegian which asks for weekend and Election Day volunteers.

"McGovern has a good chance of winning the electoral vote", said Mawrence. "Up-to-date private polls show Senator McGovern running even with Nixon in most of the 10 largest states." Those states include Massachusetts, California, Pennsylvania, New York, and Illinois.

"Surprisingly," he said, "McGovern is doing extremely well in some of the smaller states--Arkansas, Hawaii, West Virginia, and Colorado, to name a few--where the entire state Democratic organization is effectively working for the entire ticket."

"Any person wishing to work for McGovern any time between now and Election Day should fill out the ad in today's paper, visit the McGovern table in the Campus Center, or call Ed Scully at 6-5730", Mawrence said.

UMass
Police
5-2121

Rani
211 Main St. Northampton
63 N. Pleasant St. Amherst
Velvet Maxi Dresses
Sheepskin Coats
All Bodyshirts at $6.95
10% DISCOUNT on all purchases over $10 when accompanied by this ad.

dvp invites you to a cultural experience with
"White Roots of Peace"
a full day of activities with this indian communications group is planned:
Monday, November 6th
Exhibit of Indian arts, crafts & books; film festival; feature film — "The Blood of the Condor"; children's hour; Hatch special supper - tradition Indian dinner; main meeting; communications; love, good feelings. (all events are free.)
Complete schedule of times and places tomorrow!

BEEF 'n BEER Nights
Wednesday & Saturday
Charcoal Broiled Rib Steak
Pitcher of Beer
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Baked Potato
Roll + Butter
$3.50

Reflections of a fallen leaf–how depressing can you get? (Photo by Katherine Zukel)

To Shop and Not To Buy

NEW YORK (AP) - "Why do people shop?" the storekeeper was asked. "To buy things," he snapped, irritated by the "dumb" question.

"How simplistic," thought the questioner, wondering how this clod ever managed any degree of success at all, considering his inability to comprehend either human psychology or modern marketing methods.

The shopping motive, says Edward M. Tauber, a marketing authority, is hardly a simple function of the buying motive. People have many reasons for shopping that have little to do with buying.

Writing in the Journal of Marketing, Tauber, an assistant professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, lists a bagful of other possible motives for shopping, other than to buy a product.

Role Playing - Many activities are learned behaviors, traditionally accepted or expected as part of a certain position or role in society - mother, housewife, husband, or student.

"Grocery shopping is a customary activity of the housewife. Attempts to eliminate 'food shopping' through home delivery and telephone order have to date been relatively unsuccessful."

Diversion - Shopping, says Tauber, can offer an opportunity for diversion from the routine of daily life and thus represents a form of recreation.

Self-gratification - "A person may go to a store in search of diversion when he is bored or go in search of social contact when he feels lonely. Likewise, he may go to a store to buy something nice for himself when he is depressed."

Physical Activity - Shopping can provide people with a considerable amount of exercise otherwise denied to them by an urban environment, says Tauber, adding that a lot of stores mistakenly try to minimize walking distance.

Sensory Stimulation - Customers are stimulated by each other, by handling the merchandise, by listening to the sounds, inhaling the scents.

Social Experience - "In general," says Tauber, "shopping can provide the opportunity for a social experience outside the home, that is, seeking new acquaintances or meeting those of the opposite sex."

Peer Group Attraction - "The patronage of a store sometimes reflects a desire to be with one's peer group or a reference group to which one aspires to belong."

Status and Authority - Many shopping experiences, says Tauber, provide an opportunity for an individual to command attention and respect.

There are other reasons too, including the pleasure of bargaining, says Tauber. Enough, he suggests, for any storekeeper to wonder what's going on in his emporium, enough for a spouse to ponder the implications of that seemingly innocent explanation, "Just going shopping for a while."

ROOM TO MOVE
Campus Drug Drop-In Center
CALL 5-0400
24 HOURS A DAY
7 DAYS A WEEK

No Silver Lining At These Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Question: Who is selling silver dollars to the American public at a minimum price of $30 each? Answer: The federal government.

The General Services Administration said Tuesday it has found a way to dispose of more than two million collector's items known as Carson City silver dollars - and clear $120 million for the Treasury at the same time.

In an unprecedented auction, the GSA is opening the bidding to all Americans.

The government has been trying to figure out what to do with the coins since 1964 when a GSA audit led to the search and discovery of the cartwheels in a musty Treasury Department cellar.

There were nearly 3 million coins punched out between 1881 and 1893 at the Carson City, Nev., INT. The mint closed in 1893 as paper currency became more popular.

The coins of that era were 90 per cent silver and most were melted down as surplus during World War I.

But, somehow, a batch of uncirculated shiny coins was forgotten in a Treasury building sub-basement.

They are in excellent condition, stored in the original Carson City mint bags, 1,000 coins to a bag.

At a news conference, GSA administrator Arthur S. Sampson declined to predict what bid over the $30 minimum would ensure receipt of one of the coins.

But he estimated the average price would be $40.

The coins going on sale first are those minted during the years 1882 through 1884 - more than two million for which Sampson estimates there will be between three and four million bidders before Jan. 31, 1973, when that competition stops.

Later, coins stamped with the remaining years, more valuable because of their relative scarcity, will be auctioned. To prevent a rush by professional collectors, each bidder is limited to one coin for each of the 13 years. A computer in San Francisco will sort out the successful bidders.

Japanese Sex Education Taught In High Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Japanese midwife reported Wednesday that in Japan sex education, including methods of birth control, is provided for high school youths.

In the near future, it will be taught also in junior high schools to children aged 12 to 15, she said.

Mrs. Kimi Katsuhima, president of the midwives' section of the Japanese Nursing Association, said "along with this education, sex education for younger children and infants will be necessary, and, for this, education for parents will be necessary."

"We are in the stage of just starting these activities," she told the 50th anniversary meeting of the International Confederation of Midwives. Mrs. Katsuhima said:

"Sex education for youths and children in relation with family planning is an important issue...in Japan...

"In recent years, at the change of social development and sexual precocity, there are increasing problems relating to sex in youths."

In another report, Monica Sampennie of Ghana, Africa's National Family Planning Program, said "family planning has started in Africa and is likely to grow fairly rapidly" - and with help from a relatively unexpected source.

"In Ghana," she said, "many children increase the prestige of a man and, traditionally, men desired very large families.

"However, times change. Many men, especially the younger ones, and even those in some rural areas, are aware of the economic arguments at the family level in favor of family planning."

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT
'TIL 2 a.m.
VILLAGE INN
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO
DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2546

In order to avoid any conflicts on the part of our members who are also members of the Faculty Senate,

THE MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY OF PROFESSORS

has canceled its meeting of November 2, because of the extra Senate meeting on that date.

The Next Meeting Will Be On

November 10, at 4:30 p.m.

in Room 902 of the Campus Center.

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.

They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____

(Signature) _____ (Date) _____

Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

Central Area Okays Rinks

BY SHELLY BAKST

The Central Area Council met Monday night to discuss council subcommittees, representatives to university committees, the Spense/Libscomb Concert, a new proposal prohibiting outside sales and solicitations in the area, the contracting of two new basketball/skating rinks, and the possibility of a two week symposium during winter break.

Four sub-committees were introduced as the following: Student Welfare, Constitution, Communication, and Program. Each council representative must also join one of the above committees and anyone from the Central Area may also join.

Representatives from the area at large are needed for the University Health Services Committee, the Campus Center-Student Union Governing Board, and the Rents and Fees committee. If interested contact Bob Focht at 6-9539 or at the Central Area Office in the Baker basement.

Discussion of the Spense/Lipscomb concert was continued. Presently, contracts have been drawn up and the price of the concert will be split equally between the Central Area and the New-Africa House. The concert is open to all and will be held at Franklin Dining Commons on November 10 at 8 o'clock. Admission will be charged.

A proposal concerning sales and solicitations in the Central Area was discussed. According to the proposal, duly licensed vendors may deliver in the residence halls but solicitors may not go beyond the dorm lobby. Food vendors must agree to be liable for the food that is sold. Because of the previous trouble which many students have experienced, any solicitations or sales involving contractual agreement would be prohibited also. Included in this group are insurance, silverware, and encyclopedias.

Two new basketball courts which will double as skating rinks are due to be built and will hopefully be in use this winter. They will be located on the hill between Van Meter and Greenough and across from Hills North and South.

Also discussed was the possibility of a two week accredited symposium which would take place during the winter intersession. All of those interested may call Larry Marcus at 5-2041 from 9 to 4.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTERROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH "Storm at Twilight" (18)
ZOOM (24) (57
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST "Night of the Cadre" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
FRENCH CHEF (24)
MOVIE "The Champion" (27)
MAKING THINGS GROW (57)
7:00 UFO "The Responsibility Seal" (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES Bob Barker, host (8)
DICK VAN DYKE "The Vigilante Ripped My Sport Coat" (18)
NEWS (22) (30) (57)
SOUL (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
7:30 YOU ASKED FOR IT (8)
MOVIE "Paris Model" (18)
I DREAM OF JEANNIE "See You in CUBA" (22)
WAIT TILL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME "The Victim" (30)
DRAGNET (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 WALTONS A homeless young man the Waltons have taken in betrays their trust. (3)
MOD SQUAD "Corbey" (8) (40)
FLIP WILSON Guests: Carol Channing, Ed Asner, Donny Hathaway. (22) (30)
ADVOCATES (24) (57)
8:30 LAUREL AND HARDY (27)
9:00 MOVIE "The Dirty Dozen" (3)
THE MEN Jigsaw (8) (40)
700 CLUB (18)
IRONSIDE "Riddle Me To Death" (22) (30)
INTERNATIONAL PERFORMANCE (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
9:30 TWILIGHT ZONE "Walking Distance" (27)
10:00 OWEN MARSHALL: COUNSELOR AT LAW (8) (40)
DEAN MARTIN Guests: Dennis Hopper, Charley Pride, Charles Nelson Reilly (22) (30)
NEWS (27)
10:30 STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
MOVIE "The Thief" (27)
NEWS (57)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (18) (22) (24) (30) (40)
30 MINUTES WITH (57)
11:30 MOVIE "Compulsion" (3)
DICK CAVETT (8) (40)
JOHNNY CARSON (22) (30)
NEWS (57)
12:00 NEWS (27)
1:00 NEWS (8) (22) (30) (40)
1:30 MOVIE "The Liquidator" (3)

FRESHLY PRESSED
CIDER + DONUTS! 20¢
at the COFFEESHOP

Interested in playing at the Bluewall Coffeehouse?
call Flo or Karen 546-7393

No Appeal On Auto Rebate

BOSTON (AP) - Automobile insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts have not appealed an order directing them to refund $37.5 million of last year's premiums to the state's motorists.

The deadline for court appeals against the rebate order was Tuesday, said Insurance Commissioner John G. Ryan.

The rebate order provides refunds of $5 to $82 on 1971 premiums for compulsory bodily injury liability coverage. The rebates were mandated by the legislature last year on the basis of evidence that the industry had amassed "excess profits" in the first year under the state's no-fault auto insurance law.

The deadline for mailing out refund checks falls at the end of next week.

Liberty Mutual Insurance Co., one of the six largest in the state, announced Wednesday it had already mailed out checks totalling $3 million to most of its 176,000 passenger car policyholders in the state.

Refunds for policies on some 4,000 commercial vehicles will be mailed within two weeks, the firm said.

Insurance companies in the state had 20 days from the issuance of Ryan's order to appeal the decision in the courts, but no appeals were filed.

Following the rebate announcement last month Gov. Francis W. Sargent met with spokesmen of the six largest auto insurance firms in the state to persuade them not to appeal the order. There are 100 firms selling auto insurance in the state and an appeal by any one of them would have blocked issuance of the rebates.

Sargent said Wednesday he was "particularly pleased the insurers have decided not to delay the rebates any further. "It is clear to all of us that no-fault is and will continue to be unqualified success."

The end of the appeal period ended a year of controversy and court proceedings over the rebate. The initial refund order issued by Ryan last November was challenged in the courts, but the state Supreme Court this summer upheld the principle involved.

The court, however, directed the commissioner to hold new hearings to determine the amount to be refunded.

Amherst Polls

AMHERST POLLING PLACES - open 8 am - 8 pm, Tuesday, November 7

Precinct	Place
1	North Amherst Parish Hall (across from Watroba's Store)
2 (S.W dorms)	Fire Station (next to Louis' Foods on N. Pleasant Street)
3 (Central, Quad, Orchard Hill)	Odd Fellows Hall (Kellogg Avenue, behind Post Office)
4	Masonic Hall (Main Street)
5	Old Junior High (Lessey Street)
6	Munson Memorial Library (on the green in South Amherst)
7 (Sylvan)	Auction Gallery (Rt 116, North Amherst)

For further information:
Amherst Town Clerk—253-3885
Belchertown Town Clerk—323-6901
Easthampton Town Clerk—527-0818
Hatfield Town Office—247-5684
Northampton City Clerk—584-0735
Sunderland Town Clerk—665-2989

Fine Arts Quartet To Perform Tonight

The Fine Arts String Quartet will perform the second concert of the 1972/73 Chamber Music Series tonight, Thursday, November 2nd at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Joining the quartet will be the exciting American pianist, Frank Glazer in a performance of Brahms Piano Quintet in F Minor. The balance of the program will include Ginastera's Quartet No. 2 and Haydn's String Quartet in B Minor. Reserved tickets to this concert are still available at $1.50 to University full-time undergrads and $3 to others and can be purchased through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter until 4 p.m. today. From 7 p.m. the box office at Bowker Auditorium will handle remaining tickets.

The Fine Arts Quartet and Mr. Glazer will be featured in a special open rehearsal at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium today. This encounter with visiting artists of the Fine Arts Council is open without charge and will deal with the String Quartet by Alberto Ginastera and the Brahms Piano Quintet. Pianist Frank Glazer will join the Quartet for the open rehearsal.

FINE ARTS QUARTET
Frank Glazer, Pianist
Thurs., Nov. 2
Perform Brahms Piano Quintet in F and Works by Haydn and Ginastera. Tickets $1.50 UM Undergrads/Others $3.00.

Ah Ahk: Performing Arts of Korea
Friday, Nov. 3.
Classical Courts and Chamber Music, Military, Religious and Folk Music and dances of Korea . . . Tickets $1 UM Undergrads/Others $1.50.

Young Artist Showcase
Daniel Adni
Thurs - Fri, Nov. 9 - 10
Exciting twenty year old pianist in his American debut performing two different programs including works by Beethoven, Ravel, Brahms and Prokofiev!
Tickets: $1.50
To UMass Undergrad and $3 others
Fine Arts Council/125 Herter Hall/Telephone 545-0202 for tickets

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Dan Kamal
NEWS STAFF Mary Vorderer, Richard Abaid
EDITORIAL Gabe Imperato
SPORTS Steve Crowe
DARKROOM Steve Schmidt, Sue Goldbaum, Bill Beggs, Steve Ruggles
AD LAYOUT Jan Auman

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Make It Work

In only five days what could be the most important election of the century will take place. Earlier in the week the Collegian told the Chancellor in an editorial that he ought to reverse a decision in which he vetoed the cancellation of classes on election day as passed by the Student Senate. He has not yet seen fit to do so, and again we remind him of the crucial importance of the election and demand a reversal of his decision.

In the event that the Chancellor refuses to do so there are a few options open to both students and faculty. Provost Gluckstern has urged all professors to be liberal in the granting of excused absences on election day and has prohibited punishment of students for missing classes on the 7th. We would go a step further and say that professors should cancel classes on that day in the interests of student participation in the democratic process. Among other reasons for such a move, there is great need for McGovern canvassers in Chicopee, Holyoke and throughout the state. Election day is by no means too late for student volunteers to canvass.

The Student Senate should also work through its Services Committee and order the Student Senate Transit Service to either suspend regular bus service on election day completely or cut it partially in order to put busses at the disposal of students for transportation to polling places. Students should not be hindered in any way from participating as fully as possible in Tuesday's crucial showdown. The future of America is at stake, and those are high stakes to play for.

Matt Tackeff

Nixon

Not surprisingly, this newspaper, in conjunction with other sources of academic opinion, has been overwhelmingly predisposed toward the candidacy of Senator McGovern. One would not be inaccurate to cite this column as the sole dissent from the norms of this somewhat isolated academic environment. And since the thrust of my position has been "anti-McGovern" rather than "pro-Nixon", there has been virtually no positive advocacy from the Nixon camp. This imbalance, I may point out, is not due to any absence of a Nixon constituency within the Five College area. It is due, rather, to a sense of apathetic complacency on the part of the Nixon supporters, coupled with an atmosphere which rewards dissenters with ostracism. Regardless of the cause which one chooses to ascribe to this imbalance, it cannot be viewed as a healthy phenomenon.

With just a few days remaining in the Presidential campaign, a "call to arms" by the Nixon supporters would fail to alter the status quo to any noticeable degree. The dialogue which should have taken place would not have the necessary impact at this stage in the game.

On several occasions during the campaign, I was invited to participate in debates with supporters of Senator McGovern. Due to the fact that my personal philosophy differs in many respects from the philosophy, or lack of it, of the Nixon administration, I declined all invitations to debate in favor of the overall Nixon record. There was even a time when I considered casting a protest vote against the President, having voted for Congressman John Ashbrook in the Republican Primary last spring. But now, my hedging is a thing of the past. Having overcome the temptation to vote for one of the two rightist splinter candidates, I have come to the conclusion that the major issue in this campaign requires that I not waste my vote on splinter candidates. That issue is McGovern himself, and the repudiation of his philsophy is more crucial a necessity than the superficial publicity which a protest vote may provide for some obscure right-wing politician. For this reason, I intend to cast my vote enthusiastically for President Richard Nixon, and I urge all able-minded individuals to do likewise.

America is in desperate need of moral leadership. The American people perceive the need for a positive direction with greater precision than the Establishment intellectuals acknowledge. Clearly, the greatest shortcoming of the Nixon administration has been the failure to provide the nation with a sense of moral direction. The President's self professed political philosophy, pragmatism, has rendered his incapable of providing that much needed moral guidance. But Mr. Nixon cannot be held fully responsible for his pragmatic compromising of principles for the sake of some short range political expediencies. The political and philosophical climate in America today, created and nurtured by the intellectual establishment, makes it impossible for a politician to be anything but a compromising pragnatist. With this in mind, Mr. Nixon is locked into the same constraints that have plagued other Presidents. The purpose of an election is to choose between two candidates; an election is not the proper forum for "enlightening" the electorate.

The mandate of the '72 elections will not catalyze a new direction in America. That catalyst will come from other sources. But the elections this year will determine, decisively, which direction the voters do not want America to take. And that is the direction which Senator McGovern has charted for this nation.

McGovern would have us move in the direction of collectivism. His proposals to "redistribute the wealth" may find some support from the ranks of the very poor (who are looking for someone who will take care of them) and the very rich (who are looking for someone to take care of). But the vast majority of American people, rich or poor, are self-supporting and self-respecting, and are fully aware of the totalitarian implications in such "distributionist" thetoric.

McGovern would have us move in the direction of abandoning our commitments to defend the sovereignty of friendly nations, unless a particular friendly nation has many supporters within the United States. The vast majority of American people, however, have learned from past wars that the failure to stand up to aggression against friendly nations inevitably brings the aggression closer to home.

McGovern would have us move in the direction of drastic cutbacks in military expenditures. The American people, however, know that in an era of increasing negotiations, we cannot afford to negotiate from a position of weakness.

McGovern is counting on the naivete of the American people. He has clearly miscalculated. When his "Robin Hood" approach began to backfire, he dropped those tactics, and the issues, for that matter, and concentrated his campaign on the alleged "scandals" of the Nixon administration. But calling the Nixon administration the "most corrupt regime in the history of this nation" has also backfired. McGovern, more than any other politician in recent history, is a blatant insult to America's intelligence. A landslide repudiation is all that Senator McGovern deserves. I intend to participate in that repudiation.

Matt Tackeff is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Ed Bryant

McGovern And Dinkin

With much philosphical and little practical reluctance, I must endorse the candidacy of George McGovern for President. Nineteen seventy-two has been a year in which many idealistic Americans have given "the system" a chance. Perhaps surprisingly, a victory was scored. The most radical candidate for President was nominated. George McGovern represents the best of "the system" with which we have made temporary peace.

Although a full-scale investigation has been postponed until after the elections of next Tuesday, it appears daily as though the questionable activities of the Committee To Re-Elect The President were well known to former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, and former Attorney General John Mitchell, both of whom resigned from President Nixon's cabinet to work for CREEP. Richard Nixon may indeed be so innocent that he did not know what his friends were doing. Whether or not Nixon knew, he is a poor choice for President. If he knew, he is clearly the most dangerous power seeker in America today; if he did not know, he should be removed from office as a dangerous fool.

It is hard to say that George McGovern is a savior without fear of lightning bolts, but he is the best we have. After decrying the repression of the Nixon administration, which has gone so far that Ed Muskie is no longer safe, it is clearly not the time to repudiate George McGovern. Should Nixon be re-elected, it may start coming down even harder. The time to reject McGovern is January 21, not November 7.

The Nixon Administration has been aided by a Congress which has ceded its voice in the foreign policy of this country. A stronger Congress is needed as a safeguard against the further loss of liberty. I would urge everyone to spend the next five days working for George McGovern and a Congressional candidate somewhere in the United States. I myself am leaving Friday to work for the election of George McGovern and Gerry Studds.

Unfortunately, sometimes the failings of the system are so blatant that such an appeal is insulting to the intelligence of one's fellow human beings. Asking people to work for Hubert Humphrey in 1968, while the bombing of Vietnam by the Johnson Administration continued, was such a case. Hubert Humphrey did not deserve support even on the basis that he was the least of three evils. That his evil was the least is not at all clear.

A similar situation exists here in Massachusetts; fortunately neither the stakes nor the responsibilities are as high as was the case with Humphrey. Senator Edward Brooke will be re-elected; The Boston Globe set his lead at 72%-18% over his nearest opponent, John Droney. Brooke's tenure of office has been highlighted by two things: his refusal to join the Congressional Black Caucus, and his undying assurances that the President knew what he was doing in Vietnam, whether the President was Johnson or Nixon. Droney is chiefly noted for favoring victory in Vietnam, whatever that is, and for his opposition to abortion.

Nothing can be done to stop Brooke. One can, however, express one's distaste for the choices being offered. There are two principal ways to protest the re-election of Edward Brooke. Either cast a blank ballot for Senator, or write in Eva Dinkin. Admitting prejudice, I would urge everyone to follow the latter course.

Eva Dinkin is in fact a marvelous person, though admittedly not particularly gifted as a politician. Sixty-two years of age, a grandmother whose own children are all grown, Mrs. Dinkin is a foster parent. She cares for children between the time of release from the hospital after birth until the time of their adoption. She has been doing this for twenty years. Ms. Dinkin comes from a background strongly influenced by the Jewish culture. Her ancestors are from Russia, where anti-Semitism runs strong. Her foster children are brought to her by the Catholic Charities. This sort of ecumenism brought Pope John XXIII recognition as the greatest humanitarian ever to serve as Pope, an office of great prestige. Ms. Eva Dinkin is a simple woman, with no ambition to be remembered as a great woman. She is, however, a good person for whom one could vote in good conscience.

A large Dinkin vote on November 7 would have little influence on Edward Brooke, but it might convince the Democratic Party to nominate someone next time more worthy of high office than John Droney.

Different offices, different possibilities, different criteria. For President, George McGovern of South Dakota. For United States Senator, Eva Dinkin of 14 School Street, Beverly. Hoa binh.

Ed Bryant is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'GUESS WHO HAS A BOMB ON BOARD . . . !'

Letters To The Editor

Answering Estelle

To The Editor:

In Wednesday's Collegian, Bob Estelle asked a question of the "liberals". I want to answer him, but simply as a person.

McGovern does favor some of the points expressed in Mr. Estelle's letter. Others he does not. The first point had to do with Vietnam. If we are surrendering South Vietnam to communism by withdrawing our men, we have not succeeded in our "goal" of the past twelve years and never will, unless, of course, we wipe No. Vietnam off the face of the earth. (Actually I'm being kind not to talk about the U.S.'s oil interests and other exploitative features of the Indochina situation.) As for the POW's, they will be released upon withdrawal. Do you really think that Hanoi will keep our men to spite us or fool us? What purpose would it serve them?

The second point is unclear to me. If Mr. Estelle is assuming that the U.N. is pro-communist because Red China has been admitted, I think he is living in a fantasy world. If we really want and believe in Democracy, it will surely endure. Are we Americans so insecure that we can't accept the fact that an opposite viewpoint exists.

Now, about busing, Mr. Estelle's viewpoint proves to me that Americans often think that by keeping problems out of sight, they will be solved. What about these "areas with a high rate of crime and poor schools?" Why not use our wealth to do something about this condition and at the same time help our children learn to live with each other. Techniques alone won't solve our problems. America's attitude on the whole is the culprit.

To comment on point four, all I want to say is that the U.S. can already destroy the world three times faster than Russia. Hooray for advanced technology. How much more defense do we need?

And about gun-control. I think we are hitting the problem ass-backwards if we "honest citizens" are able to take a life if we feel jeopardized. And isn't it a little strange that someone who has served a sentence is an "ex-con" for the rest of his life. Prison reform is what's needed, not more guns. And maybe it's time to change the Bill of Rights. We no longer have the voluntary militia. We now have police departments. The situation was a lot different in 1789.

I think Americans are much too narrow-minded and so insecure that any new idea becomes a threat. There's still some time to look at ourselves before we choose a leader. Only those with open minds can choose wisely.

Bob McCarthy

Reed For Rep.

To The Editor:

In light of the editorial in Tuesday's Collegian urging readers to vote for James Collins for state representative, I would like to remind you and your readers that this is a double legislative district and that voters may vote for two of the four candidates listed on the ballot.

I urge people to cast one of those two votes for Nat Reed, whose qualifications for that office are outstanding. Reed has had more experience with education and its concerns at all levels than any of the other candidates in the race, having served as President of the Amherst Center Schools P.T.A., as an elected member of the Amherst School Committee, as a member of the Advisory Board of Holyoke Community College, and as Lecturer in American Studies and Dean of Freshmen at Amherst College.

In addition to experience and ability, Reed would bring to the legislature a sense of compassion and humanitarian concern. He was one of the originators of Amherst's ABC (A Better Change) Program, which has enabled students from disadvantaged educational backgrounds to attend better schools than were otherwise available to them and to experience a different learning environment. Reed is also determined to fight in the legislature for better conditions at the Belchertown State School because it is the responsibility of the state to provide decent conditions and facilities there.

Finally, Reed has an unusually deep commitment to civic responsibility. He has taken leave from Amherst College to campaign as a full time candidate and promises if elected to serve the voters as a full time representative.

It is too seldom that we have the opportunity to vote for candidates of Nat Reed's caliber. We should not let this opportunity pass us by.

Robert E. Jones

ReferendumQuestion6

To The Editor:

During the past few weeks, the question of Massachusetts adopting a graduated income tax has been the subject of many advertisements both on radio and television and in newspapers. Because these advertisements are misleading, the League of Women Voters of Amherst is concerned that the voter will not understand the true issue before him on election day. Government efficiency is not the subject of question 6. The real question is: Will we permit the state legislature to tax residents of Massachusetts with graduated rates?

ITEM: A graduated income tax is not a new tax. At present we have an income tax which is limited by the state constitution to a flat rate. If this flat-rate tax were replaced by a graduated income tax, persons earning high incomes would pay at higher rates than those of middle and lower incomes. This is a fairer tax because it is based on a taxpayer's ability to pay. When you hear that the lower and middle income taxpayers will pay more, consider for a moment that the persons campaigning against the graduated income tax are those who are able to spend tens of thousands of dollars on a media campaign.

ITEM: Passage of referendum question 6 will not give the legislature a blank check. At present the state legialture is permitted to set the income tax at any rate as long as it is the same for everyone. It can set the sales tax at any rate and it can widen the base of the sales tax to include items like food, clothes, or prescription drugs. In fact, the legialture can do anything except enact a fair, graduated income tax.

ITEM: The graduated income tax is a fair method of taxation. It is based on the ability to pay. The amount of money needed by the Commonwealth through taxation is independent of whether the state's income tax is flat-rate or graduated. Examples in these advertisements are based on the assumption that there would be a total tax increase of about $300 million. Their graduated income tax figures reflect this increase, but their ad does not show the increase which would occur using the present flat-rate system. According to the best figures we have seen, there would be an even greater increase in lower and middle income groups under the current flat-rate system.

Because the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts supports an income tax with graduated rates applied to income from all sources, we are urging Massachusetts voters to vote YES on question 6. If you have any questions call: 253-776 or 253-7683.

League of Women Voters of Amherst
Emma-Jean Cole, President
Myrna L. Hewitt, GIT Campaign Chairman

More Letters Pg. 13

Editorial Points

If we pretend that there's a last minute movement to vote in George McGovern maybe it'll actually happen.

•••

We wish other student newspapers would stop saying that UMass teams aren't as good as they're cracked up to be. If they really aren't, then why do other teams keep losing to them?

•••

The most exciting thing at the Student Senate meeting last night was that the tables were arranged differently than usual.

University Interest

To The Editor:

A friend said to me today, "You know if you're not aggressive the system will bull you over-it's a sad thing in a way." We are residents of Lincoln Apts. and are now being confronted with a forty dollar rent raise, the result of this University's unwillingness to take responsibility for providing assistance to its married students. In whose interest does this University exist? Should the student have to spend most of his time trying to keep from getting screwed by that which is supposed to exist in his benefit? Ah, but the meager University will only point to the State, who in its turn will say that it acts in the best interest of the taxpayer. Something stinks; and it's the bureaucratic facade that this University, that this State, that this Country, hides behind, so as to in reality better their own Political, Economic interests.

Case in Point-Lincoln Apts. are now faced with a $70,000 bill for roofing and exterior repairs, which the proposed $40 increase is supposed to pay for. This expense was supposed to be paid for by the State, the owner of the Apts., but who this summer backed down on their commitment, and put the Apts. on a self-liquidating basis, which means that though they continue to excercise full control over the Apts., they assume no financial responsibility for them, forcing the tenants to incur the total cost. Why? Is there a profit in providing for married student housing? In the State's view, in this University's view, No.

Case in Point-Being State property, due to Physical Plant union laws, only men from the P.P. can do the maintenance in the Apts. Last year the total cost to us for maintenance was fifty-six thousand dollars. Thus this benevolent State sees fit that we are forced to pay $20 to have a light bulb fixed by no less than two men. In whose interest does this University exist? Ours?

We, tenants, have to pay $70,000 for our roofs, have to pay $56,000 to maintain the P.P., when neither our own University, nor the State, will admit, or can see, their responsibility towards us. Is this merely ironic, or foreshadowing of the continued alienation of man from his creation, the State, and his increased dependence upon it? Why are we here? To learn to be aggressive? To be bulled over? It's a sad thing.

Patrick Walker

County Treasurer

To The Editor:

Little or no changes have taken place in the operations of the County Treasurer's office for the past 25 years. My opponent, Howard Banner, made a major issue of getting more office space for the Treasurer's office at the LWV Candidate's night last Wednesday evening. He leaves one with the impression that this is the most important issue in this campaign. I believe that it's about time that the Treasurer's office earned the space that it presently occupies. Central purchasing administered from the Treasurer's office is a must in my estimation. Not only will County Government benefit from the economies of group purchasing but the 20 community governments within the County will benefit as well.

If elected, I, Bill O'Connor, will immediately set up and administer a central purchasing program from the Treasurer's office. The monies saved from this one program will more than cover the cost of running the County Treasurer's office. The above is an obvious service and but one of a number of regional services that should be administered through our County Govt. I would consider it an honor to join the County team and help bring County Government into the 20th century.

Bill O'Connor

Reed Again

To The Editor:

Nat Reed is the real "education" candidate in the upcoming State Representative election for the 2nd Hampshire district.

As Dean of Freshmen at Amherst for nine years he has learned to understand the needs of students.

As a member of the Amherst School Committee he has gained the experience to best understand the effects of possible changes in the funding of public education.

Most important, for the University, as a Republican Nat Reed will be a stronger voice in the Legislature in terms of influencing the Governor on matters concerning the UMASS Amherst Campus. The fact that Governor Sargent is coming to Amherst on Saturday on Nat's behalf is an indication of this. Just as Senator Brooke has been a "free" Republican in opposing the President's war policy, so will Nat Reed be a "free" Republican in opposing these policies of the Governor which would be harmful to the Amherst Campus. Opposition from a member of the Governor's own party would be much more influential than from the opposition which too often can be interpreted as purely political.

Vote "EDUCATION" on November 7–Vote NAT REED–for all of us.

David R. Hornfischer

Nota Bene

It is the policy of this newspaper that there should be allowance for rebuttal on all issues presented on the editorial pages. In keeping with this policy no letters, cartoons, or columns of a partisan nature on issues pertaining to the election will be accepted after 6 P.M. Thursday, November 2. All rebuttals must be received no later than 6 P.M. Sunday, November 5, and no new issues will be allowed to be presented in the context of the rebuttal. Also, in order to avoid any last minute confusion, no issues or rebuttals of a partisan nature pertaining to the election will be printed on these pages on election day.

Get it together.

BOONE'S FARM STRAWBERRY HILL. APPLE WINE & NATURAL STRAWBERRY & OTHER NATURAL FLAVORS. BOONE'S FARM, MODESTO, CALIFORNIA.

Letters To The Editor (Cont'd.)

An Injustice To The "Old Ladies"

To The Editor:

This letter is written in response to your October 31, 1972 front page story concerning the theft in the dining commons by its women employees. We, as student employees of Worcester Commons feel that a great injustice has been done to these ladies and demand a retraction of such slander and an apology to those "old ladies".

There are also a few points we would like to make known to the patrons of Worcester Commons: First of all, there was supposedly a meeting called of all dining commons workers for the purpose of reviewing theft incidents. We were neither called nor knew of such a meeting.

Secondly, the contents of the plastic bag shown in the picture contained dispoable pie tins that were going to be used for the making of Christmas wreaths and decorations for this dining commons. The lady in question was making them on her own time and money for our enjoyment. Furthermore the other bag in the picture was only a knitting bag full of yarn and not food.

Thirdly, it is a union law that the ladies get two meals and a half hour break. The morning ladies have to stagger theirs as breakfast is served right up until lunch. Those that work in the afternoon take their break just before they eat supper in order to finish all the preparations of the evening meal. That is why it appears that the ladies sit around all the time and do nothing.

We're not saying that theft does not go on around here--there are proven cases of it; what we are trying to relay is that these women were falsely accused and that there were many libelous accusations against the supervisor and manager also false. How many students can honestly say that they themselves have never ripped anything off from university facilities? The majority of items taken by the ladies are those destined for the garbage. This doesn't mean foodstuffs either, but aluminum pie tins, beef potpie holders, tart tins, etc. So for all you who feel that meal ticket prices have gone up as a result of the ladies stealing the dining commons blind, think twice when you see the guy behind fill up a bottle full of milk, stuff enough bread for the weekend into a newspaper, and jam his pockets full of cookies. Maybe you'll get your facts straight next time.

Peggy Gerow
Kathryn Harris
Janice Claflin
David Sacino
Sandy Tuikka
Debra Colello

Matter Of Priorities

To The Editor:

When I learned of the court action taken against A.P.O. Service Fraternity this last week, I couldn't help but express my feelings to those people involved. The Las Vegas Contest was open to everyone on this campus. Only a few organizations made an effort to support A.P.O. with this venture. Candidates are chosen not by sex, beauty, etc. but on their entire selves. Even the organization which protested, I'm sure, has a leader, someone they picked over other choices they had. A.P.O. has now for two years set up a protest vote jar and yet both years the money contributed was nominal. What's the excuse for that? I'm sure none would consider Belchertown School an unworthy cause. I've been lucky enough to indirectly help A.P.O. with Las Vegas Night for three years now and I can honestly say I have never seen another organization work so hard on behalf of so many worthy causes. If all these protesting people have to do is spend their time hassling these people for their good intentions, I feel sorry for them. If they put their energy into something more pressing I'm sure they'd do a fantastic job. Just remember, if it were not for A.P.O. Belchertown School would be $800,000 poorer now, the Red Cross would be many thousands of pints of blood shorter, the Heart Fund wouldn't consider UMass an enthusiastic donor and Amherst, along with UMass would be without a top notch, active service organization. Next time we criticize maybe we should stop and think how much we've done for others lately. It's a matter of priorities. Think about it!

Marilyn Elliott

CREATION
A New Shop
Specializing in Antique Clothes, Beaded Purses — & Handmade Antique Jewelry Boxes etc.
Come & See
Opening Fri.
253 N. Pleasant St.
Carriage Shop Mall

The Brilliance Of The Bureaucracy

To The Editor:

In another sterling example of University efficiency the new library which was originally scheduled for completion in the fall of '71 then rescheduled for use by the fall of '72 we are now told will be ready for use by the fall of '73. These minor (?) setbacks have been due in part to the construction company's inflated ego as to their skill in completing this monumental tribute to the red clay brick.

Rumor has it that delay stems partially from, "ventilating problems," which unreliable sources tell me center around fumes from the physical plant smokestacks being sucked into the library's ventilating system and being decidedly unhealthy for those within. Three coughs for the farsighted engineering staff of D. O'Connell and sons and Jack Littlefield of the planning board.

Another reason for this situation is an administration that grants contracts to companys who bring us the tallest, most useless, uninhabitable and bookless library the world let alone U. Mass has ever seen.

This shit is going to continue until we make it stop. The administration is pissing in our faces and telling us it's rain, and WE'RE BELIEVING IT! We are paying through the nose and being led around by it. Act.

Phillip C. Curry

Musicians Needed

To The Editor:

This letter is aimed at any interested and serious musicians in the area. There are a group of inmates at the Northampton County Jail who are looking for musicians to play back-up for a rhythm and blues/ jazz oriented group. Rhythm guitar, bass, percussion, organ or any other instruments are welcome.

The prisoners are serious about forming this group. They would like to have the musicians come down to the jail once or twice a week for practice sessions, at any time that will suit the musicians' convenience. They are interested in doing the singing and in developing the group to the point where they can perform out around the area. They really want a chance to make this work out, and by some bit of luck they have managed to talk the sheriff into allowing them to try it. But they really need some people to help them out, people who have the time to give to a bunch of very nice guys. We are presently involved in teaching them to play guitar through the Actionlab program, and we can vouch for their interest and sincerity. Please, if you are able to do this, or are interested at all, contact: Flo and Karen, 546-7393. Thank you!

Flo Polansky
Karen Walsh

THE CHEQUERS
Dinner — TONITE — Movie
Chicken Cacciatore
Spaghetti w/tomato sauce
tossed green salad
oven baked garlic bread
$5.95 For TWO
and then enjoy the movie of your choice
at the
CAMPUS CINEMA
All For One Fabulous Price

CARL ANDERSON'S
RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE
Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013
BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.
DAILY LUNCHEON SPECIALS
WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.
THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night
Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar included. $3.95
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.
THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY NIGHTS
KING ARTHUR TRIO
plus MARGO 8:30 - 12:30

CALDOR
Northampton Only
Proudly Invites You to A
PENTAX SYSTEM
FACTORY DEMONSTRATION
See and trade up to the all-new
HONEYWELL PENTAX ES
The hit of Photokina '72 "the world's photo trade show"
FRIDAY, Nov. 3, 11:00 A.M. to 9:00 P.M.
SATURDAY, Nov. 4, 10:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.
For details, see tomorrow's ad in this paper.
180 North Street
Northampton
2 Days Only
Fri. & Sat.

Ed Courses Available

The following list represents Education learning experiences that are now available under the School of Education's Flexible Curriculum. The purpose of the Flexible Curriculum is to provide alternative choices when developing a program of studies. By maintaining a modified record-keeping and scheduling system within the School of Education, which supplements the University's system, it is possible to have courses which break away from the three-credit, full semester standard.

Who's eligible: University Students (Preference to Education Students.)

Tuition
1. No cost to undergraduates.
2. No cost to graduates registered for more than 10 credits.
3. Graduate students with less than 10 credits will register and pay second semester except for tuition waivers.

Credit
1. 100 mods. 1 credit
2. Graduate students with less than 10 credits will receive credit second semester

Registration
1. Where: Room 121, School of Education
2. When: Prior to the second meeting of the learning experience
3. Full time students may get forms to register for additional university credit in room 121.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES OFFERED:
Lex. +7859 Melodization of Harmony, R. Wiggins, Wed., Nov. 8, 1:25-3:50, 43 mods, Instructor's Home
Lex. +8410 Spec. Prob. in Ed: An Experience in Personal Growth, A. Avesar/D. Mastriano Supr, Don Carew, Nov. 6-12, Mon.-Fri., 7:45-10:15 p.m., 180 mods, Mrst 118, Sat. 9:00-5:00, Sun. 11:00-6:00, Boyd 253
Lex. +3450 Gestalt Therapy Applications in Education, S. LaFrance, 11/6, 7, 8, 7:45-9:45, 11/10, 7:45-10:15, 11/11, 10:00-6:00, 11/12, 11:00-4:00, 180 mods, 11/6-11/10 French 106, 11/11-11/12 Boyd 249

Lex. +4140 The Administrator in Higher Education: D. Flight Staff, Tu 7:30-10:00 p.m., Nov. 7, 10 mods, M.D. Aud.
Lex. +4226 Change and the Use of Power in Schools, K. Blanchard, Mon. Nov. 6-3:35-6:05, 25 mods, Herter 116
Lex. +6000 Sign Language and Fingerspelling, S. Patrie/R. Gonzales, Wed 9:05-11:35, Nov. 7 Dec. 12, 100 mods, STK 113

Lex. +4430 Spec. Prob. in Ed: Educational Statistics I. Factors Influencing the Correlation Coefficient, W. Gorth/H. Swaminathan, Mon. 3:35-6:05, By Arrangement or Nov. 6, 15 mods, Chen 217
Lex. +5749 Spec. Prob. in Ed: Freedom and Structure Through the Eyes of the Bent Twig Alternative School, Bob Mackin, Th 7:45-10:15, Nov. 2, 15 mods, SBA 204

INTERPRETATION OF LEX #
1. 0001-2999 Undergraduate Courses
2. 3000-6999 Undergraduate and Graduate Courses
3. 7000-9999 Graduate Courses.
*700 level courses and above.
QUESTIONS
Call 545-1543 or come to room 121, School of Education

Infirmary (In An Emergency) 5-2671

CHASTITY BELT $4.95
Skinny Shiny Vinyl — Functional & Pretty — Tiny Lock & Two Keys Fits Waists up to 30".
Chasty Girly
ORDER NOW FOR XMAS!
No CODS or CASH Please
UNIV SVCS ASSOCIATES
Post Office Box 9327
WASHINGTON, D. C. 20005
Cannot Be Removed Intact Without A Key. Wearers Should Not Date Any Locksmiths.

Coolidge Residents Veto Transfer

By LINDA CRAVEN

By petition, the students of Calvin Coolidge Tower have saved their Residence House Assistant from transfer to John Quincy Adams Tower.

A petition was passed around Coolidge late last week and early this week protesting the removal of Dick Luce, Residence House Assistant in charge of Security. Luce was to be swapped for the security officer of J.Q.A. because of Adams' increasing security problems.

The petition stated that the students of Coolidge had no say in Luce's transfer, and that the matter should have been voted upon by the residence house. It condemned the administration for taking matters into their own hands without consulting the students.

Also the petition elaborated on Coolidge's excellent security system now in effect, and expressed its concern as to what would happen if the security officer of the troubled J.Q.A. Tower were to be installed in Coolidge. "Why make J.Q.A.'s problem ours?" it stated.

After being presented the petition by the students of Coolidge, officials at Whitmore have reinstated Luce to his former position as Head of Security for Coolidge Tower. And after interviewing several of the residents of Coolidge, the general consensus is that they are "very glad he is back."

Vet Seminar Nov. 8th

Many rumors have surrounded the passage of the 1972 amendments to the veterans educational laws. The Veterans' Office on campus has had numerous inquiries about the exact contents of the legislation.

Due to these many inquiries the Veterans' Office has provided for a question and answer seminar to be held Wednesday, November 8th from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 163 of the Campus Center. At that time a representative from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Boston will be more than willing to answer any and all questions about the amendments.

All veterans who have any questions about the new Bill should plan to attend.

WEAR-HOUSE
COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER
201 N. PLEASANT ST.

OPEN HOUSE
Phi Mu Delta
Beer & Mixed Drinks
Fri. Nite 9:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.
(Frat Sor. Park)

CALDOR
Giant Sale on "The Progressives"
Yesterday And Tomorrow.
AT OUR LOW, LOW PRICES!!

A specially priced 2-record set
COUNT BASIE SUPER CHIEF
28 Legendary Performances By Basie And His Sidemen Featuring Billie Holiday, Mildred Bailey, Helen Humes And Jimmy Rushing
G 31224

A specially priced 2-record set
2 RECORD SET
JOHN HAMMOND'S SPIRITUALS TO SWING
30TH ANNIVERSARY CONCERT (1967)
CLASSIC LIVE PERFORMANCES BY Mason Williams, Count Basie, Joe Turner, Pete Johnson, John Handy, Big Mama Thornton and others
G 30776

The Mahavishnu Orchestra with John McLaughlin
The Inner Mounting Flame
including
Meetings of the Spirit, Dawn, The Noonward Race, A Lotus on Irish Streams, Awakening
KC 31067*

ORNETTE COLEMAN
SKIES OF AMERICA
THE LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONDUCTED BY DAVID MEASHAM
including
The Military Birthdays And Funerals, The Artist In America, Skies Of America, The Men Who Live In The White House
KC 31562

A specially priced 2-record set
SOLO FLIGHT
THE GENIUS OF CHARLIE CHRISTIAN
including
Good Enough To Keep, Air Mail Special, Stardust, I Got Rhythm, Tea For Two, I Can't Give You Anything But Love (Baby)
3.37 E598
G 30779

A specially priced 2-record set
THE GENIUS OF LOUIS ARMSTRONG
VOLUME I: 1923-1933
including
St. Louis Blues, Cornet Chop Suey, The Lonesome Road, Chicago (Breakdown), Lawd You Made The Night Too Long
G 30416

UPENDO NI PAMOJA
The Ramsey Lewis Trio
including
Sleeping Into Darkness, Put You Hand In The Hand, People Make The World Go Round, Collage, Please Send Me Someone To Love
3.37 E598
KC 31096*

WEATHER REPORT
I SING THE BODY ELECTRIC
including
Unknown Soldier, Second Sunday In August, Directions, Vertical Invader, Dr. Honoris Causa
KC 31352*

A specially priced 2-record set
BILLIE HOLIDAY
GOD BLESS THE CHILD
including
St. Louis Blues, Georgia On My Mind, God Bless The Child, I Cover The Waterfront, Love Me Or Leave Me
G 30782

A specially priced 2-record set
Bessie Smith
The World's Greatest Blues Singer
Bessie's First & Last Recordings
including
Down Hearted Blues, Keeps On A Ramin', Gulf Coast Blues, Ain't Nobody's Business If I Do, I Need A Little Sugar In My Bowl
GP 33

LIVING TIME
BILL EVANS
GEORGE RUSSELL ORCHESTRA
EVENTS I-VIII
KC 31490*

PAUL WINTER/WINTER CONSORT
ICARUS
INCLUDING
MINUET, ODE TO A FILMORE DRESSING ROOM, WHOLE EARTH CHANT, ICARUS
KE 31643

A specially priced 2-record set
2 RECORD SET
ALL-TIME GREATEST HITS
BENNY GOODMAN
INCLUDING
STOMPIN AT THE SAVOY, ONE O'CLOCK JUMP, JERSEY BOUNCE, SING, SING, SING, LET'S DANCE
3.77 F698
KG 31547*

DUKE ELLINGTON'S GREATEST HITS
INCLUDING
SATIN DOLL, DO NOTHING 'TILL YOU HEAR FROM ME, TAKE THE "A" TRAIN, I'M BEGINNING TO SEE YOU
2.67 D498
CS 9629*

A specially priced 2-record set
MILES DAVIS
BITCHES BREW
INCLUDING
PHARAOH'S DANCE, SPANISH KEY, JOHN McLAUGHLIN, MILES RUNS THE VOODOO DOWN, SANCTUARY
GP 26*

A specially priced 2-record set
EXPECTATIONS
KEITH JARRETT
including
Sundance, Vision, Rouselton, Expectations, Nomads
3.77 F698
KG 31580*

*Also available on tape

On Columbia and Epic Records

3 WAYS TO CHARGE master charge
BANKAMERICARD

SALE:
THURS. thru SAT.
Mon. thru Fri. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Construction At Wheeler Begins Again

By JANE MACONE

"I hate it! We should get paid just to listen to the racket. It's great for 'Peeping Toms'." These are just a few of the adverse comments concerning the construction at Wheeler Dormitory in central area.

The construction started two weeks ago and is marked by the intricate structures which surround the building. The work which should have been done last summer was delayed by lack of funds. But now the 40,000 dollar job is well under way. It was initiated to correct a structural flaw in the building. The brick coping at the top of the building had loosened due to deterioration in the aluminum flashing. Apparently water was seeping in under the brick and caused the wall to swell. It would have been just a matter of time before the bricks would have collapsed under the pressure.

Installation of a rust proof copper flashing is necessary to correct the flaw. Weather permitting the job should be finished within a week. Then hopefully Wheeler residents can get some peace and quiet as well as privacy.

Weather
(9) 256-6714

ALL THESE VEHICLES CARRY A 50-50 GUARANTEE FOR 30 DAYS.

1970 Pont. GTO, V-8 a real cream puff $2495
1969 Toyota Corona Real Sharp $1095
1965 Ford Mustang Red V-8 Std. $595
1967 Ford Galaxie V-8 Auto. $795
1967 Olds Delta 88 V-8 Auto-air $895
1965 Ford Custom V-8 Auto $495
1971 Std. Beattle Orange $1595
1970 Sq. Back Clean car $1695
1965 VW Sedan Black $595
1963 VW Bus 17,000 orig. miles $1095

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.
OPEN EVES. 'till 9.
NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN
Your Authorized VW Dealer
246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton
FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers
Call 584-8620

Group To Portray Korean Culture

Ah Ahk: The Performing Arts of Korea will be presented in a single performance in Bowker Auditorium, University of Massachusetts-Amherst, tomorrow evening, Nov. 3, at 8. Ah Ahk brings to students and area residents the culture of one of the oldest countries in the world and at the same time, one of the most unknown. The program embraces the classical court music and chamber music of Korea, its military, religious and folk music and dances; and the Ah Ahk Troupe is noted for its colorful and authentic costumes and rare instruments.

Tickets are on sale at the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, Amherst, telephone 545-0202, for $1.50 ($1 for full-time UMass undergrads). Remaining tickets will be available at the Bowker Box Office one hour before the event.

NEW ENGLAND'S LEADING NIGHT CLUB
WAREHOUSE ONE
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129

U. MASS. COLLEGE STUDENTS 21 YEARS AND OVER
TOP ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY at the WAREHOUSE ONE
NEW ENGLAND'S FINEST NIGHT CLUB
288 VERGE STREET Tel. (413) 543-3100 SPRINGFIELD, MASS. 01129
THE NOW SOUND OF MUSIC
Welcomes You 7 Nights a Week to the Greatest Sound of Music.

ROCK
JAZZ
AND
THE TOP
40 HITS

2 Dance Floors and a Seating Capacity For 800 People. The Greatest Place You Can Go and Meet the Swinging Set Around.

NOW APPEARING → FREEDOM FARE
8 Guys 1 Lovely Gal
Direct from the Landmark Las Vegas, An Exciting Group with Music To Turn You On.

NO ADMISSION, COVER CHARGE OR MINIMUM.

Greek UNICEF Drive Successful

Happy Halloween!!!!!!

By MARTY KELLEY

Halloween and UNICEF are synonymous. And in troubled times it's nice to think of those who really can't help themselves. All day Monday and portions of Monday night, over $1,067.19 was collected in an all campus drive for UNICEF sponsored by the Service Committee of Greek Council.

Committee Chairwoman Jean Bergen reported that she received excellent cooperation from all the Greek Houses in the completion of a most successful charitable operation.

The Greeks collected at the Campus Center, Blue Wall, and the Hatch Monday from 10 to 3 with each particular house being responsible for timed duty. Then from 7-9 p.m. each fraternity and sorority was assigned to canvas a dorm.

And for one fraternity this presented a minor problem in communication as Miss Bergen recounts. "Apparently SAE thought they were to collect on Tuesday night and when I called their Greek Council rep. Dave Cria at 10:30 he said that he thought that they were to collect at Brooks House Halloween night. Believe it or not Dave came right down, got a can, and collected at Brooks all by himself."

It was this type of spirit that made the Greek Council UNICEF drive under the direction of Bergen and the Service Committee a tremendous success.

Special praise was given to the Delta Chi pledges with Ray Schow directing, who collected over $90 in less than an hour at the Campus Center. The Revelers also collected near $80 in less than an hour at the Float Parade Friday night. Students also approached Jean and offered their services for the Drive.

"Now that it's over I'd just like to thank again all the Houses that participated and say that Greek Council is looking forward to doing it again next year," said Jean. $1,067.19 will be tough to beat.

THERE'S A GIRL IN MY SOUP

Starring: Peter Sellers, Goldie Hawn

Mahar Auditorium Nov. 2 & 3

Showings at 8 P.M. & 10 P.M. each night
Admission 75¢

Mr. Immense Presents

IN COLD BLOOD

S.U.B.

Friday 7 & 9:30

TONIGHT!

"SUNDAY, BLOODY SUNDAY"

7 & 9:30

S.U.B. 50¢

Dustin Hoffman

in

MIKE NICHOLS

THE GRADUATE

Music by Simon & Garfunkel

Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9, 11 in Mahar

Sponsored by the Cinemaclub

SHOWCASE CINEMAS 1·2·3·4·5

24 HR. TEL. 733-5131

ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE RD. WEST SPFLD.

Jim Brown vs SLAUGHTER! R

Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:40 - 9:30 Sat - Sun 2-3:50 - 5:40 7:40 - 9:30

SLAUGHTER STELLA STEVENS · RIP TORN JIM BROWN

THE 2 BIGGEST BONDS OF ALL..

SEAN CONNERY JIM FLEMING "THUNDERBALL" Daily 9:50 Wed - Sat - Sun 6:15 - 9:50 PG

SEAN CONNERY IS JAMES BOND YOU ONLY LIVE TWICE Daily 7:30 Wed - Sat Sun 2-7:30

"JOHN KNOWLES' CLASSIC BEST-SELLER BECOMES A CLASSIC MOTION PICTURE" "A SEPARATE PEACE" ★★★½★ New York Daily News

"ONE OF THE BEST FILMS ABOUT YOUTH EVER MADE." Rex Reed New York Daily News Syndicated Columnist

Daily 2 - 7:30 - 9:30 Sat - Sun 2 - 3:50 5:40 - 7:35 9:00

PG A SEPARATE PEACE

When The Legends Die

Wed Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:30 - 9:35 Sat - Sun 2-3:35 - 5:25 - 7:20 - 9:35 PG

YOU'LL LIKE a thriller MY MOTHER PG Wed. Mat. 2:00 Daily 7:20 - 9:40 Sat. - Sun. 2 - 3:55 - 5:40 - 7:35 - 9:45

THE VALACHI PAPERS STARTS NOV. 8th

New Grad School Deans Hired

Dean Mortimer H. Appley of the University of Massachusetts Graduate School has announced the appointment of Dr. Eugene B. Piedmont as associate dean of the Graduate School and Mr. Robert L. Chew as special assistant to the dean of the Graduate School.

Dr. Piedmont, an associate professor in the UMass sociology department, replaces Dr. Arthur C. Gentile, who resigned last July to accept a position as dean of the Graduate School and vice-provost for research at the University of Okalahoma. Dean Piedmont will be primarily responsible for graduate academic affairs, including the daily operations of over 100 master or doctoral degree-granting programs.

Mr. Chew replaces Dr. Henry I. Tragle, who retired last month as assistant dean. As special assistant to the dean, Mr. Chew is responsible for the Office of Degree Requirements, which processes all master's and doctor's degrees and publishes the Graduate School Bulletin. He will work closely with Dean Piedmont in the area of student affairs, and with the graduate school registrar in developing and implementing data storage, retrieval, and processing techniques for admissions, records, enrollment statistics, and degree certification.

Professor Piedmont has been at the University since 1965. His previous academic appointments, jointly in sociology and psychiatry, were at the State University of New York at Buffalo, and the University of Virginia. In addition to a bachelor's degree from SUNYB, he holds a master's degree in sociology and anthropology from the University of Rochester and a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of Buffalo. He has also taken post-doctoral training at Washington University in St. Louis.

His speciality is medical sociology and he has published numerous scholarly articles in hospital and health care journals and participated in extensive research projects in local health-related facilities, including Franklin County Public Hospital, Worcester Hahnemann Hospital, the University Health Service,

Notices

(Continued from P. 18)

To the girl who was going to Puffton but gave us a ride out Rte. 63 Fri. Oct. 27; we left our stroller in your car. Please call 549-6032.

Black cat with white patch on chest. Cat walks funny. Call 6-6465, 237 Gorman.

FOUND:

All black cat. Call 6-6465, 237 Gorman.

KOREAN KARATE:

Meeting will be held Mon. 8-10 pm. in WOPE room 101 Thurs. 8-10 in the Commonwealth room Student Union.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1960 Dodge Dart "Swinger" — standard, two-door, excellent condition, AM/FM radio, $1400. Call 546-6687 after 4 p.m. tf11-3

1966 MG Midget, give-away, $200.00, 4 nearly new Micheiln X radials. Call 546-5604, ask for Russ. 11-3

1966 Comet wagon, 6cyl., Mantran, $250. Needs some work, 549-6535 eves.

(AW C'mon guys, honest Al) is nearly (broke)! Save now during my (annual going out of business) sale 58 Ford panel (truck (no rust)) good tires all new brakes and front end. This (little beauty) runs dandy but it sure do need rings I'm crying right now as I write down this ridiculously low price $125! Takes it! 1-628-3294. tf11-2

1970 Simca $900 or best offer 32 miles per gallon in great shape, call Joe Tripp evenings 546-8024. tf11-2

1967 BMW 4dr. Sedan aw exhaust syst revalve job nw radials $1500 or best off. Call 773-9668 8 a.m.-5 p.m. tf11-3

63 Jag XKE, 2 tops, new tires, new valves and guides, $800 or best offer. 665-2975. tf11-3

68 Cougar, AT, PS, fact. air, low mi., excel. cond., 549-6718. tf11-3

For Sale — 1963 Chevy Belair, ex. cond., mech. good body, fine deal, runs great, owner needs scratch. $175. V8 auto., new tires, Call 549-6246. 11-3

1972 Super Beetle VW, sunroof, FM stereo tape deck & tapes, 100% warranty, exc. cond. Must sell before Jan. 1. Call Greg 253-7362. tf11-3

MGBGT '67, fine cond., needs minor eng. work, looked after like a baby. Have to sell, $600. Call 527-0956 evealngs, keep trying. 11-3

1960 Chevy Sedan, fall inspected. Gd. tires, incl. snow. Dependable transportation. Used daily. 665-1424. tf11-2

1971 Camaro, 3 spd. std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188. tf11-3

1941 Chevy Coupe, good running condition. call 1-467-0862. tf11-3

1966 Tempest, rbll 326 eng., 3 sped Hurst, MA95, stereo, $650.00. Call Steve 6-6204. tf11-3

69 V.W. Bug, clean, R & H, fog lights, bumper guards, tel. 772-0662 after 5:30. tf11-2

4 WD - Jeep — Wagoneer, new eng., clutch, trans., springs, tires, stick, ps-pb, more. $1250. Firm, call Jerry 549-1422 eves. tf11-3

Chevy Impala 65, 4 brl 283, 3 speed Hurst 200, needs new tires, fall sticker. Call 549-3706 and leave name and number. tf11-7

1970 VW Bus, exc. cond., sun roof, new eng. & clutch, 5 exc. tires. 1967 Honda 160 street bike, best offer. 545-0268, days, or 665-4100 eve. tf11-6

69 Triumph GT-6, after 6, 323-6541 or 788-7949 days. tf11-7

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cupboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550. 546-6555. tf11-7

67 Ford, 6 new tires, no inspection sticker, Nds ball joints, otherwise good conditios. Paul 253-7136. tf11-3

68 Oldsmobile 442 gray/blue, 4 spd., posi., mags, excellent engine, new clutch, very good body, sell or trade for 66-70 van, $1250. Eric 545-2304. tf11-6

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with less than 5,000 miles and still on and Semperest steel Lrited radials, all with less than 3,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2050, after 5. tf11-6

66 Chevy, Biscayne, excellent running condition, good body. Asking $525. Call Peter Zasada, 307 Greene, 545-2838 dorm phone. tf11-3

67 Volks Sedan, low miles, extant cond., must sell. $795 549-0548 eves. tf11-3

1966 Chevelle SS New motor, excellent condition, call 546-8177. tf11-2

1971 Honda car, excellent cond. 40 mi. per gal, $1,100, call 546-6827. tf11-8

MISCELLANEOUS

Make the fat cat pay his fair share. With a graduated income tax. Vote YES on question 6. tf11-6

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers, low cost, Spring vacation trips to Bermuda and Morocco. For more info., Call Rich Margil 317 Dwight 545-0790. tf11-3

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private home. Women preferred. Call 584-8742. tf11-3

Room for rent $65/mo. furn., refrig., sm. oven. Come to 150 No. Pleasant St., or call, 253-9966. Ask for John. Behind Faces of Earth. tf11-3

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3601. tf12-22

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-1436. tf11-17

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1440. tf11-0

Passport photos, fast fast fast service. Lang's photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-5047. Located in center of town near Wearhouse. tf11-6

Two experienced ed. majors forming responsive day care group, 9 - 12 and/or 1 - 5. Will pick up children. 549-0056. tf11-2

Do you need a haircut? Experienced person will do shags, trims, layers ... Call for appt. Ask for Jill 6-7995. tf11-3

ROOMMATE WANTED

F. roommate wanted for house in country, own room, $58. $50/mo. utils. Car accessary. Call Patricia, 586-2942, or 545-8065. tf11-3

Room available center of Amherst. immediately or 2nd semester. Possibly two rooms. Call 253-5257 after 5. Linda, Mona. tf11-3

All factors negotiable. Call Brian at 549-6011, leave message. tf11-3

Won't discriminate M. or F. roommate wanted, own room, open minded ungrad, pretty clean $85/mo. $100 dep. 345 Puffton 549-6057, Frank. tf11-8

Female roommate wanted, for house in Northampton. Own room, $58/mo & utils. Car necessary. Call Patricia 586-2942 or 545-8065. tf11-7

ROOM WANTED

Couple needs room in private home or small apt. in Amherst, starting end of semester. Call 524-8436 after 6. tf11-2

APT. FOR RENT

$50 cash to people who will rent my 2-bedroom apt., all appliances, immediate occupancy, $100.00 inclusive. 665-4721. tf11-3

LOST

Lost! Fri. 27th red leather key case w/ VW keys. Call Kathy or Nancy at 545-0724, 545-0725, Rm. 108. Emergency. No spare keys. Please!! tf11-3

Lost, gold rimmed eyeglasses, reward, call Russ. 253-5677. Lost in vicinity of G. Washington. tf11-8

ENTERTAINMENT

Dustin Hoffman, Katherine Ross, and Anne Bancroft star in Mike Nichols, "The Graduate", Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9 & 11 in Mahar. tf11-3

Bluewall Coffeehouse, Thur., Nov. 2 with the "South Street Rhythm & Blues Band", an All-Star Jug Band, and much more! 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. FREE. tf11-2

Jim Kweskin returns! Sunday at 7:30 & 10:00 at the Folklore Center tickets can be bought in advance or at the door. Info 253-9264. tf11-3

Robbie Basho in concert this Friday & Saturday at 8:00 p.m. at The Folklore Center, 16 Spring St., 253-9264. Robbie is on Takoma Rec. tf11-3

Mr. Immense preseats "In Cold Blood" this Friday nite in the S.U. Ballroom, at 7 & 9:30. A real chiller! tf11-3

Interested in playing at the Bluewall Coffeehouse? Call Flo or Karen at 546-7393. tf11-2

Hear John Sharkey and other fine performers at The Bluewall Coffeehouse, tonight. tf11-2

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1969 Norton Commando, 8000 mile, excellent condition, $800.00. Call 256-8687 p.m. tf11-3

1972 Norton 750 Roadster with full ferring, 1100 mil, $1600. Call 253-3921. tf11-7

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $100 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine runs very dependable. Asking $450-367-2762. tf11-3

Last call! 1971 Honda CL350 ideal on/off road bike meticulously maintained, helmets, chain, etc. $650 fall price, 545-1509 a.m. 253-2412 p.m. tf11-2

1972 Bultaco Alpina, 250 cc. 5 speed, street legal, $100 miles, new cond., $750. or best offer. Call John 546-7040. tf11-3

HELP WANTED

Qualified registered nurse for coronary care, and/or nursing supervisor for full time position on 3rd shift. Please contact Mrs. Alice Goethel, R.N., director of nursing service, Wing Memorial Hospital, Wright Street, Palmer, Mass. Phone 1-283-7651. Ext. 83. tf11-2

Friendly ice Cream, King St., Nlamp, has opeaings part/full time days/evenings. Weekend availibility/own car required. Call 584-0555. tf11-8

Students needed. Hours & wages neg. Apply in person Hadley Pizza & Sub, next to McDonalds in Northampton. tf11-8

Male senior or grad student wntd to help on GRE. Over 600 desired. Send name, add & phone to GRE, 89 Ray St., Ludlow, Mass. 01056. tf11-2

Anyone interested in working for John Miller, Election Day, please attend informal reception, Van Meter, No. Rec. Room, Fri. 7:30 p.m. tf11-12

HOMES FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $3,000. Call 253-5534 after 5 p.m.

WANTED

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Engine wanted for 1969 MGB, pref. a used one in good running cond. Please call Bill at 546-7740. tf11-3

Wanted: 2 bedrm. appt., to lease or sublease Jan - June, within 10-12 mi from campus, call Dick or Joe 546-6287 or Ted 546-6279. tf11-9

Couch for bachelor decor, good cond. please, donations or $. Call 549-6441, 5-6 p.m. tf11-3

FOR SALE

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cubboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550. 546-6555. 11-3

New Mgaaastan coat, 5'6" - 5'8". Originally $85, now 1/2 price, $42.50. Contact Ned at 615 Field or 546-6851. tf11-3

Repainted Carleton frame. New derailleurs, cables, levers. Completely overhauled & greased. $65. See Andrew, SWP Campaign Table at Hatch. tf11-3

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf-sem.

1970 Rosemount ski boots, excellent conditios, fastback model, size 10 w, asking only $90.00. Call Bill @ 367-9586. tf11-6

Try these Shaklee products, new concept, toothpaste, proteinized shampoo, basic 1, - laundry granules, 100% biodegradable, Carol, 253-2841. tf11-6

Air Force parkas cheap. You'll help a student & save bucks. 584-2417. tf11-2

3 Books, 4-sale "None Dare Call it Conspiracy" explains the Communist plot to take full control of U.S. "Nixon" It tells the truth of our president — "Teddy Bare" explains the Chappaquiddick case — these are priced $1.00, $2.00, $2.00 inorded for more information write to: G. Gawron, 1 Burn St., Chicopee, Mass., 01020. tf11-3

2 175 x 14" snow tire Radial, used 1 winter, $50. Call 665-4719, keep trying. tf11-3

Guitar, 12 string Yamaha, FG-180, with extra set of strings $100. Call 665-4230. tf11-3

Hitachi car stereo cassette player, only 1 yr old, in like new cond., complete with lock mount, only $45. Call anytime 665-2949. tf11-3

Realistic 4 and 8 track tape player, complete with two speakers, looks like new, only $40. Call 665-2949. tf11-3

1971 Feader reverb amp, good for guitar and harp and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279. tf11-7

Metal skis, 205 CM. W Solomon 40 bndgs, Heake buckle ski boots, 9w, plus boot case & tree, $100. Will sell sep. Call George at 665-1400. tf11-3

Book: "Modern Portugese" for Portugese 126. Excellent condition. Free Port. & Eng. dictionary. Al Cook, 401 MacKemmie, 546-9016. tf11-7

1966 Chevy Impala, great condition, 4 new tires, low mileage, 283, auto., stereo tape deck, $600. Call Jeff 6-8913. tf11-3

1966 Ford Mustang, perfect running order, 6 cyl., auto., very economical, good interior, $385. Call Steve 6-8018. tf11-3

Snow tires, G78-14, w/w Sears Dynaglas, only 1500 miles of use, call 549-1617. tf11-3

AKAI Tape deck, Model X150-D, complete overhaul, like new, $100. Call 549-6425, ask for Keat. tf11-3

Toyota Corolla 1600, new radials, tach snows, driving lights, $1250. Call 549-0415 after 6:00. tf11-2

Pair of VW rims, coffee table and tool kit for cars. All good conditioa and reasonable. Call eves 253-7533. tf11-3

Fur coat for sale almost new, knee length, size 8-10, $75 call, 367-2036. tf11-3

Revox A-77 Mark II reel-to-reel tape deck, $500. Call 253-5042 days, 253-3351 evenings. tf11-6

A rare pre-1971 Columbia, mens 10 spd racer-Suntour, GT Derailleur & much more — ask, $75, also Rubco Wetsuit & Acc., call Coll. 593-6515. tf11-3

Kodak Ektacolor, professional film 4type S.ASA 100, CPS 135-36 $2.30 per roll, call Tim, 301 Greenough 5-2642. tf11-6

Special new tenor recorders, $48, also excellent sopranos, altos at Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Greenfield, 774-2831. tf12-1

New accoustic guit. from $24. Special 50% off list. on new shipment of classical guitars. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Grnfld. tf12-1

Golag out of life sale, must sell all possessions, record, leatherwear, 1967 Flat Squareback, Ask for Hudson Bay No. Hampton 586-2578. tf11-6

8-track recorder 1 yr old, excellent cond. 2 free tapes, call after 6 p.m., 584-5340. tf11-3

New Univox guitar & bass amps 20% off list, from $100, Creative Endeavor, 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831. tf12-1

Magnatone guitar amp, 100 watts, 4 10" spkrs, 4 chanaels, rev tremelo on wheels, 1 yr old, list 475-225 or haggle. Eric 545-2304. tf11-6

FOR RENT

Room for rent in Conway, Mass., country house, all privileges, call Kathy, 369-1111, 7 - 9 p.m. tf11-3

3 Bedrooms and 2 baths in Northampton. Now vacant. Call 584-3428 Skibinski, Realtors between 6:30 - 7:00 p.m. tf11-6

Ski people, bedrooms avail. in warm house near Mt. Snow, Vt. For Season, Fire place, etc. $300., covers all. Call 549-6426 Scott. tf11-7

PERSONAL

Helloooo!! 2-fingered typists masters typing, delivers fast! 21 hr campus service, Call 5-10 p.m. — 7 days a week 665-1636. tf11-3

Seasoun-cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S. till noon. 256-6272 17 N. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

Adventure! Come fly with me. Respond Box 25 So. Deerfield, Mass. tf11-2

Rural Gay Commuae near Amherst wants 12 Beautiful Freak people, Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf11-14

Drew of Northampton, I enjoyed the other night. Please call — Don't be shy. Linda. tf11-2

Will Cathleen who worked at Hampden Snack on Sat. nite, please call Mike at 6-6219? Don't waste time! tf11-2

To Michael The Known Homo: We Diptics have heard of your infection and wish your quick recovery . . . All of them Fags. tf11-2

Happy Birthday Lela, From your P.R. Man. tf11-2

Super S. Happy Second. Only 89 more to go. This is your Big Surprise. Love always, Bump. tf11-2

Hi Carol! Bloop! Bloop! tf11-2

Thanks to Terri, Betty, Karen, Terry, Connie, Ellen, Paisy, Chris, Kea, Mike, For the Happiest Birthday, The one and only, Mama. tf11-2

Sick of political hassles? Vote Nerd! Nickel-a-Nite for Pres. Gaylene Oyster for V.P. You'll never regret it! tf11-2

Woody Woodpecker is alive and well and living in Sunderland (on weekends). 1 distinguishing feature is a wart. Be on the lookout! tf11-2

Happy Birthday Mama Senoska, from Her Charges. tf11-2

Happy Halloween to Arf, Beepo, and Bimb and to the first floor Mary Lyon. — An Admirer. tf11-2

EMPLOYMENT

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer? No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 20-0 MB, Port Angeles, Washington. tf11-22

INSTRUCTION

Join the march back to the Renaissance! Take recorder Lessons. Exp. teacher, reasonable rates. Call Fred, John, 253-7420. tf11-2

APARTMENT WANTED

Seeking 3 bedroom apt. Jan. 1. Puffton, call 253-3021 between 5 & 7. tf11-4

Notices

ANGEL FLIGHT ARNOLD AIR SOCIETY:
Emergency meeting tonight at 7:00 pm, 210 Dickinson. All members are urged to attend. This meeting will determine the future organization.

ASTRONOMY CLUB:
Member needed to help at 3 Stooges Movie, Sat. Nov. 4, at S.U. Ballroom.

ATTENTION NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS:
Bus leaves from in front of Hasbrouck Lab at 6:30 and from Patterson House at Sunset Ave. at 6:35. Will arrive back at 9:30.

BLUES CLUB:
Meeting 6:30 Rm. 901 CC. Sonny Terry, Otis Rush and Mance Vipscomb concerts to be discussed.

BUSINESS CLUB: MEETING:
Tonight! Date set for field trip SBA 8:00 pm rm 4A. All majors welcome. Refreshments will be served.

CENTER FOR URBAN ED:
All Center Undergraduates planning to intern (Student teach) in Jan., 1973 semester MUST attend meeting tomorrow, Nov. 3, 1:00 pm, Rm. 805 CC.

CHEMISTRY CLUB:
Membership drive tonight in Rm. 903 CC come and register. Refreshments will be served.

CONCERT:
Texas songster Mance Lisco~~mb and~~ tremendous Bahaman guitarist, Joseph Spence, Franklin D.C., Nov. 10/72.

CONCERT COMMITTEE:
Meeting tonight at 8:00 in Rm. 805-809. All new members welcome. Any questions, call Mitch in 212 at 5-2925.

DO YOU WANT A MARCHING BAND?:
A Marching Band is vital to college athletics. Don't lose yours. Sign the Marching Band Petition.

FREE CONCERT:
Hear the "Simple Truth", Thurs. Nov. 2, 7:30-10:00 pm; back section of the Hatch.

GAY WOMEN'S CAUCUS:
Gay Women's night, tonight, 6:30, S.W. Women's Center. Crampton-McKimmie Faculty Lounge. Party, Sat. Nov. 4 S.W. Women's Center. All women welcome.

GORMAN WHIST TOURNAMENT:
2nd annual Gorman Whist Tournament open to U. community will be held Sun., Nov. 12. For more info call Linda 6-6443 or Carolyn, 6-6460.

HEALTH SERVICES MEETING:
Very important Health Services Advisory Board meeting today at 5:00 pm in room 162 CC. Any student may attend. Quality care is the issue.

MOTORCYCLISTS:
Meeting tonight CC 915 at 7 p.m. Dirt ride this weekend. All interested invited to attend. For info, call Jim 5-2150.

PSYCH 101:
Dr. Kamil lecture at 1:25 Mahar. The exam is cancelled for Thurs. Nov. 2 - rescheduled for Wed. Nov. 8.

POETRY READING:
Poets Bill Tremblay, Susan Grant, and Joe Newman will read their poems tonite in Colonial Lounge of S.U. at 8 pm. Free admission and refreshments.

POLLUTION:
Dr. Duane Clarke will lecture on pollution control in Industry tonight at 7:00 pm in Peters Aud. All welcome.

SCROLLS:
There will be an important meeting tonight at 6:00 in rm. 170-172 CC. Try to attend.

SHL MEETING:
Thurs. nite - 7:30 Social hour to discuss reorganization. Refreshments served. CC 904-908.

SIMS:
Personal checking of meditation every Sun., 2-4 pm in CC - check elevator calendar for rooms.

SKI PATROL:
Meeting Thurs. 6:30 CC, 165. Patrollers bring pucks, attendance required.

STUDENTS FOR JOHN MILLER:
Anyone interested in working for John Miller on Election Day, please come to an informal reception at Van Meter No. Rec. Room Friday, 7:30 pm.

STUDENTS FOR OBJECTIVISM:
Meeting Thurs. at 7:30 in the Dukes Rm, S.U.

FREE KITTENS:
Housebroken and playful, call afternoons and evening, 665-2025.

LOST:
A brown wallet in Puffton Area I think. Keep the money. I need the id's and papers. Call Paul after supper at 253-7559.

Tiscot watch with black leather band, square face in the area of Southwest, Fri. Oct. 27. Please call 6-8507.

One red and one orange notebook and one spanish book. In Pub parking lot. Call John 665-3269.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SYDNEY OMARR ☆

Sagittarius travels, studies, is socially conscious, progressive, capable of expanding mental and emotional horizons. Natives of this zodiacal sign revere learning, often are erudite, drawn to law, medicine and literature. Sagittarius can have difficulties with Virgo, Gemini and Pisces. There is harmony in relationships with Leo, Aries, Aquarius and Libra.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Marriage, conditions at home these are emphasized dispute with family member is resolved only if issues are squarely faced. Deception now only compounds original error. Get to heart of matter and you eventually will attain goal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. Don't rush into decisions. Sense of timing could leave something to be desired. Pisces person is in picture. Get facts; discard rumors. One who flatters you may have ulterior motive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Older individual plays key role. Accent is on speculation, children, affairs of heart. One who pulls money strings may not agree with proposed course of action. Make intelligent concession without abandoning principles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish what you start. Enlarge horizons. Deal gingerly with Aries. Impulsive associate could threaten security. Build on solid base. Double check. Don't delegate duties. You are due for added recognition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take new steps in new directions. Permit creative forces to slow. Some ideas need polishing. But, in the main, you are on right track. What was a dismal area will receive benefit of greater light. Hope returns!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Protect self in financial clinches. What appears to be "sure thing" may be something else. Take inventory. Check valuables. Debt is paid. But interest rate could leave something to be desired. Investigate!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Restrictions are lifted. Events occur with dramatic swiftness. You move, make changes, write and communicate. Versatility now is perhaps your greatest ally. Be flexible. Sagittarian could be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): One who usually is reliable may skip essential detail. Know this and do some personal checking. Caution now could save money and avoid embarrassment. Visit friend who is temporarily incapacitated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friend can make what appeared to be a gloomy situation turn into something worth celebrating. Member of opposite sex is involved. Wishes are fulfilled in unorthodox manner. Be prepared for surprises.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can expand horizons with aid of family member. Be receptive to plan for redecorating, general domestic adjustment. You can accomplish more than might be imagined. Room is being made for you at top.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get to bottom of mystery by utilizing powers of perception. Heed inner voice. Don't judge by mere surface indications. There is hidden factor. Clouds of obscurity can be lifted if you combine patience and persistence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One born under Capricorn has suggestion and request. It benefits your own cause to be receptive. Accent is on money associated with mate, partner. Promise is being dangled. Get agreement in writing.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, sensuous, have natural understanding of music, often exhibit tendency to brood. December is indicated as outstanding month for you this year. By 1973, conditions at home will be vastly improved. Happiness comes your way!

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Male sheep
4 Kind of bean
8 European
12 Macaw
13 Metal
14 Verve
15 Evergreen tree
16 Devoted adherents
18 Stories
20 Bacteriologist's wire
21 Pronoun
22 Worm
23 Repetition
27 Shallow vessel
29 Cravat
30 Avoid
31 Exclamation
32 Prohibit
33 Baker's product
34 Maiden loved by Zeus
35 Conspiracy
37 Novelty
38 Emerged victorious
39 Son of Adam
40 Mire
41 Negative
42 Landed
44 Underground worker
47 Household furnishings
51 Expire
52 Man's name
53 God of love
54 Bitter vetch
55 Broad
56 Communists
57 Soak

DOWN
1 Float
2 Solo
3 Game fish
4 Part of face
5 Man's name
6 Glum
7 Poker stakes
8 Merit
9 A state (abbr.)
10 Girl's nickname
11 Abstract being
17 Exists
19 Latin conjunction
22 Goddess of healing
24 Faroe Islands whirlwind
25 Group of three
26 Short jacket
27 South American rodent
28 One of Israel's great kings
29 Hindu cymbals
30 Succor
32 Poise
33 Cushion
36 Exist
37 Time that is to come
38 Astonishment
40 Bishop's hat
41 Symbol for nickel
43 Chinese mile
44 Army meal
45 Ireland
46 Remainder
47 Indefinite number
48 Swiss canton
49 Free of 50 Staff

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

S	L	O	T	S		P	E	D	A	L
L	E	S	I	O	N		O	R	E	G	O	N
E	N		L	O	E	S	S		C	E	T	E
A	A	R		L	E	T	T	S		D	I	E
S	T	A	R		S	E	E	P	S		O	D
T	E	P	I	D		P	R	O	T	O	N	S
		I	D	O	L		S	T	O	A
W	I	D	E	N	E	D		S	A	T	E	S
A	D		R	E	T	I	A		T	E	L	A
S	I	P		E	T	A	N	A		N	A	B
P	O	L	E		E	L	I	D	E		T	E
S	T	A	T	O	R		S	E	A	L	E	D
S	T	A	G	S		E	N	T	E	R

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Football Odyssey-Chap. 7

Offense: A Team Effort

Piel Pennington is the only New England college football player to win the Gold Helmet Award twice in one season. Paul Metallo happens to lead the Conference in scoring with sixty points...And Schubert is Schubert and although people are calling the Minutemen the "Big Three", it may make some sense, and as far as a tabloid is concerned the Men at the Minute throttles are "Ink Blots" and "Headline Grabbers," but someone else has to help get the copy to the printer.

As a sport sociologist will tell you, the Penningtons, the Schuberts, and the Metallos are called high reactors. When the fan puts down the gin for a second, and gazes at the field, he only tunnels in on the people that directly put the points on the board. And although the reactors get the copy, the naive populus that becomes the board of governors will automatically say, "Well, the trio is off to the Dutch Country".

But it isn't so. The offensive lineman is perhaps the most snubbed and forgotten performer in all of sport. How often do you hear Kent Best or Ted Peene say, "Now that we have a minute, let's set the interior line for Massachusetts. At the guards, Captain Clarence Brooks and Jim Queeney; the tackles, Dennis Cunningham and Tom Mullen; and Kevin Moran hovers over the ball"?

You know you just don't hear it. How many interior linemen are household names. Not many that's for sure. I would bet (and I know it for a fact) that's it's a struggle for most announcers to even remember who's in the trenches midway through the second period.

But when the fine art of analysis is over, it all comes down to the fact that, regardless of who runs what into what endzone from how far out, it's a team effort that prevails. And without a doubt it's been such a team turn of events that has propelled Massachusetts to a six week listing of credentials that, in retrospect to years past, has never been accomplished in this short period of time. I'm talking undisputed possession and recognition by both the AP and UPI news services as New England's number one team. In consideration for the Lambert Trophy, Massachusetts is recognized behind (yes, believe it or not) Penn State. And it's not that hard to understand. Team efforts never are.

But how did we achieve such prowess?

It was Andy Dutkanicz reaching out his arm and stopping Mark Wheeler from perhaps breaking a first period kickoff that would have, perhaps, snapped us.

It was all 5'9, 160 pounds of former BC High star, Pat Brady throwing his feeble, but anxious, frame in front of a Husky barreling toward the goaline.

It was Kevin Moran throwing one of the most crucial blocks in the school's history enabling Paul Metallo to go in from the 12 yard line, proving that we could move between Harvard's 20.

It was Mr. Suicide himself, Dave Butterfield, getting flattened on one of his "Geronimo Raids" down the field, but still managing to grapple the ballcarrier to turf with his forearm.

It was Earl Brown catching BU's Katapodis from behind on a sixty yard pursuit that culminated with "Easy Earl" somehow making up 5 yards in the last ten of the race.

It was cornerback Bobby Parrot doing nearly the same thing against Terrier speedster Harmon Hudson, after Hudson looked like a shoe-in for six points down the near sideline.

It was safety John Healy playing out the remainder of the first half of the Connecticut game after the sophomore was badly bruised above his hip in the opening quarter.

It was tailback Jimmy Mahaney coming off the bench to fill in for the injured, Paul Metallo and Richie Herman, and scoring against URI and setting up another against Vermont.

Editor's note: This special, compiled by Collegian football writer Marty Kelley, is designed to try and capture a little of the flavor of the 1972 UMass Minutemen. Teams of this quality do not come along very often. Even if this team never were to win another game, they have already made their mark on this campus and on New England.

Yes, the list goes on and although the "Ink Blots" get their recognition and you think of where the team stands now, you know that everyone in their small, little world becomes very much a part of the tabloid. But the critics that brave the cold impersonal concrete of Alumni Stadium do have a tendency to forget that there's an axiom in sport success that is so appropriately called the "completion of the whole".

And yes, they've become a family-a close-knit, fun-loving success-seeking unit of emotion. They nurse each other on the drawing board each week, they meet in chambers more than three times a week to talk, perhaps, about the slip-up that would cost a weaker team a victory.

And when the seniors represent the football team at a parade, the previously-scheduled movie at the Campus Center is moved back an hour and so is the cookies and milk at bedtime.

Sounds like a nursery rhyme doesn't it? And when you consider that managers Richie Moulton and Mike Brophy must meet the team's bed check at ten, you think it's regimented. Twenty-one and twenty-two kids can't come down to the lobby for a nightcap or two. But the answer is simple.

The UMass football team is a family, and a successful one at that. To be successful in anything you do you have to have a side order of dedication and a "completion of that whole".

Mark Tripucka Dennis Cunningham

Unsung Mika Gets The Job Done

It was pretty muggy in Amherst late one of those August nights as Indian Summer came to replace the New England Patriots in this quiet Collegetown. But the Minutemen had checked in, had their physicals, and once again James House settled within the hustle and bustle of college life that was nine days away. Although this night, near 10 p.m., it was pensively quiet, only the Olympics on the tube defrayed the topic of college football. UMass style, 1972.

Yes, Tom Price's room on the fourth floor of James House was sold out. Little Eva Corbut had pretty well captured the audience until I strutted in slowly with a grin from ear to ear. Some friends immediately raised their brows, and after the likes of Richie Cronin, Tom Price, Chuck Hamaty, Don Sokolnicki, Gary Mika, etc., had all said hello, well, I knew I was back. UMass football was alive again and I couldn't have been happier to see all those guys.

The summers were fun, the Cape excruciating, the beers free and easy but now it was down to work. And was it ever work! Of the more than 100 candidates to show up for pre-season, the deadwood had left. The players were on the field often as early as 7 a.m. But my attention quickly turned to an innocent kid who took time out from the slender gymnast on the tube to talk some football.

"I don't know, Marty, I've been busting my tail to get the job and Mac was quoted in the Globe the other day as saying he desperately needs a tight end." You might say that, at that time, Gary Mika was a bit concerned about his very near future with the UMass football program. But so often in sports if you give the minority the opportunity to prove himself, he'll show you what type of athlete he is. And Gary is an athlete.

Mika is the perfect complement to any potent offense. You see, you almost expect the Metallo's, the Pennington's and the Schubert's to come through for you. But every team needs a "pick-me-up" and Gary fills the role to near perfection for the Minutemen. Yes, for a kid who wasn't slated to start two months ago, tell me he hasn't made progress! He seems to grow with age and the nicest part about his book jacket...Gary is only a sophomore. He's still a baby.

But anyway, let's look at the logic and the thinking behind the assertion of No. 81. With John Hulecki gone, UMass was in dire need of a strong, blocking tight end. Gary does not, and will not, fill that void. But here's the deal. Gone is Hulecki (well, actually John is an assistant coach) but into the picture lumbers Dick Cummings and (praise the Messiah!) the blocking problems are now over.

How many times did we go to the tight end last season? Hardly at all. And there were reasons for it. First of all Peil was young, he didn't know Mac's system, and it was hard enough for Pennington to spot the primary receiver, let alone a secondary one. Most college offenses really don't have designated tight end offenses so therefore, without too much deliberation, it is safe to assume that your tight end is primarily your secondary man. After Peil harnessed the system, Hulecki started to get the ball more, as he had six receptions against New Hampshire and six more from the "Screaming Eagles" of Boston College, in the last two games of the season.

UMass is lucky Gary can't block. With fullback Dick Cummings kicking out the tight end, Mike can be used almost exclusively on pass patterns. Now with what Gary has accomplished I'm sure most schools wouldn't mind having him as a regular receiver. We've got him as a secondary one.

The 210 pounder nearly got into the endzone three times against UConn and nearly went the route against the Johns, as he electrified Harvard Stadium and this observer with a 56-yard jaunt that set up Walt Parker's key TD reception. But, not only has Gary won his job offensively, but here's the deal again: He's created perhaps the best offensive balance that a UMass receiving corps has had ever. I would suspect...

First of all, you have Steve Schubert. Say no more. He can break it from the backside of anyone's endzone. Steve is a streak and if the Northeast ever experienced another blackout like that of '65, Schubert would still be motoring. Yes, he's got a cavalcade of pro scouts following him and rightfully so. Being that dangerous, Schubert often draws double coverage, constantly commands zone defenses, and frightens everyone from the weak side linebacker to the opposing cheerleaders.

While Schubert grabs the respect, Mika has the freedom from those dumb linebackers over the middle. So does Metallo, so does Cummings, and when Paul and Dick start throwing the football, all hell breaks loose. Then you've got a sleazy offensive circuit through the air, also employs the likes of Tim Berra, Bill Hanifan, and Ed Hajdusek.

Great move bringing Timmy from halfback to the slot. He's got smooth hands (whatever that means) and an uncanny ability to shed defenders although he has only adequate speed.

And then you have Billy Hanifan, who runs only one pattern, to a corner. But if you ran it as many times as Billy has, you damn well know that after a few weeks, you'd have it down. And he does.

Now, in retrospect to what you've read, take a look at this tandem, Mark Tripucka and Eddie Hajdusek. On two occasions (Maine and Rhode Island to be specific) both teamed up for grade A, 30-yard touchdowns. The only logical conclusion is that some other time, somewhere else, these two would get their shot at the ECAC awards. Now they're relegated to waiting. But as their time creeps along slowly, to add to the completeness of this football team, they're doing their job daily.

That's UMass via the air. Pretty impressive, huh? And I don't even have to tell you about the Pennington that masterminds this entourage on the field. Yes, the list of future UMass pro footballers goes on.

And then you say, well that's the air, what about the ground? Stay tuned every Saturday afternoon for Paul Metallo, Dick Cummings, Phil Roland, Richie Herman and newcomer Jimmy Maheney. They tell their own story.

Young Defense Blossoms

Green apples don't taste too good. But there's relief, they always get ripe. And once they ripen, they get polished. And once polished the apple becomes so prized it becomes a trophy. And if you gotta go with analogies (and don't we all in this cliche driven age) try this one out for size on the UMass defense...I bet it fits.

Yes, even before the Black Bears of Maine decided to step on that bus and give it another go against magnanimous Massachusetts, even way back then when the road to the Lambert Trophy had no beginning, way back when just the sound of Harvard in a Hush illicited some perspiration, and before the rain at Burlington and the Parents at Kingston, and the tour to Pennsylvania, well, way back then when the road to the Lambert Trophy had no beginning, way back when just the sound of Harvard in a Hush illicited some perspiration, and before the rain at Burlington and the Parents at Kingston, and the tour to Pennsylvania, well, way back when dust on the first day covered the old turf, Bob Pickett was skeptical.

Bob Pickett happens to be a mastermind. He's the defensive coordinator for UMass football 1972 and nobody can tell me his job is easy. Talk about long summers, I hope Coach Pickett didn't plan a long vacation; how could he have enjoyed it. There aren't too many major college defensive coordinators who have to return to the gridiron and try to get some facsimile of a starting lineup out of a green barrel of sophomores.

But now that six chapters are behind us-those apples have quickly ripened and in a matter of a month-soon to be trophies.

Seven sophomores graced MacPherson's opening card on defense against Maine at the Stadium. Kind of hard to believe that the kids on defense have gotten us to this plateau and one of the ridges was the scaling of a small Tower in Cambridge.

And the youngsters came to Pickett from various walks of sporting life on the gridiron. Bradshaw and McAleney, the Bobbsey Twins on the end, complement each other perfectly. Tom was a roving middle linebacker as a plebe and Eddie just happened to be a high school All-American in Portland, Me.

And just what do the likes of Paul Hansen and Bobby Parrot, have in common?

They were both high school quarterbacks.

Here's the theory, and the very same theory, that Mac used in drafting nine high school qb's for this year's frosh team.

A quarterback is a high reactor, and a good athlete at that.

He's the brains of the field operation and he's used to leadership. The qb has to be able to cope pressure and he has to know how to win. In general he's a plus for anyone's lineup. The best signal caller recruited will play. Those that didn't make the garde will fight their way into the lineup. Why? Because they're athletes and they want to play.

This is the attitude that the permeates the mind of a Bobby Parrot, or a Paul Hansen.

And, yes, Crazy Winslow is a blind assasin and Tim Edwards a mean customer, and Richie Cronin, able and willing, but there's one tough cookie I like and that's soph Dennis Kiernan.

When there's a loose ball there's Dennis. From his weak side post he almost always finds an avenue to the opposing quarterback's backyard. And can he stick.

And you have to love a customer like Paul St. Onge who kicked his own fraternity brother at Kappa Sig, Tom Price, out a starting job. But Tom still sees duty on the PAT and goaline teams. He's not a quitter.

And a senior out of New Britain, Ct., John Jones, well, he's the guy that runs that down four unit. And he's the last guy I'd want to meet on the wrong end of a one way street.

***

Doug Winslow

Ed McAleney

They're off and running. Minutemen Mike Conlin and Paul Segersten (in back, left to right) dash out from the starting line in yesterday's Cross-Country meet against Holy Cross and Central Connecticut. UMass, while resting some of its regulars, ran very well and came close to winning the meet. (Photo by Mark Majeski)

Runners Place Third; Await New Englands

By WALT POWERS

Yesterday afternoon, in the final race before the New England Championships, an under-manned UMass Cross-country team ran hard, and came very close to winning, in a tri-meet against Holy Cross and Central Connecticut. As it turned out, they fell just short, and the final score was Cent. Conn. 37, H.C. 43, and UMass: 45.

It was a cool, dry, overcast afternoon, and this helped to make it a faster race than expected. At the start, a group of four runners, including Pete Crisci and Paul Segersten of UMass, and Steve Ellis of Cent. Conn., moved out in front. Segersten stayed with Ellis until the two-mile mark. At that point, Ellis pulled away and held a comfortable lead for the rest of the race. Though he eased up at the end, he still won by a good margin, in a time of 25:40.

Crisci had fallen behind, but harried by a Holy Cross runner, he advanced, and caught Segersten at the 10-1/2 mile mark. From there, they ran almost together and finished second and third, respectively, well ahead of H.C.'s Neil Coleman.

Cent. Conn and Holy Cross dominated the scoring after that. Mike Conlin battled a number of runners throughout the race. In a fight for eighth that went to the wire, he was beaten by a single second. Mike Roy took fifteenth, and Tom Wilson eighteenth, both in improved times over their efforts last week.

It was a close loss, but the top six UMass harriers were not running, and Coach Ken O'Brien was not dissappointed. "Central Connecticut and Holy Cross are both good teams, and we gave them a good battle." He was especially impressed with the showings of two freshmen, Mike Roy, and Mike Conlin. "Mike Conlin was battling all the way. He was agressive, and he didn't give up. Mike Roy was also fighting for position throughout most of the race, and he hung on very well. I'm looking forward to their future performances."

From here, it's on to Franklin Park, where the team will run this Monday in the New England Championships.

TOP TEN FINISHERS

NO.	NAME	TIME	SCHOOL
1	Ellis	25:40	CC
2	Crisci	25:44	UM
3	Segersten	25:50	UM
4	Coleman	26:05	HC
5	Balavender	26:09	CC
6	Wood	26:11	HC
7	McCormacck	26:12	HC
8	Crowley	26:15	CC
9	Conlin	26:16	UM
10	Killey	26:72	HC

MacPherson Warns B.C.

By BILL BALLOU

"Cows don't fly at night."

This gem comes to you courtesy of backfield coach George Flood. It seems that every day one of the football coaches is supposed to contribute a saying that kind of rallies the team in its preparation for the upcoming game. When it came time for George Flood to come through, he did. In unforgettable style.

And it can't be denied that cows don't fly at night. (I haven't seen to many airborne in the daytime, just for the record.)

That little anecdote is just one chuckle from the barrelful of mirth and merriment that was yesterday's Varsity M club luncheon. The only thing missing from this comedy classic was a pie fight. And that almost happened when Marty Kelley stood up to ask his weekly mindbender during the question and answer period.

Here's a sample of some of the other gems: Mark Palau's plan to improve his place-kicking at home: "I went down to the Stadium and sawed off part of the uprights." Paul Hansen telling how he was given the hint that he might be heading for a new position: "I was a quarterback my freshman year and one day at Spring practice Coach MacPherson came up to me and said 'Paul, the way you're playing you're rapidly becoming a defensive back.'"

Palau and Hansen weren't the only UMass players that spoke at the luncheon. Fullback Dick Cummings said his peace and when it was over, MacPherson, with tongue in cheek and hand to eye, said, "I almost had to get my handkerchief out".

The weekly scouting report was given by head scout Bob Harris and really didn't contain anything unexpected. Harris said that Bucknell is a good club, they "hustle, have great desire, and play typical Pennsylvania football' and, of course, that the Minutemen have great respect for the Bisons.

The drawing for the door prize didn't contain anything unexpected either. I lost. But it was only by three numbers. My heart skipped as the digits were counted down, but again I left the luncheon bitter and downtrodden.

Dick MacPherson made sure everyone else left on a somewhat happier note, however, when he put to rest all the horseradish that has flooded the airwaves throughout the past couple of weeks concerning the New England college football polls.

"Mac" indicated he'd let his team do its talking on the football field. And he had similar advice for Boston College. "BC would be wiser to keep mouths shut until November 25 when we play them," he said.

The Daily Collegian

SPORTS

"I'll be back for Boston College"

By EARLE BARROLL

Al Key has a date with the knife tomorrow morning. And for his own sake, it's about time.

"It feels like I'm getting shot every time I move it in the wrong direction," says the defensive back in referring to a knee injury he sustained at the Vermont game almost a month ago.

The injury entails a torn cartilage that is trapped in Key's right knee joint. It's the very same injury that shackled Steve Schubert and Paul Metallo for a good part of last season.

Fortunately for these two the knee mended itself with the cartilage disloding via a natural process. This has been the rationale behind the month long wait on Key's injury. But so far the joint remains locked, his gate is hampered by a knee that is bent at an angle and Dr. Schnook (The Knife) will get at it in the morning.

Ironically he was injured by a teammate (accidentally of course). "We were in a prevent defense towards the end of th game," Key recalls. "The Vermont quarterback took off to run and when I went to hit him, a teammate hit me from the side with his pursuit.

"Both my knees and ankles hyperextended right there on the field. I stayed in for one more play. The end ran an out of me and somehow I tackled him. But, after that I just crawled off the field."

And that was that for Mr. Key.

For the defensive secondary, Key's injury is a major loss.

"Al was our backup return man and cornerback and he was our depth," explains head coach Dick MacPherson. "Now we've lost our depth and with the injury to John Healy (thigh) it's especially important to have depth. And now the situation's critical."

His backfield coach, Larry Pasquale describes him as "a team man."

"To me Al Key has come a tremendously long way as a football player and as a contributer to the defensive backfield," says Pasquale. "We'll miss him as a guy for both his attitude and his physical ability and his loss will effect us in both areas."

"I got to know Al Key very well over the past couple of months," Pasquale continued. "He's the type of guy who's given so much of himself to the secondary. And even as a backup man (mainly due to lack of experience) he helped the coaches and the players. Since his injury he's still been coming down to the lockeroom. And I'm just glad he stays with us and feels part of the team."

His teammates refer to him as a headsy guy. His pre-law cum of 3.5 speaks for itself. His ambitions–Harvard Law or M.I.T. School of Business-likewise. Al is also a student member of the Board of Directors in the CCEBS program, as well as being involved with most phases in the program.

He speaks with high prasie of the UMass coaching staff. "When you get to the college level (he was an all-conference qb in Boston and all-prep in North Carolina as a half-back) you can't rely on raw natural talent to make it," he notes.

"You've got to have good coaching and here at UMass it's a plus–they're the best in the world. People would be surprised at how well we're prepared for every game. That's why we're 6-0 right now."

The doctors have told Al that he would be on the mend for at least eight weeks, with the remainder of the season out of the question. What does Al Key tell them? "I'll be back for Boston College." That's what.

When informed of this, Pasquale smiled, "I wouldn't put it past him."

Notice

WEEKEND RECREATION ACTIVITY SCHEDULE

GYMNASIUMS

Boyden 1:00-5:00 p.m. Saturday & Sunday

WOPE 1:00-4:00 p.m. Saturday

HANDBALL SQUASH COURTS

Boyden 9:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

POOLS

Boyden 1:00-4:00 Sunday

WOPE 1:00-4:00 Saturday

The above mentioned facilities are open for recreational use by University students, faculty and staff only.

Dan Kamal

A Lack of Communication

(Editor's Note: John Mazur, Coach of the New England Patriots, has been accused of not communicating with his football players...)

"Ah, excuse me, would you happen to know where I could find Coach Mazur's office?"

"How the hell am I supposed to know? I'm only a janitor around here. Go ask one of the players."

"But I AM one of the players."

"Buddy, I've got troubles of my own----hey, wait a minute, there's Mr. Bell. He must know."

"Hi, Dave, what's the problem?"

"Well, Mr. Bell, I'd like to see the coach, but,...well, frankly, I don't know where his office is. Yes, I KNOW I've been with the team for two years."

"Take a right at the top of the stairs and then go to the fourth door on the left. By the way, Dave, you really should become better acclimated around here."

"You're right, Mr. Bell, Thanks a lot."

•••

"Come in, come in."

"Hi, Coach. I'd like to talk to you for a few minutes if you have the time."

"Well, I've been making a lot of telephone calls trying to get the team out of next week's Monday night game, but sit down. One thing I don't need right now is national exposure. That's strictly off the record, you understand, don't tell any of my players that I said that."

"But I AM one of the players."

"Oh, well, you didn't hear a word, right?"

"Yes, sir. By the way, Coach, the reason I came up to see you is that I've been wondering why you benched me."

"I did?"

"Yes, sir, you did. And I thought I was doing a pretty good job, too. In fact, I thought I was your best defensive lineman."

"You're a defensive lineman? You look just like one of my fullbacks. But that's beside the point. Didn't I give you a reason for benching you when I did?"

"This is the first time I've ever spoken to you, Coach."

"Oh, then you must have joined the team within the last two months. With all the work I have to do it usually takes me that long to meet the new players, much as I'd like to meet them all as soon as they join the club. But I'm sure you know how it is."

"I can understand that, Mr. Mazur, but, you see, I've been with the Patriots almost two years now, and...."

"Is that right? Well, there must have been a mix-up somewhere. You should've been on my got-to-get-to-know-these-players-soon list long ago. So we'll straighten that out right now...My name is John Mazur, and I'm the coach around here. As long as you remember that, we should have no problems, understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Fine, fine. Now that you know my name, what's yours?"

"It's Dave..."

"That's enough, Dave. After all, I can always look on the back of your uniform for your last name. You can understand that with forty players on the team, first names are hard enough to remember, let alone last names, too."

"I understand, sir."

"Very good. Well, now that we've got that straightened out, we can get to the real reason you came up to see me. I'm a bit flustered that we had this mix-up, and it's caused me to forget why you came up to see me. So please excuse me...now what was the reason again, Jack?"

"Never mind, Coach, it doesn't seem so important any more."

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

Who is Jeanne Dixon, and why did she say all those awful things about UMass?

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 40 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1972

The "horseshoe" in Southwest is being made into a combination ice-skating rink, basketball court, and hockey rink. The project which began early yesterday morning (to the annoyance of some local residents) was approved last year for construction by the SWIP conference according to John O'Connell, financial manager for the Southwest area. For more details see related story on page 3. (MDC Photo by Sue Goldbaum)

Fac-Sen Votes To Keep Rhetoric

By JIMM DEMPSEY

The controversial motion to abolish the University Rhetoric requirement was resoundingly defeated yesterday by the Faculty Senate. The unfavorable decision climaxed a year-long discussion of the question by the Academic Affairs Committee, who unanimously recommended the abolishment of the requirement in October.

Many Senate members who had privately expressed support for the motion were noticeably absent from this important reconvened session. They had told several student senators in a casual survey of sentiment that they were in favor of abolishing the Rhetoric requirement.

Speaking against the motion at yesterday's meeting, Head of the English Departmen Joseph Frank pointed out that this is only the beginning of the Rhetoric program's third year. He felt that it should have at least four years to prove itself. He called for one more year of life for the program in order to evaluate it, implement improvements, and increase its available options.

Frank went on to say that the basis for the requirement was to establish confidence in a student. "We want him to know that he's a unique individual and has something to say," said Frank. "You can only get good writing when the student thinks he has something to say."

He also indicated that this provides one of the few opportunities most students have to participate in a small class.

However, he also said that one advantage to dismissing the requirement would be greater flexibility in English Department teaching assignments. "There would be no more twisting of teacher's arms to lend a hand with the Rhetoric program," declared Frank.

Student Senator Nick Apostola countered him up on this point, noting that this was precisely part of the current problem and one reason for eliminating the requirement. "How many of the instructors whose arms you have to twist are really enthusiastic about teaching people to write?" asked Apostola.

Apostala said that there are 1500 students enrolled in the program each semester. "Most of that burden," he said, "is carried by teaching assistants who have too many other concerns."

He likened the Rhetoric department to a public utility. "We can buy from only one water department or one gas department...and we can buy from only one Rhetoric department," claimed Apostola. "These departments continually ripoff the consumer until there are fewer and fewer benefits coming back to the consumer."

Soundings of student opinion taken by Apostola and member of the Student Senate indicated that most students attend a minimum of classes and do only enough work in their rhetoric courses to get by. Some see it as a good way to get an easy "B" grade and raise their cum.

Laura Emmons, of the Student Senate, perceived the problem as being a lack of consideration for the individual. She agreed that there is a need for a Rhetoric program, "But the University's across-the-board requirement cannot meet that need - it's not individual enough."

One possible solution to the problem was offered by Faculty Senator Ellis Olim. He suggested that each incoming freshman should be required to write a story. "If it is determined they can write, let them be waived out of the (Rhetoric) program then it won't be necessary to impose this requirement on all freshman," noted Olim.

In this way those students who could truly benefit from a course in writing would receive individual concentration. "The greatest percentage of students are probably good writers already - that's not the student we're after," said Olim.

As Joe Frank had earlier indicated, under a voluntary program "the ones who need it (Rhetoric) would be the ones most likely not to take it."

No action was taken on Olim's proposal.

Student Trustee Larry Ladd will bring the matter before the Board of Trustees in two weeks for reconsideration. Only the Board of Trustees can override any decisions made by the Faculty Senate.

Ladd also said videotape coverage of the meeting and the vote will be shown all this week in the Campus Center concourse.

On The Inside:

•Rape Big Problem see page two

•Crime Program Failure see page five

UMass Rapes Close To One A Week

By BOB SCHEIER

Sources at the UMass Security Department say rapes and attempted rapes in and around the campus are occuring at the rate of close to one a week.

That figure is a sharp increase from previous years, according to Det. Sgt. Philip J. Cavanaugh, and is due mostly to an increase in hitchhiking in the area.

According to Cavanaugh, the security department made no arrests for rape charges during 1970, made three arrests on a charge of rape during 1971, and so far during this school year has investigated four charges of rape and five charges of attempted rape.

"The general attitude among the young ladies on campus is that it won't happen to them," Cavanaugh explained. "But a lot of girls are picked up who don't end up at UMass.

Cavanaugh said most of the rapes occured with students who were hitchhiking to within a mile of campus-even as close as along University Drive.

Many of the rapes were accompanied by assault with a dangerous weapon (often a knife) and also by sometimes severe beatings, he added.

Several co-eds were taken by knifepoint he said, one of them from the campus pond at night to an off-campus apartment. The same assailant had been later identified in connection with the assault and battery and rape of a coed in the woods near the soccer field, he said.

"If we could get some of these young ladies to try to visualize the car and driver before they get in and particularly the number plate-even only a part of the plate-it would be a big step to getting some of these people."

He stressed that immediate notification of the campus police by the victim of a rape or attempted rape was necessary if a case were to be brought to court.

"A sperm test must be taken on the woman's clothes, and if the laboratory detects intact sperm cells then that becomes evidence in court," Cavanaugh continued. "There have been many cases where the victim has waited two or three days before deciding she wanted to press charges, and by that time it was too late"–the clothes had dried or been washed."

Few rape cases never got to court, he said, because of exposure and humiliation on the part of the victims. He said policewoman were on duty at the department during the day and sometimes at night to talk with rape victims.

"If the police are called in, it doesn't mean exposure," he continued. "It's a confidential case, and we just sit down with the victim and explain the pros and cons of going to court."

Cavanaugh said many of the rapists were students, and added two former UMass students are serving time in state prisons for rape, in one case rape and assault. In addition, he also said servicemen from Westover Air Force base had been given heavy state prison terms on a charge of attempted rape which he said the servicemen had admitted was premeditated.

Cavanaugh said cases of assault, indecent exposure and lewd and lascivious behavior were also increasing around the campus, and said there was an average of two cases of indecent exposure reported a week by students, most of it taking place off-campus.

One particular high crime area, he continued, was Fearing St. between North Pleasant St. and Sunset Ave. "If we had new lighting, the situation would be much better there."

While he could give no description of a "typical" rapist, Cavanaugh said girls hitchhiking should watch out for rear license plates, covered to make identification of the car harder.

Another rapists' trick, he said, was removal of the inside door handle on the passenger's side of the car to prevent the victim from jumping out while the car is moving–which several rape victims had done, he said.

He added the beatings some of the victims received might have been worse if they had resisted, although he said one girl was able to escape from a car by feigning an illness.

Marching Band Facing Problems

By MARTY KELLEY

The University of Massachusetts Marching Band is subject to serious financial problems that may culminate in the termination of the Band as early as Nov. 18th, Professor John Jenkins confirmed in an interview yesterday.

"The problem is now," stated Jenkins. "From past history the problem of the Band and its financial plight began taking shape in 1965 and now has reached a point for ultimatum." Jenkins took over as Director of the Bands in August of 1963.

"The Student Senate will not fund us because they do not consider us an RSO group," he said. "The criteria for this is the fact that we give academic credit for performance (one credit for 180 hours) and we have faculty advisors (Jenkins and his assistant Jie Duche)."

"Now in the past the Music Department, as well as the Athletic Department, have been picking up the tab. But since I've been here in '63, the Band has increased so much in size and general scope, more money is needed to facilitate the needs."

The problem that the Band must now face is simply from whence does the money come. When the new Fine Arts Council was being formed in 1965, one of the major issues at hand was the general finding of the Marching Band.

Before the Council actually sat in chambers for the first time, a proposal for a Student Fine Arts Council Fee to help resolve the financial burden was raised.

"What happened," explained Professor Jenkins, "is a bit of history that comes back to haunt us now."

Before the Fine Arts Council actually chartered itself as a governing Council, the members decided to reorganize and drop the proposed Band Fee, that, in 1965, would have cured the financial ills that now beset the Band.

Jenkins added that any organization can reconstitute itself if it brings its plea before the Faculty Senate. The Fine Arts Council made such forwarding action in 1965.

A student referendum in 1965 may have helped save the band. One such referendum is now circulating the campus in hopes of saving the Band before the administration calls the curtain Nov. 18th.

"Yes, we are still receiving financial help from our original sources, the Music and the Athletic Departments," Jenkins stated. "But the purpose of this present referendum is to actually find out what the students think," says Jenkins.

"Is there an interest for the Band? The Band transcends a decision in any given year as to its relevance to football. It represents a tradition still very much alive with many students."

Professor Jenkins continued: "The Band is simply much more than the 25 or so music majors that make it up. It's much more than good public relations for the University. Students view the Band for what it is and what it does."

But what do the students think? How do they feel about the Band? "That's the purpose of this referendum," stated student Band Manager Carl Gordon. "The students are our only hope to date. But the response has been tremendous. Why, in only a few hours, we've been able to get almost 10% of the campus in signatures."

If the students decide, there are a few options. "Depening upon the varied roles that both the Music and Athletic Depts. take, we could get by very easily with perhaps a mere channeling of perhaps 40 cents of the Student Activities money," says Jenkins.

The Student Senate is definitely not an option to be considered. The Band, because of the academic credit and the Faculty leadership, cannot be considered a bona fide RSO. So the money has to come from student sources. If the students decide by referendum that they want to support the Band, then what will remain as a solution to the problem simply will be the redirection of no more than 75 cents of the Student Activities money.

Where does the Band go from here? Without the necessary funds or the procuring of a means to get the funds, the Band will give its last performance at Alumnae Stadium Nov. 25th against Boston College. But Nov. 18th may be the final deadline for the Athletic Department for they may not be able to come up with the needed money for the weekend financing the Band back to Amherst.

When approached on the issue, Bob O'Connell, Assistant Director of Athletics said, "I can't speak for Frank McInerney, Athletic Director, but I know he's for the Band. As for the future, I couldn't tell you." McInerney and Dean David Bischoff were currently enroute to Penn State on business.

Unless something is done with some immediacy, it may be the sound of "Taps" heard high above the confines of Alumni Stadium Nov. 18th.

Fac-Sen Decision Rapped

By MDC STAFF

Student Government Association president Larry Ladd and student senator Nick Apostola, chairman of the student senate academic affairs committee, last night blasted the faculty-senate's upholding of the Rhetoric requirement and said they would bring the matter to the board of trustees.

Apostola, whose committee recommended the abolition of the requirement, said he would ask the trustees' committee on Faculty and Educational Policy to abolish the requirement at its next meeting, November 21.

Ladd said a videotape of the 90 minute debate will be shown in the campus center next week, and said he had the support of "numerous faculty and high level administrators" in asking for abolition of the requirement.

Apostola, an outspokem critic of the requirement, said "with the Governor's emphasis on educational reform, it will be difficult for the committee not to listen to an appeal for the abolishment of the program that consumes so much money."

Apostola said the senate's action "disregarded the need for communication skills on campus", and attempted to improve those skills by a method "which is a failure not only here, but at all campuses across the nation."

"He said the matter had not been "lightly considered" by the senat, and that the student senat would no longer deal with the faculty after its "irresponsible action."

Apostola said the senate's action had shown it had no confidence in its Academic Matters Committee, which had also called for abolition of the requirement.

Indian Pottery Displayed

In conjunction with the visit of the White Roots of Peace sponsored by the Distinguished Visitor's Program, approximately 75 pieces of American Indian Pottery, on loan from the University Collection, will be on display in the Student Union Art Gallery from today until Tuesday, November 7. For further information call 545-2351.

Sargent Shriver will speak at 11:00 AM in Court Square, Springfield this Saturday. Free entertainment will be provided.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

Experience Art Exhibit

Moved to

Dukes Room

(Rm. 310) Student Union

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

Attention Voters of the 17th Essex District

Elect

ARTHUR SOBIL

Representative from the

17th Essex District

Ward 5 - Lawrence, Prec. 2 & 4 Andover

BECAUSE HE CARES:

*About the unemployment situation; the polluted condition of the Merrimack River; the diminishing of the welfare rolls by logic, rather than financial panic; the improvement of housing and the single house governmental subsidy for low income housing.

Kenneth J. Somers
307 Hills. No.
U.Mass.
Amherst, Mass.

Joseph Frank, head of the English Department, defends the rhetoric program at yesterdays faculty Senate Meeting. (Photo by Kevin Mack)

Voting Transportation

The Student Senate Transit Service will provide shuttle bus service by three different routes to Amherst Polling Places on Election Day, November 7.

Shuttle service hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The three bus routes and the precincts they serve are as follows:

Route #1—serves precincts 1 and 7: Sylvan, Puffton Village and Fraternity-Sorority Park.

Route #2—serves precinct 2; Southwest.

Route #3—serves precinct 3: Central, Orchard Hill and the Quad.

Buses will stop at all regular campus bus stops at each area on the hour and on the half-hour, barring traffic tie-ups and inclement weather.

Stops at the polling places will be made at 15 minutes to the hour and 15 minutes after the hour.

All shuttle buses will be clearly marked "Voter Special" in red, white and blue posters on their windows. The precinct number and the area it serves will also be on the signs.

The addition of voter buses should have little or no effect on the regular schedules of the campus bus service.

Attention Veterans

Many rumors have surrounded the passage of the 1972 amendments to the veterans educational laws. The Veterans' Office on campus has had numerous inquiries about the exact content of the legislation.

Due to these many inquiries the Veterans' Office has provided for a question and answer seminar to be held Wednesday, November 8th from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 163 of the Campus Center. At that time a representative from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Boston will be more than willing to answer any and all questions about the amendments.

All veterans who have any questions about the new Bill should plan to attend.

Notice

A public reception is planned for Gov. Francis W. Sargent Saturday afternoon from 4:00 P.M. to 6:00 P.M. at the Lord Jeff in Amherst. A press conference has been scheduled at 5:00 p.m.

Correction. The photos on pages two and three in yesterday's Collegian were switched accidentally.

The photo on page 2 is not Raja Tridev Roy but Checker Finn, an aid to Governor Sargent. Roy's photo is on page three where the Checker Finn photo should have gone.

Also, when the Raja said, "It is a bond of love rather than power. We try to serve the people rather than rule the people.", he was elaborating on his relationship to his tribe rather than the Pakistani government. Collegian regrets error.

CREATION

A New Shop

Specializing in

ANTIQUE CLOTHES

from the 1800's - 1930's

BEADED PURSES

Handmade & Antique

JEWELRY

Opening Today

253 N. Pleasant St.

Carriage Shop Mall

Board Tables C.C. Plans

By SHIRLEY LAUZON

Requests for use of the Campus Center Crafts Area for a colloquia and for the establishment of a Study Commission on the long-range plans and goals of the Campus Center were tabled last night by the Campus Center-Student Union Board of Governors until their next meeting in two weeks.

The Department of Continuing Education and Southwest made the request for the colloquia in the Crafts Area. The issue of allowing academic departments use of the building was discussed, as board policy presently prohibits academic use on the grounds that the building is not part of the University's academic buildings as such. Board Chairman Richard Nelson said that the building was paying for itself, and for this reason is different from other buildings on campus.

"The Campus Center fee for students is very high, and it will increase. The reason for this high fee is that this building is not used for classrooms, although it is one of the best classroom areas on campus," Nelson said.

"Academic departments are not picking up the tab for the Campus Center. The state is committed to provide facilities for its own use, and academics would take a low priority in the use of the building," he said.

Members noted that certain groups on campus, such as Continuing Education groups, pay for use of the building for classrooms, possibly through voluntary student donations.

Legal status of the Campus Center requires that a paid staff member must be present at all times in an academic course, according to building authorities. Other members said that use for classes should be allowed if there are no conflicting demands and space is available. The request was then tabled until the next meeting to allow a representative from the Continuing Education group a chance to explain the colloquia.

The proposal for a Study Commission on the Campus Center submitted September 17, 1972, by Mr. Armand Demers of the R.S.O. Office and Mr. Paul Bigelow of the Management staff of the Campus Center, underwent forty minutes of discussion before being tabled to allow the objectives of the study to be explained by its proponents, at the next meeting.

During debate on the issue, suggestions were made to raise the student representation on the commission to at least a majority, making the proposed commission's 13 members from and appointed by the constituency groups. Numerous amendments were made, then defeated, before the tabling action.

Three amendments were made regarding the policy of selling goods and reserving tables in the concourse level of the Campus Center. The first called for the seller or a member of the immediate household to be present at the table, and only that table, at all times.

The reason for this action was given as preventing monopolies of the tables. The second amendment dropped a $1.00 charge the board had accepted last week for table reservation. The third set Continuing Education students in fourth priority for table reservations, the first three being RSO groups, non-profit organizations, and individuals.

Nelson said that Continuing Ed. students are not registered University students and pay less to the Campus Center in fees than registered students, and thus should have a lower priority.

A request for a stage, with simple but permanent lighting outside the Campus Center coffee shop for student use was granted. The area will be scheduled for use, but students may use it whenever available at no cost.

In other action, the board granted Concerned Jewish Students use of the Cape Cod Lounge for an Israeli coffee house Nov. 17. "A Tribute to Lenny Bruce", a state presentation directed and produced by David Green, will be held in the Campus Center Nov. 17 and 18 free of charge. Details will be announced next week.

The board is presently an interim board, as the Student Union Governing Board was dissolved recently by the Graduate and Undergraduate Senates. A new board will be elected in 3 or 4 weeks, according to Richard Nelson, acting chairman. The five members presently on the board are appointed by the Graduate Senate (1) and the Student Government Association (4) presidents.

SWHorseshoe Will Be Rink

By MDC STAFF

John O'Connell, Financial Manager of Southwest, said yesterday in an interview, that the construction occurring at Southwest's "horseshoe" behind Hampden Dining Commons, when completed will be a combination hockey-skating rink-basketball facility. He said that the project was conceived at last year's Southwest Internal Planning Conference (SWIP) which was open to all Southwest groups and residents.

When asked why the "horseshoe" site was chosen, O'Connell said that it had to be built there since it is being constructed with building authority funds and this money can only be used on building authority property. These funds he added are from student rent money.

O'Connell added that when the facility is completed it will be 50 feet wide by 150 feet across, with ornamental shrubbery surrounding its exterior. The project is estimated to cost $6000.

"Arturo Vi" Opens

"The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui," a gangland spectacle by Bertolt Brecht, opens at Amherst College on Friday, Nov. 10, for a run of two weekends.

Described by Director Walter Boughton as "a deeply meaningful farce," "Arturo Ui" combines music, comedy, and a steadily rising dramatic intensity to tell the story of a 1930's Chicago gangster whose rise parallels that of Hitler in Germany. Boughton, chairman of the Amherst Dramatic Arts Department, brings years of experience in professional and academic theatre to his direction of the play.

The cast, headed by Amherst senior Robert Murphy in the title role, performs the drama in the guse of a carnival troupe. The supporting cast includes junior Marshall Purdy, senior Geoffrey Keller, and sophomore Thomas Hunter, and students from Smith, Hampshire, and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

The Amherst College Masquers will offer performances of "Arturo Ui" at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 10 through Sunday, Nov. 12 and Friday, Nov. 17 through Sunday, Nov. 19. All seats will be $2. Reservations can be made by caling or visiting the box office at Kirby Theater, open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. The theatre is located on Route 116 South, on the left, one-half mile past the intersection of 116 with Route 9 in the Town of Amherst center.

EASTHAMPTON HARLEY-DAVIDSON

(Authorized sales & Service)

GRAND OPENING

Sat., Nov. 4, 1972

SNOWMOBILES * MOTORCYCLES

See the New 1973 Models

New & Used Cycles * Service on all makes

2 Adams St. Easthampton 527-1556

(Across from Lemay Motor Sales)

In The Nation And The World

Police in Da Nang Thursday cover the eyes of a woman who they said was part of Viet Cong terrorist unit and was caught with 15 hand grenades. The woman was captured in a running gun battle in Da Nang. (AP Wirephoto)

Hanoi Insists U.S. Sign

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese declared yesterday there will be no further negotiations with Henry A. Kissinger until the United States commits itself to signing the draft peace agreement.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong speakers denounced the Nixon administration for what they called "a breach of promise" in failing to sign the accord by Oct. 31, the deadline set by Hanoi.

The Saigon government warned at the 165th weekly session of the peace conference that it would refuse to recognize any cease-fire agreement concluded against its will.

In four hours of vituperation between the opposing Vietnamese delegations, there was little to show that "peace is at hand," as Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, said last week.

Nguyen Xuan Phong of the South Vietnamese delegation did not directly refer to the peace agreement in his speech but raised a series of major objections to what he said were "utterly contradictory and unacceptable" proposals.

The Viet Cong argued that in failing to sign the agreement, the United States shortened the chances for U. S. prisoners of war getting home for Christmas.

U.S. delegate William J. Porter avoided the polemics of the other three delegations. In a brief statement, he reiterated that the issues still to be clarified in the draft agreement "can be settled quickly by effort and will."

He warned that the United States would not allow itself to be rushed into a settlement of "the few remaining problems of substance."

He denied the repeated Communist charge that these problems were mere pretexts for delay, and declared:

"Misunderstandings, if they exist, must be faced frankly and dealt with. Excessive haste in settling the final elements would jeopardize the work that has been done and might place the future viability of the agreement in doubt."

Kissinger told a news conference last week it was up to Hanoi to set the date for a final secret negotiating session. He said the United States has given "a commitment that a text that will be agreed to at the next session will be the final text and that no new changes will be proposed."

Donors Disclosed By Nixon Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP)-Chicago insurance man W. Clement Stone secretly contributed $1 million to President Nixon's re-election campaign earlier this year, records disclosed last night showed.

Stone, head of Combined Insurance Co. of America, who contributed more than half a million dollars to Nixon in 1968, was the biggest donor named in a list of contributors released by the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President.

Release of the list of those who donated to the Nixon campaign before March 10 was a result of a consent order in connection with a suit brought by Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby, against the committee. The suit is expected to be tried after the election.

Nixon fund raisers had refused to disclose the names of contributors of more than $10 million donated before a new federal elections law took effect.

Other big contributors included Leonard K. Firestone of Los Angeles, $100,000; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Guest, of Virginia, $150,000; John Humes of New York, $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mulachy of New York and Ireland, developer of a steel blast furnace, $255,000; John M. Olin of New York, $100,000.

Richard M. Scaife, of the Mellon banking family of Pittsburgh, contributed $800,000.

The 283 contributions to Nixon during the Jan. 1, 1971 to Mar. 9, 1972 period totaled $5,006,333, thus accounting for about one-third of the reported $15 million the committee raised before the new campaign reporting law went into effect April 7.

Thirteen of the contributions were six figures or higher and an additional 35 ranged from $10,000 to just under $100,000.

The average contribution from the elite group was $17,690.

Other six-figure contributions were: Kent Smith and Thelma G. Smith of Gates Mill, Ohio, $122,000 each; Jules Stein, Los Angeles, $117,822.95; Trust for Agricultural Political Education, San Antonio, Tex., $187,500; Elisha Walker Jr., New York, $100,000; Arthur K. Watson, then Ambassador to France, $300,000.

Nixon Hits "Deadlines"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said last night "we are ready to conclude" a Vietnam peace settlement but "we are not going to allow an election deadline or any other kind of deadline to force us into an agreement which would be only a temporary truce and not a lasting peace."

In his first nationally televised political broadcast of the campaign, Nixon declared "we are going to sign the agreement when the agreement is right, not one day before — and when the agreement is right, we are going to sign, without one day's delay."

"We have reached a substantial agreement on most of the terms of the settlement," Nixon said. "The settlement we are ready to conclude would accomplish the basic objectives" he presented on May 8.

A return of all prisoners of war, "a ceasefire throughout Indochina" and the right of the South Vietnamese to determine their own future "without having a communist government or a coalition government imposed on them against their will."

Without giving details, Nixon said "there are still some issues to be resolved ..."

Nixon said he has insisted that these issues be settled before the agreement is signed, adding "that is why we refused to be stampeded into meeting the arbitrary deadline of October 31st."

This was a reference to Hanoi's contention that the United States had agreed to sign a Vietnam settlement pact by that date.

The nine-point agreement disclosed by Hanoi makes no reference to an Indochina-wide cease fire. Rather, it says "24 hours after the signing of the agreement, a cease fire shall be observed throughout South Vietnam."

The nine point draft agreement disclosed by Hanoi also says that all foreign troops would be withdrawn from Cambodia and Laos and that military activities in those two countries would end.

In his taped-in-advance television address, Nixon said some are asking "Why worry about the details?" He provided his own answer.

"We are not going to repeat the mistake of 1968 when the bombing halt agreement was rushed into just before an election without pinning down the details.

"We want peace-peace with honor — a peace fair to all and a peace that will last. That is why I am insisting that the central points be clearly settled.

Sun. Wed. 9 a.m. - 11 p.m.
Thurs. Sat. 9 a.m. - 1 a.m.
BLACK KETTLE
Delicatessen
Special Fri. - Thurs. 85¢
Roast Pork Grinder
Amherst Carriage Shops
253-9050
Sunderland Rt. 116
665-8789
Phone orders accepted

In Brief...

Trudeau to "Hang On"

OTTAWA (AP) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau pledged yesterday to hang on as prime minister of Canada despite the stunning electoral setback that chopped away his Liberal party majority in Parliament.

Mass. Council Holds Hearings

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Consumers Council held a public hearing yesterday to discuss a proposed contract between Blue Cross and Massachusetts hospitals, but officials of the Massachusetts Hospital Association, MHA, refused to testify.

Miller Memorial Service

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A memorial service will be held Saturday at the First Baptist Church for Donald B. Miller, of Richmond, publisher of the Berkshire Eagle in Pittsfield and three other New England newspapers.

Miller, 74, died Wednesday at his home following a lengthy illness.

Allende Appoints Members

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Salvador Allende named two generals and an admiral to the Chilean Cabinet yesterday in an effort to return order to the country after nearly a month of strikes and demonstrations against the leftist government.

THERE'S A GIRL
IN MY SOUP
Starring: Peter Sellers, Goldie Hawn
Mahar Auditorium Nov. 2 & 3
Showings at 8 P.M. & 10 P.M. each night
Admission 75¢

A cultural experience with
"White Roots of Peace"
. . . a North American Indian communication group
Monday
November 6th dvp
SCHEDULE OF EVENTS:
Exhibit & sale of Indian arts, crafts & books — Colonial Lounge — 8 a.m. - midnite
Film festival — S.U.B. — continuous 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Film feature "Blood of the Condor" S.U.B. — 3 p.m. - 4 p.m.
Children's hour (singing & dancing) — Commonwealth Room — 4-5 p.m.
Traditional American Indian Dinner — Hatch (Natural Foods Line) — 4:30 - 7:00 p.m.
Main Meeting S.U.B. — 8:00 p.m.
Coffee Hour following in S.U. Art Gallery (opening of exhibit)

Gov. Crime Program Called Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) - A study prepared for the National Urban Coalition says the government's multibillion-dollar program to fight crime in the streets has failed to improve understanding of the problem or promote better ways of dealing with it.

The study said the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the federal agency that coordinates the nationwide battle against street crime, generally "has neither led the way for the states, nor held the states to strict performance standards."

A draft copy of the study, which is sharply critical of nearly all LEAA operations, was obtained by The Associated Press. It will be released shortly by the Urban Coalition, an association of business, civic and city government officials.

A spokesman for LEAA said the agency had cooperated fully with the drafters of the study because "it hoped an objective picture of the LEAA program would emerge." But he said, the draft report "is loaded with emotionally charged comments that have little if any documentation."

"The LEAA program does not deserve the kind of silly and aimless abuse the draft report contains," he said. "It's a very cynical kind of attack. Anybody reading this draft report would have to be struck by the similarity between it and certain passages in the Democratic party platform."

The study noted that most of the money distributed to states by LEAA has been used for computerized data banks, police hardware and other equipment. It said LEAA has failed to emphasize use of funds for innovative projects to reform police, court and corrections systems, as called for in legislation that created the agency.

"In almost four years of operation and after distribution of roughly $1.5 billion in funds, the LEAA program has not initiated a basic reform of the nation's criminal justice system," the study said.

Last May, the House subcommittee on Legal and Monetary Affairs issued a report which said, "The block grant programs of LEAA have too often been characterized by inefficiency, waste, maladministration and, in some cases, corruption."

Created by the Safe Streets Act of 1968, LEAA distributes grants to state planning agencies which allocate the funds to communities for various criminal justice projects.

The Urban Coalition study undertaken by the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, is the third and longest in a series of studies that the committee has conducted of LEAA.

The study focused on five states: California, Massachusetts, Ohio, Pennsylvania and South Carolina.

It said LEAA failed to establish standards for evaluating the effectiveness of crime fighting programs or to provide guidelines for state planning agencies.

In addition, it said, LEAA has not set up an information network that would keep states informed of the successes and failures of projects throughout the nation.

U.S. Court Upholds Pure Air Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Court of Appeals here yesterday affirmed a lower court decision forbidding any significant air pollution in regions where the air is still pure.

The action left the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency under orders to attach this non-degradation requirement to all state plans for meeting national air quality standards.

There was no immediate word whether EPA would appeal to the Supreme Court.

The brief ruling by the Appeals Court, issued without further explanation, upheld the major victory won earlier by the Sierra Club and three other environment groups who had sued EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus.

Last May 30, District Judge John H. Pratt ruled that Ruckelshaus was required by the 1970 Clean Air Amendments and by EPA's own rules, to include a non-degradation requirement in the state plans.

Justice Department lawyers representing EPA appealed Pratt's decision.

As required by the 1970 law, EPA has established two sets of air quality standards: "primary" standards which must be met to protect human health, and more stringent "secondary" standards designed to protect property and the environment.

Regions where the air is dirtier than these standards allow must clean up their pollution until they at least meet the federal minimum requirements. The law permits states to adopt stricter standards if they wish.

But there remain regions where the air is much cleaner than required under the primary or secondary standards.

Environment groups argues that the law's stated aim to "protect and enhance" air quality meant this clean air could not be allowed to get as dirty as the federal standards would permit.

They said that industries would flee the dirty-air regions into the clean-air regions, spreading pollution everywhere, unless existing clean air is protected.

"Ti Ti" Money Now Very Little Money

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — "Ti ti money now," say the girls at the Grand Hotel bar. It means "very little."

The explanation is simple: "GI all go home." The bar girls are left with little more than their earthy GI slang — and some must support half-American babies.

Within a year, they say, monthly income has dropped to the piaster equivalent of $32 from $230.

In better days the bar girls entertained Americans on the grenade-screened veranda that overlooks the Da Nang River. Today they sit around playing cards, occasionally applying makeup with hopeful glances toward the barroom door.

"Sometimes here, two, three days. I never see one American," said Le Anh, 28. She lives in a dark, one-room alcove off a dirt alley a few blocks from the hotel with her 68-year-old mother and three children, two half-American and one half-Korean.

Le Anh said the American contractor she lived with asked her to get an abortion the second time she became pregnant.

"He tell me fini baby," Le Anh said. "Go to doctor. I no do. I say fini you, I love baby. I need baby."

Le Anh says she began working as a bar girl when thousands of Americans were in Vietnam and much money was to be made. The big buildup began when Marines came ashore at Da Nang in 1965. The last American combat unit in Vietnam left Da Nang this August.

The old woman who runs the hotel bar said that more than half the 20 girls who worked for her as prostitutes have children fathered by Americans. "Americans go home," she said, shaking her head sadly, "but their babies stay, and this is no place for them. Round eyes, straight noses and light hair make them different from other children. They should go to America, but Americans say no."

Madame, who is 65, worked as a bar girl "when the French were here." Her own daughter, half-French, is married with two children and lives in France. As the daughter of a Frenchman, she is entitled to French citizenship. The United States does not grant this privilege to the children of American GIs when the mother is not American.

Ezra Pound To Be Burned Today

VENICE, Italy (AP) - Poet Ezra Pound, self-exiled from his native America for most of his 87 years, will be buried here Friday. Pound died Wednesday in a Venice hospital.

The Cini Foundation, a patron of the arts, said yesterday it had arranged for a Roman Catholic funeral service at the church of San Giorgio Maggiore on the island of San Giorgio, the poet's favorite spot in the city.

Pound's body will be carried by boat to the island cemetery of San Michele.

Olga Rudge, Pound's companion for many years, said the body may eventually be taken to the United States. Pound's daughter, Mary de Rachewiltz, was in Venice but Mrs. Rudge did not know if Pound's widow would be at the funeral. They had been estranged for years.

Scholars credited Pound, whose life was clouded with social and political controversy, with being a major influence on 20th century literature.

Pound was the author of such works as the "Cantos," "Hugh Selwyn Maulberly," and editor of T.S. Eliot's "The Wasteland."

Pound was born in Hailey, Idaho, and early in life cast himself as literary rebel. Three years out of college he was fired as an instructor at Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Ind., for being too Bohemian and too outspoken.

He left for Europe in 1908 and became the leader of a group of experimental poets.

He was captured by American soldiers in 1943 and flown back to the United States to stand trial.

Disaster System Reported Tested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., who earlier this week made public a secret White House study of a government-controlled communications system that could reach into every American home, said yesterday parts of it already have been tested.

The White House, in commenting on Moorhead's previous disclosure, had said the study was rejected as soon as it was received by the Office of Science and Technology.

The congressman, who is chairman of a House subcommittee on government information, said staff investigators had learned that two alternative plans to link the government with private homes through electronic devices had already been tested.

CHASTITY BELT $4.95
Skinny Shiny Vinyl — Functional & Pretty — Tiny Lock & Two Keys Fits Waists up to 30".
Chasty Girly
ORDER NOW FOR XMAS!
No CODS or CASH Please
UNIV SVCS ASSOCIATES
Post Office Box 9327
WASHINGTON, D. C. 20005
Cannot Be Removed Intact Without A Key. Wearers Should Not Date Any Locksmiths.

THE JEANS STORE
LANDLUBBER
LEVI'S
LEE
MALE
LOVE'N STUFF
CARTER OVERALLS
ALSO: Flannel Shirts, Work Shirts
Large Selection of Tops for Men & Women
WEAR-HOUSE
201 No. Pleasant Street
Tel. (413)
Amherst, Mass. 01002
253-9706
POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT
This man hasn't been paying his fair share
He can —

With a graduated income tax the rich are taxed at a higher rate than those with low or middle incomes.
You can change the Massachusetts income tax
Vote Yes on No. 6
League of Women Voters of Amherst
Myrna L. Hewitt
18 Pondview Drive
Amherst, Mass.

Bernard L. Barker, one of five men arrested inside Democratic headquarters last June, arrives at a Miami court this morning to stand trial on state charges of fraudulently notarizing a $25,000 Republican campaign check. Behind him (with bow tie) is his lawyer Henry Rothblatt. Barker paused near court entrance to talk to newsmen. (AP)

Welfare Dominates Gubernatorial Races

By DANIEL W. HANEY

Associated Press Writer New England's three smallest states choose new governors Tuesday, and observers say the issue on most people's minds is money. The result could be a Republican sweep.

Who pays taxes and who gets welfare are being debated in Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont as politicking for the governors' offices, all free of encumbents, goes into its final days.

A Republican is moderately favored in Rhode Island and slightly favored in New Hampshire, Vermont, politicians say, is a toss-up.

In Vermont, Democrat Thomas P. Salmon is in the unusual position of running neck and neck with a Republican in a state that has had only two Democratic chief executives in its history.

He's facing Luther F. Hackett, who wrested the Republican nomination from Atty. Gen. James M. Jeffords in a primary fight whose effects are still being felt in the GOP election effort.

Even Republican Gov. Deane C. Davis, who's backing Hackett, says the race is too close to call.

Hackett has promised to try to find a way to ease property taxes in Vermont, a state that has one of the 10 highest over-all tax rates in the nation.

Salmon, meanwhile, has promised tax reform by tying property tax to owners' income and imposing capital gains tax on land sales made within two years of purchase.

In New Hampshire, another traditionally Republican state, a three-way gubernatorial race has left GOP nominee Meldrim Thomson with a probable edge.

A poll released by the Public Affairs Center at Dartmouth College showed Democratic candidate Roger Crowley with 36 per cent of the vote, compared with 34 per cent for Thomson.

But since then, the state's largest newspaper, the Manchester Union Leader, has ended its neutrality in the race and endorsed Thomson. And the independent candidate Republican Mayer Malcolm McLane of Concord, appeared to be eating into Crowley's vote.

McLane entered the race after Republican Gov. Walter Peterson lost the nomination.

Peterson had proposed a broad-based tax in New Hampshire, the only state with neither an income nor general sales tax.

Both Thomson and Crowley have promised to veto broadbased taxes, but Thomson has charged that Crowley "wavered noticibly" on this issue. Both have proposed various property tax exemptions.

In Rhode Island, former Atty. Gen. Herbert DeSimone was favored in a recent Providence Journal poll 44 to 27 per cent over Democrat Philip Noel, mayor of Warwick.

DeSimone has tried twice before for the governorship, and in 1970 lost to Gov. Frank Licht by only 1,871 votes. In that race, both pledged no state income tax, but shortly after the election, Licht decided the state needed one. And that turnabout was seen as a prime factor in the governor's decision not to run again.

Campaign '72

McG Appeals To Farmers

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Sen. George McGovern campaigned through the Midwest Thursday promising higher income for farmers and saying he wouldn't let Saigon's "little dictator," as he called President Nguyen Van Thieu, stand in the way of peace in Vietnam.

The Democratic presidential nominee also said he thinks hecklers who shouted and blew whistles at Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in San Diego Wednesday were planted by Republicans "to make us look bad." He added, "If ever I saw a put-up deal, that was it."

The candidate, accompanied by his wife Eleanor, made television and radio appearances in Chicago, spoke to an estimated 8,000 students and faculty at the University of Cincinnati, and headed for Battle Creek, Mich. for another television appearance.

McGovern repeated, in a television broadcast for Illinois and Missouri, that he does not think it is his responsibility to try to rally the country behind a second Nixon administration if he loses the election.

But he said "I don't intend to lose this election."

"I don't think it's my responsibility to try to rally the people behind policies that I disagree with," McGovern said "There's something more important than unity. There's the importance of the truth. There's the importance of this country facing up to its real problems ... the corrupt and dishonest practices of this administration ... of keeping the pressure on until the war ends."

In a radio address recorded in Chicago and played later in the day on the CBS radio network, McGovern said President Nixon's farm policies have caused 150,000 farms to shut down and forced one million people to flee rural areas.

OPEN HOUSE

Phi Mu Delta

Beer & Mixed Drinks

Fri. Nite 9:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.

(Frat Sor. Park)

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?

FREE Delivery

Kentucky Fried Chicken

256-8745

Try the Student Special 99¢

Absentee Voting

ABSENTEE VOTING INFORMATION

1) Students wishing to vote by absentee ballot should request a ballot as soon as possible to provide time for mailing.

They must already be registered.

2) You may request a ballot using the following form:

I, _____, hereby apply for an absent voting ballot. The place of my voting residence is in the city or town of _____ in the state of _____, and, as I believe, I am a duly registered voter at (street & number) _____ in the city or town of _____ and entitled to vote at the next election at ward _____, precinct _____ in said city or town of _____

(Signature) _____ (Date) _____

Please mail official absentee voting ballot to (street & number) _____ (city or town) _____ (state) _____

3) Notaries public will be available for students when they receive their ballots in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union on the following dates:

Tuesday	October 31	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Wednesday	November 1	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday	November 2	12 noon to 9:00 p.m.
Friday	November 3	12 noon to 5:00 p.m.

4) Do not mark the ballots ahead of time. Do not sign ballot envelopes ahead of time. Bring 16¢ for postage so that the ballot may be mailed directly from the Cape Cod Lounge. Bring valid identification.

5) Anyone wishing to help the Notaries during the processing should see Bud Demers in the RSO office or call him at 5-2351.

CARL ANDERSON'S

RESTAURANT WINDJAMMER LOUNGE

Route 9 Belchertown Rd., Amherst 253-2013

BREAKFAST 7 a.m. - 11 a.m.
LUNCH 11:30 - 2 p.m.
DINNER 5 p.m. - 10 p.m. — Sun. 12 noon - 8 p.m.

DAILY LUNCHEON SPECIALS

WEDNESDAY NIGHT is STEAK NIGHT at the WINDJAMMER

NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad Bar included. $3.75

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY NIGHT - Roast Beef Night

Roast Prime Rib of Heavy Western Steer Beef: Served with choice of potato, vegetable, hot rolls and butter. Salad Bar included. $3.95

Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY NIGHTS

KING ARTHUR TRIO plus MARGO 8:30 - 12:30

The Hatch was treated to "Simple Truth" last night in a concert that turned out to be quite successful. While this paper went to bed last night they were still playing strong, to a less than standing room crowd. Maybe the hatch will put on more of these although music may not be one thing that the hatch is deprived of. (MDC Photo by Pete Manera)

UMass Debate Teams Win

The UMass debate team has brought home gold in both varsity and novice competition making octofinals at Brandeis, placing 2nd at Boston University, and capturing the first place trophy at Dartmouth.

At Brandeis on October 12, two of UMass's ace varsity debaters, Roger Legendre and John Day, overpowered Harvard, Tufts, St. Johns, Rhode Island, and NYU while losing tough rounds to Oberlin, Boston College, and Seton Hall. Roger and John made the octofinals only to be edged out by Georgetown.

This past weekend the upcoming four man novice team of John Adams and John Wright on the affirmative, with Bill Nosel and Nick Saakvitne negative advanced to the final round of the Boston University Tournament to claim second place. John Wright received an award as fifth place speaker in the tournament.

Accompanying the second place team was another UMass team that earned fifth place. This was the four man novice team of Ed Fleet and Anne Desfosses affirmative with Bill Worden and Howard Steinburg negative.

UMass found their first tournament champions of the season at Dartmouth on October 14 when the four man novice team of Judy Mark and Ronnie Arnold negative with Steve Altobelli and Lou Eichelberger affirmative racked up a 6-0 record giving them the tournament trophy.

Lou Eichelberger won honrs as 3rd ranked speaker and Ronnie Arnold won the first place speakers award at Dartmouth.

As evidenced by these notable achievements and also by highly respectable showings at such prestigious tournaments as MIT, West Point, and North Carolina, it looks like a bright year for UMass and debate.

Indian Exhibition Scheduled

On Monday, "White Roots of Peace," a North American Indian communications group will visit UMass. Sponsored by the University Distinguished Visitor's Program, the White Roots of Peace will offer a day-long cultural experience with American Indians, through their traditional messages, dances, songs, and films.

A display and sale of Indian crafts will be in the Colonial Lounge from 10 am until 9 pm. Proceeds from the sale of crafts will go to the Mohawk nation for a cultural center.

In the Student Union Ballroom, various films on Indians' past history and present causes, produced, directed, and presented by Indian film-makers will be shown from 10 am until 3 pm. At three, the feature film, "The Blood of the Condor," will be shown.

In the Student Union Art Gallery will be a display of the work of Walter McCurdy, paintings and drawings of American Indians. Also in the Art Gallery will be the 75-piece collection of Southwest American Indian pottery owned by the University.

Especially for the younger set, a children's hour will be from 4 pm to 5 pm in the Commonwealth Room. This hour will consist of singing and dancing.

As the main meeting at 8:00 will be dealing with prophesy, religion, etc., it is advised that children attend this event (the Children's hour) rather than the main meeting.

From 4:30 p.m. until 7 p.m., a meal of "traditional American Indian dishes" will be served in the Hatch, Natural Foods Line.

The main meeting will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 pm. This is an opportunity for all people to hear the Indians' view of peace and relationships with their environment, as well as bringing real brotherhood to all people. There will be traditional social dances, accompanied by Indian singing and chants, done is an expression of friendship and brotherhood. Audience participation is encouraged.

As is customary with all DVP lectures, a coffee hour will follow the main meeting, in the Student Union Art Gallery, where the opening of the McCurdy art exhibit will take place.

All events are free and the University community is cordially invited to attend.

— BLUE DENIM —

Sofa — $159
Loveseat — $119
Chair — $69
Contemporary & Plush

Valley Furniture

169 Main St., Holyoke

JE 2-6962

Open Daily 9-5
Mon & Thurs. 9-9

Airline Passengers Meet Over Dispute

BOSTON (AP)-Attorneys for Eastern Air Lines and three Massachusetts men arrested after withholding their $24 fares from New York will meet today in an attempt to resolve the dispute, an Eastern spokesman said.

Dr. Samuel McFadden, a Boston City Hospital physician, Prof. Frederick Koss of Boston University and Edward Kelaney of Whitman were arrested by state police when the plane landed Saturday night at Logan Airport.

The trio met for the first time, McFadden said, when they showed up at LaGuardia Airport to catch a flight they understood from the reservations desk would leave at 9 p.m.

Because of decreased weekend patronage, however, the airline has eliminated the 9 p.m. flight to perform maintenance on equipment, Boston spokesman Roy Tate said for Eastern.

The group could not leave until 10 p.m. and withheld their fares in protest because of "moral indignation against the airline's social irresponsibility and public-be-damned attitude," the trio said.

"We all intended to pay our fares once we complained to someone in authority, but when we landed we were arrested by State Police and jailed," McFadden said.

"If they were misinformed, it's certainly our fault," Tate said, "but they were offered the option of paying immediately or signing an agreement to pay later before they were arrested.

"They were met by the senior management member on duty at Logan, and he again offered them the option of signing the paper."

The three were charged with larceny of an aircraft ride. They were released on bail and appeared in East Boston District Court Monday.

"I'M AFRAID OF THE DARK AND SUSPICIOUS OF THE LIGHT."

WALLEN GETTING EVEN

AVAILABLE IN PAPERBACK FROM WARNER PAPERBACK LIBRARY

95¢ 95¢

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

BELCHERTOWN STATE SCHOOL

Deeds

Not

Words

Concrete proposals since Whitlock's recent appointment to the Board of Trustees.

1. Transfer of $4800. To purchase sound-proof booths to test resident hearing.
2. Transfer of $5250. To purchase a transport van for student teachers coming to the school.
3. Pooling of unexpended 1972 funds to purchase wheelchairs, kitchen, recreational, school, and laboratory equipment.

Just a beginning but at least ACTION and not just WORDS.

Allow Whitlock to carry the rejuvenation of the school, to the heart of the problem, the Legislature, source of funding.

VOTE GERRY WHITLOCK FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE

Paul Downing, Jabish St., Belchertown
Greg Webb, So. East St., Amherst
Jake Bishop, So. Pleasant St., Amherst
John Dennison, Newell Court, Amherst

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nestl

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Bob Scheier
NEWS STAFF Jan Alexander, Caroline Majka
SPORTS Roy Lyons
DARKROOM Pete Manera, Kevin Mack, Steve Quigley
EDITORIAL Ed Bryant
AD LAYOUT Shelley Sack

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

A Contemptuous Act

The Faculty Senate, demonstrating contempt for the recommendations of students and its own curriculum committee, yesterday defeated the proposal to abolish rhetoric as a university requirement.

The rhetoric issue has been a subject of extensive study and debate for over two years. All concerned have agreed it needs serious revision, and the program has quickly instituted a series of superficial reforms to dull the constant criticism.

The most recent effort at reform began last January when the Academic Matters Committee of the Faculty Senate began its study of the requirement. Simultaneously, the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee began a study of its own. This September, when the evidence was in, both committees recommended strongly that the requirement be abolished. The vote in the Faculty Senate Committee was 14 to none, with one abstention, in favor of abolition. They based their conclusions on the objective fact that the goals of the program, however vague, were not being reached.

The Faculty Senate chose to reject those careful judgements. Instead, they chose to protect their own interests rather than engage in serious curriculum reform. It is no coincidence that the Rhetoric Program is a source of jobs for faculty and teachings assistants alike that would be reduced by 50% with the abolition of the requirement.

The previous week the Faculty Senate delayed consideration of rhetoric to again deal with its own self-interest, endlessly debating tenure, sabbatical leaves, and merit raises. When will the Faculty Senate begin to make educational policy a priority over self-interest?

The SGA leadership, including SGA President Larry Ladd and Academic Affairs Chairman Nicholas Apostala, have been hopelessly naive in their belief that the faculty of this campus will respond to reason. The faculty have had another chance to prove Ladd and Apostala right, and they instead have proved that conventional approaches fail.

The fact of the matter is that the faculty still seeks to protect itself and its special interests. We recommend to the SGA that it abandon its moderate stance and begin telling the truth about the faculty.

We applaud the decision to take the matter directly to the Board of Trustees. The trustees are far less concerned with self-protection, and have repeatedly assured Governor Sargent that the University can indeed clean its own house of the vestiges of another academic era. This will be a superb opportunity for the trustees to demonstrate that they are indeed concerned with the quality of the education we receive here.

Academic freedom is not the right to deny students a good education. Coercion has long since been discredited as an educational device. The trustees, we hope, will respond to the reasonable arguments that the Faculty Senate has ignored.

Reid Fishman

James G. Collins

Tuesday, for the first time in history, the adult population of this country will include that segment of our population ranging from eighteen to twenty-one years of age. I am not implying that this hasn't been the case all along, just that for the first time, the laws of the nation have acknowledged the fact. Therefore, the student vote will play a significant part in this election.

The candidate to whom I address myself today is James G. Collins, one of the two Democratic nominees for the office of State Representative from the Second Hampshire District (which is currently made up of Amherst, Ware, South Hadley, Belchertown, Pelham, Hadley, and Granby). Mr. Collins has addressed himself time and again to the important issues at hand. He has pledged to work for a reasonable progressive and graduated income tax (a modified version of the New York State plan). This tax would allow any family of five making less than 26,000 dollars per year to pay less in state income tax, and yet still would provide for an additional 200 to 400 million dollars raised in taxes each year.

Mr. Collins has always strongly advocated increased aid to local and state school systems, and a lower tax rate for lands that are being held or used for farming purposes. He will work for a welfare system that provides an annual guaranteed minimum income, increased job opportunities, and a better program of educational and support services to aid this increased job program.

Concerning the issues of abortion, women's rights, and gay rights, Collins stands for individual choice with the state only serving to provide better health facilities in the case of abortions. Concerning drug reform, he will work for a drug law that will rehabilitate addicts rather than placing them in prisons.

However, aside from his policies, Jim Collins has been going door to door personally throughout the district and here on campus in an attempt to listen to and be heard by all the voters in his constituency, not just those with the power and money. Jim Collins represents the voice of the district, but he also represents the voice of the students. As a former Student Senate President at UMass and the assistant director of the the Upward Bound program here on campus, he comes in contact day to day with the ideas and wishes of the students. Therefore, for these and countless other reasons, I urge you to vote this Tuesday for James Collins for State Representative.

Reid Fishman is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Dan Caruso

Learning Vs. Education

Aiding and abetting the uttering of forged documents? Fraud? Shades of Watergate! Has another case of political intrigue come to light?

The statements above aren't really accusations made by Senator McGovern against the Committee to Re-Elect the President. They are only part of a legal opinion expressed by Suffolk Superior Court Judge Harry Kalus on the use of term-paper companies by students at Boston University.

In granting BU an injunction against the term-paper companies, Judge Kalus said that the business constitutes a fraud not only against the colleges and universities, but also against the vast majority of students who do their own work.

In light of this ruling, the assignment of term-papers to students almost seems a crime in itself. The fact that students feel compelled to use the services of these companies indicates a relatively low value is attached to term-papers as a valid form of learning.

Educators have already acknowledged that the A-B-C-D grading system for measuring academic achievement is far from perfect. Consequently, term-papers, which are an integral part of this system in higher education, would seem to be an inadequate way to meet the needs and goals for which they were intended.

Primarily, term-papers in the form in which they now exist, are stilted and formal exercises in the use of the library. The student merely chooses a subject, determines a means for presenting the subject, summarize the work of others on the subject, and plugs this information into a conventional form.

The value of this automatic exercise as a learning experience is nil, because it stifles creativity and fosters a feeling for the subject in the student which is not conducive to learning. The question of alternatives, however, leads many educators to accept this method with a sense of resignation.

The rationale behind the papers is that they stimulate learning by exposing the student to a subject in an intense and extensive manner. Perhaps if the tediousness of the task was removed, and the student was encouraged to share his learning experiences in a more relaxed and motivating fashion, he would use more creativity in his presentation.

What is more important, however, is that he will have learned something.

Dan Caruso is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Art Buchwald

Communists For Nixon

WASHINGTON--If Richard Nixon wins the election next week, most of the credit will go to Lu Doc Toy who heads the "Communists for Nixon Committee' in Hanoi.

Lu Doc Toy, who, until this election, always voted the straight Communist Party ticket, decided to support Nixon this year because, he said, "I'm sick and tired of having my kids bused along the Ho Chi Minh Trail."

Having made the decision, Lu Doc Toy contacted the Committee for the Re-Election of the President in Washington which sent one of their top CIA men to Hanoi to help him in the campaign.

Lu Doc Toy told the CIA man, "I need bumper stickers, buttons, posters and a secret fund to get the Communists for Nixon off the ground."

The CIA man said, "We've written off North Vietnam as far as electoral votes go, but you could help us tremendously in getting the President re-elected with a small favor."

"What can I do?" Lu Doc asked.

"Arrange a peace treaty with the United States a week before the elections."

"It's done," Lu Doc Toy said. "My cousin is a member of the Politburo and he owes me a favor."

Lu Doc Toy went to see his cousin Ton Son Not in his bomb shelter the next day. During a 15-minute break in the bombing he said, "Ton Son Not, as you know I am the head of the Communists for Nixon and I have a small favor to ask of you."

"You have dishonored your ancestors, Lu Doc Toy," Ton Son Not said. "How can you support a man whose party would bug the Watergate?"

"It was a prank," Lu Doc Toy said. "Everyone does it during an election year. Besides Nixon knew nothing about it."

"That's what all the Communists for Nixon say. But we know differently. Besides, how could you work for a man who said he would stop the war in 1968?"

"Exactly," Lu Doc Toy said. "That's what I came to speak to you about. Nixon wants to stop the war again, only this time before the election."

"It's a trick," Ton Son Not said. "What does he want in exchange for it?"

"Nothing we wouldn't have given him in 1968. It's the same deal that was offered to him then."

"But why now? I thought the U.S. bombing was working."

"Who knows what goes on with those cockamamie Americans. But I'm giving it to you straight. If you people say okay, Nixon will send what's-his-name to Paris to sign the deal."

"Wait a minute," Ton Son Not said. "If we agree to a peace settlement, that means we'll have four more years of Nixon."

"Look, Ton Son Not," Lu Doc Toy said, "we hold the key to the American presidential election in our hands. We have to decide whether we want Nixon for President and a generation of peace, or whether we want the misguided, badly thought out socialistic programs of George McGovern."

The bombing started gain. "WHAT ABOUT THIEU? WILL HE GO ALONG WITH IT?" Ton Son Not yelled.

"DON'T WORRY ABOUT THIEU," Lu Doc Toy yelled back. "HE'LL DO ANYTHING NIXON ASKS HIM TO!"

Copyright 1972, Los Angeles Times.

PRESIDENTIAL POLL • Pages Fifteen and Sixteen

Poor Richard's

Volume Two Number Eight November 3 1972

Richard M. Nixon. Next Tuesday's his day. Will he outpoll George McGovern here on campus? See pages sixteen and seventeen.

Inside An Abortion Clinic

By Deborah Larned

NEW YORK Last spring, while the New York abortion law was being debated by the State Assembly, I was working in an outpatient clinic. The legislators' debates – over such questions as when life begins and whether a fetus feels pain; over the coat hangers and bottled 10-week-ole embryos which were passed from hand to hand – had nothing to do with the realities of abortion.

I worked in a clinic which was designed as a model "family planning" center. It is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; six days a week. Abortions and pregnancy tests are performed every morning, and contraception sessions run through the afternoon and evening. A vasectomy service has just been initiated and venereal disease testing will soon be available.

The clinic provides women with an ongoing gynecological care. If a woman comes for an abortion she also receives a two-week, post-operative examination. If she comes for the pill she may also use the clinic for her regular 6-month checkups. It is not a one-shot deal, which is one reason why it's one of the best clinics in New York.

The women who come to the clinic come primarily from the New York area, though, like other clinics, we have many out-of-town women. Most of them, but not all, are single, under 25, and are pregnant for the first time.

I spend a lot of time with each woman I see, whether she has come to the clinic to find out if she is pregnant, to have an abortion, or for birth control. We talk about anything. If she has come for an abortion, our conversation might include the details of the procedure itself, medical risks, doctors, money, contraception, or her relationship with her husband, boyfriend, schoolmates, children, or parents. But mostly we talk about her fears.

Despite the women's liberation movement and the publicity abortion has received, people still know very little about the process of obtaining an abortion of the actual medical procedures. Often the knowledge people bring with them comes from horror stories about illegal abortion.

Most women know that in New York the legal status of abortion has changed, but many fear that everything else has remained the same. They imagine a back-alley operation with bloody newspapers spread on the floor and a masked man in a dingy office who neither tells you his name nor asks you yours. Probably it will be only slightly less frightening than in the old days when an abortionist would not use anesthetics, and would turn up the radio full blast so that no one could hear the screams.

The "back-alley syndrome" is so deeply ingrained that women marvel at the modernity of the clinic long after their abortions are over. They just can't believe it.

There is a deeper fear. Women feel that for some reason, they will be denied their abortion at the last minute and be forced to continue with the pregnancy. They wonder, "Will I really get the abortion?" The whole thing seems too good to be true; many women are so suspicious that even when the procedure is over they still as, "is it out?"

Most of the women I see at the clinic are not involved in the women's movement and have never been exposed to its ideology. They do not regard abortion as a political issue, or think of their rights as women to bear children when they want to, or not to have any at all. They are not familiar with abortion laws. They have simply decided that they can't be pregnant now.

• • •

In an understandable effort to allay the fear which has surrounded illegal abortion, most of the published material on the subject stresses the simplicity and safety of the operation when performed with modern methods under sanitary conditions.

A legal abortion is, in fact, a simple procedure. So simple that many doctors find it boring. But it is dishonest and unjust to perpetuate the idea that there is nothing to it. For most women, the abortion is unpleasant and frightening. It can also be painful.

The severity of the pain depends partially on the skill of the doctor and partially on the woman's threshhold of pain. But a more important factor is the woman's attitude toward the abortion and her knowledge of the procedure. It has been my experience that the more emotional conflict a woman brings to the operation, the more pac she will feel.

For example, one would think that a woman who has delivered children would feel less pain than a woman who has not, because her cervix has already been stretched. However, many women have told me that their abortion was more painful than labor.

It seems that women who have devoted their lives to raising and caring for children, and consider themselves, above all, mothers, often feel the abortion is a betrayal or rejection of their own living children, and a denial of their motherhood. These women go through the procedure with a great deal of anxiety and guilt.

The decision to have an abortion is also made difficult because abortion has been traditionally regarded as the last resort of a young girl "in trouble," a way out for someone with "no other choice." Because older, married women don't fit this pattern, many find it hard to justify an abortion for themselves.

They argue that while young single women may be disgraced by a child "born out of wedlock," they have the security of marriage. It isn't abnormal if they are pregnant. In their lives an abortion may be as necessary, if not more so, than an unmarried woman's abortion. Yet it is often seen as pure selfishness.

This guilt and confusion, coupled with fear of the actual abortion, often makes the procedure more difficult. If a woman is frightened and upset, she will brace herself to maintain control. It's normal and we all do it. But in this case, tightening your body not only makes the abortion more difficult for the doctor, but it also seems to make uterine contractions more severe.

Much of this tension can be eased, if the woman has an opportunity to talk to a counselor about her fears and conflicts concerning her decision to have an abortion and her qualms about the procedure itself. And, if she trusts the person accompanying here through the procedure, she will be more relaxed.

When you visit an abortion clinic you are struck by the drama created by the medical situation. There is tension and excitement in the air. But the real drama of an abortion clinic takes place in the mind of the patients.

At times like this I felt that working in an abortion clinic was like working for the Red Cross. I imagined that a month ago there had been a natural disaster – a flood or an earthquake, a finite number of people needed our help. We were working fast and furious to catch up on the backlog. At some point in the near future we would hand out all the blankets, and that would be the end. Unfortunately, we weren't making much of a dent.

Day after day women came to the clinic for abortions. It seemed absolutely incredible to me that so many women could continue to get pregnant unwillingly. However, as time went by and I came to understand the problem of abortion more

(Continued on P. 14)

Aardvarks

Correspondences

To the Editor:

I must admit the gullibility and childish naivete of many people on this campus never ceases to amaze me. For the past two weeks I have heard nothing except that Jeanne Dixon has predicted a (quote) mass murder, (unquote) at a girls' dormitory in Southwest.

Why anyone would want to contribute to this mindless rumor is beyond me. That Mrs. Dixon would make such an absurd prediction is questionable; that she would be as specific as a "girls' highrise dorm in a large East coast university located in a small town beginning with the letter "A", is unreasonable.

The furor over this rumor reached its peak Halloween night with not just a few University co-eds being extremely perturbed. There was reason for these girls to be upset; we all know of Richard Speck and other such unfortunate incidents, for us to contribute to a mindless hullabaloo which frightened hundreds of females and could have unleashed a psychopathic maniac to go into action certainly was reckless and not in the least bit funny.

I hope nothing serious arose because of this "sick" joke; perhaps, people will think twice when they feel it may be funny to start a rumor, especially one with such morbid implications.

Sincerely,
Bill Stefano

To the Editor:

Normally, I welcome comments, criticisms and suggestions germane to my columns or reviews. I am grateful that Ms. Estelle Kaplan took the time last Friday to comment on some of my impressions of John Coltrane's newest record, "Infinity".

However, it seems that Ms. Kaplan lost her composure during the course of her letter, and unfortunately some of her logic as well. It was not clear throughout the letter whether or not she was addressing her criticisms to me personally, or indirectly in the form of the third person. I say "unfortunate", because as a reviewer I believe that when someone does not know his own topic, he is hardly in a position to chide someone else for doing the same thing.

Because Ms. Kaplan posed a few questions in her letter, I will answer them. My information as to Coltrane's drug experiences was supplied by someone extremely intimate with him, a jazz musician himself who has played with McCoy Tyner in the Jazz Workshop in Boston. Ms. Kaplan challenges this information, but only clouds the issue by suggesting that she "tends to believe" something to the contrary. Not only does this hardly take what I said to task, but it does not prove to be helpful. Does Ms. Kaplan have any specific refutations which are helpful?

Aside from these initial reservations on my part, what disturbs me most about Ms. Kaplan's letter is the fact that the entire crux of her argument concerned a fundamental difference of opinion as to whether we both liked the album. If Ms. Kaplan would take the time to read my review more thoroughly, she would realize that I repeatedly emphasized John Coltrane's importance as a musician, an issue on which we both seem to agree. Where we do not agree concerns an aspect of both music appreciation and reviewing in general. An intellectually honest reviewer is obligated to enumerate his impressions in the course of a review; if he reviews something as entirely subjective as jazz, he is under no obligation to either laud or condemn what he hears.

On the other hand, Ms. Kaplan would like to silence the reviewers in Poor Richard's in their prime obligation, which is to inform readers about their reactions to new movies, books, and albums. She suggests that we are not to criticize our material at hand; in fact, she even states that "we all should (sic) sit back and listen and learn all we can about John Coltrane". Moreover, earlier in her letter she says that I should "not try to comment at all and just tell us that there was a new release of John Coltrane". I disagree- and I am sure my fellow reviewers at Poor Richard's will do the same. What, pray tell, is the point of reading a review if one is not prepared to accept a difference in opinion?

Basically, I appreciate Ms. Kaplan's respect for John Coltrane and his music, but when she expects us to accept him as a Messianic saint, I am prepared to similarly take issue with her. She closes by suggesting that I watch TV so that I can't depreciate (sic) any one else's work. The logic displayed in her rather puerile letter implies that up until now she has been doing just that.

Frank Johnson

Poor Richard's

Vol. II number eight

Co edited by Bob Nesti, Ken Sulin and Jim Lavrakas.

This week's staff:
Gouri Bhatia, Mark Vogler, Gary Gomes, Steve Feld, Dan Esposito, Mike Kostek, Carl Kaliszewski, Howard Bloom, Steve Ferber, Carl Greenberg.

Poor Richard's is the weekly magazine of the MDC. Contributions and comments may be delivered to the MDC office

Poor Richard's Poll

Do political polls create apathy? Not when you're the one conducting the poll. And we've got a wopper for you this week. On pages fifteen and sixteen that dynamic team, Howard Bloom and Steve Ferber, finally reveal the results of their frantic poll taken on campus in the past few weeks. What are the major issues to the students on this campus? How and why do they differ so markedly from the rest of the nation? Who is the people's choice according to these people? For a reasonably simple and in depth look, look right before the centerfold.

Fiction Or Fact

Meek member of Academia becomes brute. Vogler animalized by rough-housing during football training. Thinking he was Plimpton, reporter invades UMass football for grueling three months and emerges with expose and bruises. MacPherson, head coach of dirty eleven, plays devil, contracting for Vogler's soul for spring semester. Vogler wanted full treatment, gets it. Is he the same man as before? Read and see.

Fact As Fiction

Coming directly from his last book, The Day of the Jackel, Frederick Forsyth grabs a hunk of tragic history and turns it into fiction for his latest novel, The Odessa File. Forsyth molds fact into suspenseful fiction in this story about a journalist who launches into a one man crusade to search out and reveal a former member of Hitler's infamous SS. The fiction trembles with realism because of the facts supporting it. Fine reading, see page twelve.

More, More, More

Watergate: Just One Of Those Things

by Liberation News Service

Editor's note: When five men were arrested inside the Democratic National Headquarters at 2:30 am on June 17th, equipped with bugging devices and copying cameras, no one really thought that that event would be the scandal that broke the Nixon Administration's back. And they were right; it hasn't. But it should have.

The Watergate Affair, as it has come to be known by the straight media, has unfolded like a bad novel into a series of events, interactions and interrelations that has implicated everyone close to the President, except Pat, yet the whole mess has left Richard Nixon's chances for re-election almost unscathed. Despite footprints that lead right to their door, the Republicans and the President have managed to remain above the scuffle in this complicated story involving White House aids, Republican Party officers, ex-CIA agents and Cuban exiles.

Shortly after two am on June 17th, security guard Frank Willis, a 24 year old black man was making his rounds in the plush Watergate complex at 2600 Virginia Avenue in Washington D.C. "I went to the bottom level of the building and saw that there were two doors with tape over the latches so they wouldn't lock when closed," said Willis of his first discovery of something strange happening in the Watergate.

"I removed the tape, but I wasn't suspicious," Willis explained. "I thought it might be maintenance men." In any event, Frank went back about ten minutes later, "just to make sure." This time Frank found the doors of all the offices on that floor taped so that the locks wouldn't work. This time he went to the lobby and phoned the Washington police.

About 15 minutes later, three plain clothes officers of the metropolitan police department surprised five men in the offices of the Democratic National Committee, which had rented the entire sixth floor of the Watergate. The intruders, wearing surgical gloves, carried with them a kit loaded with burglary tools, a walkie-talkie, two 35 millimeter cameras, 40 rolls of film, two bugging devices and $3300 in freshly minted $100 bills with sequential serial numbers. Two of the men carried address books containing the name of E. Howard Hunt and the notation "W.H." and "W.House" beside his name.

When booked by the police the men gave false names – names later learned to be the names of characters from novels written by E. Howard Hunt. Their real names, however, were soon found out and with that discovery came the first connection between the events at the Watergate and the White House.

Most significant among the five was James W. McCord Jr., who originally gave his name as Edward Martin. McCord, 53, was employed at the time as "security coordinator" for the Committee for the Re-election of the President and as a security consultant for the Republican National Committee – specifically concerned with security for the Party convention in Miami in August. His training for these positions came from 19 years as a security specialist for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Also arrested with McCord was Bernard L. Barker, a 55 year old real estate agent from Miami, and a Cuban exile who helped the CIA recruit members for the Bay of Pigs invasion force.

One of the attorneys for the five men disclosed that he received a phone call at 3 AM on the 17th from Barker's wife. "She said," the lawyer related, "that her husband told her to call me if he hadn't called her by 3 AM; that it might mean he was in trouble."

Eugenio R. Martinez, 49, an associate in Barker's Miami real estate firm, was also arrested in the offices. Martinez has been used often by the CIA to perform various low-level odd jobs in Miami's Cuban community. Another Miamian, Virgilio R. Gonzalez, a 45 year old Cuban-born locksmith, was also seized. He was described by his boss at the Missing Link Key shop as "pro-American and anti-Castro."

Finally, there was Frank Sturgis, a 37 year old self-proclaimed soldier of fortune who, according to the FBI, fought with Castro in the Cuban revolution and later almost lost his American citizenship for dropping anti-Castro leaflets from a plane over Miami.

The protagonist: John Mitchell.

So these are the principles of the drama, so it seemed. But as more pieces were fit together the more it seemed that these weren't just five guys out for some early morning fun. Almost immediately after the arrests, Democrats began charging that the White House was tied in to the whole thing. White House press secretary Ron Ziegler, however, officially dismissed the Watergate raid as a "third rate break in."

Word soon leaked out, though, about Howard Hunt's name being found on two of the suspects. Hunt, it was learned, was employed at the time of arrests as a special consultant to the President on international narcotics. He had been hired in 1971 on the recommendation of Charles W. Colson, special counsel to the President and a man known as the administration's specialist in covert political operations.

Hunt, 54, and a 21 year veteran of the CIA, dropped from sight for several weeks after his name was publicly linked with the case. And the next couple of weeks saw major shake-ups on the Nixon staff.

First, former White House aide G. Gordon Liddy was fired as finance council to the Committee for the Re-election of the President after he refused to answer FBI questions about the Watergate incident. Liddy and Hunt had worked together as White House consultants on "international narcotics," a field that the CIA is quite at home in.

At about this time the whole Martha Mitchell incident broke out. Consequently, on July 1, using preservation of his marriage as an excuse, John Mitchell stepped down as chairman of the Committee for the Re-election of The President. Martha said at the time, "I love my husband very much, but I'm not going to stand for all those dirty things going on." Coincidentally enough Hugh W. Sloan Jr., treasurer of the Nixon re-election group resigned on July 14 for what he said were "personal reasons." A source close to Sloan according to the Washington Post said he quit because "he didn't like what he saw was going on."

This attempt to put distance between the Nixon administration and those directly involved in the Watergate break-in was tarnished on August 1 when the Washington Post disclosed that a $25,000 check that had been given to the Nixon campaign fund popped up in the bank account of Bernard Barker's real estate firm.

The cashier's check was made out to Kenneth H. Dahlberg, the president's campaign finance chairman for the Midwest. Dahlberg claimed that in early April he had turned the check over to the "treasurer of the Committee or to Maurice Stans himself." Dahlberg said he didn't have "the vaguest idea" how the check got into Barker's account. According to government testimony, that account was the same account from which Barker later withdrew a number of $100 bills. About 53 of the $100 bills were found on the five men at the time of their arrest.

The federal investigation did in fact determine that Dahlberg gave the check to Maurice Stans, former Secretary of the Commerce and now Nixon's chief fund raiser. From Stans the check went to Sloan and then Liddy and finally Barker, according to the investigators. Another $89,000 in Nixon campaign checks moved from Texas to Mexico to Washington to Barker's bank account, investigators also determined.

So with everybody that's anybody in the Nixon administration tied in some way to someone or something involved the Watergate case we breathlessly waited for the Grand Jury to return its indictments. And on September 15 the indictments were handed down.

Named were the five men arrested inside the offices plus Hunt and Liddy. Hunt and Liddy, the indictment charged, "willfully, knowingly and unlawfully" listened to wire taps of conversations of R. Spencer Oliver, executive director of the Democratic state chairmen's association. The Grand Jury also stated that Hunt and Liddy were actually inside the Watergate on June 17 even though they weren't arrested with the other five. According to the indictment, they registered at the Watergate on May 26 under assumed names. The walkie-talkie found on the five men at the time of their arrest was tuned to the same frequency as a walkie-talkie found in the White House office of Howard Hunt.

But the investigation, which Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst termed as "one of the most intensive, objective and thorough investigation in many years", failed to answer central questions concerning the purpose and the sponsorship of the whole operation.

During the months of the pre-indictment indictment investigation former Democratic Party chairman Lawrence O'Brien charged that "there is developing a clear line to the White House in the case." The Grand Jury indictments, however, gave the administration a ready made out. "As we knew all along," commented Robert Dole, chairman of the Republican National Committee on the day that the indictments were handed down, "and as the grand jury has now determined, there is no evidence to substantiate any of the wild and slanderous statements McGovern has been making about many high officials in the Nixon Administration."

But the funding of the operation and investigations into those connected with the financial aspects of the operations have raised more suspicions about the Nixon administration's involvements rather than quieted those rumors. As administration spokesmen have been trying desperately to do.

Soon after the indictments were handed down it was learned that the Committee for the Re-election of the President has a $300,000 secret fund to be used for "sensitive political projects." According to the Washington Post it could not be learned whether Mitchell and his closest aides knew that the money was going to be used for illegal activities, but it is certain, that they did know that among the sensitive projects was an espionage compaign against the Democrats. Such activity, said Clark McGregor, Mitchell's replacement as campaign head for Nixon, "is all part of the game."

The $300,000 was supposedly kept in Maurice Stann's home safe and was dished out to aides of Mitchell who, according to former FBI agent Alfred Baldwin, a self-proclaimed participant in the Watergate operation, received memos based on tapped telephone conversations of Democratic Party officials.

Baldwin, who was once a security guard for Martha Mitchell, told the Grand Jury that McCord brought him in to the case on May 10 to monitor wiretaps of the Democratic Party. According to Baldwin he was also assigned by McCord to infiltrate the VVAW for the purpose of "embarrassing the Democrats" if the Vets demonstrated at the Republican Convention, 27 members of the VVAW were subpoenaed to appear before a Grand Jury. Six of them received indictments charging them with conspiring to disrupt the Republican Convention by using homemade explosives and weapons.

Baldwin was paid with money coming from the $300,000 secret fund. According to the Post's study, the actual distribution of the money from the secret fund was an "extremely complex transaction... designed to eliminate the possibility of tracing any of the funds to their original source." According to the report, Mitchell was one of "very few people" who knew that the funds were being used for intelligence gathering.

Another recipient of funds from Maurice Stan's little egg nest was a Los Angeles attorney named Ronald H. Segretti. Segretti, was hired in September 1971 by one of Nixon's most trusted aides, Dwight Chapin, according to Justice Department files. For his services, Segretti was paid by Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's personal attorney. From September 1971 to March 15,

(Continued on P. 12)

Feiffer

It Could Happen Here

By Carl Greenberg

The Odessa File by Frederick Forsyth
Viking
337 pages $7.95

It has recently been said that to those under forty World War II is ancient history, while to those over forty it is still a living presence. To both groups, The Odessa File should prove valuable reading.

Forsyth's previous book, The Day of the Jackal, is probably one of the best suspense novels around. It was a success because Forsyth, an investigative journalist who has worked for the BBC and Reuters in London. Paris, Berlin, Biafra, etc., did the research. Like Orson Welles' broadcast of War of the Worlds, Jackal could easily be mistaken for the real thing.

Even more so does Odessa File ring true; again for good reason. A very great deal of it is true. The Odessa is a real organization. The letters stand for "organisation der ehemaligen SS-Angehorigen", which means "Organization of Former Members of the SS." The SS, as most of us should know, was Hitler's elite army within the army, commanded by Heinrich Himmler, which was responsible for special tasks during the Nazi rule. In other words, the SS were the ones who slaughtered some 14,000,000 people.

Odessa File, briefly, is about a journalist who, for reasons of his own, sets out to track down and bring to justice a former member of the SS. Captain Edouard Roschmann. Roschmann was the commander of the Riga concentration camp.

As I have said, a great deal of Odessa File is true. So true and so fantastic, in fact, that the publishers inform us in a special note that Roschmann's story is true. That he is, indeed, now in exile in South America.

We are not, however, given detailed instructions as to just what is or is not fictionalized. We knew, when we read Capote's In Cold Blood, that the basic story was true and that such elements as the dialogue were what made it a novelized documentary. In Odessa File, the lines are not so neatly drawn. We are caught up in an almost epic tale in which almost anything could be true. Perhaps someone will undertake the task of writing "The Writing of The Odessa File".

One can easily suspect that Forsyth himself was confronted and threatened by the Odessa as was Miller, the journalist in the novel. If there is any criticism at all to be leveled at the book, it may be that certain elements of the plot are too contrived or wild (the phone line is downed by snow at just the wrong time) but, then again, in this world of plane hyjackings, Olympic Village and Lod Airport massacres, there can be few too wild plots.

Another important revealing element of Odessa File is that of the present attitude of the German people towards their country's role in World War II. Perhaps that should be qualified; the story takes place in 1963-64. It is, in fact, a premise of the book that the discovery of the Odessa File-a real list of SS names-is responsible for a greater interest in hunting down war criminals.

Anyway, it seems that following the war, German children were taught the "theory of collective guilt"; that the whole country was responsible for what had happened. And furthermore, that they were not told just what did happen. The second chapter of Odessa File would be titled "Tauber's Diary" if the chapters had been titled. There are any number of accounts of life in the death camps of the Nazi's written by survivors. They are all eloquent, by their very nature. This brief account in Odessa File (30 pages) of existence under the "Butcher of Riga" (Roschmann) is as eloquent and moving as any.

We are not told just how Forsyth came to include this account; whether it really is the diary of a real Salomon Tauber, or a pieced together collection, or something else, but it is impossible that such an account could be written without the guidance and influence of a survivor. If World War II is ancient history to those of us under forty, how much more so do the horrors of the concentration camps surpass the understanding of those who weren't there.

When Miller reads this diary, it is the first such document that he has been exposed to. He finally understands the shell that had been placed around him all during his childhood and education in Germany. It is enlightening both to him and to us. It becomes clear why so relatively few German was criminals have been captured and why an organization like Odessa can be so successful.

So successful, in fact that there are former members of the SS in all positions of German life today; in the government, in the police forces, in business and industry. In this light, Forsyth's book ceases to be merely a successful novel destined for the best-seller charts, but a valuable social commentary.

Another premise of the book is that the revelation of the Odessa File in late 1964 was in a very large way responsible for the Israeli victory in the 1967 Six-Day War. If we are to believe Forsyth, the Egyptians were very nearly able to annihilate Israel because of German help (SS people) in developing rockets which would deliver deadly chemical and biological warheads. (If you remember, Israeli planes were able to destroy Egyptian missiles which were still on their pads.)

As you may imagine, politics play a large role in the novel. Kennedy, Adenauer, Johnson, Erhard and others are of importance in the book as they were in real life.

Perhaps the most important lesson to learn from Forsyth's book is that it is never too late to learn about the last World War. (It is never too late to learn about any aspect of world history, but World War II will always be a special case) It becomes an amazing thing to realize just how small a part of our consciousness is the Nazi slaughter, how little we understand of Hiroshima.

Forsyth has performed a valuagle service by informing us through the popular medium of best-selling fiction, about what few of us lived through and what even fewer of us can comprehend.

It would have been useful if the publishers had included maps somewhere so that the reader could more easily follow the twisting route of reporter Miller on his hunt which takes him all through Germany and western Europe. It might also be instructional to learn just where are the horrible places of Riga, Dachau, Auschwitz, Treblinka, Bergen-Belsen, and on and on.

Forsyth tells us right at the srart that he cannot publicly thank all those who helped him with his work on this book. Some were former members of the SS and as Forsyth says, "were not aware at the time either whom they were talking to, or that what they said would end up in a book."

On that note we wonder whether Odessa File, the book, will have the same sorts of ramifications that the Odessa File, the documents, had on real people and politics.

If we bothered to read and see The Godfather, it is our duty to read The Odessa File. We can even begin to see why Meir Kahane determined it necessary to organize the Jewish Defense League (JDL), whose slogan (battle cry) is "Never Again", so many years after the war. We've fotgotten the Alamo, but we cannot afford to forget the Nazis. The thinking that evolved during the cold war is often represented by the phrase "it can't happen here". That may even be true. What's important, however is that it could happen at all. (It's been happening in Vietnam for 20 years) We need not adopt the terror tactics of the JDL, but certainly we should be determined that it happen "Never Again", anywhere.

To insure that we avoid the catastrophes of World War II in the future, we must first learn and remember. An excellent place to start is with The Odessa File.

(Book courtesy of University Bookstore)

Watergate: Just One of Those Things (con't)

1972 Kalmbach gave Segretti more than $35,000.

Investigators first became suspicious when they noted a series of telephone calls between Segretti and Hunt. Next it was learned that Segretti went to Miami to meet Hunt at about the time the Watergate deal was in the planning stage. This was as far as the Justice Department carried the investigation.

Segretti wasn't willing to divulge all that much more, either, but he did state that he was hired to, among other things, disrupt the primary campaigns of Democratic candidates. An assistant attorney general of Tennessee, Alex B. Shipley, has said that Segretti approached him last year in an attempt to hire him to disrupt Democratic campaigners. According to Shipley, "It wasn't represented as a strong arm operation. He stressed what fun we could have."

The "fun" ranged from impersonating Democratic candidates' field managers and calling the manager of a coliseum where a rally was to be held and moving it to a different time so that the building would be locked when the candidate arrived, to distribution of derogatory campaign literature "signed" by Democratic candidates. Democratic Party records show that a Don Segretti volunteered to help the McGovern Shriver campaign in California and evidence has surfaced that Senator Muskie's primary campaign was sabotaged by persons unknown.

So there we are, with the knowledge that the Watergate was just a part of a larger plan to disrupt the Democratic campaign and insure the Re-election of Richard Nixon. Yet, despite the fact that everyone of importance in the Committee to Re-elect the President knew of, controlled, or distributed money from the secret campaign fund, the administration, largely because of the failure of those investigating the case to follows up leads involving those people very close to Nixon, has been able to pretend that the whole thing just didn't happen.

Nixon, when asked about the Watergate, has responded by saying things like "I won't give those stories credence by considering them," while his hatchet men have used harsher language. Chief domestic adviser, John Ehrlichman, in response to Democratic charges of administration involvement said, "I remember very well when I was a kid that the minster's son was the biggest lear in the class. I am afraid that we've got something of that kind confronting us in this political election." McGovern's father was a minister.

If anything still works in this country, it seems that the administration will have to deal with Watergate and related charges sooner or later. But the trial won't start until about a week after the election and one can almost see Nixon and friends straining to keep as much under their already bulging hats as they can until the magic day, November 7.

After the election, especially if Nixon wins by a wide margin-and thus has a "mandate from the people"-Nixon and company will have "four more years" to heal the scars of scandal and will be able to pull out all stops in dealing with those people who come too close to knowing too much.

FRIDAY & SATURDAY NIGHTS
at
THE CHEQUERS
Enjoy the Relaxing Music of
Paul McKinley
9:30 til close
NO Cover

Books

Further Adventures Of Abbie And Jerry

By Gouri Bhatia

Vote
by Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin, and Ed Sanders

The "youth culture" of the 60's still lives. Not on America's college campuses or on its streets....But in the 35 year old minds of the fanatically young Yippies, Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin.

Vote! is a new "book" by Hoffman, Rubin and Ed Sanders (formerly of the Fugs). I say "book" because it, like Hoffman and Rubin's earlier literary attempts, Woodstock Nation, Steal this Book, Do It, Revolution for the Hell of It, is totally lacking in any type of literary value. And like their other works, Vote can be described as a book only in the technical sense – it has pages, a cover, and binding.

Hoffman, Rubin, and Sanders (or Abbie, Jerry, and Ed, as they'd like to have you call them) have written what they describe as "a record, a dialogue, a manifesto – Miami Beach 1972 and beyond." What they have succeeded in writing is 200 plus pages of bias about the Democratic and Republican Conventions, interspersed with their personal and puerile dicta such as "Let John and Yoko stay." Poor, to say the least.

Vote, though an account of the conventions this summer, is essentially a reinstatement of the Youth International Party's old philosophies. The three authors, though they furnish a detailed account of Convention events -- who was there, where they stayed, what went on -- color it so highly with Yippie rhetoric that it ceases to be news and becomes opinion.

Hoffman describes the Democratic convention as a Fellini movie, a theater of the absurd....which, to a certain extent, rings true....But it is the Yippies themselves who seem to make it so. They chortle gleefully over what is supposed to be a major political event, and sometimes seem totally uninterested by the political event, and sometimes seem totally uninterested by the political aspects of the Convention.

Jerry Rubin (left), the crowds at Miami (right).

They take advantage of the free bars in the various delegates hotels, ogle wide-eyed at the celebrities, and obtain Press floor passes by insisting that they're Press representatives for "Mad" magazine and "Popular Mechanics." They admit that their only reason for being in Miami is to find "a place in the sun."

When they do turn to politics, it is to denounce Nixon in no uncertain terms (which is certainly understandable). And, when running out of anti-Nixon rhetoric, they turn to putting down Humphrey and Muskie. McGovern earns their grudging approval because of his stand on the war issue, but even he comes in for his share of flak on such aspects as legalizing abortion. "The choice between McGovern and Nixon", state Hoffman and Rubin, "is a choice between a humanistic America and one that is not, (but) McGovern is no bargain."

The book is in some few respects, pleasing. Hoffman, Rubin (and Sanders) write a much more human book than before -- One can see the changes in the Yippies -- less of a penchant for violence, less dope and most of all, an acceptance of growing older. Both, now in their thirties, seem to have forsaken, from sheer necessity, their philosophy of eternal youth....They still cling to dreams of revolution, but it is a dream much muted with age.

Vote looses much of its effectiveness (of which it had no great supply to begin with) because of the cliches and banalities it exemplifies. The book is peppered with unnecessary amounts of four letter words....Hoffman and Rubin are still on their eternal "cool" kick which everyone else abandoned with the Woodstock generation of the 1960's -- Everything's "heavy" or "too much"...Yes, they certainly "got it all together" this time.

One comes across an occasional truism in "Vote", one of which seems totally apt. "This is the first time since 1776", says Hoffman, Rubin and Sanders, "that America is up for grabs. VOTE and it can be yours."

"I Never Cried So Much When My Own Grandfather Died"

Last week we attended the DVP lecture and the subsequent coffee hour of Judith Crist, considered the most influential film critic in America. Ms. Crist, who looked like the embodiment of Long Island suburbia, spoke with intelligence and often trashing wit about the individual being his own critic. Her reverse role--play was interesting, but not entirely successful in terms of her argument for throughout the evening she remained the center of attention. The audience swallowed each praising remark or bitter retort as if it were honey and ambrosia. "Critics should speak as one person," she said, and as one person who is a film critic for both New York Magazine and NBC's Today Show, she touched upon many aspects of film today.

When asked what her favorite films of all time were, Ms. Crist answered with the list she gave the British Magazine "Sight and Sound." First was Citizen Kane, which coincidentally was playing at the same time as the lecture. If she ever was to be abandoned on a desert island the film she would most wish to have would be Kane. Next was Rules Of The Game, Jean Renoir's 1939 satire on the French pre-war aristocracy. Third was Charles Chaplin's City Lights, which contains her favorite moment in film: when the young flower girl recognizes the tramp as her benefactor. The Japanese film Ikiru came next, and she finished her abridged list of ten with Grand Illusion, Maltese Falson, and the Russian version of War and Peace.

Of the films released this past year Ms. Crist was most impressed with Slaughterhouse-Five and Cabaret. In both cases she thought they were superb translations of works to a different medium. Of The Godfather she said the following: "I went to The Godfather like everyone else just waiting for all the yummy details--I thank god I read the book before so I could make some sense of the plot. I sat there taking it all in and when the lights came on I looked at my watch and said 'My God, it is three hours long.' And I could've sat there for another two hours. I was sick with myself a half hour later. I don't think we need this sort of movie telling us that the Mafia is any better than the average citizen, any better than you or me; I just think you should think about what a movie is saying to you. I sat there and took it all in; I felt sorry for Sony and his problems; and the old man playing with the little kids: I didn't cry so much when my own grandfather died."

Some other interesting quotes. When discussing Robert Aldrich's parody of Hollywood, The Legend Of Lylah Clare, she pointed out Peter Finch's remark to Kim Novak: 'You're nothing but a piece of meat.' " She called Joe Dellasandro, the Warhol superstar of Heat, "a beautiful stud." Ms. Crist also called Peter O'Toole's performance in The Ruling Class, "a bravura performance," and considered this his first fine acting in years. Her bitchy remark about Ali McGraw's death in Love Story brought laughs: "She died of old movie sickness." And she had praise for the new Diana Ross feature, Lady Sings The Blues, calling it "schmaltzy" and the kind of film where "you laugh a little and you cry a little."

Her role as critic was to make us aware of how often we allow the media to manipulate or likes. After a nearly unanimous polling of those we saw in The Godfather, she asked how many of the two-hundred plus crowd saw J.W. Coop. Hardly a person answered. Upon leaving we asked her if it was true that she owned a copy of All About Eve. "Yes," she told us, "Roddy McDowall pirated me one last year."

3 STOOGES
in
Plumbing We Will Go
Loco Boy Makes Good
Rockin Through The Rockies
If a Body Meets a Body
Calling All Curs
Curly
Moe
Larry
STUDENT UNION BALL.
SATURDAY, NOV. 4
7, 9, 11 p.m.
only 50c
(Sponsored by UMass Astronomy Club)

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON MASS
NOW — 7:00 & 9:10
Kurt Vonnegut, Jr.
Masterpiece

WINNER 1972 CANNES FILM FESTIVAL JURY PRIZE AWARD
SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE
Monday & Tuesday
Balcony Seats $1.

Friday Late Night Special
BUY A PLAIN PIZZA
at
The Hungry U
(regularly 99¢)
And Receive
TWO TICKETS to the Amherst
Cinema
SKIN FLICK
(Regularly $3.00)
All For Only
$2.50
This Week See
DARK DREAMS
"A whipped cream dream"

Inside An Abortion Clinic (continued)

clearly, I realized that, unlike emergency relief following a natural disaster, the need for abortions was not going to diminish.

You'd think that all we would need to prevent unwanted pregnancies would be sex education, birth control information, and a greater availability of better contraceptives. At the clinic a great deal of time is spent in the recovery room discussing birth control.

After a woman has the abortion and rests in bed, she gets dressed, eats, relaxes and talks to the other women. A counselor describes all the methods of contraception; some of them are available immediately after abortion, some of them may be received in two weeks when a woman returns for her check-up. It's very important to make contraception available to women after an abortion because most women do not want to repeat their experience.

But the problem of unwanted pregnancy is not a problem of the availability of birth control. I'm convinced that if there was a contraceptive clinic on every block, women would still get pregnant when they didn't want to. It is not because women are lazy or irresponsible or dumb; it is because we are programmed not to consider contraception until it is too late.

There has been a great deal written about the psychology of women who expose themselves to unwanted pregnancy – including the speculation about the desire to be independent or parents, to force a relationship to a crisis, to allay the fear of infertility. These are important motivations; they have to be answered so that people can resolve problems in less self-destructive ways.

But I think it is much more important, especially when talking about the role of abortion clinics, to examine society's attitude toward sex, and especially toward female sexuality.

• • •

I've paid long visits to more than half the private abortion clinics in New York, and I feel that "my" clinic is one of the best. It isn't a mill. The staff tries to treat women with respect, compassion, and understanding. Yet, despite our efforts, the prevailing attitude toward female sexuality is the same here as in the society at large.

It is made explicit in the forms counselors fill out for statistical information on patients. One particular question pertains to the patient's future plans for a family. The possible coded answers from which she must choose all assume that she will one day want to have children.

When a young woman comes to our clinic, she usually receives a broader sex education and more birth control information than her mother gave her, but the message is the same: sex is for marriage and families. How else can you explain the fact that everything from pap smears to V.D. testing is called "family planning" of "planned parenthood?"

How can a 16-year-old girl who has the courage to come to the clinic for contraception answer the question, "Do you plan to have children?" She will probably say, "Well, ah...I guess so." She fears that saying no would incur the disapproval of the questioner or even jeopardize her chance of getting contraception. Her fear is not irrational. It was only a short time ago that the largest birth control organization in the United States provided women with contraception only if they were married and had their husband's consent.

Maybe she knows she wants to have children in the future, but does the idea of children have anything to do with her life right now or with her desire for contraception? She hasn't come to the clinic to "plan her family," but we insist that she has. The terms used to discuss birth control should not revolve around parenthood but around non-parenthood.

You might think that all of this is passe, that there has been a sexual revolution and sex is no longer regarded as permissible only within the confines of marriage. It is clear that over the last few decades women have gradually been released from many of the constraints concerning premarital sex, but my experience at the clinic indicates that society still disapproves of sex outside of marriage.

When a woman comes to the clinic for an abortion, we ask her for her name and any address where we can contact her in an emergency. We assure women that the information is confidential, but it is often difficult to persuade a woman to give her real name, especially if she is young and is living at home or nearby. She does not want anyone, especially her parents, to find out that she has had an abortion. But her reason issurprising. When a womansays, "I can't tell my mother she'd kill me," it is not because she fears her mother's disapproval of abortion, but because she knows that her mother will realize she has had sexual intercourse.

How many women do you know who got some form of birth control before they were committed to their first man, or before they had intercourse? I didn't even though I knew something about contraception. I was invited to spend a weekend at the beach with a guy I met at school and had dinner with a couple of times. I was sure we would have intercourse and I was both afraid and excited by the prospect. I didn't get a diaphragm, even though I had the time and friends to give me moral support. And I didn't buy condoms (isn't the thoought shocking?) though they were available at every drug store. The "burden of contraception" fell "into the hands of my more or less competent male" partner. It wasn't until much later, when I thought that this might turn into a lasting relationship, that I considered more effective birth control.

If I had gotten pregnant, I'm sure I would have said what I heard at the clinic every day: "I didn't think it would happen. I didn't think." I literally couldn't think it was going to happen because that would have meant that I regarded myself as a sexual human being. I couldn't prepare myself for the possibility of pregnancy without admitting to myself that I was sexually interested in someone I hardly knew.

We assume that the frightening and often painful experience of having an abortion will force a woman to use birth control, but in many cases it doesn't. People who work in this field will tell you about the women who have abortions and refuse to consider any form of birth control. There are often understandable reasons for this decision.

I spent a great deal of time counseling a young girl whose pregnancy and abortion were so traumatic for herself, her family, and her boyfriend, that like many other women, she did not want to think about sex. She "didn't care if she ever saw another man as long as she lived."

Most of the men and women who work in abortion facilities are no different from the women who come to them for abortions. We may consider ourselves "liberated" and believe in a woman's right to control her fertility, or call ourselves "radical" because we work in an abortion clinic, but all of us have been affected by the prevailing attitude toward female sexuality, and consciously or not, all of us convey our repressive beliefs about sex to the people who use our services. (LNS)

INDIA NITE

A Pageantry of Music Dances Folklore Skits

For a glimpse of the Orient

Snacks Too! Admission $1.00

Sat., Nov. 4

7:00 p.m. CCA

Amherst Cinema 253-5126 24 hour phone

Evenings at 7:15

"Gone With The Wind"

with Clark Gable & Viven Leigh

Thru Sunday 50¢ discount with College I.D.

Mon & Tues. Adults $1.00

LATE SHOW TONIGHT at 11:30 Rated X

Campus Cinemas AMHERST
A AMHERST HADLEY LINE
Dollar Night!
Monday Night Only! Everyone $1.00

SATURDAY NITE

XEBEC

SOFT ROCK—DANCING at

The English Pub

BOYS IN THE BAND

Tonight CCA

7, 9:15, 11:30

75¢

ATTENTION!!

LAFAYETTE

Has NEW Hours

Daily 10 a.m. → 9 p.m.

Sat 10 a.m. → 5:30 p.m.

We now have the best buys at the best times.

Poor Richard's Presidential Survey

by Howard Bloom and Steve Ferber

If UMass were a microcosm of the United States, then George McGovern would be on his way to the most impressive electoral victory in hitory.

The results of a poll conducted among students at the University of Massachusetts showed Senator George S. McGovern leading President Richard M. Nixon by a more than 3 to 1 margin. The survey found McGovern getting 66 percent of the vote to Nixon's 19 percent, with 15 percent undecided.

These findings contrast with a national survey showing McGovern's lead among students to be much smaller. The results of a Newsweek poll gave McGovern 48 percent to Nixon's 41 percent with 11 percent undecided.

The great discrepancy may be explained by the fact that whereby President Nixon leads nationally among all voters by 28 points, 60-32 percent, he leads by only 4 points, 48-44, in the state of Massachusetts. Since 95 percent of the student body at UMass come from Massachusetts, it follows that they are more pro-McGovern than their peers across the nation.

Among UMass students the voter registration rate was 86 percent, 7 points higher than the national college average. Even more impressive were these statistics: while 84 percent of the students at UMass plan to vote, Time magazine reported that only 48 percent of newly-enfranchised voters around the country plan to exercise their right on November 7th.

The majority of students at the University claimed no party affiliation, as 63 percent were registered Independents. A mere 4 percent called themselves Republicans while one-third of the student body are members of the Democratic Party.

A nationwide survey showed that youth, including those not in college, preferred the Democratic Party. More than half, 56 percent, called themselves Democrats, while only 25 percent are Independents and 17 percent Republicans. The young people who were not in college and were included in the nationwide poll undoubtedly accounts for, in some measure, the differences between the UMass findings and the national results. However, because the discrepancy between the figures is so great, we can only conclude that UMass students are atypical of college students across the country with regard to party affiliation.

Neither the supporters of George McGovern nor the backers of Richard Nixon is more faithful or adamant in their support of their respective candidates. If a voter supports one of the two candidates, yet does not register to vote, then this can be construed as a lack of true conviction for the candidate. Both McGovern and Nixon had the same number of non-registered supporters.

When breakdowns were made according to sex, very few differences were found between responses male and females made. One significant divergence, however, showed McGovern leading among males, 68-22 percent, while females favored the Senator 73-14 percent. McGovern is seen by women as a champion of their cause, and they support him vigorously. Although his stand on such issues as abortion may not be what these women would like it to be, his views on such matters are clearly preferable to those of the President.

Another reason why McGovern may have such overwhelming support among women on campus is the issue of Vietnam. National polls have shown that women have consistently been more sensitive to the war in Vietnam than men. McGovern's stand on the war makes him women's choice more often than men.

As would expected, party affiliation was strongly tied to voter preference. As evidenced by our results, Democrats for Nixon never caught a foothold at UMass. Among Democrats McGovern led 89 to 5 percent (45 to 36 percent nationwide) while among Republicans Nixon led 84-12 percent (90-3 nationwide). Independents favor McGovern 66-22 percent.

There are two types of votes: positive and negative. A positive vote is cast when the voter votes because he really believes in his candidate and wants him to win. A negative vote is cast when the voter votes because he does not want the opposition to win. He doesn't particularly like the man he voted for, but he considers him the lesser of two evils. A positive vote is a vote FOR your candidate; a negative vote is a vote AGAINST your candidate's opponent.

At UMass, results showed that Nixon supporters had a more positive view of their candidate than did McGovern supporters. 51 percent of the Nixon supporters were casting positive votes while 32 percent said their vote was a negative one.

Among McGovern supporters 40 percent said their vote was positive, while 41 percent said they were voting against Nixon.

These figures show the extent to which McGovern's star has fallen in the eyes of UMass students since the Democratic Convention. During the primary campaign McGovern supporters were very enthusiastic about their candidate. He had an extremely positive rating. The fact that less than half of his supporters at UMass are casting positive votes for him shows that even on this, a liberal campus, McGovern's image has been tarnished.

On another level, there are probably the McGovern supporters who are both pro-McGovern and anti-Nixon. Their feelings against the administration might be so vehement as to supercede their positive feelings about McGovern.

The results of the poll indicate that the majority of the voters at UMass are casting positive ballots. President Nixon had 51 percent positive votes from his supporters, while McGovern supporters cast 41 percent negative votes against Nixon. McGovern's figures were 40 percent and 32 percent, respectively. Because Nixon is the incumbent, and has to campaign on his record during four years in office, he is naturally more likely to have a larger number of positive votes cast for him and negative votes cast against him. As President, he is the most widely publicized person in the world. It is easier to form a solid opinion of him, positive or negative, because of this publicity.

The most important issue in the campaign, according to UMass students, was the same one which Newsweek found to be the major issue concerning students across the country-Vietnam. This finding was interesting in light of the fact that the vast majority of the polling was done after Henry Kissinger announced that "peace is at hand." Either the students at UMass were very skeptical about that announcement, or because of somewhat limited access to the media, news of the announcement had not reached a great number of students.

Along with Vietnam, the economy emerged as the second most important issue. Jobs and unemployment, taxes and tax reform, and the high cost of living all struck a sensitive cord in a good part of the student body. In comparison, a national survey showed that only 14 percent of all college students considered the economy an important issue. Why the difference? First, we believe the discrepancy results from the fact that Massachusetts happens to have one of the highest unemployment rates in the country, which explains all the concern about jobs. Second, the tax situation in Massachusetts has become so overbearing that the state has not too amiably been nicknamed Taxachusetts.

Nationally, among college students, 71 percent rated the Vietnam War the most important issue in the campaign. At UMass 62 percent rated the same issue as most important. It seems strange that in a college in the state of Massachusetts, where the Shea Bill, which prohibits Massachusetts men from serving in any undeclared war, was enacted, the percent of student concern about Vietnam would be less than the national tabulation. The overriding factor must be the economy.

The order of issue preference for students at UMass was: Vietnam, Jobs, Taxes, Cost of Living, Pollution, Crime, Drugs and Busing. Other major issues mentioned were corruption in government, defense spending and abortion. While third in the UMass students poll, taxes placed seventh nationwide. The difference? Again, the state of Massachusetts has an oppressive tax system and the students here expressed their concern about it.

Students were then asked which of the issues Nixon as President, handle particularly well, and then which of the issues McGovern as President would handle particularly well. Students gave McGovern an overwhelming vote of confidence on the issues of Vietnam, Jobs, Taxes and the Cost of Living. Again, the concern with the economy. Their candidate, McGovern, would do a good job in helping alleviate the terrible conditions in Massachusetts. In addition, for each and every issue, more students thought McGovern would handle it particularly well than they did Nixon.

Looking at the Vietnam issue we find that 66 percent of the students felt that McGovern would handle it well, while 18 percent felt that Nixon would handle it well. While jobs rated second best for McGovern (26 percent) Nixon's second best rating was on the issue of crime, with 12 percent.

Nixon's third best issue, behind Vietnam and crime, was busing. The pattern that seems to be emerging from this list of "well-handled" issues is that these are the issues with which the candidates are most closely identified. In the case of Nixon we have Vietnam and crime and busing. McGovern is most closely identified with the issues of Vietnam and jobs.

Despite the identification of candidates with particular issues on the part of many UMass students, over 25 percent responded that McGovern would handle none of these issues particularly well. An even more negative opinion was expressed about Nixon as 36 percent of the campus said that he would handle none of these issues well.

The question "Which issues would be handled particularly well by Nixon?" was asked of the students. Among Nixon supporters, as opposed to McGovern supporters, ratings were higher in regard to all eight issues. Two issues, Vietnam and jobs, presented wide discrepancies, as 44 percent of the Nixon supporters said that Nixon would handle the issue of Vietnam pagicularly well. Only 11 percent of McGovern's supporters felt that Nixon would handle this issue well.

On jobs, 23 percent of Nixon supporters felt that Nixon would handle this issue well. On the same issue only 4 percent of

(Continued on P. 16)

Do you aree, partially agree, partially disagree, or disagree with the statement: Nixon, as head of his party, should be held responsible for the Watergate bugging?

	Agree	P. Agree	Und.	P. Disa.	Disagree
UMass Students	34%	31%	9%	8%	18%
McG Supporters	42%	32%	9%	7	10
Nixon Supporters	10%	25%	9%	14%	42%

If there were one reason to explain George McGovern's poor showing thus far, what would that be?

	UMass Students	McGovern Supporters	Nixon Supporters
Indecisiveness	23%	17%	36%
Eagleton Affair	15%	17%	10%
Radical Label	11%	10%	7%
Nixon's Strength	8%	12%	4%
Other or No Answer	43%	44%	43%

About The Poll

The Poor Richard's poll was conducted on the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts. Twenty interviewers telephoned a total of 1000 interviewers telephoned a total of 1000 students between the dates of Oct. 24th and Oct. 29th. The phone numbers of the students were randomly sampled from the final edition of the University of Massachusetts Student Telephone Directory. The margin of error is 3 to 4 percent.

Poll (Cont'd)

McGovern backers claimed that Nixon would do a good job with this issue.

Among the the other six issues the percentages between Nixon and McGovern supporters read: (Living (22-4), Taxes (20-5), Drugs (12-4), Pollution (14-5), Busing (13-9), and Crime (15-11).

Which of the issues would McGovern handle particularly well?" was also asked of the students. There was one unique result in that on the issue of drugs, Nixon supporters gave McGovern a higher rating than did McGovern supporters. Ten percent of Nixon backers said that McGovern would handle the issue of drugs particularly well, while only 7 percent of McGovern supporters agreed. This was the only issue, though, in which Nixon supporters rated McGovern more highly than did McGovern supporters. With the issue of Vietnam 66 percent of the McGovern backers said that their candidate would do a particularly good job. This compares with the 17 percent figure that represents the percentage of Nixon supporters who felt McGovern would handle Vietnam well.

The rest of the issues showed differences among the two supporting groups in this way: Cost of Living (24-10), Crime (16-4), Jobs (35-14), Taxes (31-8), Pollution (28-16), and Busing (12-10).

In an issue related finding, we found a high percentage of people that felt that neither one of the candidates could handle any of the issues particularly well.

Among McGovern backers, 44 percent said that Nixon could handle any of the issues particularly well.

Among McGovern backers, 44 percent said that Nixon could handle none of the issues well. This was not an altogether surprising result. Likewise 41 percent of the Nixon supporters said that McGovern could handle none of these well. This too could have been predicted. But what was surprising was that among McGovern supporters 24 percent said that McGovern would handle no issues well. Similarly 22 percent of those supporting Nixon felt that Nixon couldn't handle any of these issues well.

The explanation for this seemingly incongrous result lies in the matter of negative voting vs. positive voting. Most likely the majority of students who felt that their candidate could not handle any of the issues well was also voting in a negative way, not FOR their candidate but AGAINST his opponent.

Students were asked: If there were one reason to explain George McGovern's poor showing thus far what would that be? The answers to this question were tremendously divergent, but four major categories of responses did emerge.

The first of the categories was called indecisiveness. Included under this term were responses such as, "he changes his mind too much," and "he's too wish-washy." 23 percent of the campus felt that McGovern's indecisiveness was the cause of his troubles.

Cited less often was the Eagleton affair, an early McGovern mistake that many felt significantly hindered his campaign.

Others expressed their attitude that McGovern's early label as radical never wore off. Responses ranged from, "McGovern's too liberal for America," to "McGovern's too idealistic."

The fourth major category dealt with Nixon's strength as the major cause of McGovern's weakness. As opposed to the previous categories, this one had nothing to do with McGovern hurting himself. Instead comments on this score went as such: "Nixon's the incumbent," "Nixon has too much money available to him," and "Nixon is too slick of a politician."

Other answers mentioned media bias, lack of money, poorly run campaign, lack of experience and the inability to change a primary campaign into a national campaign as reasons for McGovern's poor showing.

Looking specifically at supporters for Nixon we find that 10 percent agree with the statement on Watergate, 25 percent more partially agree. If these Nixon supporters believe that Nixon is linked with Watergate, what criteria are they using to vote for their candidate? The explanations involve those that have been voiced in recent weeks over the public's non-reaction to Watergate. Either the Nixon support is unaware of the facts involved; or he dismisses Watergate as something inherent in government; or the Watergate issue is seen as but one black mark on a pure white record; or this Nixon supporter is voting anti-McGovern, not pro-Nixon.

The difference among McGovern backers and Nixon backers make the point clear that the Watergate incident IS affecting voter attitudes. Evidence comes in the form of 10 percent McGovern supporters disagreeing with the statement vs. 42 percent of the Nixon supporters in disagreement.

Parents of students at UMass split down the middle on whom they plan to vote for. Nixon held a slight edge, 39-37 percent, with 24 percent undecided. The lead for Nixon, however small, may be a harbinger of a Nixon upset over McGovern in Massachusetts on election day. Although the demographical makeup of the families of UMass students may not be a miniature of that of the entire state, the fact that parents of students who voted so overwhelmingly for McGovern would be leaning slightly toward Nixon may be a signal of bad things to come for the McGovern camp next Tuesday.

Finally, the large undecided percentage of 24 must be looked at more closely. A large number of students reported that one parent preferred McGovern while the other parent favored Nixon. These splits were categorized under undecided; thus in actuality the 24 percent of undecided among student's parents would be considerably smaller.

Among students registered as independents, we find a considerable difference in their parent's voter preference. While 42 percent of the parents said they were going to vote for Nixon, 29 percent voiced a preference for McGovern. We find that where party affiliation is declared, the difference between student and parent is minimal. Therefore the predominant discrepancy is among parents of the independently registered students.

Perhaps the parents of college students do have an effect. If not in the way of voter preference then perhaps in the way of the realistic picking of a winner. When asked: "Who do you think will win the election, Nixon the Republican or McGovern the Democrat?" the students overwhelmingly said Nixon, 85-7 percent. These percentages coincided exactly with the nationwide figures in Time Magazine concerning who people expected to win on November 7th.

As would be logical, a great percentage of Democrats (as opposed to Republicans) predicted a McGovern victory. Among Democrats 12 percent think that McGovern will win this coming Tuesday. Among Republicans the message is clear and strong, as 100 percent of Republican registered students at UMass think that Nixon will be re-elected.

The American youth has been typed as apathetic. And no wonder. The tremendous enthusiasm shown for McGovern months ago has dissipated daily as the election draws near. Yet we find among UMass students an almost paradoxical situation. On a campus that is 85 percent certain that an incumbent President will win the election, 66 percent still plan to vote for his opponent. In one way it can be interpreted as a voter's prayer that maybe an upset will come off. More realistically the feeling is that although their vote won't contribute to a victory, it will contribute in showing how strong their candidate's support was. Finally we realize that UMass has 86 percent of their campus registered and over 83 percent planning to vote. This is hardly a sign of an apathetic youth.

McGovern supporters believed that the Eagleton affair and the matter of indecisiveness contributed equally to McGovern's poor standing. In stark contrast, Nixon supporters overwhelmingly cited the indecisiveness of McGovern as the primary malaise of his campaign.

Looking specifically at McGovern supporters, we find that 17 per cent say McGovern's indecisiveness makes him the weak candidate that he is. What then, is the criteria for vote preference among this 17 per cent? With the other major responses, Eagleton, radical and Nixon's strength, justifications are easy to come by.

With Eagleton the standard rationalization of a McGovern supporter goes, "O.K. so he made a mistake, everyone makes mistakes." With the claim of radical, an indictment of the American public such as "America is just too conservative for him" takes care of a possible conflict situation. With the category of Nixon's strength we find no problems at all in the mind of the McGovern supporter because this answer offers an explanation which does not derogate McGovern's candidacy.

The interesting question deals with those that cited indecisiveness as McGovern's problems. How does the McGovern backer rationalize his choice of a candidate if he perceived his man as changing his mind all the time? There would appear to be a link between this group of McGovern supporters and the group of McGovern supporters who are anti-Nixon, not pro-McGovern. It might be claimed that these McGovern supporters were merely saying what they felt the American people think about McGovern. In other words, they might not believe that he has been changing his mind. Yet due to the number of McGovern supporters that said McGovern was wishy-washy it would seem hat these people were definitely casting negative votes instead of positive ones.

Those polled were asked if they agreed or disagreed with the statement, Nixon as head of his party, should be held responsible for the Watergate bugging?

This question was taken from a nationwide Newsweek survey. As would be expected from a group supporting McGovern, UMass students responded more heavily on the agree side than did the nation. Thirty-four percent of the students agreed with the statement (23 percent nationwide) while 31 per cent partially agreed (16 percent nationwide). Nine percent were undecided on campus (16 percent nationwide) while 26 percent either partially disagreed or agreed (45 percent nationwide).

Thus while 66 percent of the campus favors McGovern, 65 percent believe that Nixon is somewhat responsible for Watergate. Had the entire 65 percent been part of the 66 percent, the explanation would have been clear. Yet again we are faced with a cognitively imbalanced situation among Nixon supporters.

Among McGovern Supporters which of these issues are the most important? Which of these issues would be handled particularly well by Mr. Nixon and Mr. McGovern.

	Most Imp.	Well by Nixon	Well by McG.
Vietnam	67%	11%	66%
Jobs	33%	4%	35%
Taxes	27%	5%	31%
Cost of Living	24%	4%	24%
Pollution	22%	5%	28%
Crime	14%	11%	16%
Drugs	10%	4%	7%
Busing	6%	8%	12%
None	0%	41%	24%

Which of these issues are the most important in deciding whom to vote for? Which of these issues would be handled particularly well by Mr. Nixon and Mr. McGovern?

	Most Imp.	Well by Nixon	Well by McG
Vietnam	63%	19%	67%
Jobs	33%	8%	30%
Taxes	30%	8%	26%
Cost of Living	25%	8%	21%
Pollution	22%	7%	25%
Crime	16%	12%	13%
Drugs	11%	7%	14%
Busing	8%	9%	12%
None	0%	36%	28%

Among Nixon Supporters which of these issues are the most important? Which of these issues would be handled particularly well by Mr. Nixon and Mr. McGovern?

	Most Imp.	Well by Nixon	Well by McG
Vietnam	45%	44%	17%
Jobs	33%	23%	14%
Taxes	32%	20%	8%
Cost of Living	30%	23%	10%
Pollution	19%	14%	16%
Crime	22%	15%	4%
Drugs	11%	12%	0%
Busing	11%	13%	10%
None	0%	22%	44%

Poll Staff

Art Tessimond, Jeff Levin, Roberta McCann, Barb Freedman, Gail Annis, Cale Kenney, Larry Abrams, Kathy Furlga, Sandy Lederman, Joan Fassnacht, Rick Shea, Rick Gaudette, STEVE Goldberg, Bob Quinn, Frek Ravens, Neil Cronin, Nancy ZARROW, Terry Rickard, Bob French, Gail Larsen, Gordie Reddick, Elaine Hazard, Rory Judge, AL White, Steve Sarikas, Sandy Koldy, Shelly Trask, Renee Gaber, Jane Greenberg, Debbie Kelly, Janet Johnson, and Pam Sacks.

"Clear Sky"
TONITE
The Rusty Nail Inn
Rt. 47
Sundefland
665-4937
SATURDAY
"No Exit"

Amherst Cinema
253-5426
24 hour phone
SKIN FLICK TONIGHT
a whipped cream dream

Rated X
DARK DREAMS
All Seats $1.50
No one under 18 admitted

TONIGHT
D.J.
at
The Pub

Sports

The Plimpton Experiment

By Mark Vogler

"You'd be a fool to do such a silly thing."

"You're crazy! You won't last a day on that field."

"You'll be the laughing stock of this campus."

"You're a masochist! You really frighten me some times."

That's what they told me. But I didn't listen to any of them. Perhaps I should have. Maybe they were only thinking of my welfare. Or maybe they didn't want me to make a fool out of myself. Whatever people said, I discarded as nonsense.

••••••

Coach MacPherson said that nobody would kick sand in my face this summer. But it seemed the contrary when I began weight lifting. The embarassment mounted with each training day.

In the weight room, I could hear a snicker now and then. Somebody would start making fun because I couldn't lift a respectable weight. The joke was that most of the players would lift with ease twice the amount that I labored with.

It became very apparent the night that I went to the infirmary for my physical that I stood out like a string bean in a corn field. I received a lot of strange looks from the players who were there.

It's always nice to receive encouragement from your team mates. It gives you confidence. One player wished me luck: I hope you can make it. Boy, I'm considered a little guy at 180. Be careful out there. Somebody's liable to break you in half." Thanks for the encouragement.

If that didn't convince me that my mission was doomed, Coach Larry Pasquale's pep talk before the first practice nearly did.

"What's important and what I stress here is that you give your ultimate. You must give, and give, and give until you have reached your maximum effort. When your legs have become so weary that you can't run any more, then I feel that you have given your all."

As Pasquale concluded his speech, a few eyes turned on me as if to say: 'Well pal, you've made a serious mistake. But we'll straighten things out this afternoon.'

If I didn't have serious reservations of halting THE PLIMPTON EXPERIMENT before, I certainly did now. "Well," I said to myself. "What kind of jam have I got myself into now?! What am I trying to prove, any how? What in God's name am I doing out here?!"

Having never played high school football, it seemed to me a rather ridiculous situation to find myself in. It was about the time that we were heading out to the field that I rationalized two alternatives.

CHOICE NUMBER ONE: I could quit while I'm ahead. But if I did that, then I would be the laughing stock at Boyden. And the only way that I could walk through there again, would be with a paper bag on my head.

The second alternative seemed better to me. I made up my mind that I would stick this fiasco out to the bitter end, until I finally got carried into the operating room. I d still be a laughing stock, but to a lesser degree. And they could always say that even though I was low on brains, I had plenty of guts.

••••••

To football players, wearing a uniform is something special. At first, my presence was considered somewhat of a joke. But after proving to the players that I could endure the punishment, my membership into the fraternity of football players was sealed. But my initaition was something else. As hard as I tried to make a good impression in the spring drills, the more some of the veteran players had good reason to laugh.

The most academic drill for football players, is hitting the seven-man sled. Most players are of the opinion that you almost have to try in order to goof it up. I didn't try. It just came natural. The first attempt was frustrating. Unfortunately it struck the other players as quite hilarious. Just as I approached one of the padded dummies, I lost my footing and got my legs crossed. Upon impact, the dummy slung back and hit me right in the face.

I envisioned myself in various circumstances and how I would react to them.

Very few players knew of my premeditated George Plimpton plan. If they doubted my football ability, they probably accredited it to ignorance–sheer ignorance.

I recall one instance where I looked like a fool. The defensive backs were engaged in the crackback drill. A crackback block is delivered by an end of a sweep play. It's purpose is to take out the safety. The coach must have felt like taking me out. To begin with, I really didn't understand what was going on. When it came time to brush off the crackback block, the tight end whacked me hard. I was trying to meet him head-on instead of avoiding him. It wasn't a smart move.

Fortunately for me, Coach Pasquale didn't see it that way. He yelled over to the cornerback: "Vogler would appreciate a little cooperation in calling the crackback?" The cornerback is supposed to alert the safety when the possibility of a crack arises. Again, I went charging into the tight end. Again he sent me flying. As I limped back to the side lines, a few players explained to me how to avoid the crackback block. I was supposed to try to beat the tight end to the hole. Instead I was getting the crap beat out of me.

One of my biggest problems was orientation. Knowing and recognizing the right plays and where to be at a particular time didn't come easy for me. It took a while to get all the plays down pat. Despite my determination to master the plays, I'd have slip-ups every now and then.

During a team scrimmage period on one occasion, a particularly humerous incident did occur. I came running out on the field to replace John Aimes. But Aimes waved me back. Naturally a little upset about Aimes to take a breather, I jogged off the field with my head down and sulking to myself. All of a sudden and out of the corner of my eye, I saw a football whizzing over my shoulder.

A loud and angry voice pierced my ear drums. "Mark! Get the hell off the field! What the heck are you doing out there? You don't walk off, you run off."

The worst of my problems came toward the end of the first week. In the previous practice I had injured my left foot. Trainer Vic Keedy diagnosed it as bruised metatarsal and taped and padded my foot every day thereafter. This injury later proved to significantly cut down my speed. Not only was I the smallest man on the squad now, but probably the slowest, too. It was about the time that my hobbling became obvious to Coach MacPherson. Having agreed earlier that he would treat me like anybody else, Mac. consulted me and wanted to find out the story.

I tried to explain to the coach how bad my foot was. He said that it was no excuse and then mentioned the case of Bob Sullivan who wanted to play so bad that he attempted to go full force on a sprained ankle. His advice was: "If you don't do things right, then don't do them at all."

I didn't do many things right anyway. Why should he start on me now?

I can recall one instance during the practice drills where I didn't really mind feeling like a fool. The team had assembled for punt return drills. Chuck Hamaty, a defensive tackle with a 5'10" 210-pound build, had lined up directly opposite me. He proclaimed that he would do me in on the next play. I tried to prepare myself mentally for the shock, afterall, he was a lot bigger than I was. But the mean expression on Hamaty's face just shook me a bit. I felt it was the end. Just as he went to knock me on my butt, he reversed direction and fell into alignment with the materializing wall which was forming for the return back. Much to my relief, the only contact that I received from Hamaty was an unfastened chin strap.

Being a defensive back during the spring drills, one of my goals would be to intercept a pass. Unfortunately I never did get that chance. The ball was either overthrown to the receiver I was covering, or the pass was completed on me.

But during a scrimmage session one day, that golden opportunity I had longed for, finally arrived, or nearly did. I was covering the weak side and went free as I saw the quarterback dropping back to pass. All of a sudden, I saw the pigskin sailing toward me. At that time I felt I had an excellent chance for an interception. I went for the ball, and instead came up with Paul Correia. As it turned out, we both collided and the receiver caught the ball, passing by untouched.

It was just one of those freak mishaps that seemed to happen to me often. Correia, a cornerback, was playing the man who appeared to be releasing inside. I was playing the ball and took no heed whatsoever to the presence of either Correia or the ball carrier. It's a darn good thing that Mac didn't see it.

After a week and a half of spring football, there was nothing to laugh about anymore. I had learned to hit and I had conditioned myself to take the hard blows. I had learned to live with the humility of being smeared in the rain drenched field. Quite often I'd pick myself up from the mud, straighten my helmet out, and pluck the sod from my face mask. True, every time that I got into some kind of collision, I would wiggle up out of the pig pile like a piece of shrivled-up spaghetti unraveling from a meatball. But I had survived all sorts of shocking situations. Players gave me encouragement. They knew it was no longer a joke. I had earned the respect of virtually every team member. I had become one of them. It was obvious that my football experience was practically nill, but they acknowledged my vain efforts to prove that I was part of the team.

••••••

The days grew few. And the grand finale of the spring training period was approaching the UMass team. It was only a day away. Yes. It had been my goal from the start to participate in the annual Red and White intersquad game.

On the eve of that game I spent a great deal of thought about what I had accomplished and what I would look forward to the next day. I envisioned myself in various circumstances and how I would react to them. But my fantasies carried me til bed time, as I dreamed about the crowd and how it would react if little number 33 should pick off a pass and run it all the way back for a score. Or what if he should sprawl all over the turf to claim a loose ball, or make a fierce tackle in a clutch situation. If any of these far fetched goals became a reality, it would be quite a feat, for a guy who had only been playing football for three weeks--and doing it on the collegiate level.

But then again, think about it. You're a meazly runt of 5'7", 157 pounds. You know as much about football to fill a thimble. The fastest man timed for the 40 on the squad does it in something like 4.6. You've been a lame duck for two weeks now. Most of the linemen run by you like you're standing still. Your time is 5.9.

You've been as physically beaten to a pulp as any player would expect. But you're still out there. Most thought you'd be on the operating table by now. You've saved face during this period. But do you really think that you're going to come out of it smelling like roses? No way baby! Tomorrow may be the last day--but those people who warned you earlier, still expect the last laugh.

Tomorrow's game is the climax. It will make you look like an ace or an ass. How are you going to react on a sweep? Are you going to panic and have the tight end mow you down? How are you going to react on a pass? Are you going to choke and get burned bad by the receiver?

How are your friends and family going to feel about your poor showing? How are your team mates and coaches going to feel if you let them down? Better yet, how will you yourself feel? These questions can only be answered in the wake of catastrophy.

••••••

Then I began to think about what the critics said earlier. Maybe I would look like a laughing stock. Coud the joke be on me?

(concluded next week)

Album Inquest

Soft Machine

Soft Machine
"Fifth"
(Columbia KC#31604)
By Gary Gomes

The Soft Machine is: Elton Dean - Alto Sax, Saxello, Electric Piano; Hugh Hopper:—Bass Guitar; Mike Ratledge-Organ, Electric Piano; Phil Howard-Drums (on Side One); John Marshall-Drums (Side Two), and Roy Babbington-Double (acoustic) Bass (Side Two).

It's very, very important to me to dealve into a group's history and more important than ever if that group never seems to be standing still (musically). Soft Machine is an example of such a group, and the musical changes have been more or less linked to the personnel changes in the group.

As a group, they date back to early 1966, when they played at the UFO club in England opposite groups such as Pink Floyd, Family, and the Bonzo Dog Band. About that time they were known as the Daevid Allen Quartet, and Mike Ratledge, an aspiring young graduate from Oxford with degrees and honours in Psychology and Philosophy, was looking for something to do. Then Kevin Ayres, a close friend and fellow member of the Daevid Allen group, got a mink coat from his girlfirend, hocked it and gave the money to Ratledge to buy an organ (This is all true, honest to Allah!). Ratledge then devoted his time to playing in one of the avant garde jazz outfits that were bopping around London at the time. As is understandable, Ratledge didn't want to starve, so he, Daevid Allen (guitar), Kevin Ayres (bass guitar, vocals), and Robert Wyatt (drums, vocals, and nearly everything else) joined forces, and developed a rather strange reputation in England. Allen was a bit taken aback at the direction they were going in (too intellectual) and split after their first American tour (with Jimi Hendrix) and their second European tour. Now Allen is playing a strange sort of Bonzo Dog Bandish free rock. Still friendly.

Kevin Ayres split after the Machine's first album. His first solo album was kind of folkish, whereas both Ratledge and Wyatt were very electronically-oriented (echo chambers and wa wa pedals on drums and the like), and again the music was getting too complex for Ayres.

At the end of the first album, you could hear Cecil Taylor influences rearing their ugly heads, and the second album was very experimental and quite well constructed. By the time of the third album, Soft Machine was full blown jazz with some rock undertones -- and by this time thr group was incorporating many avant garde classical techniques in their compositions (Cage, Stockhausen, and Terry Riley, for example).

By "Fourth", the group was showing signs of wear. Wyatt was operating under a system that robbed him of much of his humour, which was his main forte in the group, and on his solo album, some of the spontaneity that Soft Machine lost was well exhibited.

On this album, Soft Machine shows signs of finally solidifying, but not to the extent that it will damage the group's creativity. Ratledge's improvisational skill has now become overwhelming, and he is one of the few organists in jazz or rock that have found a way to break out of the old blues and/or classical mode of playing the instrument. It's a damn shame that others haven't, since the organ is one of the most versatile instruments around (stranger than the electric guitar, and nearly as complex as the Moog synthesizer), and Ratledge is accompanied only by Sun Ra, Larry Young, Keith Emerson and Brian Auger in learning to utilize it fully. Couple this with the fact that Ratledge has some of the fastest fingers around, and you have a really scary combination.

Elton Dean is probably the member of the group that has the best jazz-blues background in the group (the first group he ever played with was John Baldry's Steampacket), and has utilized a sort of John Coltrane-Ornette Coleman approach to improvising that is truly formidable.

Hugh Hopper "can outplay about 99% of the bass players in rock, and quite a few of those in jazz as well" (Rock magazine), with the only rock bassists who can compare with him technically being Jack Bruce, Rockette Morton (with Captain Beefheart), Roy Estrada (from the old Mothers). He has also been quite innovative on his instrument, using fuzz tone and wa wa pedal to increase his range. He is also a formidable composer, very solid, and using blends of tone colours as opposed to contrast structure that Rutledge so often uses.

John Marshall, the new drummer, has played with Jack Bruce and Keith Tippetts (one of the pioneers of British Free Jazz). His style is beautifully surprising, and he works from a contrast structure in his playing, as exhibited in "L B O", and the ending of "Pigling Bland" (tow of the compositions on "Fifth").

Phil Howard, the guest drummer on side one, is a percussionist with a fine ear for shading, and Roy Babbington, who plays acoustic bass on side two, has played with Tippetts, as well as Soft Machine on their previous album. He is at his best playing bowed bass solos and his technique is unusual and extremely strange to anyone unaware of the possibilities inherent in the acoustic base.

Side one starts off with a repeated line by Elton Dean, augmented by an echo chamber, which soon gives way to Mike Ratledge's comping on electric piano. The song "All White" (there's a pun there if anyone can get it) moves along in a fairly straightforward jazz vein, with Ratledge and Hopper repeating the melody line together.

The number then drifts into "Drop", a number which begins with Ratledge and Dean exploring the insides of an electric piano, and soon takes off into Terry Riley's repeating line style of composition, then breaks into an organ extravaganza by Ratledge, and this lets you know he's one of the best around. The sound he evokes from the organ is very electronic and saxophonish, but very warm at the same time. The improvisation twists and turns, leaps and spins, and if Ratledge isn't a genius, he's sure one hell of an innovator.

The next selection on the album is "M.C." by Hugh Hopper, and is probably the least and the most jazz-like work on the album. It's somewhat reminiscent of the Greek composer Iannis Xenakis' work with mathematics and music. Starting with an understated organ line over a percussion explosion by Howard, it just drifts to lines played by Elton Dean and Hugh Hopper. A nice space out.

Side two initiates with "As If", a line of disjunct motion, punctuated by drums, which gives way to a solo by Elton Dean over an easy swinging background. Babbington then drifts in with a bowed acoustic bass solo. Both are excellent, with both freaking out nicely in their solo structure. At one point Babbington brings the entire solo to a high point of nervous tension, then swoops down again (into the gut of the listener). Then the opening line is then repeated, with several percussive outbreaks by Marshall, which leads into the piece I referred to earlier, "L B O", which is more a percussion composition than a drum solo. Marshall builds it up with abrupt starts and stops, and brings drum rolls out of nowhere. He has technique, but he also has imagination, and that's what I think counts here. Sure, he's fast, but that's not the main point of the solo. You know there's something else going on and that's what's interesting.

Marshall ends abruptly, and where you'd least expect it, the group mellow into a modal jazz piece featuring Elton Dean on Saxello--"Pigling Bland". Dean keeps soloing on a down tempo feel until Ratledge abruptly changes time and modulates key, and Marshall ends the piece on a two bar break and then the fun starts with "Bone" by Elton Dean.

"Bone" is slightly reminiscent of some of Don Cherry and Ornette Coleman's compositions, notably "Space Jungle" on the "Crisis" LP. Flutes drift in the background, maintaining an eerie mood for Ratledge's organ playing, in which he uses echo repeats, etc. Electronics plus.

In this album you have a tighter overall piece of work than "Fourth" and the group makes fine use of experimental techniques in the structure. There is no one musician who dominates the group as far as solo time goes, and although Ratledge is the leader, everyone gets their say in. They use electronics extensively, but probably not like any other way you've heard it used.

As a group, Soft Machine has spawned many lesser groups, all a result of Ratledge's preoccupation with perfection and intellectual excellence. However, as I've said before, they have a great potential for genius in Ratledge, and Robert Wyatt is taking things beyond that with his new group, Marching Mole, and his own solo album. They first appeared with Hendrix when they toured the States, and now, five years later, they're making their second tour with Miles Davis.

Jazz? Well, yeah, and everything else...

Yes

"Close to the Edge" Yes

The new Yes album "Close to the Edge" is just that...close, but not close enough as it falls short of all expectations.

The album can be called "characteristic" for the most part as it does contain some of their complexity in vocals and music. But in trying to find new directions they sacrafice quite a bit, and it just doesn't balance out. The LP is divided into two sides' one being the title cut, and side two "And You And I" (side two also includes a sperate tune "Siberian Khatru," which is probably the best cut on the album). Within each side is a number of themes that are scantily developed, and here lies part of the problem. The word is "consistency," and "Edge" is anything but. Though some of the ideas blossom, a good many parts drag as the original idea becomes boring, and taxing on the ol head (Tull ran into the same problem with the "Brick" lp as most of side two was a conglomeration of crap. As a result they cut a good portion of it from their live performances).

The side which seems to be drawing the most attention now is side tow "And You And I". With it the group has the uncanny ability to take the original melody, and lace it into each theme on the side supporting it with a different arrangement each time. Highlight of the song is "The Preacher Teacher," last theme on the side. Here lead guitarist Steve Howe again provides some good acoustic work, while vocalist Jon Anderson really sounds at home.

Title cut "Closer to the Edge," starts out with some distant jungle sounds to set the mood, but it then moves to an overwhelming amount of junk as one has to sit back and wait for the song to start. Things are finally kicked off with theme I "The Solid Time of Change," driving and moving with all the ingredients of Yes, but repeatedly falls back into their evil ways. There is one bright spot as the group takes the phrase "I get up I get down" and develops it into one of the gentlest tunes ever to come out of this group (to add a little wit to this review I could say this is what the group does through-out the album-- getting you up, getting you down...some parts succeeding, and some failing quite blatantly).

Jazz Collections

By Mike Kostek

Energy Essentials, a special three record set, ASD 9118 Impulse! time: 127:22 featuring: John Coltrane/Alice Coltrane/Ornette Coleman/Sonny Rollins/Archie Shepp/Albert Ayler/Pharoah Sanders/Charles Mingus/Cecil Taylor/Freddie Hubbard/Eric Dolphy/Michael White/Max Roach/Charlie Hayden/Oliver Nelson/Marion Brown/Elvin Jones/Jimmy Garrison.

Impressible Impulses, Impulse! IMP 1972, time: 42:31, featuring: 'Pharoah Sanders/John Coltrane/Alice Coltrane/John Klemmer/Amhad Jamal/Cliff Coulter/Archie Shepp/Chico Hamilton/Milt Jackson.

The best buy in any record store right now is not Everybody's In Show Biz, or Geronimo Black, or even a used copy of Waka/Kawaka. Instead, these two samplers are definately the shrewdest buy you'll make this century. Irrepressible Impulses is a relatively contemporary collection of Impulse! jazz selling at a $3.98 list price, while Energy Essentials is a giant three record package going at $5.98 list. Impulses is mostly tracks recorded within the last few years, by newer artists, while Energy ranges back to 1961 and encompasses the more famous and "established" new music players. On the cover of Energy it says, "A developmental and historical introduction to the new music." Right.

The six sides of Energy are devastating. The first time I ran them through, I felt empty when I looked toward my previously formidable rock collection. How can you follow that? Everything faded away. Elton John was fluff, Randy Newman was skeletal, Taj Mahal was frivilous, Jeff Beck was laughable. Finally, I began my re-entry into the Pop world with some John McLaughlin. Even now I feel guilty as I reach past the red cover of Essentials, groping for such trash as Lou Reed or Hooterol?

If you've ever felt some innate rumblings in your stirrups after playing Every Good Boy Deserves Favour or Led Zeppelin II or Blood, Sweat & Tears 3 and wonder if maybe, maybe there is something more, something The Moody Blues fail to catch in their progressive beings? Or Keith Emerson? Is he really the greatest keyboardist in contemporary music? And Robert Fripp, is he truly the best composer in the world? What's that about broadening your horizons.....? Are Stevie Wonder, the O Jays and Earth, Wind & Fire really where black music is at? If you've been troubled lately, this monster of a set won't do you no harm. And for you folks who've been keen enough to hear the new music before this day, Impulses is certainly a good look at what is being done lately.

There really aren't too many authentic realms of musical expression available to us at this time that you can dabble in. Classical, Eastern, country, avant-guarde, folk/blues, pop and jazz are about the extent of mankind's musical creations at this time. If you are a rock fan, the gate to this new music is really not very far from where you are.

Energy Essentials is not Buddy Rich, it's not Herbie Mann nor Ramsey Lewis. Rather it is the real people who are responsible for most of the heavy business that's been going down in jazz the last fifteen years.

For the casual listener (Casual Q. Listener, a/k/a Joe College), serious black jazz is often unnecessarily hard to get into. There is little airplay, less TV, and jazz publications and reviews are too often scholerly, sober and difficult for the novice who was brought up on Hullabaloo and Datebook. Jazz reviewers often treat their subjects with and intellectually dense sense of awe and cynicism that can numb any low-key enthusiasm. Of course, this music is often scholarly and technical details are of great interest to cognoscenti but this is still music, sharp and emotional, and deserves more reviews dealing with this great energy in compatable terms.

I know almost nothing about jazz. My jazz experience runs through some John Coltrane,

(Continued on P. 19)

(Continued from P. 18)

Thelonius Monk, Rasaan Roland Kirk, some Sun Ra, some Miles Davis, some Tony Williams and Herbie Hancock. I've rumbled my way through white jazz stylistis such as Soft Machine, Zappa, some Dave Brubeck, some Jean-Lue Ponty, John McLaughlin, etc. No, I haven't left the rank Rock ranks (it's all music, isn't it?) for the snazzy Jazz shore. However, this "new music" fills a large hole in my musical psyche that Neil Young or Chicago can never approach.

There is fire, there is warmth, there is space, there is astral travelling. There's hate, beauty, tears and potatoes. And blues. All here for you. These samplers are especially useful to the newcomer because, besides introducing these people to us, they give us a broad musical spectrum that is usually lacking in an album by one of these people. Very often an artist will swoosh off on one tangent, one mood, one sound and sustain it for forty minutes. This is great if you're ready for some of the moods they get into (Coltrane's OM, My Favorite Things, Archie Shepp's Attica Blues, Miles Davis' On The Corner) This freedom implies an incredible involvement and direction on the part of the musicians, but the hapless Casual Listener is often shutout. These samplers have a few cuts that will get everybody into the ballgame, for most of the material on here is the cream of the crop,and no cut comes a cropper.

If you like music, there's no way you can pass this buy.

Rowan Brothers

Rowan Brothers (Columbia Records)
By Steve Feld

"I'll tell you what I've heard lately that I really like a lot, these two kids in Stinson Beach, the Rowan Brothers, Chris and Loren Rowan. They just write some pretty music and soulful songs, really high, it's fantastic, their music is just sparkly, brand new, shiny. That's like the latest turnon for me, they're super, and they're right at the point of just starting out and nobody knows about them. They could be like the Beatles. They're that good, their music is that good." --Jerry Garcia, Rolling Stone Feb. 3, 1972.

When ol' Garcia unleashes all those superlatives, you know that it's got to be for something good. He's easily one of the most credible and reliable spokesmen of the rock scene. This quote from his "Rolling Stone Interview" sent scores of A&R men from all the record companies to check out the Rowan Brothers-- originally from Wayland, Massachusetts. (A similar situation happened in David Crosby's RS interview when he talked about a young man named Jackson Browne. You may have heard about him.) Columbia Records was the highest bidder (rumors say somewhere between four and five hundred thousand dollars) and after months of preparation they and we have the album.

And it's beautiful--everything Garcia says it is (except for that crack about the Beatles!) Rowan Brothers is a delightful, refreshing summer breeze; Rowan Brothers is a cascading waterfall of tingling music; Rowan Brothers is a highly impressive debut record album from two lads who know how to make good music. And Rowan Brothers is chock full of good music.

It's easy to see why someone like Jerry Garcia would be attracted to their music. The emphasis is on melody and chord structure, and their songs reflect this bright, happy aura of tunefulness. The songs are mainly acoustic, often with strings and orchestration. The brothers alternate on lead vocals; the harmonies are rich and tight. From solely an artistic viewpoint, Rowan Brothers emerges as a good investment.

During the recording sessions for the album such enthusiasm developed that a number of luminaries stopped by to give a hand. From the Dead there's Garcia on pedal steel guitar and Bill Kreutzmann drumming ("Hickory Day", the opening cut), Jim Keltner and Richard Greene (Seatrain) play on "All Together 'Round the Sun". Other sessionmen include Jack Bonus on alto sax (courtesy of Grunt Records) and David Diadem, who played mandolin on the Dead's "Ripple."

Their lyrics are mainly joyous, lifting bits of poetry that seem neither unobtrusive nor pretentious. Rather, the printed lyrics suggest that we all partake in this celebration of life, and the recorded music easily enables us to do just that:

"There's nothing like cheating, defeating yourself
Concealing your thought like a book on the shelf
Just waiting for someone to come take you down
To open you up so you know you've been found."
--"Gold"

"Sometimes it's hard to understand
What's going on around you
every day
When things keep changing oh
so fast
Just try to do the best you can."
--"The Best You Can"

The best and the worst? It's not that type of a record. Rather, just slip it on and enjoy it all--some more than others, but each song can easily stand by itself. The selections on this record were chosen from among 200 Rowan Brothers compositions (they both started writing songs at their early teens), and at the ages of 22 and 20 respectively, Chris and Loren Rowan share a future that promises to be filled with fame, glory, and of course sweet, sweet music.

Harry Chapin

Harry Chapin's "Heads and Tales"
Electra Records
By Carl Kaliszewski

It all began way back in the Spring of 1971. Several brothers decided they would rent a club and present their own show and thereby make a name for themselves. For Steve and Tom Chapin it was a case of no-sooner-said-than-done. After all, they already had a group of their own, the Chapins. As far as the elder brother, Harry was concerned, he had the talent to sing and write (for years he wrote for Steve and Tom), but he had no group.

So Harry Chapin went out and did the only thing left to do. Placing ads in the Village Voice and calling upon the resources of old companions, Harry rapidly had his group. John Wallace, a fine bass player with a trained voice, was picked up by Harry from his church choir days. He acquired Tim Scott on cello from an advertisement. And rounding out the group, Ron Palmer, a lead guitarist was picked up by Harry's manager. With only a week of rehearsals behind them, the new group called (oddly enough) Harry, opened at the Village Gate in New York.

The result was Harry Chapin's debut album "Heads and Tales". In this album he has put to good use all of the experiences of his 29 years. And Harry Chapin has been around. Some of his careers include stockbroker, pilot, banker, beatnik, teacher, pool shark, philosopher, and gigolo. But music was where he felt at home. And at home is where one should listen to his album.

Riding to fame with his hit single "Taxi", Chapin's initial try is not a toss up. His great versatility, both musically and lyrically, proves that he is a song writer of major proportions.

The "Heads" side of the album, which is my favorite side, is introduced by a song which was also released as a single. "Could You Put Your Light On, Please" is the second most familiar song on the album.

The following cut, "Greyhound", contains the greatest variability in musical tempos on the album and perhaps ever produced on an inaugural album in a long time. The next three cuts, "Everybody's Lonely", "Sometime Somewhere Wife" and "Empty" can be described as blues. They place a very strong accent in some serious matters. Again Harry Chapin's experiences are put to good use and he handles the subjects with a great amount of knowledge. This is a great asset in bringing out the feelings of these songs. And these songs have a great deal of feeling behind them.

The flip-side is the "Tales" side of the album. Here Chapin picks up with his "Taxi". The most popular song on the album is well versed in its setting in the streets of 'Frisco. This song was a big hit because it IS Harry Chapin. The music, the words, the mood; they are all part of the man.

The next song is not only part of the man, it also becomes part of us. All of us sometime have an "Any Old Kind of Day", (especially around here!). Described in the Chapin tradition, it has to be heard to be appreciated. While listening to this song, follow along with the enclosed lyric folio. Then ask yourself if this song is part of yourself. Chances are great your answer will be in the affirmative.

The final two songs are the reasons I picked the "Heads" side as my favorite. "Dogtown" hit me as a song that was extended simply for the fact of filling up space on the album. I think this song could have been shorter, or rather if it had to be this length, that it be done in a more Chapin manner. This song does not hit me as typical Harry Chapin. The album closer "Same Sad Singer" is not an appropriate ending to this album. It's as if Jack Holzman could not find an adéquate ending and just placed this one here to leave us hanging.

HE REALLY DID

"An Evening With Richard Nixon" by Gore Vidal is a bird's eye view of Nixon's career from the beginning...this is accomplished with the help of Kennedy, Eisenhower, Washington, Agnew, Humphrey, and the like, acting as advocates pro and con, commenting on the "action" (so to speak) of Nixon's political aspirations. All that Nixon says, he has said in real life, nothing has been invented, nothing has been taken out of context. Gore Vidal, in researching this play, carefully footnoted each of Nixon's statements for time, origin, and nature of the speech. An annotated bibliography is available on request.

remember everything that he said on this record he has said in real life.

Distributed By A&M Records

Interesting listening on ODE RECORDS.

1, 2, Experimental Jazz At The Folklore Centre?

By Gary Gomes

I knew it was going to be a little bit strange. Like, after all, I mean, the people who frequent the Amherst Folklore Center aren't exactly the type that would dig free jazz? Are they???

Jeremy Steig comes out on stage, almost a miniaturized man in comparison with his pianist Warren Bernahrdt, and both of them proceed to shake the place up. Their first number, which Steig later told me was a piece by Hindemith (a 20th century classical "serious" music composer) left the crowd pretty much at a loss for words, and even at a loss for applause. I suppose they thought that Steig and Bernhardt were trying up Sigh!).

Undaunted (Warren Bernahrdt had a big grin on his face all through the performance), the dynamic duo of electric piano (with clavinet) and flute played on, going into a fine, fine jazz waltz (6/8 time), where Steig was wrenching ideas from the flute even before it seemed it was ready to accept them.

I probably know what you're thinking--"Oh, this Steig character is probably a newcomer on the scene, and he's playing some experimental bullshit to make a fast name for himself." Well, sad to say, my friends, you're wrong. First of all, Steig has been on the jazz scene for some fifteen years, and has played with or for such musicians as Bill Evans, one of the finest pianists around, and also with Michael Mandel (Larry Coryell's pianist) and Jan Hammer (John McLaughlin's pianist). Quite a reputation to build up when you don't have enough money to pay your rent, or be able to afford to hire a group to tour with you. Ever try to go on a tour without a group to back you up? Damn near impossible! (There, there, reader, I'll get back to the music presently, but these are facts that I find hard to ignore). And, the second great myth passes--you do not make a big reputation by playing experimental music. This is not the musicians fault, but rather the fault of a populace which doesn't want to put any effort forth to enjoy new art, and also the fault of advertising and companies which encourage this tendency.

However, back to the concert; the third number on the set was rock in form, and then it began to modulate, slowly but surely, back into a free form composition, with abrupt time changes, and Bernhardt throwing in odd chords just to upset the listeners' sense of balance, and to contribute to the development of the piece as a whole. Endsong.

Steig then asked if someone from the back of the club could hand him a set of clay bongos that he'd placed there. Warren Bernhardt handling the mysterious items, Steig produced a small wooden flute, and began to whip off phrases at a lightning speed to the listening audience.

They ended the set, which was now about an hour and a half long, by doing two numbers, one with a folkish melody and the other a standard jazz-blues, with quick exchanges between Steig on rasping flute and Bernhardt on clavinet that sounded remarkably like an electric guitar.

INTERMISSION

I was lucky enough to be able to talk with Steig for a brief time while he and Bernhardt were talking. Steig was just getting over a bad cold and didn't look well at all and I noticed a little hump on his forehead which looked like the hump on Eric Dolphy's head a few months before Dolphy died of a brain hemmorrage. I hope I'm wrong.

Steig told me something about his musical background, explaining to me that he didn't get his style of playing the flute from Rahsaan Roland Kirk (a style reminiscent of Ian Anderson's raspy tone) but rather, he had obtained it from Yusef Lateef, a Black innovator of the Fifties (who is still alive today). Steig is an amazingly fast and inventive flute player in his own right, sometimes deliberately altering the tone of the flute to match his musical adventures.

When I asked him why the electric piano - flute set up, he answered "Well, I play with a different line-up everywhere I go!" When I asked him why, he told me it was because he couldn't afford to carry a full time group around with him, and worry about salaries and all else for the group (No, folks, it's not just artistic license all the time...).

Discussing Warren Bernhardt, Steig said that he was astonished at all the things that Warren was throwing in to keep him on his toes. "We are supposed to do "Hang On to a Dream" (by Tim Hardin) in that set, but Warren just switched it around on me. He's incredibly funny, and his conception is very free, so he couldn't help it..."

I, for one, was glad he couldn't. Bernhardt played with such imagination and wit throughout the set that you were compelled to sit and watch him, and see a big smile come over his face when he thought of a new idea he could throw in. Beautiful.

End INTERMISSION

The second set started with Steig doing what sounded like bird calls on his flute. A few seconds later, Bernhardt, inventive as always, threw in some gut-wrenching piano lines, gradually modulating the piece into a modal jazz theme, with abrupt stops and starts. The long piece began to take on a more lighthearted air, and became livelier and more free. Bernhardt was really kicking ass. Then the entire thi moved into a fairly conventional bebop pattern and ended on a slow bluesy pattern. Steig told the audience that it was a combination of three songs -- "Straight, No Chaser," "I Got Rhythm", and "If" (The first two are jazz classics, and "Straight, No Chaser" gives you an idea of the environment of the Nightclub circuit that most jazz musicians had to go through to play this music. However, though this song was written in a barroom environment, Thelonious Monk's creativity in writing "Straight, No Chaser" should not go ignored.) (By the way, a dog walked up on stage in the middle of the set and scratched itself in front of Steig's amplifier. Music to scratch flees by? or dogwhistle music?)

After recounting the numbers done, Steig zipped into an astonishing impromptu "Flight of the Bumblebee" on flute. Technical virtuosity? I should say!

The team then spearheaded into another piece, this one practically spontaneously improvised, I think. Steig began with an off-harmony with voice and flute, and he and Bernhardt explored the ramifications for about five minutes before Bernhardt began to mellow off the piece with descending dominant fifths (example: a C and a G played simultaneously on a piano). They ended the piece with a very spacey air, doing quick runs in and around the main melody, talking with their instruments back and forth, and employing dynamics (loness and softness) quite well.

The next number was a Bernhardt composition called "Voodoo Man"--which lasted about ten seconds. Steig commented that it was a short piece. They then got together and played it through this time, Bernhardt the catalyst and Steig the relayer of information to the audience.

The last number was in a mid - Eastern mode and was brought off quite well. Here and there throughout what was going on, you could hear Bernhardt picking out the Hindemith piece they'd started with, and you could see Steig picking up on this musical joke, almost saying to himself "Yeah, maybe they'll dig it now".

End of set. They played for about two and a half hours.

ENCORE

Well, is that it? No, of course not. Of course, the concert was excellent, and the people liked it in the limited way they could (No, no, put down those poisoned pens. All I'm saying is that someone like Steig isn't standard gear at the Folklore Center. And something must be heard before it's appreciated, dig? And Steig hasn't been heard of, never mind heard -- yet.) Of course, Steig and Bernhardt are excellent musicians, two of the best I've had the privilege of hearing in a long time. At times Steig's flute sounded like it had an echo chamber attached, but it didn't. He knows his instrument as if it were himself. The same was true of Bernhardt. Both were treating their instruments as expressive extensions of themselves, and for me that's one of the best things that could happen. But that's not the end.

If you cut off music from its economic, social and political background, you're missing half the story. Steig is a great flute player, but he's barely surviving on infrequent loyalty checks from his previous albums and even more infrequent gigs, forced into an uncomfortable position by the programming habits of a commercialized music systems--the same industry which forces many of our best artists to flee to Europe in hope of employment. Steig's example is just the tip of the iceberg. The same things forced Eric Dolphy to die at the age of 37; Coltrane at 41. I am not putting Jeremy in the same category as these men; they were unmatchable and unique in their own time, and true artists (I'm not implying that Steig isn't.)

However, I am pointing to something which causes a bitter taste in every creative musician's mouth. I am attacking a music industry that will not even deign to attempt to sell these men's music. I am attacking a social system that forced Cecil Taylor to wash dishes in a club that played his records over the P.A. system as he worked, and forced Archie Shepp to hock his saxophone, while he slaved writing six songs to get his axe, which he thought he had coming to him when a saxophone company used his name in an advertisement without his permission. "Well, you guys have to expect that if you're going to be artists..." Bullshit.

Open your ears to some of these amazing music that's going on all around, but you never hear it. And always remember that businessmen control it. Do you want to be controlled?

The myth that a creative artist has to suffer has to die, or we won't have any truly creative artists left. Ask Eric Dolphy...

Just Couldn't Get It Up

local concert expose
Dave Mason and Friends
By Jim Lavrakas

Dave Mason performed at Smith College two weeks ago in what was one of several area concerts. The conditions were wrong at two of the concerts. The result was mediocrity.

The posters for each concert claimed that Mason would be playing with "Friends". The title has become quite overused in recent times. The rapport between Mason, his three "established" backup men, and the brother-sister singing team could have been better; the atmosphere could hardly have been called friendly.

The brother-sister team, Jimmy and Bella, opened the show after a half hour delay. They sang four or five pretty songs which all sounded alike. The crowd talked all the way through their set. By the end of their time on stage everyone was fully aware that they were on Capitol Records.

Backstage Mason stumbled to the stage door. His "Friends" stood around waiting for their chance to play next to the number one billed man. Towards the audience Mason acted dejected and uninspired. He opened the concert with, "Oh well, another concert," and mumbled rendition of "There's No Business Like Show Business". He was really getting everybody psyched for a fun evening.

His first several songs were solos. Most of the songs in his show were from his "Alone Together" album. His solos lacked a fullness of sound although his voice was pleasing as usual. Slowly but surely his backup men came on stage. The sound became richer and continues as ne changed from acoustic to electric guitar. His handling of the wawa was exquisite.

Van Morrison look alike: Mason remained unexcited with a little help from his "Friends".

There was still something lacking, however. Each song began to sound like the last. Those beautiful and lively songs from "Alone Together" lost their individuality. Mason remained unexcited.

Was the problem due to something physical or technical? Was it because the lighting was so atrocious? Was it due to the unbalanced sound which pierced several of the songs? Afraid not. It was something more amorphous than that. There was no spirit.

Even when the music finally picked up in the end it was obvious that this had all been rehearsed and the music manipulated to save the concert and lead the concert goer to believe that it was all worth it. All four dollars of it. The music certainly picked up at the middle of Mason's hour and fifteen minutes on stage. By encore time he had everyone in the place jumping. But he was hardly jumping himself; his downed-out spirit put a damper on the music. He brought out Jimmy and Bella who impregnated the last two songs with harmony and no little soul.

Never fear, folks. For on December 8th the New Riders of the Purple Sage come to Smith. Their concerts have proven to be remarkable in the past. Let's hope, but not predict, that this coming concert will relieve what has become the jinxed John M. Greene Hall.

TV Hotspots

Saturday

2:15
College Football. Big Eight battle: the Nebraska Cornhuskers, seeking an unprecedented third straight national title, meet the Colorado Buffaloes at Boulder, Colo.
3
Boboquivari. "A bluesman stands up and tells his story, takes you into his confidence, and when he's finished, you know who he loves, who he hates, and who he's afraid of." In a rare TV appearance, blues guitarist Sam "Lightnin'" Hopkins offers 30 minutes of improvisational music and reminiscences. Channel 57.
7:30
Firing Line. The Presidential campaign—a view from abroad. William F. Buckley Jr.'s guests are two French newsmen: Andre Fontaine, editor in chief of LeMonde, and Raymond Aron, a columnist for Le Figaro. (Repeat; 60 min.) Channel 57.
8
All In The Family. A running battle about the Presidential election sharpens this tale of an inheritance for Mike, and Archie's notion on how to spend the money. Channel 3.
8:30
Playhouse: New York. Attend an off Broadway play: Lanford Wilson's award winning 1967 drama "The Rimers of Eldritch." Small town desperation and injustice are the themes in the drama that centers on a killing, and the personal stories of the townspeople. Filmed in Pittsville, Md., by Davey Marlin Jones. (90 min.) Channel 57.
10
David Susskind. "Can Acupuncture Cure You?" A discussion with three doctors and two patients on the effectiveness of the treatment. (2 hrs.) Channel 57.
11:30
Thriller. Clayton Mace (Boris Karloff) is able to foretell the future—and can see nothing but tragedy. Channel 40.
Saturday's Films
3
The Adventures Of Robin Hood. (1938). Brilliant, imaginative version of the classic about the outlaw hero of Sherwood Forest. Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Patric Knowles, Eugene Pallette, Alan Hale, Melville Cooper. One of the best swashbuckling epics, winner of a number of Oscars and nominated for Best Picture. Channel 3.
9
The Way West (1967) The fine novel by A. B. Guthrie, Jr., has been turned into a hackneyed, disappointing saga of a wagon train on the great trek to Oregon in the 1840's. Good cast helps a little but not enough. With Kirk Douglas, Robert Mitchum, Richard Widmark. Channels 22 and 30.
11:30
Coogan's Bluff (1968) Fast paced, familiar detective story with big, boring Clint Eastwood playing a western sheriff who arrives in New York City to nab a hood convicted of murder. Eastwood doesn't really act—he just stands there! Of the good supporting cast, Don Stroud registers strongly as the hood with Lee J. Cobb. Channel 3.

Sunday

12
Meet The Press. TV's longest running interview show marks its 25th anniversary (it began Nov. 6, 1947). Today's guests, Secretary of State William Rogers and Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz. Channel 22 and 30.
1
Pro Football. Denver Broncos meet the New York Giants. Channels 22 and 30. The Washington Redskins meet the New York Jets. Channel 3.
Issues and Answers. R. Sargent Shriver, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, and pollsters Louis Harris and Daniel Yankelovich are the scheduled guests in New York. Channel 40.
4
Pro Football. The Oakland Raiders meet the Chiefs at Kansas City. Channels 22 and 30.
4
Dateline: America. "Somebody Waiting," a graphic study of the critically retarded. Over 165,000 Americans have IQs of 10 or less—most of them children. Their situation poses a grim challenge: how do you help those generally thought capable only at dying? This film chronicles one approach in Sonoma State Hospital, Glen Ellen, Cal. Channel 57.
5
The Advocates. The Presidency: which candidate is best qualified for the office? The leadership abilities of President Nixon and Senator McGovern are debated, and campaign issues are summarized. Kevin Phillips, author of "The Emerging Republican Majority," speaks for Mr. Nixon. He's opposed by Lawrence O'Brien, Senator McGovern's campaign manager. Channel 57.
8:30
Columbo. Our favorite show; this week featuring Robert Culp as a murderer who has Columbo guessing. Pete Falk as Columbo. Channels 22 and 30.
Sunday Films
2:30
The Diary Of Anne Frank (1959). Faith screen translation of the hit Broadway play about the true, harrowing experiences of the Jewish Frank family and their friends when they are forced to hide from the Nazis in a factory attic in Amsterdam for two long years. Millie Perkins is visually perfect as the young Anne Frank whose spirit gives the group the courage to go on when they lose all hope, but her thesping leaves much to be desired. Of the good supporting cast, Joseph Schildkraut as Anne's strong father and Shelley Winters, as the terrified Mrs. Van Daan, are standouts. Channel 40.
9
Von Ryan's Express (1965). A World War II adventure highlighted by excellent action sequences and location photography. The plot centers on the escape of 600 Allied POWs being moved from Italy to a Nazi prison camp. With Frank Sinatra and Trevor Howard. Channel 40.

Monday

8
Hollywood Television Theater. Walter Matthau stars in this production of Clifford Odets' 1935 drama.
The Bronx during the Depression: in this simple setting, Odets celebrates the human spirit through the hopes and frustrations of one Jewish family struggling to survive—and maybe even live a little in the bargain.
Director Martin Ritt ("Hud," "The Long Hot Summer") has a featured role as Uncle Morty. Channel 57.
9
Pro Football. The Baltimore Colts meet the New England Patriots. Channel 40.
11
Election Eve Special. An election eve opportunity for voters to hear campaign issues voiced by prominent Democrats and Republicans. A live studio audience poses questions. At press time, campaign managers Lawrence O'Brien and Clark MacGregor were among the likely guests. Channel 57.
Monday's Films
Murder Inc. (1960) Relatively factual, unpleasant but fascinating story of the big crime syndicate, and how a young couple is caught in its web. Distinguished by a smashing portrayal by Peter Falk as Abe Reles. Channel 3.

Tuesday

Election Day Coverage
7 P.M. ABC, CBS, NBC
Election coverage on all the networks until the Presidential race is decided.
9 P.M. PBS
Behind the Lines: A behind the cameras look at TV election coverage.
9:30 P.M. PBS
Black Journal: Prospects for the black community during the next four years.
8:30
Dateline: America. Women alcoholics describe their ruined lives, loss of self respect and painful withdrawals from the bottle in "Fallen Angels." The seven women, ranging from a suburban housewife to an orchestra musician, "represent different aspects of the disease in terms of life style," says producer John Beyer. The documentary was shot in several Iowa communities. Channel 57.

Wednesday

8
Carol Burnett. Steve Lawrence and Lilly Tolman guest stars. Channel 3.
10
Julie Andrews. Robert Goulet and Joel Grey guest. Tribute to Lerner and Loewe musicals. Joel Grey recreates his George M. Cohan role, the much acclaimed role he had on Broadway in "George M!"; and the company signs a medley from "Cabaret." Channel 40.

Thursday

8
The Advocates. Must jury verdicts be unanimous? Arguments center on the 1970 Supreme Court ruling that a simple majority of jurors can decide the outcome of state criminal trials. The Court's intent: elimination of hung juries. Attorney Melvin Belli testifies against the new system. Channel 57.
9
International Performance. "Splendors of Versailles" celebrates the palace of Louis XIV. Filmed entirely on location, the program features performances of 17th century music by costumed singers, dancers and instrumentalists. In the Gallery of Mirrors: "Te Deum Symphony," by Delalande. In the Gardens: "Plaisirs de Versailles" overture, by Charpentier. In the Venus Salon: selections from "Plaisirs de Versailles." At the Apollo Fountain: "Le Concert des Trompettes." Channel 57.
Thursday's Films
Wait Until Dark (1967) Audrey Hepburn played her last role to date as Susy Hendrix, a blind girl terrorized in her Greenwich Village apartment by a gang seeking a doll stuffed with heroin. Adapted from Frederick Knott's Broadway hit. Location filming in New York with Alan Arkin. Channel 3.

Audrey Hepburn and Alan Arkin in Wait Until Dark next Thursday night.

TONIGHT, FRIDAY, NOV. 3 8 P.M.

AH AHK: Performing Arts of Korea

DANIEL ADNI,
Pianist
U.S. Debut

NEXT THURS.-FRI., NOV. 9-10 — 8 p.m.
Two entirely different programs including works by Beethoven, Brahms, Ravel and Prokofiev! Reserved tickets $1.50 UM undergrads — $3.00 others.

Street Theatre of Ossining, N.Y.
Presents "The Black Terror" by Richard Wesley.
Monday, November 13 - Bowker/8 p.m.
For complete program and ticket info. contact Fine Arts Council/125 Herter Bad News? - Good News?

(you decide)

There are five OTHER audio shops in the Amherst-Northampton area. Not ONE of them is like us. We're TRIPOD AUDIO. Let us tell you a little about ourselves. We're new. Our sound studio is located at 219 Main Street in Northampton. It's on the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop.

We'll tell you right away — if you're looking for a COMPLETE stereo system for $199.95, we CAN'T help you. Now that's a pretty direct statement — but we hope you'll understand that we aim to be honest with you. We DON'T carry junk — we like music too much to do that. ALL of our equipment has stood the test of time and is well-known for its quality and reliability — equipment by Klipsch, Sony, Teac, Bang & Olufsen, Thorens, PE, and Watts. And we back up our stock with a sales force that knows what they're talking about. You may not like what we tell you, but we'll tell you the TRUTH.

Considering the quality of the equipment we carry, our prices are DAMN competitive. And we've provided a quiet and relaxing place to listen carefully and compare equipment without being hassled. You're also welcome to bring your own records and tapes. Why not drop over one of these days and take a look and a listen. Or call us at 584-6498 and ask for Jim. We might NOT be the place for you. But — then again — we MIGHT. Once again, that's TRIPOD AUDIO at 219 Main Street in Northampton. On the second floor above the Tripod Camera Shop. You'll be hearing more about us in the coming weeks.

TRIPOD AUDIO

219 MAIN STREET — NORTHAMPTON, MASS. 01060
TELEPHONE 584—6498

Weekend

Music

DANIEL ADNI

The young Israeli pianist Daniel Adni will make his American debut next week Thursday, November 9 in Bowker Auditorium. At twenty years of age, Adni is considered one of the most exciting artists of the future and advance word from London, his home for the past five years, Augers Well. He has received wide critical acclaim for his orchestra appearances, solo recitals and recordings.

For his debut concert in this country, Mr. Adni has selected a program encompassing Beethoven's Piano Sonata No. 23 in F minor, Opus 57 ("Appassionata") Sonata No. 3 in A, Opus 28 by Prokofiev and Schubert's Sonata in B flat major D. 960. On Friday evening, November 10, Daniel Adni will offer his second recital at the University and for this occasion he has selected an entirely different program including Beethoven's Sonata No. 26 in E flat, Opus 81a, ("Les Adieux"), Ravel's "Miroirs" and "Variations on a Theme by Paganini", Opus 26, Books 1-2 by Brahms. Both concerts will be at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium (Stockbridge Hall), and are the second events of the 1972/73 Celebrity Series.

Reserved tickets for both concerts are now available by contacting the UMass Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202. Tickets are priced at $3 (half-price to full time UMass undergraduates) and remaining tickets will be available at the Bowker Auditorium ticket office one hour before each concert.

ELECTRONIC MUSIC WEEKEND

An Electronic Music Weekend especially designed to introduce the community to electronic music will be held at Hampshire College on the 4th and 5th of November. Under the sponsorship of the Five College Electronic Music Studio at Hampshire, the weekend is being coordinated by Randall McClellan, assistant professor of music.

An open studio and equipment demonstration will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, 4 November, in Hampshire's Academic Building, room 101. From 7 to 11 p.m. there will be environmental sound spaces with lighting and dancers, ranging through rooms 102-108 of the Academic Building. A concert of electronic compositions at 8:15 p.m. in the east lecture hall will be presented by New England composers, and will include works by Appleton, Felcinio, Smiley, Schwartz, Sullivan, Chadabe, Perera, McClellan, Hafner, Stern, and Rogers.

Sunday's events begin at 2 p.m. with Tim Sullivan on "How to Listen to Electronic Music" in the Academic Building's east lecture hall. An operational demonstration of the Synthi 100, world's largest synthesizer, is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. at EMSA, the Electronic Music Studios of Amherst, Inc. 460 West Street.

Concluding the weekend's activities will be a concert by Alvin Lucier, prominent composer, performer, and teacher. Lucier studied music at Yale, Brandeis, and Tanglewood, and in Rome as a Fulbright scholar. Since 1970 he has been at Wesleyan University as Director of the Electronic and Computer Music Facility. He has also been a member of the faculty at Brandeis, as Director of the Brandeis Choral Union.

In 1966, Lucier founded the Sonic Arts Union with three fellow composer/performers. An ensemble devoted to the making and performing of electronic theatre music, it has toured extensively in the U.S. and abroad.

The weekend coordinator, Randall McClellan, has been a member of the faculty at Hampshire since July 1971. He has toured extensively presenting concerts of live and pre recorded electronic music and his compositions have been performed throughout the U.S. and Europe. He has studied the music of India, China, Japan, the American Indian, Bali and Java, and is also interested in the aesthetics of music. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Rochester, and previously taught at West Chester State College in Pennsylvania.

All Electronic Music Weekend events are open to the public without charge.

Theater

Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper, the stars of Morocco on campus next Wednesday evening.

THE DEVILS

This weekend the University Theater Group is presenting John Whiting's play The Devils. The original play from which Ken Russell adapted his film The Devils (1971) concerns a wild Renaissance priest and a convent full of possessed nuns. Performances will be at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the Studio Theater, South College, UMass.

JOURNEY OF THE FIFTH HORSE

The next production of the UMass Theatre will be Ronald Ribman's The Journey of the Fifth Horse, directed by Harry Mahnken of the Theatre faculty. Performances will be presented at Bartlett Auditorium on November 9-11 and 16-18 at 8:30 P.M.

The Journey of the Fifth Horse is adapted for the stage from Turgenev's "Diary of a Superfluous Man." The play was first presented in 1966 at the American Place Theatre in New York. Dustin Hoffman won an Obie Award for his portrayal of Zoditch, the central character.

A reader in a publishing house (Zoditch) is given a diary to take home and read overnight and this ordeal sets three worlds spinning: the reader's dream world, the real world of the moment, and the world of the diarist, all interlocked and interacting. In his dream world the reader imagines he is to marry the daughter of the owner, and also that his landlady is eager to wed and bed him. In the real world he actually proposes to the landlady and is promptly laughed to scorn. The diarist in his world loved a girl who fell victim to a dashing cossack and was left pregnant when his regiment moved on. The diarist is scorned for having provoked a duel, and the girl will not even have him as a foster father for the child.

Tickets for The Journey of the Fifth Horse are available at the Bartlett box office and by calling 545-2579. The box office is open Monday through Friday 10:00-4:00 and the evenings of performances. Tickets are $1.50 for UMass students and $2.50 for the general public.

LONG DAY'S JOURNEY INTO NIGHT

The UMass Theatre will present Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer Prize winning Long Day's Journey Into Night on November 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, 19. The play will be presented in a "found space" - a living room - rather than in a traditional theatre. The Friday and Saturday performances (Nov. 10, 11, 17, 18) will be held in the Memorial Room of Alumni Hall (opposite Bartlett) at 7:00 P.M. The two sunday performances (Nov. 12 and 18) will take place in the Amherst Woman's Club (35 Triangle Street) beginning at 3:00 P.M.

Long Day's Journey Into Night was published posthumously and was not produced until 1956. The play explores the relationships within the Tyrone family as the four members confront the problem of Mary Tyrone's return to drug addiction. The Tyrones are O'Neill's own family. With deep pity and heartfelt forgiveness, O'Neill faces the past. "He asks forgiveness for his failure to know his family when the need for understanding was like a cry in the night, and attempts to reassure their ghosts that he knows everything awful they have done and still loves them." (Walter Kerr).

The play is under the direction of Marya Bednerik of the Theatre faculty. Bonnie Bishoff is completing her M.F.A. thesis in acting with her portrayal of Mary Tyrone.

Seating is very limited and the public is urged to arrange for tickets well in advance. All tickets are $2.50 (which includes refreshments) and are available at the Bartlett Auditorium box office (545-2579) or at the door prior to performances. Reservations will be accepted, but must be picked up by 4:00 P.M. on the day before the performance.

Films

THE ACTRESS (1953)

A young girl wants to be an actress, her father balks at the idea. This domestic comedy is much more enjoyable than can be expected from the script, adapted by Ruth Gordon from her play Years Ago. The reason for the success is the pairing of Spencer Tracy and Jean Simmons as the father-daughter sparring partners. Anthony Perkins has a bit as the girl's boyfriend. Wright Hall, Smith College, Monday 11/6, 8.

THE BATTLE OF ALGIERS (1965)

Directed by Gillo Pontecorvo, this is a graphic enactment of the events that led to the birth of a free Algerian nation. Pontecorvo achieves a remarkable realism with imitative newsreel footage. Essentially, the message is political--one view a blueprint for revolution that is logistically sound as well as spiritually moving. Hampden Dining Commons, Monday, 11/6, 7:30.

THE BICYCLE THIEF (1948)

Victorio De Sica's classic of post war Italian neo-realism. De Sica used all non-professional actors to tell the simple story of a poverty-stricken man who, on the first day on his new job, has his bicycle stolen. The film follows he and his son's desparate search throughout the streets of Rome to recover it. De Sica wished the American translation be "The Bicycle Thieves" for it concerns two thieves as Antonio, the man whose bicycle is stolen, attempts to steal it back at the end. De Sica's simple direction matches the story. Bosley Crowther in the New York Times said: "One of the ten best films in 40 years. In its revelation of a lonely man in a complex world it ranks for all-around greatness with any picture made." Room 163, Campus Center, Monday, 11/6, 8.

THE BIG SLEEP (1946)

An admirable detective film thanks mainly to the strong directing of Howard Hawkes and the exciting and delightful performances of Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. In this one Bogart plays a detective hired to protect two rich, spoiled heiresses. Bacall turns out to be the more tolerable of the two sisters and as romance beckons the plot thickens to unbelievable lengths. Hawkes was quoted as saying he still can't figure it out, but no matter for this often confusing melodrama makes for a wonderful film by a fine American director. The script's by Hawkes and William Faulkner, adapted from the Raymond Chandler novel and the cast features Dorothy Malone who, in a bit part, has with Bogart one of the shortest trysts in the history of films. With To Have and Have Not, Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

THE BOYS IN THE BAND (1970)

Mart Crowley's blistering play about homosexuals was judiciously edited and transformed into an agitated bear-their-soul drama. Its bitchiness has all the right accents, it's the prevailing mood of despair which is disturbing. The self-pity is both funny and appalling ("You show me a happy homosexual and I'll show you a gay corpse," etc.) The setting is a birthday party attended by a small gay clique, it is interrupted when the married ex-college roommate of the host arrives. Much of the play's psychological reasoning has been eliminated in favor of a more economic and natural exposition. The play and the film were breakthroughs; for once the stereotype was replaced with a more truthful image of homosexuals. This revelation staled quickly, the flighty stereotype was replaced by a sad and pathetic one. In the end the charachters elicit pity rather than respect or understanding. Some annoying touches in William Friedkin (The French Connection) direction, as if he needed to fall back upon old movie situations for guidance. The film has virtues; the ensemble acting, all by the original off-Broadway cast, is faultless and Crowley's double-edged repartee has charm. Campus Center Auditorium, Friday, 11/3, 7, 9:15, 11:30.

BULLITT (1968)

A cops-and-robbers thriller with a contemporary twist in which Steve McQueen plays a super-cool police detective with scruples about his occupation. He goes along with it all when he's assigned to guard a chief crime witness. Long on both action and character with a superbly crafted chase sequence and some effective photography of San Francisco. Student Union Ballroom, Thursday, 11/9, 7 and 9:30.

SOUND IDEAS

Quality Components at the Best Prices
1 Cook Place — Amherst — In the Alley
253-5942

Speaker of the House Sale which will be the Sound Ideas Speaker of the House?

ADC
ADVENT
ALTEC
AR
CREATIVE

We have to get rid of some of our speakers.
We have many different models of many different lines of speaker systems.

DYNACO
EPI
INFINITY
JBL
KLH
MARTIN

UP TO 50% OFF

P.S. — SOUND IDEAS sells the BEST $199.00 system in the world.

Jim Kweskin at the Folklore Center this weekend.

CAMELOT (1968)

The Lerner and Loewe follow-up to My Fair Lady was a stodgy musical about the domestic affairs of King Arthur, his queen Guenevere, and his trusted knight Lancelot. Joshua Logan's film of the play is an expansive one, but one which emphasizes the play's lack-of-direction. At times it seems endless. A number of fine sequences and pleasant surprizes. Vanessa Redgrave's sensual Guenevere has capricious buoyance when often the plot does not. Richard Harris is bearable as Arthur and Franco Nero walks through Lancelot's part as if he were a model. One bright spot in David Hemming's Mordred, although his song has been cut. The actors appear to be doing their own singing, which makes for a nice change, and the score has been delicately arranged. The production is lush and handsome: what happens is you soon find yourself paying more attention to it rather than the humdrum royal affairs. Was adultery quite this boring? The film leaves you with the sneaking suspicion that had it not been for My Fair Lady, this film never would have been made. Sage Hall, Smith College, Saturday, 11/4, 7 and 9:45.

DINNER AT EIGHT (1933)

One of M-G-M's most successful follow-ups to Grand Hotel style of multi-storied, star-studded sophisticated dramas. This concerns the dinner party being thrown by a social climbing wife of an ailing businessman. Her guests include a has-been actress, a self-made industrialist and his slutish wife, and a destitute matinee idol. This is one of George Cukor's strongest and most memorable films. Each of the guests is revealed in a sharp, cynical vignette which exposes the sham and decay of American "high life" during the Thirties. The acting, camerawork, and sets are faultless. Featured are Marie Dressler, John Barrymoore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Jean Hersholt, May Robson, and Billie Burke. Film audiences still applaud Ms. Burke's moment of intense anxiety when her party's not going well. Adapted from the play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber by Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz. Campus Center Auditorium, Wednesday, 11/8, 9.

ELVIRA MADIGAN (1967)

A lush, romantic tale, and a beautiful movie to watch, is Bo Widerberg's film based upon the true story of a young calvary lieutenant who leaves his wife and child and runs away with a beautiful tightrope walker. They spend some idyllic weeks in the Swedish countryside, hiding out because he is a deserter; finally dying together rather than living separate lives. Some have called this the most beautiful picture ever made, and Widerberg has shot each frame exquisitely. The story unfolds somewhere beneath the beautiful veneer which can't help the lover's plight seems more than lushly banal. Thommy Berggrengives a skillful performance as the calvary officer, Pia Degermark does little else than look beautiful as Elvira. The music is Mozart's twenty-first piano concerto, the adante movement. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

FUNNY GIRL (1968)

Barbra Streisand won an Oscar for her perfectly tuned performance of Fanny Brice. Her's is one of those rare, mesmerizing screen portrayals which turns a lacklustre stage musical into a vastly entertaining film. It only suggests what might have been; the love story between Nick and Fanny and the dashing New York gambler Nick Arnstein is little more than filler between songs. Worse is the performance of Omar Sharif as Nick, as if their isn't enough trouble between Arabs and Jews. Streisand proved herself to be not only the supreme song stylist she has always been, but the best screen comedianne of our generation. Songs by Jules Styne and Bob Merrill. Directed by William Wyler. Palace, West Springfield.

THE GODFATHER

A straight forward melodrama about the rise of a Mafia dynasty. Reverent and sympathetic to the exploits of the blood-letting Corleone family, the violence is seen as a means to in corporate identity. In all its use of old techniques, the film suggests a new realism and understanding of the ruthlessness and scope of the crime empire today. Marlon Brando as the family partriach takes a relatively small part and makes it memorably moving. His supporting cast, Al Pacino, James Cann, Sterling Hayden, are all competent. Directed by Francis Ford Coppolla, from the novel by Mario Puzo; an altogether extraordinary experience. Campus Cinema, Hadley; Jerry Lewis Cinemas, Northampton.

GONE WITH THE WIND (1939)

This romantic historical pageant of the Civil War is remembered by many as the best film of all time. It crystallized an entire generation's idea of what a romance should be, full of color, character, and action. David O. Selznick mounted this gigantic production in association with MGM and utilized three directors (Victor Fleming takes the credit and the Oscar for Best Director in 1939), many of Hollywood's finest technicians, perhaps the most splendid color photography up until the time, and a cast that was chosen with impeccable care. Clark Gable plays Rhett Butler, Vivien Leigh played the memorable Scarlett O'Hara (and copped an Oscar), and featured in the huge cast are Olivia DeHavilland, Leslie Howard, and Butterfly McQueen, whose part as the maid only showed that Hollywood wasn't quite as intelligent as we may wish to remember. Amherst Cinema, Amherst.

THE GRADUATE (1968)

A slick and very funny comedy which does an abrupt about-face midway through and becomes an exaggerated youth romance. Benjamin Braddock, first in his class at a large Eastern university, comes home to Southern California after graduation and becomes a listless showpiece for his parents' friends. He has an affair with an alcoholic family friend, then falls in love with her daughter. Mike Nichols directs this comic-strip comedy as if the characters still had bubbles over the heads. He is very good with actors, especially Dustin Hoffman as Benjamin and Anne Bancroft as Mrs. Robinson. Nichols won an Oscar as Best Director; the music is Simon and Garfunkel.

IKIRU (1952)

One of Akira Kurasawa's best films with Takashi Shimura giving his greatest performance as an old man who learns he's dying of cancer. Shimura spends the last months of his life creating a children's playground in a poor section of a city. The first part is concerned with his search through the streets and alleys for a meaning to life while the second half shows a funeral wind, where his colleagues and friends

MR. IMMENSE PRESENTS

IN COLD BLOOD

Will Mr. Immense Appear?

S.U.B. Come & See! 7 & 9:30

MOVIE CALENDAR

SUNDAY, NOV. 5

SHAFT

7 and 9:15 S.U. Ballroom 50¢

MONDAY, NOV. 6

The Bicycle Thief (deSica)

8:00 p.m., 163 CC 50¢

TUESDAY, NOV. 7

Umberto D (deSica)

8:00 p.m. 163 CC 50¢

THURSDAY, NOV. 9

BULLITT

7 and 9:30 S.U.B. — Free —

FRIDAY, NOV. 10

Garden of the Finzi-Continis

7 and 9:30 Mahar Aud. 50¢

Weekend (continued)

recall his modest and introspective nature and achievements. The film offers a faithful portrait of life in Japan in the early Fifties.

I LOVE YOU ALICE B. TOKLAS (1968)

Peter Sellers as a San Francisco attorney who bangs up his car and joins the hippie subculture. He turns away from his Playboy like life style for a communal one; the results are an often funny and deft comedy. The script, by Paul Muzursky and Larry Tucker (who also wrote Bob And Carol And Ted And Alice), is fresh in its satiric jabs and warm in its characterizations. Sellers performance is his best in years and Jo Van Fleet is in excellent form as Sellers mother. Directed by TV veteran Hy Averback, with Leigh Taylor-Young. Hampden Dining Commons, Friday, 11/3, 7 and 9:30.

IN COLD BLOOD (1968)

Richard Brooks reverently brought Truman Capote's non-fiction novel about two ex-convicts who murder a Kansas family during the early Sixties. The film is austere, filmed in stark black and white. Brooks is best with the exposition sequences. The murder, the escape to Mexico, and their capture. Things begin to get sticky when Brooks delves into the Freudian interpretation for the murderer's behavior and presents the murder as a vivid flashback. The book's continually objective style has been changed here as to allow the film to come down strong on capital punishment. Extremely well-played; Brooks had a genius stroke when he cast Robert Blake and Scott Wilson as the murderers. The use of these virtually unknown actors lended more credibility to the semi-documentary style. An ambitious and often enthralling film. Student Union Ballroom, Friday, 11/3, 7 and 9:30.

A MAN AND A WOMAN

Pauline Kael has called this French film "a good make-out movie -which is the best thing to be said for it." Claude Lelouch's romantic film about race car drivers and two lovers, played by Anouk Aimee and Jean Louis Trintignant. The lush score is by Maurice Jarre. Gamble Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke College, Saturday, 11-5, 8.

MOROCCO (1933)

This romantic drama stems from the idea that "There is a foreign legion of women, who also choose to hide their wounds behind an incognito." Dietrich appears in top hat, tie, and tails and gives an amazing rendition of "How Much Am I Bid for My Apples." There is little dialogue to speak of. Dietrick could hardly speak English when her director, throughout the Thirties, Joseph Von Sternberg, and she made their American debut with this film. The simple plot is about a cabaret dancer with a doubtful past who comes to Morocco and is wooed by two suitors. Von Sternberg never equalled this film for its adult, deeply ironic handling of romantic material. The two returned to this material in subsequent films, but never with such success or fun. Chaplin said of Von Sternberg: "Yes, he is an artist. ...(Morocco) is his best film." Campus Center Auditorium, Wednesday, 11/8, 7 and 11.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN (1936)

Frank Capra won the Best Director Oscar and the film won the New York Film Critics Award as the Best Picture of 1936. It is the easiest to like of Capra's populist social comedy dramas. Mr. Deeds is a corn-belt poet who leads a simple and happy life devising copy for greeting cards. When he inherits a fortune, he seeks anonimity and runs away to New York. He then begins to give away his fortune and his relatives and new found friends try to make a killing. A female reporter, assigned to cover the story and take Deeds for as much mileage as she can get, thinks he's crazy and ridicules him. Deeds falls for her. The script is memorable for its lack of sentiment and sermonizing. Gary Cooper fits his role perfectly; he's something of an archtype of New Deal liberalism. Jean Arthur is featured, and she's superb in what remains her finest film role. The film remains Capra's best of its mold because of the director's sincerity with Deeds and his story. Amherst Folklore Center, Tuesday, 11/7, 7:30.

NEW AMERICAN CINEMA

George Kuchar, Corruption of the Damned. Starring: Mary Flanagan, as Cora, a girl with a reputation as long as her hair; Gina Zuckerman, as Aunt Anna, too much woman for even a mob to fondle; Mike Kuchar, the vengeful anti hero with hate in his heart, hair on his chin; Steve Packard, as Paul, who made love with his body, made waste with his bowels. "Kuchars films are overtly insane. Anyone who lived in such a world would be mad inside an hour. CORRUPTION may seethe with violence and sex, the two most attractive things you can put on the screen, but beneath them a twisted outlook pervades. Something is very much wrong with the Kuchar world." Leonard Lipton, "Berkeley Barb".

Howard Lester, Airplane Glue, I Love You, (1970) "An absurd comedy about a thirty-year-old ex-professional model airplane builder who by mistake gets put into sixth grade. The film is a documentary of his new life style."

Kenneth Anger, Fireworks, (1967) An exercise in the depiction of the unconscious. A dream of homosexuality that, in the words of Jean Cocteau, "... comes from that beautiful night from which emerges the true works. It touches the quick of the soul and this is very rare." Hampden Dining Commons, Sunday, 11/5, 7:15.

A SEPARATE PEACE

John Knowles classic story of the relationship between two boys at a New England prep school during the Second World War is filled with dialogue lifted from the book and spoken all over the lovely grounds of Philip Exeter Academy. Fine if you enjoy tours. Director Larry Peerce's attempt at naturalism eliminates the story's dramatic value. It unfolds in a series of lyrical scenes which lead nowhere. The non-professional actors do well enough. One of the year's major disappointments. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE

Kurt Vonnegut Jr.'s college classic was obediently transformed by George Roy Hill into a sleek, lifeless, and shallow film which time trips decades with ease, but never approaches the interesting implications about time and space. The story concerns an Army medic which jumps from the bombing of Dresden to Babbitt like life in a Midwestern city to conjugal splendor in a interstellar penthouse. Vonnegut's point, it seems, is life but a random sampling of events and one should emphasize the good and ignore the bad. The film emphasizes the silly sort of satire about Middle America that young people would feel manic toward if it were aimed at them. Here they laugh. Worse is the power of positive believing which is at the center of Vonnegut's argument. The film is admirably edited yet cold in its machine like precision. The acting pivots on the actors ability to deal with the one dimensionality of their individual roles. Ron Leibman is the only one to escape unscathed, the rest jump at being mediocre. Academy of Music, Northampton. Campus Cinemas.

THERE'S A GIRL IN MY SOUP (1970)

This British play charmed Broadway for more than a year, the film didn't do the same for movie audiences. This sex farce concerns a hyperactive television gourmet and his off-screen activities. Peter Sellers and Goldie Hawn. Mahar Auditorium, Friday, 11/3, 8 and 10.

Victorio De Sica's classic The Bicycle Thief, on campus next Monday.

THUNDERBALL (1966)

The followup to Goldfinger; a mess of a Bond film. Gone is the good fun which characterized the earlier, spy stories. This one replaces its tongue-in-cheek humor with a slow motion spear gun underwater ballet and similar exercises in gore. The story slips the mind midway through; it just becomes a series of Bond's conquests, sexual or otherwise. Simply gory and boring. With You Only Live Twice. Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

TO HAVE AND HAVE NOT (1944)

Howard Hawks directed this thoroughly enjoyable entertainment from the Ernest Hemingway book. This film was made on a bet; Hawks asked Hemingway which novel he though! was his worst. Hemingway answered this one. Hawks bet he could make a decent film of this material. He succeeded but may have cheated a bit; the script takes us back before the novel begins. Humphrey Bogart plays a smuggler in the Caribbean who meets Lauren Bacall with her legendary line "Anybody got a match?" Her song was supposedly dubbed by a man. Written in part by William Faulkner. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

UMBERTO D (1952)

De Sica's favorite film and, with The Bicycle Thief, this director's two major contributions to Italian neo-realism. The story is of a retired civil servant who is forced to survive on a meager pension and has only one real friend in his dog. When he sacrifices a bit of his pension for his dog and he cannot pay his rent, is turned out by his landlady. He contemplates suicide. De Sica has said of Umberto's plight: "A young man's decision to kill himself is taken seriously but what does one say of the suicide of an old man already close to death? It's terrible. A society which allows such things is a lost society." The film uncompromising approach to its subject matter made it a limited success when first released, nevertheless one of the best of the late Italian neo-realist films. Room 163, Campus Center, Tuesday, 11/7, 8.

THE VIRGIN AND THE GYPSY (1970)

D. H. Lawrence's last novel adapted with brevity anc imagination. The story is of a minister's daughter who runs from her strict Anglican upbringing into the arms of a wandering gypsy. Nicely acted by Joanna Shimkus as the virgin, Franco Nero as the gypsy, and Maurice Denham as the girls' father. With Elvira Madigan. Campus Cinemas, Hadley.

WHAT'S UP DOC?

Peter Bogdanovich's tribute to the great comedies of the Thirties comes off as technical knock-out. It is funny, but considering the wealth of comic material contained in this ninety minute film, it should have been side-splitting. It still is a good deal of fun, with a seventeen minute chase around the streets of San Francisco and two beautiful comic bits: a harrassment through a hotel lobby and a bewildered judge preparing for night court. Otherwise the film strikes you as oddly vacant. Fun, yes, but not the great screwball comedies of the Thirties. Barbra Striesand again proves herself to be our leading screen comedienne, but Ryan O'Neal shows that his imitation of Cary Grant is puriele at best. One garish comic performance by Madeline Kahn as O'Neal's girlfriend. The music is Cole Porter; Barbra opens the film with "You're The Top" and, midway through in a beautiful 360⁰ pan sings "As Time Goes By." All sorts of cinematic trivia abounds, too bad it wasn't funnier. Jerry Lewis Cinemas, Northampton. Wednesday, Academy of Music, Northampton.

YOU ONLY LIVE TWICE (1967)

Bond is back, supposedly for the last time. Sean Connery was sick of being Bond and had hoped to retire from this part after this film but was forced to return last year when his career began to falter. The film concerns Japanese military espionage and multiple identities. A striking change from Thunderball; here the gore is boring. With Thunderball, Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield.

Dustin Hoffman

Katherine Ross & Anne Bancroft

Star in

Mike Nichol's

The Graduate

Music by Simon & Garfunkel
Winner of 1 Academy Awards

Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9 & 11

in Mahar

Sponsored by the Cinema Club

ROOM FULL OF BLUES
THIS FRIDAY & SATURDAY
AT THE BLUEWALL
FROM 9:00 P.M. TILL 1:00 A.M.

OUT OF THE WOODWORK

Letters To The Editor

Fair Play For Richard M. Nixon

To The Editor:

In a time when it becomes so necessary for one to stand firm with the beliefs of one's candidate, it seems a pity that the editors of the Collegian should commit themselves to the persuasion of the readers by means of the paper's large circulation.

Throughout the past few weeks, I, as a reader, have been stampeded by a menagerie of political rhetoric which has exalted Senator George McGovern to the rank of demigod in the pages of our humble Collegian. I do not feel this is true. I feel that Mr. McGovern is obsessed with apprehensions of becoming President and values this over the needs of our American public. If it were discovered today that all of the country were in love with green cheese, George McGovern would be on national television tonight promising each and every American a piece of the moon.

In the October 31st edition of the Collegian, there was a total of five editorials supporting McGovern. There were none supporting Nixon. If this were a fair representation of the "pro-McGovern - pro-Nixon" ratio, Senator McGovern would be leading in the Presidential race. But it is not, and he is not. Instead, this paper deems it necessary to use their control over editing and print only those articles which favor their opinion and enhance their goal.

I am tired of this slander. I am tired of the one-sidedness of this paper. I am tired of the verbal diarrhea the Collegian so elegantly professes.

It is time that the Collegian untangle the strings of its biased editors and give equal billing for both candidates and their respective political parties. If this can be done, I can cast my vote on November 7th, confident that the belief in my candidate has not been slurred by the partiality of our school's only paper.

Rick Dunlop

Whitlock & Reed

To The Editor:

I too approve of Nat Reed's candidacy for State Representative for the Second Hampshire District but I urge Collegian readers to cast their other vote for Gerry Whitlock; their areas of expertise are nicely complimentary. Whitlock, a Belchertown Selectman, has been active in local government for thirteen years and knows well the problems, available solutions, and financial limitations which the towns face. Property taxes are high and still rising, and the Commonwealth is approaching bankruptcy. No wonder Gerry has worked hard as Selectman and as President of the Massachusetts League of Cities and Towns to strengthen home rule for towns, to gain Federal Revenue Sharing, and that his platform includes welfare reform and regionalization of towns' water supply and waste disposal systems. He favors the open space measures (YES on 1 and 5). The fact that the following town Selectmen in the District have endorsed Whitlock reflects their concern and his proven abilities: Robert Garvey and Michael Sullivan (Amherst); Arthur Moriarty, Parker Ketchen, Andy Sears and William Squires (Belchertown); Robert Carpenter (Granby); John Koloski (Hadley); Walter Oliveira and Roland Stratton (Pelham); George Boudreau, Joseph Long, and Alfred Sebastyanski (South Hadley); and Michael Jastrzebski and Bernard Wilson (Ware); they include eight Democrats and seven Republicans.

Gerry Whitlock recently became a Trustee of Belchertown State School and has also arranged Town - School cooperation; for example in bringing the state's sewer (not the town's plant as Mr. Bay recently charged) up to standard. His press release, printed in yesterday's Amherst Record, expresses his concern for conditivns at the School and his intention of improving them. He gives credit to Dr. Ricci's Friends Association for their tireless efforts, he speaks of the work of the dedicated staff and students and the beginnings of training programs; but that "what we need is a changing of priorities at Belchertown to place the residents first...I shall always ask that people be placed above politics." He became a Trustee in order to work for the residents, but clearly he can do more as a Representative, bringing first-hand knowledge of conditions and fiscal needs to the floor of the House. The School now has its first chance to get its own man in the legislature. I accompanied the candidates when they went on their see-and-learn tour of the School yesterday and was impressed with Whitlock's knowledge of the School, the staff, the residents and the needs. Unlike the other candidates, he is there about twice a week.

Whitlock, naturally, hay been criticized for citing his School affiliation, as if he took the Trusteeship to further his campaign. He's a lot smarter than that, and if he were only trying to advance himself he certainly wouldn't have risked taking on the Trusteeship; we notice that no other candidate has done so.

A vote for Whitlock is a vote for full-time experienced representation and for the State School's man in the Legislature.

Gregory Webb

Rhetoric

To The Editor:

...and entering the house I said "Dinner smells good, Dear, how's little Ricky?" The dinner was good, nothing special, meatloaf and noodles; the conversation was a bit shaky though. All that was on my mind were the inane babbling's from the stuffy-shirted, righteous, know-it-alls, who in their own inimitable fashion, squashed the Student Senate proposition on the almighty Rhetoric question.

The implication that I have to be spoon-fed information, repulses me as much as it ever did in Sunday school, high school, and the Armed Forces. Now it appears that I must be spoon-fed in College as well. I must "broaden my horizons" within the framework of the all-knowing Faculty Senate. Shit.

I really feel sorry for those members of the Fac-Sen who postured themselves with the Students recommendation to eliminate the requirement of a poorly organized, apparently goal-less, ineffective, and insulting Rhetoric program. They must feel ashamed to be associated with the regressive attitudes that their constituents profess. And how about the attempt to throw it back into "committee". That was shades of avoidism like I haven't seen since I was in Sunday school.

This may appear caustic to the reader who does not sit where I sit every day. I must care for and look out for a family. I must insure that they are experiencing the fulfillment of their lives to the best of my abilities. I do not see where the Rhetoric course is structured to assist me in my ultimate goals. Prim and proper grammatical structure and correct spelling (specifically: clarity) is the only requirement that appears valid to me. If I am not clear about where I stand on this issue, then perhaps I have missed the entire thrust of the argument at hand.

I felt that the miscarriage that was promulgated last night is shameful and unforgivable. I pray that the issue is not dead. For the sake of all that is progressive education, let's get rid of this bullshit about "the rounded-out student". I do not fit this category and thousands others do not either.

Richard F. Wright, Jr.

Editorial Points

Letters to the editor this week have been long and political, demonstrating the inverse ratio of content and length.

• • •

In this district, supporters of one candidate for State Rep. are allowed a second vote. Everyone is wooing this extra vote, saying nice things about their own guy, without alienating supporters of the other three candidates. Politics

Vote For Barrus

To The Editor:

I am not surprised that the editors of the Collegian have chosen to endorse John Olver for State Senator. John is a good man, and has been a fine representative for the town of Amherst. But in my opinion, that is his major fault. We are now talking about the Franklin-Hampshire District, a largely rural district whose problems differ greatly from the ones that most students have experienced in the Eastern part of the state. Mr. Olver is a candidate for another part of the state, not the Franklin-Hampshire District. The Collegian evaluates this race in those terms, and unfortunately assumes that because Mr. Olver emulates the traits they admire in liberal Boston candidates, he is the best choice. This is best seen in the editorial column of Steve Anderson, who deals with issues that are not at all pertinent to the problems of this particular district. This is not to say that these issues are not important, but rather they are not really the issues we ought to deal with in evaluating these particular candidates in this rural district.

What are the real issues? As I noted before, this is a rural district, whose main problems concern small towns and farms. The incumbent State Senator, John Barrus, has gained a reputation on Beacon Hill as the watchdog for the forgotten residents of Western Massachusetts. He was raised on a farm, and understands the farmers' problems. The best example of his concern is found in Question #One on the referendum ballot, which would tax business lands at a higher rate than farm lands. In the past few years, as we can all see on Route Nine, farm lands are being abandoned for development, largely because of the tax burden. John Barrus wrote and placed this question on this year's ballot, in the hope that the small farmer would still be allowed to make his living. John Olver has shown very little concern for such problems, and thus would make a poor state senator in this district.

Another issue is home rule. Again, for those of you with a Boston background, this issue seems small. But for the residents of this district it is a matter of paramount importance. Home Rule would enable the residents of each town and city to have the final say on how they want to have their government to function and how their local tax money will be spent. When you look at a small rural town such as Monterey in the Berkshires, home rule is damn important. Monterey gained national fame recently because one farmer refused to give up land to widen a road. His dramatic stand caused the citizens to band together to protect the land from being taken over by the state. This is what home rule is all about. The people closest to the land know what is best for the land. The people in Boston, and unfortunately John Olver, can't understand this at all. For John Barrus, Power to the People is not an empty phrase, but a way of life.

Like many of you, I will be voting for George McGovern. But unlike many of you, I refuse to blindly pull the Demoratic levers in all the races. I am actively working for a Republican, State Senator John Barrus. I sincerely believe that he is the right man for this office, and his loss is the loss of a strong voice for the people of the Franklin-Hampshire District. On November Seventh, I strongly urge you to vote for John Barrus, and to vote "YES" on Questions One and Five!

Mike Kavanagh

Simple Logic

To The Editor:

After years and years of the most barbaric bombings in the history of the universe, Mr. Richard M. Nixon is now presenting himself as the true man for peace. Now, 5 minutes prior to election time!!

Under the circumstances the following evaluation is hardly surprising:

As of November 6, 1972 and nationwide, we find three enormously large groupings in our country.

One: Those who are and remain honest.

Two: Those who are and remain intelligent.

Three: Those who are and remain for Nixon.

Yet these simple facts have also to be considered.

There are those who are honest and for Nixon-then they are not intelligent.

There are those who are intelligent and for Nixon-then they are not honest.

There are those who are honest and intelligent-then they surely are not for Nixon.

John L. Fisher

Nota Bene

It is the policy of this newspaper that there should be allowance for rebuttal on all issues presented on the editorial pages. In keeping with this policy no letters, cartoons, or columns of a partisan nature on issues pertaining to the election will be accepted after 6 P.M. Thursday, November 2. All rebuttals must be received no later than 6 P.M. Sunday, November 5, and no new issues will be allowed to be presented in the context of the rebuttal. Also, in order to avoid any last minute confusion, no issues or rebuttals of a partisan nature pertaining to the election will be printed on these pages on election day.

Editorial Staff Meeting
Sunday At 4 P.M.
All Staffers Should Attend.
Please Come!

Letters To The Editor (Cont'd.)

Slavery

To The Editor:

The "Massuhs" of the Faculty Senate have again shown their true colors in the debate which clouded the issues concerning abolition of the Rhetoric Requirement. The following points were brought up in the debate of the issue:

1) The program is in poor shape--by the admission of the Head of the English Department.

2) The chances of the program working were and are small--from a review of such programs made by a psychology professor.

3) 1500 freshmen a year are currently involved in the program.

4) 25% of the T.A.s involved in the program are new and have never taught before.

5) The Acting Director of the Rhetoric Program does not seem to know who his "boss" is.

6) The training of the T.A.s involved lasts a week.

7) There seems to be some confusion within the Senate as to the goals of the Program.

8) The Senate's own Academic Matters Committee voted to recommend the abolishment of the requirement by 14-0-1. The Senate chose to ignore the recommendation.

In these days when the Faculty are thinking or organizing into unions in order to preserve their academic freedom, it is apparent that what they are really interested in presering is their jobs. And they will go all the way to reinstituting a dead program and thereby denying students their academic freedom by blatant "in loco parentis".

See you down on the plantation.

Marshall T. Spriggs
President, Student Group for Academic Freedom

Recycle Barrus

To The Editor:

We apologize. On Thursday, November 2, we had an eight page insert stuffed into some of the local newspapers to publicize some of Senator Barrus' accomplishments during his past terms in the legislature.

In the last minute production rush we had some confusion. As a result a picture of the Graduate Research Center was mistakenly identified as the new UMass Library. Also, pages 2 and 3 were switched with 6 and 7.

We would like to apologize to the University for this mistake and urge all concerned voters to learn the facts before voting.

Alan Marcus
The Committee to Recycle Senator Barrus

Dogcatcher

To The Editor:

This is written in regard to the need for a dog catcher in the Southwest area. It is indeed true that many of these animals, especially dogs do wander in from Amherst. However, the real problem is the number of dogs and cats abandoned on campus. Where do they come from? They are a product of the irresponsible American public who allow 33 million puppies and kittens to mature when permanent homes exist for only 8 million, leaving a total of 25 million to face abandonment, starvation, and destruction. What is the answer? People must be responsible for their pets and have them neutered to prevent unwanted litters that eventually become the abandoned animals.

There is an organization, Friends of Animals that works to bring about the neutering of animals. Their major function is to give financial aid to those who cannot afford the operation and to educate people to the need for neutering cats and dogs. If you need financial aid or would like some literature get in contact with me at 108 Van Meter South, te. 6-1224. Only by the neutering of dogs and cats can the overpopulation and suffering of these animals be ended.

Annmarie Lapteio

Whitlock Again

To The Editor:

Recently in letters to the Editor, there have been letters of support for the candidacies of Mr. Collins and Mr. Reed. Although I have no desire to detract anything from their candidacies, I feel that as a student at the University and as an interested voter, I must bring the election campaign of Gerry Whitlock to the attention of the students who will be voting in this district.

Gerry has been active in both local and state politics for the last thirteen years. He has worked tirelessly in the fields of home rule and equitable taxation. However, the main reason that I feel Gerry must be our next state representative is the benefits that would be accrued to the Belchertown State School. Gerry is a new Trustee at the State School and two months ago he was appointed as Chairman of the Board of Trustees. He has been active in the fight to block the appointment of a new Superintendent until an adequate search has been made of possible replacements. He managed to get money from one account at the State School (that was being turned back to the State) transferred to another account. This money was subsequently used for the purchase of wheelchairs and kitchen, recreational, school and laboratory equipment. Through his actions the State School Trustees purchased a bus that is used to transport student teachers to and from the school. These are things he has done in his short term of office and there are many more things he can and will do.

When I hear the other candidates promise support for the State School, I think of Gerry and what he has already done. Remember on Tuesday that deeds talk louder than words. Vote for Gerry Whitlock so that he may carry the fight for the Belchertown State School to the Legislature.

Paul Downing

The Place That Made Amherst Famous
DRAKE RESTAURANT
'TIL 2 a.m.
VILLAGE INN
Rathskeller
NEW FIRST FLOOR LOUNGE
40 International Beers
ART ANDREWS, PIANO
DAILY 5-7 p.m.
85 Amity St., Amherst
Tel. 253-2548

First Class Foreign Car Auto Body Work in Amherst
Complete Factory Paint Jobs
Parts Available
Windshields Collision Estimates
All Makes All Models
BART AUTO Paint & Body Specialists
Next to Town House
Rte. 9 Belchertown
256-8712
The best fender de-benders in town!!

CALDOR
(NORTHAMPTON STORE ONLY)
See All Honeywell Pentax Cameras and Accessories Demonstrated and All at Special Low Prices during this demo.

Honeywell Pentax SP II
Honeywell Pentax SP IIa
Honeywell Strobo-Eye

Honeywell Pentax SP 500 Single Lens Reflex Camera
- Shutter speeds to 1/500th second.
- Focal plane shutter.
- Instant return mirror.
- Positive grid focusing.
- Behind the lens exposure metering system.
- 55mm F2.0 Super Takumar lens.
CALDOR PRICED!
Just say, "Charge it!"
149.77

Honeywell 332 Automatic Strobe
Below Our Original Cost!
49.88
Sold in Our Stock at 79.99
Only 10, no rain checks.
180 North King Street
Northampton
SALE:
FRI. and SAT.
Mon. thru Fri. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Sat. 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Smile For The Pretty Birdie, Nessie

BOSTON (AP) - Nessie, the much photographed and still unexplained Loch Ness Monster, has had her picture taken again- and with the usual inconclusive results.

Robert H. Rines, president of the Academy of Applied Science, Wednesday disclosed a series of color and black and white pictures which he says show a part of a large marine creature inhabiting Scotland'sLoch Ness.

Rines says an Academy exposition took the photos late this summer and that the pictures are substantiated by sonar and other scientific data.

The academy, a group of scientists and laymen dedicated to promoting science and technology, presented its findings at the Annual Northeast Electronics Research and Engineering meeting.

Rines displayed a series of photos which show a green-brown triangular object, identified as a fin, moving through murky water. He said international authorities who have seen the pictures varify their authenticity, even though no one will hazard to guess the identity of the creature.

"If we are right, and the experts say we are," Rines said, "then there are extremely long animals living in Loch Ness."

The sound waves of the sonar picked up two creatures moving down an underwater ravine toward the camera, Rines said, and showed them to be 20 to 30 feet long. The camera, set 50 feet under water and 150 feet from the sonar equipment, was set to take strobe-light pictures at 15 second intervals and Rines said the fin moved in and out of view in five frames.

Rines said the pictures are of poor quality because of silty water but photo experts estimate the size of the appendage at about eight to ten feet long and four to six feet across.

While zoologists have yet to identify the object in the pictures, Rines said one report said the fin structure resembled that of the tail of a newt, a small semi-aquatic lizard.

Rines said he hoped the new data would stimulate the scientific community to make extensive, serious study of Loch Ness. He said more government or private aid was needed to bring together more sophisticated ideas and equipment to identify the fresh-water inhabitants of Loch Ness.

Campus Carousel

NURSES ON WHEELS LEARN EMPATHY...that's the headline on a story in the Brigham Young U. Daily Universe. Seems that the College of Nursing there requires each student nurse to spend half a day in a wheelchair with a classmate nearby to help in case of accident or danger.

Regardless of how difficult or awkward, the student must open doors, attend classes, get lunch in the cafeteria, move around in the small space of restrooms, negotiate ramps into buildings and use the elevators.

The experience is designed to help the student nurses to realize the altered self-image which accompanies the handicapped. The students must then submit reports on their experiences, relating the emotions they encountered as well as insights into the practical aspects of wheelchair manipulation.

• • •

ADD GRAFFITI. The Oklahoma Daily shares this bit of poetry by a phantom poet: "College in your toes/College up your nose/College from the time you're born/until you overdose."

• • •

"IN THE SHORTS..." is the title of a new column by Tom Arceneaux (wow), which made its debut in the LSU Daily Reveille, this Fall.

He explains "my purpose is to point out areas in which I feel LSU students are "taking it in the shorts."

The first column had to do with bicycles on the campus. Apparently, there are 6,000 of them there!

• • •

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY'S GRADUATE SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT will have
K. M. HENDERSON
Associate Dean
on campus at the Placement Office
on
FRIDAY, NOV. 10
to speak to students (men and women) interested in programs of study leading to management careers in Business Administration, Hospital and Health Service Administration, Public Management or Education Administration.

a Reception to be held in honor of Governor Francis Sargent
and
Nathaniel Reed
Candidate for State Representative from the Second Hampshire District.
at the Garden Room, Lord Jeffrey Inn
Saturday, November 4, from 4:30-6:30
Public Invited
Park at Amherst Green

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT
We Need A Responsible Man

DEMOCRAT
BILL O'CONNOR
COUNTY TREASURER
is
EXPERIENCED, MOTIVATED, QUALIFIED AND RESPONSIBLE
* Assistant Register of Deeds for 8 Years
* Northampton Planning Board for 8 Years
* Former Chairman of Hampshire County Democratic Committee
* Former Chairman of Northampton Democratic City Committee
Brian Texara, Senior
Jane O'Connor, Senior
Roberta Larvonis, Freshman
Eleanor Feldman, Senior
Carl Green, Junior
Michael Wall, Junior
Joe Paone, Senior
Daryl Foster, Junior
Julie Gotlet, Sophomore
Mike Tolavaisa Jr.
Jim O'Connors, Freshman
Bill Maloney, Senior
June M. O'Connor
34 Forbes Ave.
Northampton

Going out for lunch today?
Try the best in town.
LUNCH MENU

BULLBURGER, 1/2 lb.	$1.40
WITH MELTED CHEESE	1.50
ROAST BEEF	1.50
OPEN SIRLOIN, 6 oz.	2.50
OPEN SIRLOIN, 12 oz.	4.50
SKEWERED SHRIMP	3.75
HAM STEAK	1.50
PORK CHOPS	2.75

DAILY SPECIAL . . . $1.95
Milk — Coffee — Tea — Sanka 20c
DESSERT MENU
French Cheese Cake 65c
Chocolate Bavarian Pie

JOLLY BULL
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 584-2769
Luncheons served 11:30-2:30
Monday through Friday
OYSTER BAR

FROG'S LEGS	$2.25
FRIED CLAMS	1.50
FRIED SCALLOPS	1.95
FLOUNDER STUFFED WITH CRABMEAT	1.95
FILLET OF SOLE	1.50
FANTAIL SHRIMP	1.95
FRIED LOBSTER TAIL	2.95
SOFT SHELL CRAB	2.40
FRIED HADDOCK	1.50
BROOK TROUT	2.50
FRIED OYSTERS	1.95

* Above served with French Fries and our new Oyster Bar Dressing

CLAM CHOWDER	Cup .30	Bowl .50
OYSTERS AND CHERRYSTONES		1.50
SHRIMP COCKTAIL		1.50
Coffee — Milk — Tea		.20

THIS MENU IS SERVED IN THE OYSTER BAR ONLY

Christian Scientist Speaks Here Monday

What is the basis of a really productive life-style?

Insights on this question will be explored by Charles W. Ferris, C.S.B., in a talk Monday.

A Christian Science lecturer and teacher from Minneapolis, Mr. Ferris will show how "moment-by-moment decisions determine what your life pattern will be."

His talk, sponsored by the Christian Science College Organization, will be given in rooms 162-175 of the Campus Center at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public. A question-and-answer session will follow the talk.

A native of New Jersey,he graduated from the University of Chicago. He entered the healing ministry of Christian Science in 1953 and eight years later became a Christian Science teacher.

Textbook Returns Start In Week

By Friday, November 10, the Textbook Annex will begin its fall semester returns of unsold textbooks to the publishers. As such, we can no longer guarantee that your text will be on our shelves.

If you have a particular book that for some reason you have avoided purchasing, and it is required reading, we recommend that you purchase it now to be assured of its availability.

Remember, we will remain open throughout most of the semester, weekdays from 8:30 to 4:30.

Due to our returns, though, many texts will not be on our shelves after November 10.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTERROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)
GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)
5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, SPORTS AND WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH—"We're Not Coming Back" (18)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST—"Night of the Wolf" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
WORLD PRESS (24)
MOVIE—"Elephant Boy" (27)
OUR STREET (57)
7:00 DR. KILDARE—"The Deaf Heart" (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES—Bob Barker, host (8)
DICK VAN DYKE—"The Man From Emperor" (18)
NEWS (22) (30)
BOBOQUIVARI (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
STATE HOUSE CANDIDATES (57)
7:30 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
LASSIE—"Golden Eagle" (8)
CHARLES BLAIR'S BETTER WORLD (18)
LET'S MAKE A DEAL (22)
WALL STREET WEEK (24)
HOLLYWOOD SQUARES (30)
NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR—"The Masculine Feminine" (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 SONNY AND CHER—Guests: Lorne Green, the Williams Brothers (3)
BRADY BUNCH—"The Show Must Go On?" (8) (40)
SKI SCENE (18)
SANFORD AND SON—"Have Gun, Will Sell" (22) (30)
WASHINGTON WEEK IN REVIEW (24) (57)
8:30 PARTRIDGE FAMILY—"A Likely Candidate" (8) (40)
SPORTS CHALLENGE (18)
THE LITTLE PEOPLE—"And Then I Wrote" (22) (30)
MANY MOODS OF THE BLACK EXPERIENCE (24)
LAUREL AND HARDY (27)
WALL STREET WEEK (57)
9:00 MOVIE—"The Dirty Dozen", Part 2 (3)
ROOM 222 (8) (40)
GHOST STORY—"Half a Death" (22) (30)
GOMER PYLE (27)
COURSE OF OUR TIMES (57)
9:30 ODD COUPLE—"Felix's First Commercial" (8) (40)
STONINGTON: THE DRAGGERED MAN'S DEAL (24)
TWILIGHT ZONE (27)
WORLD PRESS (57)
10:00 LOVE AMERICAN STYLE (8) (40)
BANYON—"Dead End" (22) (30)
STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
NEWS (27) (57)
10:30 PAID POLITICAL BROADCAST FOR McGOVERN (3)
THRILLER—"The Purple Room" (27)
MASTERPIECE THEATRE (57)
10:35 NEWS (24)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS WEATHER (3) (8) (18) (22) (30) (40)
11:30 MOVIE—"High Wind in Jamaica" (3)
DICK CAVETT (8) (40)
JOHNNY CARSON (22) (30)
NEWS (57)
12:00 SECRET AGENT—"Outcasts" (27)
1:00 NEWS (8) (22) (27) (30) (40)
1:30 MOVIE—"Valley of the Gwangi" (3)
3:30 NEWS (3)

Court To Hear Election Suit

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - A request for an injunction to comple the Cambridge Election Commission to register four out-of-state college students living in Cambridge and allow them to vote in Tuesday's election will be heard by Middlesex Superior Court today.

Judge George P. Ponte of the Superior Court denied the injunction request yesterday but assigned the case to be heard on its merits today.

The Civil Liberties Union brought the petition on behalf of the students. The petition charges that the commission denied the students their right to vote as guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions.

It says the commission established registration procedures which were not uniformly applied to all potential voters.

Denial of the students' rights to vote would cause "permanent and irreparable damage," attorney Matthew Feinberg told Ponte Thursday.

ERIC'S
GIANT
SUBS
(formerly Gourmet Shop)
featuring
"Meal Size Subs"
Rte. 9, Amherst
253-9521

CALDOR
(NORTHAMPTON STORE ONLY)
Proudly Invites You To A
PENTAX System
FACTORY DEMO
FRIDAY, NOV. 3, 11 A.M. to 9 P.M.
SATURDAY, NOV. 4, 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.
Caldor has made arrangements with a leading New York Camera Dealer to accept your old camera equipment in trade on new purchases of camera equipment, during this event only. TRADE UP NOW!
ONE SHOT TRADE IN Direct from Photokina '72 (The World Photo Trade Show)
Introducing the NEW
Honeywell Pentax ES
The most exciting new camera since the SLR was invented!

Full automation is here with complete user overrides and control in this fantastic camera.
Check these sensational features:
• Computer controlled electronic shutter automatically selects precisely the correct speed between 1/1000 and 8 seconds. If the subject requires 4-1/73, 1/555 or even 1/888 seconds, that's what the camera gives — automatically! The photographer has control of his depth of field (as he should).
• The full Pentax system of lenses and accessories may be used with auto exposure control making the ES the most versatile automatic 35mm SLR on the market. Special lenses are not required.
Super multi-coated lenses of superb optical quality.
• A second mechanical shutter 1/60 through 1/1000 second eliminates possibility of battery going dead in middle of important assignment.
And more, more, more! Come check it out!
180 North King Street
Northampton
SALE:
FRI. and SAT.
Mon. thru Fri. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Sat. 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

MORE THAN ONCE UPON A TIME

ONCE A DRAGON DID OFFER – FOR THE COSTE OF TWO 6-PACKS OF SCHAEFER BEERE-TO TEACH A KNIGHT THE ART OF THE DANCE,
AND THE KNIGHT DID ACCEPT THE CHANCE TO IMPROVE HIS SKILLS.
THUS HE ENTERED THE COURSE AND PROCEDETH TO DANCE
AND ONCE AGAIN THE DRAGON DANCETH THE KNIGHT AWAY...
WHEN YOU'RE HAVING MORE THAN ONE
Schaefer
Schaefer Breweries, New York and Albany, N.Y., Baltimore, Md., Lehigh Valley, Pa.

Orchard Hill Class Presents Jazz Workshop

The Orchard Hill "Delinquency and Society" class, taught by Orchard Hill Area Director James West, is proud to announce a concert with the famous 20-piece Jazz Workshop of Syracuse University tonight at 9 in the East Wing of Worcester Dining Commons. The concert will be a benefit for the Westfield Detention Center, the M.A.R.Y. program and the Third World Pre-School and the School of Truth.

The program will consist of contemporary big band arrangements of works by artists such as John Coltrans, Dizzy Gillespie, Lee Morgan, and Freddie Hubbard. The Syracuse University Jazz Workshop is nationally known and they tour the country annually, performing benefit concerts. The band consists entirely of Syracuse students.

The music will be continuous from 9 and a donation of fifty cents is being asked. It should prove to be an evening of exciting and entertaining music with all proceeds going to organizations established by UMass students and staff to help the surrounding communities.

BDIC Moves

BDIC, with its growing enrollment and staff has found the need for more space. Effective Monday, Bachelor's Degree in Individual Concentration will be located in Blaisdell House

Korean Arts Troupe Performing Today

Ah Ahk, the visiting Korean performing arts troupe, will hold an open rehearsal/demonstration today, 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The Ah Ahk Troupe will perform its full program this evening at 8 in Bowker Auditorium, giving an opportunity to those unacquainted with the culture of Korea to witness a performance of music and dance by one of the world's oldest nations.

The visit of Ah Ahk to the campus is part of the Fine Arts Council's Third World Cultural Series which is presented in conjunction with the Third World Alliance and the Department of Asian Studies.

The open rehearsal/demonstration is open without charge and tickets to the evening performance will be available thru the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall until 4 P.M.

At 7 the box office at Bowker Auditorium will handle remaining tickets.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1968 Dodge Dart "Swinger" — standard, two-door, excellent condition, AM/FM radio, $1100. Call 316-6687 after 6 p.m. tf11-3

1966 MG Midget, give-away, $200.00. 4 nearly new Michelin X radials. Call 546-5601, ask for Russ. 11-3

1967 BMW 1dr. Sedan nw exhaust syst revalve job nw radials $1500 or best off. Call 773-9608 8 a.m.-5 p.m. tf11-3

63 Jag XKE, 2 tops, new tires, new valves and guides, $800 or best offer. 665-2673. tf11-3

68 Cougar, AT, PS, fact. air, low mi., excel. cond., 549-6718. tf11-3

For Sale — 1963 Chevy Belair, ex. cond., mech. good body, fine deal, runs great, owner needs scratch, $175. VW auto., new tires, Call 549-6316. 11-3

1972 Super Beetle VW, sunroof, FM stereo tape deck & tapes, 100% warranty, exc. cond. Must sell before Jan. 1. Call Greg 253-7362. tf11-3

MUSTAT '67, fine cond., needs minor eng. work, looked after like a baby. Have to sell, $600. Call 527-0936 evenings, keep trying. 11-3

1971 Camaro, 3 spd. std. Excellent condition, many options. $2,250 or best offer. Call Artie, 6-7188. tf11-3

1961 Chevy Coupe, good running condition, call 1-467-8962. tf11-3

1966 Tempest, rblt 326 eng., 3 sped Hurst, M/MS, stereo, $650.00. Call Steve 6-6281. tf11-3

1 WD - Jeep — Wagoneer, new eng., clutch, trans., springs, tires, stick, ps-pb, more. $1250. Firm, call Jerry 549-1122 eves. tf11-3

Chevy Impala 65, 1 bbl 283, 3 speed Hurst 200, needs new tires, fall sticker. Call 549-3706 and leave name and number. tf11-7

1970 VW Bus, exc. cond., sun roof, new eng. & clutch, 5 exc. tires, 1967 Honda 160 street bike, best offer. 545-6268, days, or 665-4160 eve. tf11-6

69 Triumph GT-6, after 6, 323-6541 or 788-7819 days. tf11-7

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cupboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550. 546-6555. tf11-7

67 Ford, 6 new tires, no inspection sticker, Ndt ball joints, otherwise good condition. Paul 253-7136. tf11-3

68 Oldsmobile 442 gray/blue, 4 spd., posi., mags, excellent engine, new clutch, very good body, sell or trade for 68-70 van, $1250. Eric 545-2304. tf11-6

66 Chevy. Biscayne, excellent running condition, good body. Asking $525. Call Peter Zandan, 307 Greene, 545-2638 dorm phone. tf11-3

67 Volks Sedan, low miles, extant cond., must sell. $785 549-6516 eves. tf11-3

1971 Honda car, excellent cond. 40 mi. per gal. $1,100, call 546-6827. tf11-8

1970 VW, excellent condition, snow tires included, $1250, call Ed at 367-9375 or 665-1931. tf11-7

'60 VW '63 engine - snow tires - good funky car - needs battery and muffler, $100 - 665-1931. tf11-7

TO SUBLET

1 bdrm apt, starting Dec. 1, at Cliffside option to renew, call 665-4246 anytime, if no answer wait until evening. tf11-3

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with less than 5,000 miles and still on and Semperet steel belted radials, all with less than 5,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2030, after 5. tf11-6

68 Cougar, V-8 auto. ex. cond., new radials, valve job, many extras, call Ray 256-6017. tf11-6

1960 Chevy. Belair, in good condition only $100. Also 1963 Volkswagon bus, needs some body work, call 665-3217. tf11-9

Exc. all-around trans. 1968 Chevy van tape deck, sink, ice box, stove, snows, automatic, barnboards. Must see, hear, feel. Chris Kath, 545-2419. tf11-6

Honest AI, 65 Buick special, wagon PS, PB auto V8, good front end, and brakes, needs muffler and tune up, $85. 1-628-3294. tf11-8

MISCELLANEOUS

Make the fat cat pay his fair share. With a graduated income tax. Vote YES on question 6. tf11-6

Anyone interested in working for John Miller, on election day, please attend an informal reception. Van Meter No. Fri. 7:30 p.m. tf11-3

TRAVEL

Crimson Travel offers, low cost, Spring vacation trips to Bermuda and Morocco. For more info., Call Rich Margil 317 Dwight 545-0790. tf11-3

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished room in private home. Women preferred. Call 584-8712. tf11-3

Room for rent $65/mo. furn., refrig., sm. oven. Come to 130 No. Pleasant St., or call, 253-9968. Ask for John. Behind Faces of Earth. tf11-3

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 Skate St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3081. tf12-12

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4136. tf11-17

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1146. tf11-9

Passport photos, fast fast service, 1 and 2 photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-9867. Located in center of town near Wearhouse. tf11-6

Do you need a haircut? Experienced person will do shags, trims, layers ... Call for appt. Ask for Jill 6-7995. tf11-3

ROOMMATE WANTED

F. roommate wanted for house in country, own room, $58, $50/mo. utils. Car necessary. Call Patricia, 586-2942, or 545-0253. tf11-3

Room available center of Amherst. Immediately or 2nd semester. Possibly two rooms. Call 253-5257 after 5. Linda, Mona. tf11-3

All factors negotiable. Call Brian at 549-6011, leave message. tf11-3

Won't discriminate M. or F. roommate wanted, own room, open minded ungrad. pretty clean $85/mo. $100 dep. 315 Puffton 549-8057, Frank. tf11-8

Female roommate wanted, for house in Northampton. Own room, $50/mo & utls. Car necessary. Call Patricia 586-2942 or 545-0065. tf11-7

APT. FOR RENT

$50 cash to people who will rent my 2-bedroom apt., all appliances, immediate occupancy, $190.00 inclusive. 665-4721. tf11-3

Sunderland, new 2 bdrm. incl. util., dw, a/c, disposl, pool, lease to Aug. 31, or less w/r to sublet, $200 Skibiski 253-7222 or 3626 eve. tf11-9

FREE

Kittens 8 wks old, black & multi. 549-6079. tf11-6

LOST

Lost! Fri. 27th red leather key case w/ VW keys. Call Kathy or Nancy at 545-6724, 545-6725, Rm. 408. Emergency. No spare keys. Please!! tf11-3

Lost, gold rimmed eyeglasses, reward, call Russ, 253-5677. Lost in vicinity of G. Washington. tf11-8

ENTERTAINMENT

Dustin Hoffman, Katherine Ross, and Anne Bancroft star in Mike Nichols, "The Graduate", Sat., Nov. 4 at 7, 9, & 11 in Mahar. tf11-3

Jim Kweskin returns! Sunday at 7:30 & 10:00 at the Folklore Center tickets can be bought in advance or at the door. Info 253-9261. tf11-3

Robbie Basho in concert this Friday & Saturday at 8:00 p.m. at The Folklore Center, 16 Spring St., 253-9261. Robbie is on Takoma Rec. tf11-3

Mr. Immense presents "In Cold Blood" this Friday nite in the S.U. Ballroom, at 7 & 9:30. A real chiller! tf11-3

There'll be a Room Full of Blues" at the Bluewall. Friday & Saturday night from 9 p.m. till 1 a.m. tf11-3

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1968 Norton Commando, 8000 mile, excellent condition, $800.00. Call 256-8687 p.m. tf11-3

1972 Norton 750 Roadster with full fairing, 1100 mil, $1600. Call 253-3921. tf11-7

70 Bultaco 250 Matador wood. Paid $500 added $400 parts; low mileage on rebuilt engine runs very dependable. Asking $150-367-2762. tf11-3

1972 Bultaco Alpina, 250 cc, 5 speed, street legal, $150 miles, new cond., $750, or best offer. Call John 546-7040. tf11-3

HELP WANTED

Anyone interested in working for John Miller, Election Day, please attend informal reception. Van Meter, No. Rec. Room, Fri. 7:30 p.m. tf11-12

Friendly Ice Cream, King St., NHamp, hav openings part/full time days/evenings. Weekend availibility/own car required. Call 584-0555. tf11-8

Students needed. Hours & wages neg. Apply in person Hadley Pizza & Sub, next to McDonalds in Northampton. tf11-8

Wanted R.N. or L.P.N. one nurse 2 days a week, 7-3 shift, and one nurse 2 days, 3-11 shift. Cozy Corner Nursing Home, Sunderland. 665-2740. tf 11-13

HOMES FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $13,000. Call 253-3531 after 5 p.m.

WANTED

Engine wanted for 1949 MGB, pref. a used one in good running cond. Please call Bill at 546-7740. tf11-3

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Wanted: 2 bedrm. appt., to lease or sublease Jan - June, within 10-12 mi from campus, call Dick or Joe 546-6287 or Ted 546-6279. tf11-9

Couch for bachelor decor, good cond. please, donations or $. Call 549-6411, 5-6 p.m. tf11-3

FOR SALE

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cuhbards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window, $550, 546-1555. 11-3

Ski equip. - 2 pr. Head metal, (210-215 cm) skis, 1 pr. Northland Wood (210 cm), Moltor boots, size 11. All fine cond. Call Bob 367-2340. tf11-7

CD great coat. Good, heavy wool. In new condition. Honest! Men's size 40, women's size 9-11, $20 or best offer. Call Ronna 549-6063. tf11-7

New Mcanastan coat. 5'6" - 5'8". Originally $85, now 1/2 price, $12.50. Contact Ned at 615 Field or 546-6851. tf11-3

Repainted Larleton frame. New derailleurs, cables, levers. Completely overhauled & greased. $65. See Andrew, SWF Campaign Table at Hatch. tf11-3

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1706. tf-nem.

Pair of VW rims, coffee table and tool kit for cars. All good condition and reasonable. Call eves 253-7533. tf11-3

1970 Rosemount ski boots, excellent condition, fastback model, size 10 w, asking only $90.00. Call Bill @ 367-9586. tf11-6

Try these Shaklee products, new concept, toothpaste, proteinized shampoo, basic 1, - laundry granules, 100% biodegradable. Carol, 253-2841. tf11-6

3 Books, 4-sale "None Dare Call it Conspiracy" explains the Communist plot to take full control of U.S. "Nixon" it tells the truth of our president — "Teddy Bare" explains the Chappaquiddick case — these are priced $1.00, $2.00, $2.00 inorded for more information write to: G. Gawron, 1 Burn St., Chicopee, Mass., 01020. tf11-3

2 475 x 14" snow tire Radial, used 1 winter, $50. Call 665-4719, keep trying. tf11-3

Guitar, 12 string Yamaha, FG-180, with extra set of strings $100. Call 665-4220. tf11-3

Hitachi car stereo cassette player, only 1 yr old, in like new cond., complete with lock mount, only $15. Call anytime 665-2949. tf11-3

Realistic 4 and 8 track tape player, complete with two speakers, looks like new, only $40. Call 665-2949. tf11-3

1974 Fender reverb amp, good for guitar and harp and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system, Call Charlie 584-6279. tf11-7

Metal skis, 205 CM, Wnoomon 40 bndgs, Henke buckle ski boots, 9½, plus boot case & tree, $100, Will sell sep. Call George at 665-1140. tf11-3

Book: "Modern Portuguese" for Portugese 126. Excellent condition. Free Port. & Eng. dictionary. Al Cook, 404 MacKemmie, 546-8816. tf11-7

1966 Chevy Impala, great condition, 4 new tires, low mileage, 283, auto., stereo tape deck, $800, Call Jeff 6-8013. tf11-3

1966 Ford Mustang, perfect running order, 6 cyl., auto., very economical, good interior, $365. Call Steve 6-8018. tf11-3

Snow tires, G78-14, w/w Sears Dynaglas, only 1500 miles of use, call 549-1617. tf11-3

AKAI Tape deck, Model X150-D, complete overhaul, like new, $400. Call 549-6425, ask for Kent. tf11-3

Fur coat for sale almost new, knee length, size 8-10, $75 call, 367-2036. tf11-3

Revox A-77 Mark II reel-to-reel tape deck, $400. Call 253-3012 days, 253-3351 evenings. tf11-6

A rare pre- 1971 Columbia, mens 10 spd racer-Suntour, GT Derailleur & much more — ask $75, also Rubco Wetsuit & Acc., call Coll. 593-6315. tf11-3

Kodak Ektacolor, professional film-type SASA 100, CPS 135-36 $2.39 per roll, call Tim, 301 Greenough 5-2612. tf11-6

Special new tenor recorders, $18, also excellent sopranos, altos at Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Greenfield, 774-2831. tf12-1

New accoustic guit. from $21. Special 50% off list on new shipment of classical guitars. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Grnfld. tf12-1

8-track recorder 1 yr old, excellent cond. 2 free tapes, call after 6 p.m., 584-5340. tf11-3

Magnatone guitar amp. 100 watts, 4 10" spkrs, 4 channels, rev tremelo on wheels, 1 yr old, list 175-225 or haggle. Eric 545-2304. tf11-6

Going out of life sale, must sell all possessions, record, leatherwear, 1967 Fiat Squareback. Ask for Hudson Bay No. Hampton 586-2578. tf11-6

New Univox guitar & bass amps 20% off list, from $100, Creative Endeavor, 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831. tf12-1

FOR RENT

Room for rent in Conway, Mass., country house, all privileges, call Kathy, 369-4111, 7 - 9 p.m. tf11-3

4 Bedrooms and 2 baths in Northampton. Now vacant. Call 584-3428 Skibiski, Realtors between 6:30 - 7:00 p.m. tf11-6

Ski people, bedrooms avail. in warm house near Mt. Snow, Vt. For Season, Fire place, etc. $300., covers all. Call 549-6426 Scott. tf11-7

Farmhouse to rent, 65 acres, 5 rms, washer - dryer, util., furnished or unfur. S. Chesterfield Rd., Goshen, Call 268-7183 Nites 5-7. tf 11-7

Lg. rm. in farmhouse apt. $80/mo. for 1 person, $100/mo. for 2, all utilities, kitch. priv. loc. S. Deerfield, Off rt. 116, call 546-6366. tf 11-7

PERSONAL

Helloooo!! 2-fingered typists masters typing, drivers fast! 21 hr campus service. Call 5-10 p.m. — 7 days a week. 665-1036. tf11-3

Sensuous cycles. Motorcycle repairs & service-low rates, winter storage special 9 a.m.-3 p.m. M-F, S. till noon. 256-6272 17 S. Prospect — Amh. tf11-3

Rural Gay Commune near Amherst wants 12 Beautiful Freak people, Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf11-11

Happy 19th, to the world's craziest lady and least normal person. Love, Cutie, Clo. and Hub-a-dub. tf 11-3

Gay womens party Sat. 8:00 p.m. S.W. Womens Center Mackimmie Fac. Lounge. Bring records and own refreshments all women welcome. tf 11-3

Attention! Flash! Bulletin! Greetings Conrad B. May my little song remain forever deep in your heart. "IT" P.S. I am not weird. tf 11-3

Big Mouth is coming to the coffeeshop Monday. tf 11-3

Thanks coaches for "Bearing" with us — The Koalas. tf 11-3

John — one down, eternity to go. SR tf 11-3

Lela, unbirthdays are better - time - prelove - skiing - cold - wet nose - love - future - happiness - making love - in tune - say ha - piss - plaah. tf 11-3

Dear Gretchen: I'd like to park my boots under your bed — Rhett (PA) Butler. tf 11-3

To Karen in 206 Patterson: from Frank in Macknamara. Who are you? Call 546-1457. tf 11-3

Chimney sweep from elevator land — do you really jump from towers with a magic umbrella? Death. tf 11-6

Karma, couldn't have done it without you! The PLANTING was great! Did you know that was my first time? Kara tf 11-3

EMPLOYMENT

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2040-MB, Port Angeles, Washington. tf11-22

APARTMENT WANTED

Seeking 3 bedroom apt. Jan. 1 Puffton, call 253-3921 between 5 & 7. tf11-7

Notices

AMATEUR RADIO
Interested in Ham radio? UMass amateur radio assn. invites inquires contact Frank Smith at 6-4776 or Bill at 6-1024.

BABYSITTING SERVICE:
Need a babysitter? Once again, Gorman House Babysitting Service is here to help. Both male and female sitters available. For further info call Bev, 546-645B.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS:
Bus to Belchertown will leave from Whitmore at 12:45 on Sat. Nov. 4. Returns to UMass by 4:00. Everyone is welcome, see you there.

CHRISTIAN COLLEGE GROUP:
First Baptist Church (opp. Newman Center) Sun. service, followed by College group luncheon and discussion; starting 10:45 am. New faces and jdeas most welcome.

COLLEGE CHURCH BUS:
8:48 Newman Center, 8:50 Waifing Station, 8:51 Hamlin House, 8:56 U. Dr. by Emerson, 9:15 College Church, 9:30 Sunday School.

FREE:
Like to have your group's purpose publicized via Video tape? Contact WTOY, Rm. 415, S.U. Open meeting Tues. night. Watch notices for time and place.

HEYMAKERS:
Monthly open square dance tomorrow at 8:00 at Farley Lodge. All club level dancers welcome.

INDIA NITE:
India Assoc. of UMass presents a variety entertainment evening with dances, music, folklore, skits and snacks. CCA Sat. Nov. 4, 7:00 pm.

JOBS OPEN:
Interested in part-time employment? Contact Veterans Affairs office, Rm. 239 D Whitmore.

KOREAN KARATE:
Meetings for Tae Kwon Do will be held in WOPE Mon. 8-10 pm and in the Commonwealth Rm. S.U. Thurs. 8-10 Call Lee, 52418.

NES TUTORING:
Many tutors needed, especially in Math to work with children ages 6-14 in Springfield. Busses leave from circle beside CC garage at 2:30 Mon. Thurs. Call 50575 for more info.

OUTING CLUB:
The Mt. Toby overnight will leave from the front of the S.U. at 6:30 pm. tonight, check board for future trips.

SIMS:
Meditators' advanced weekly meeting this Sun. at 35 Butterfield Terrace - 8 pm.

UNDERGRAD PHIL. SPEAKERS PROGRAM:
Meeting to form an Undergrad Philosophy Speakers Program on Mon. Nov. 6 at 2:30 in Rm 811-815 CC. All interested people are encouraged to attend.

LOST:
Will whoever picked up my wallet in the CC music Rm. please call or take it to Lost and Found? Keep the money but I really need the papers. Jim, 546-8850.

Blue ski parka on Wed. during an economics lecture in Thompson 104. If you took it by mistake, please call Geoff 6-9586.

Lost or taken by mistake a thin Folklore notebook (spiral). Bring it to Lost & Found or 210 Dwight don't throw it away.

Black and brown, Lab Shepard, lost near Northampton Ctr. last Fri; 16 mo., 75 lbs., Brookline dog tags, answers to YOJimbo. Call Jean, 586-3755.

1 gold twisted loop earring, call Barbara after Sun. 6-5258.

One pair of brown veined glasses in brown case; name on inside. Please call Steve, 546-4557.

FOUND:
Yellow "Morris" type male cat has been hanging around G-5 No. Village Area. If he's yours, call 549-1409 evenings.

Wandering about Coolidge Lower last Tues. One short haired kitten about eight weeks old. Colors are tan and white with brown eyes. Box trained. 546-8076 after 6.

Black and white male kitten, in the Sylvan Area. Call 546-4090 or come to 604 Cashin.

PINNING:
Diane Vatcher, 74, PI Beta Phi, to Skip Kelley, 73 Phi Sigma Delta.

ENGAGEMENTS:
Becky Woodward, 73, NEDH School of Nursing to Charlie Peters, 73, SAE.

Cherie Chase, 74 Pi Beta Phi, to Doug MacLeod, 74, SB UNH.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Libra natives seem constantly to seek justice. These persons believe in balance, law and strive for harmony. The Libra individual mediates, attempts to equalize and to see to it that no one gets pushed or persecuted. Libra is sensitive, subject to hypertension and is also affectionate and often strikingly attractive. Libra often marries on impulse, is generally loyal but emotions are not always completely under control. Libra harmonizes with Leo, Sagittarius, Gemini and Aquarius. Libra is drawn to Aries, must exercise caution in dealing with Capricorn and Cancer.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on partnership, marriage, the way you present ideas to public. Permit others to express themselves. Your role now should be that of keen observer. Direct action would be premature. Ask and learn.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practical issues dominate. Work procedures are emphasized. You will have more responsibility. Rewards also will be greater. Key now is to find what it is you are seeking. Older individual will offer benefit of experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with change, emotional response, intensified relationships. Creativity surges to fore. There is opportunity for greater self-expression. Aries is in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New element could enter domestic area. You build for security by taking chance on your own abilities. Not wise now to follow crowd. Imprint your style. Individuality becomes your ally. Act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family member may have errands which are time consuming. Maintainse sense of humor. Bickering will accomplish nothing. Hunch could pay dividends. Accent is on movement, short trips, special activity connected with relatives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Be more aware of budget, bank account, earning capacity. Study alternatives. You are not stuck with one method, procedure. Be flexible and versatile. Potential is greater than you might imagine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lunar cycle coincides with time when you can successfully take initiative. Stress independence of thought, action. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Personality shines. You are called on to make special appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis is on illusion, situation that is not quite out in open. Be discreet. Perceive meanings that may be obscured by semantics. If you don't know, ask. Answers are obtainable if you are dedicated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent is on social activity which leads to profitable situation. Family member can aid. Proper setting, atmosphere could bring about important reunion. Low-key approach should be advocated. Win rather than force your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Career, ambitions, general standing in community these are emphasized. Check with one in authority. Don't be sidetracked by one who is enamored with red tape. Go directly to source.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Decision concerning future seems imperative. Key is to take long-range view. Avoid rushing. Be aware of security. Your own philosophy is important. Know it and develop yourself as a whole person. Message will become increasingly clear.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is an alternative. Know it and don't succumb to feeling of defeat. Finish project. Reach new understanding with one close to you. Money problem need not represent dilemma. Key now is cooperation.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine sense of humor. You also exhibit tendency to scatter your efforts. You have natural ability to entertain. You intrigue with what appears to be an offhand manner. In actuality, you usually know where you want to go even if you don't always choose direct route. Two months ago an adjustment in home area probably occurred.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Swift
6 Vapor
11 Distant
12 Motherly
14 Near
15 Agile
17 Whale
18 Make lace
20 Remains at ease
23 The urial
24 Ireland
26 Showers
28 Teutonic deity
29 Trap
31 Harvesters
33 Angers
35 Face of watch
36 Sharp replies
39 Flowering bush
42 Conjunction
43 Lasso
45 Roman tyrant
46 Possessive pronoun
48 Wipe out
50 Pinch
51 Arab sailing vessel
53 Encircle
55 Saint (abbr.)
56 Continued story
59 Impels
61 Proportion
62 City in Germany

DOWN
1 Keep
2 Part of "to be"
3 Seed container
4 Roman road
5 Put off
6 Symbol for samarium
7 Symbol for tantalum
8 And so forth (abbr.)
9 War god
10 Parent
11 Evaluates
13 Approaches
16 Former Russian ruler
19 Characteristic
21 Bound
22 Gastropod mollusk
25 Mistake
27 Country of Europe
30 Weird
32 Girl's name
34 Leading player
36 Forays
37 Girl's name
38 Antlered animal
40 Gotten up
41 Native Egyptians
44 Stage whisper
47 Rail bird
49 Is mistaken
52 Intellect
54 Underworld god
57 Three-toed sloth
58 Behold!
60 Brother of Odin

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The Pub
BEEF 'n BEER Nights
Wednesday & Saturday
Charcoal Broiled Rib Steak
Pitcher of Beer
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Baked Potato
Roll + Butter
$3.50
The Pub

Minutemen JV's to Battle Eagles in Boston Sunday

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

The freshman football squad has known success, yes very well, as indicated by their 33-13 and 53-7 lickings of BU and URI. They will put their enviable 2-0 record on the line Sunday afternoon, when they travel to Chestnut Hill to face the hex of the Eagles in the form of the Boston College freshman squad at Alumni Stadium.

This is a big game for the frosh, perhaps their biggest of the season along with the UConn game. The Eagles have consistently been nothing but havoc for UMass football teams in defeating the then Redmen squads time and time again.

Now, all is anew. The Redmen are gone, and along with it, the misfortune against the Eagles has hopefully followed. The new Minutemen are set to reek havoc for the Eagles from now on. JV football will hopefully be no exception.

Physically, the Minutemen have not been hurt very much in their first two contests, with the only injury being to defensive back Rich Bienna. Hopefully Bienna will be ready for next week's Yan-Con game against UConn.

The backfield will be the same for the Minutemen, with Harriman calling signals, Wolfe and Mondalto as the setbacks, and Gary Warren at flanker back. The only change in the lineup, other than the injury to Bienna, will be the switch of Dave Torrence from running back to the defensive unit, where he will start at strong-side linebacker.

Hopefully the Minutemen will find it as easy Sunday as they have all year in finding the opponents end zone. IF SO, it could be a long afternoon for the screaming Eagles. Along with the offensive unit ((which goes without saying) the defense deserves a lot of credit for their "Give me that football" attitude in their previous outings. They have forced turnovers by the handful and have two touchdowns of their own to show for their efforts.

The Eagles come into the game with a 2-1 slate. Their performance has been somewhat erratic, as after their opening victory over the Harvard Crimson, they were badly embarrased the next week by Brown 33-6. Last week, however, they came back to defeat the Crusaders of Holy Cross 18-6 in a hard-nosed contest. The Eagles better not have a mental let-down, coming off their victory over Holy Cross, which might have been a factor in their poor showing

If they do, however, they may find themselves in downtown Boston after having been blown there by the Minuteman Express.

It should be one helluva game Sunday afternoon. Kick-off time is 2:00 P.M. and by 5 in the evening we should know if there will be any future for the Eagle jinx.

Fred Parent, Former Bosox Shortstop, Dies at 96

SANFORD, Maine (AP)-Fred Parent, who claimed to have played a key role in bringing baseball's immortal Babe Ruth to the majors, died in a nursing home Thursday.

The oldtime Boston Red Sox shortstop would have been 97 on Nov. 25.

He was the last survivor of modern baseball's first world series-in 1903 when the Red Sox beat Pittsburgh.

Parent joined the Sox in 1901, the year the American League was founded, and left for the Chicago White Sox in 1907.

Later he played for the old Baltimore Orioles, then in the International League, at a time when Ruth was breaking in as a left-handed pitcher.

Parent used to tell how the Red Sox called him in 1914, asking his opinion ofRuth and Ernie Shore, another Oriole pitcher who later achieved big league stardom.

He said he told the Sox manager, the late Bill Carrigan of Lewiston,

"If you can get those two, you'll win the pennant."

The Sox bought both pitchers but didn't win the pennant that year. They did, however, in 1915, 16 and again in '18, with Ruth amassing a World Series record of 29 and two thirds scoreless innins-a mark that stood until 1961 when Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees surpassed it.

Ruth didn't pitch very long. His slugging ability was quickly recognized and, after he went to the Yankees, he became baseball's greatest home-run hitter of all time.

Some old timers used to say that Parent could cover as much ground at the short field position as the famed Honus Wagner, but wasn't such a heavy hitter.

Parent wound up with the Orioles in 1914, returned to Maine and was a semipro player-manager for years. He went back to organized ball briefly as player-manager of the Springfield, Mass., team in the Eastern League in 1918.

He also was head baseball coach at Colby College, in Waterville, Me., from 1922-24, and junior varsity coach at Harvard from 1926-29.

Ellis, Trapp Swapped by LA for 76ers Counts, Bridges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers added rebounding strength Thursday to their drive for a second consecutive National Basketball Association title by acquiring Bill Bridges and Mel Counts from the Philadelphia 76ers in exchange for Leroy Ellis and John Q. Trapp.

The rugged Bridges, 6-foot-6 and 235 pounds, is the only active NBA player to grab 1,000 rebounds in each of the last six years. He played nine seasons with the Hawks in St. Louis and Atlanta before being traded to Philadelphia last year.

Counts, a 7-footer who plays center and forward, is in his ninth NBA season, playing with Boston, Los Angeles, Phoenix and Philadelphia. He started this season with a 9.5 scoring average.

The 6-11 Ellis, who has served as Wilt Chamberlain's backup at center for the Lakers, is in his 11th season. Trapp, 6-7, is a five-year pro who also played a reserve role for the Lakers.

Texas Signs Whitey Herzog

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Dorrel "Whitey" Herzog, director of the New York Mets' farm system, signed a two-year contract Thursday to manage the Texas Rangers of the American League, the hitless wonders of baseball.

"I know the needs of the Rangers ... I know they need to know how to hit ... They are even worse than the Mets," said Herzog, a blunt-talking former major league outfielder.

Terms of the contract were not announced, but Herzog's salary was estimated at $35,000 a year with the Rangers, who compiled a 53-100 record last season — worst in the majors.

Herzog, a farm system director for the Mets for six years, succeeded Hall of Famer Ted Williams who resigned after four years of managing the old Washington Senators and the Rangers.

"Herzog was the best possible prospect we could have gotten to take out kids and mold them into a viable, major league team," said Ranger owner Bob Short.

Herzog said he gave up the security of the job with the National League Mets because "anyone who has played usually wants to manage. I talked to Ted and he suggested I send Short a wire. I think I'll be a capable manager. So much of baseball today is in the handling of young players. You must teach them and try to improve them.

"The mental makeup of the players today is so important. They don't like to eat and sleep baseball 24 hours a day. We'll go back to basics like having a good infield practice before every game. We'll give the fans a good show. I bet Rico Carty hasn't taken infield practice in 10 years."

Carty recently was obtained by the Rangers from Atlanta to bolster their hitting and may play first base.

There were published reports that Yankee third base coach Dick Howser had the Ranger job in his pocket.

At one time Wednesday, Herzog thought so himself, but when he got to Al Land Field in St. Petersburg, Fla., Short told him that he had the job.

Phil's Carlton Wins Cy Young Award

ST. LOUIS (AP)-"I feel that I'm in sort of an elite class, and that has to give you an elite feeling," Steve Carlton, baseball's premier pitcher in 1972, said Thursday.

The hard-throwing Carlton, who two years earlier posted a 10-19 record had climbed all the way to the top with his unanimous selection as the National League's Cy Young Award winner.

Two writers from each of the league's 12 cities gave the 27-year-old Philadelphia Phillies' left-hander all their votes, making him the fourth to win the honor unanimously.

Carlton, by posting a 27-10 record, matched Hall of Fame pitcher Sandy Koufax's record formost wins in the N.L. by a southpaw and joined Koufax, Bob Gibson and Denny McLain as a unanimous winner.

Koufax won the award without rival in 1963, 1965 and 1966 and Gibson and McLain were similarly saluted in 1968, the first season it was given in both the American and National Leagues.

Carlton, 20-9 in 1971 for the St. Louis Cardinals, called a salary dispute which ended in his being traded to the Phils "a blessing in disguise."

"Pitching every four days, I was able to develop a high rate of consistency. I was able to keep my rhythm," he said.

"If it rained this year I'd be pushed up so I still could pitch every fourth day. With the Cardinals, if there was a postponement at times I'd have to wait from Saturday to Saturday for the next start."

Establishing himself immediately as the Phils' ace, the 6-foot-5 Carlton led the N.L. with 41 starts, 30 complete games, 346 innings pitched, 310 strikeouts and a 1.98 earned run average.

He completed 28 of his last 35 starts, including eight in a row, for the Phils despite the club's record of 59-97, poorest in the league. In the 10 games he lost, he was backed by only 16 runs.

Pittsburgh Pirates' righhander Steve Blass finished second in the voting, based on balloting for first, second and third places. The Chicago Cubs' Ferguson Jenkins, the 1971 winner, was third.

Carlton was the first Phillie to win the Cy Young Award since its inception in 1956 and the first pitcher from a last place club so honored.

Women's Swimming Underway

By JANIS AHMADJIAN

The University of Massachusetts Women's Swimming and Diving Team will begin official practices on Monday, November 6 at the Women's Physical Education Building Pool. The practice schedule is as follows: Monday: 4:30-6; Tuesday: 5:30-7; Wednesday: 4:30-6; Thursday: 5:30-7; and Friday: 4:15-5:15. The team is expecting to improve last season's dual meet record of 2-4. Meets will begin in December and continue in January and February. This year's schedule includes ten meets with such schools as Vermont, Springfield, UNH, URI, and Southern Connecticut.

All University women undergraduates who are interested in participating on the UMass Women's Swimming and Diving Team either come to a scheduled practice or contact Coach Pat Griffin, (5-2324), for further information.

UMass Scrumhalf Mark Vogel is about to be tackled as teammate Jim "Swede" Vilkitis (second from right) moves in to help out. The ruggers will battle the Portland Rugby Club tomorrow on the UMass fields beginning at 12:30.

Yesterday's sportshead was Milwaukee Brewer pitcher Jim Lonborg.

WEAR-HOUSE
COMPLETE SELECTION OF JEANS and CASUAL CLOTHING by LEVI - LEE
MAVERICK
LANDLUBBER
201 N. PLEASANT ST.

Amherst Seafood Market
103 No. Pleasant
FRESH FISH DAILY
SCROD BLUEFISH
SOLE SWORDFISH
FLOUNDER HADDOCK
FRESH MAINE STEAMERS

FRIDAY AFTERNOON CLUB
THE FRIDAY AFTERNOON CLUB presents "ROOM FULL OF BLUES" 3pm - 5pm and 9pm - 1am BLUEWALL

Gridders Face Bucknell

By EARLE BARROLL

The UMass football team will be anywheres from an eight point to a two-touchdown favorite tomorrow when it travels out of New England for the first time this season to meet Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pa. Game time is 1:30.

Bucknell is a team of Yankee Conference calibre and you can take it from there. The Bisons' record to date is 4-2 including a 17-14 win over Maine. (UMass beat the Black Bears 37-0)

Chief UMass scout Bob harris has described the Bisons as a team with small size and average speed, but also a team that keeps coming and coming. And one of the main problems that confronts a team on the road is that the home team is usually coming and coming and coming. This appears to be the only hope for Bucknell.

For the Minutemen a rash of injuries has finally caught up with the undefeated and unanimous number one team in New England. Paul Metallo (shoulder and leg and Dick Cummings shoulder) have been listed as doubtful starters for the game.

Defensive free safety John Healy will not dress due to pulled muscles in his thigh. Al Key, who was his backup will be operated on this morning for a knee injury.

Head coach Dick MacPherson was expectantly concerned with these key personnel injuries, but he also expressed confidence in their replacements, Rich Herman and Jim Mahaney at halfback, Phil Roland at fullback and Pat Brady at the free safety.

Now for you poll watchers: The Minutemen have moved up to the number two slot in the East behind mighty Penn State. In the national polls UPI has UMass rated sixth while the AP has them as tenth.

There has been much talk over the Lambert Race, i.e. UMass' susprisingly high rating over such schools as Syracuse and West Virginia. The Lambert Trophy is awarded to the team in the East that performs the best against the type of program it has. This explains why the Minutemen are where they are.

Quarterback Peil Pennington added to his already buldging list of laurels off of his performance last week against UConn. The 6'5 qb was named to the ECAC team of the week, chosen as the offensive player of the week in the Yankee Conference and honored with the Golden Helmet Award as the top player in New England for the week--for the second time this season.

P.S. Tomorrow is coach MacPherson's birthday.

Harriers to Run in New Englands Monday

By WALT POWERS

It's been a long time since a man named Ken O'Brien led a UMass Cross-Country team to a New England Championship. Next Monday, eleven years later and in a different role, he'll try to lead them to another New England title. Can they do it? "It looks like a good race," he said. "This is a powerful team, better than the one I was on that won it, but the competition is tough, and they'll all have to run up to their potential, if we expect to win."

UMass has not won a New England Championship Meet since 1961, when O'Brien was running for the team. Since then, UMass has come very close and has missed the top five only once. But no title. Ken O'Brien's record speaks for itself. His Cross-Country teams have been consistent winners, and, more important, have never finished worse than second in the conference, or fourth in the New Englands. Last year, an inexperienced team won an easy victory in the conference meet, and came within two points of beating out Northeastern for New England runner-up. It was encouraging, but the New Englands had eluded them, and O'Brien wanted to find out why.

"I analyzed all our performances over the past five years. I was thorough and even included the performances of individual runners. What it came down to was this: We had always peaked at about the conference meet in the seventh week of the season. After that we sort of eased off. I realized that we had proven ourselves in conference competition and could concentrate on the more competitive and prestigious New England Championship Meet. If we could win these, we'd be in excellent condition for the I.C. four A's a week later. So I decided to train for these meets, instead of the conference, and try to hit our peak in the ninth or tenth week of the season.

O'Brien instituted new training procedures. He ran his top runners only once a week and then rested them instead of running them in the mid-week races. He doesn't view it as an unorthodox strategy. "I've always concentrated on the championship meets, and most of the other coaches agree with me. With modern training schedules as tough as they are, it is impossible to run all-out, twice a week, and recover completely in time for the next race. It also means getting mentally ready for an unimportant meet, and an unnecessary disruption in studies. This mental and physical disruption has a cumulative effect, and I didn't want that to hamper us in the New Englands."

"Also, this one-meet-a-week type of training is not unusual. Practically all of the big national contenders have small dual meet schedules. It is only in New England, where many schools are within short driving distance, that these big schedules are common."

"Of course, the best thing to do would have been to change the schedule, but that takes time. I wanted to start preparing the team THIS year. This team is young, and Rick Barry is our only senior. They have great potential and have another good year ahead of them as a team."

The harriers have improved steadily each Saturday. Even with strenuous mid-week workouts, the team ran well, and beat out a tough URI team for the conference title. Now they face the New Englands, and it doesn't look easy. Five teams have to be considered as legitimate contenders. Along with Northeastern, UMass can be considered a co-favorite. Both teams are very strong depth-wise, with the top seven runners nearly evenly matched. The race could turn into a tight man-to-man-team dual, which would make it one of the best, most competitive races of the year. NU eked out a 25-30 victory over the Minutemen early in the season in what O'Brien called "our worst race of the year."

The team is cautiously realistic. "We feel from our previous experience, that we have the potential to win," said Bill Gillin. "But we'll need an outstanding race from each member of the team, if we hope to do it."

Last Saturday when the UMass Cross-Country team won their third consecutive Yankee Conference Championship Meet, it was their biggest victory of the season. But this Monday the team will run in the New England Championships in Boston, and if they win, it will be their biggest victory in a decade.

Booters Play Vermont

By DOUG FIDLER

The UMass varsity soccer team will attempt to continue its winning ways when it travels to Burlington, Vt. to take on the Catamounts of UVM this Saturday morning at 11:00 a.m.

The Minutemen are currently 4-3, including a 2-2 Yankee Conference record. After losing their initial YanCon contest to Maine, 2-0, they whipped BU 3-1. The 4-2 loss to URI dropped their record to 1-2, but a stunning 3-1 upset win over UConn evened up their league standing.

Vermont is mired in a very disappointing season. The Cats have failed to win a game this season after preseason polls had picked them to be a favorite in the Yankee race. They are currently 0-4 in league play.

Coach Gerry Redmond sees this upcoming contest as a difficult contest. "All losing strings must come to an end, and I'm hoping it doesn't end against us."

"We played an excellent game against Connecticut," continued Redmond, "and things are beginning to come along for us. We must not get complacent now, however. Vermont is very tough at its home field, and we don't expect an easy time."

Junior Tom Coburn, whom Redmond has called "one of the better forwards in the Yankee Conference," is leading the team with eight goals. Carl Vercollone dropped his goals against average to 1.5 per game after his excellent showing against UConn last Saturday.

Roy Ivons

Hub Coaches a Varying Lot

Something has become as unpredictable as the weather in Boston - the pro teams there. The Red Sox played surprisingly well this past season and the Celts have been downright amazing up to this point in the NBA campaign. They rank as the two pleasant surprises.

In the contact sports, the picture is equally surprising, but the trend is reversed. The Patriots, apparently up-and-coming after last year's 6-8 finish, have played horrendous football for four consecutive weeks now, and their situation seems hopeless. The Bruins, playing like anything but Stanley Cup Champs, just reached the .500 mark Sunday and are in the lower half of their division.

Naturally the four coaches involved here are in for an ample amount of the praise or criticism and like everyone else, I have my own opinions of Kasko, Heinsohn, Mazur, and Johnson. Some are hardly revelations, but I think I've strayed from the establishment camps enough to make things interesting.

Tommy Heinsohn impresses me as a good coach. He seems to get the best effort possible from each of his players and has managed to keep the team from revolving around one man. This is a practice which can be particularly disastrous in pro basketball. One needn't look any further than the stormy courtship of tempermental Elvin Hayes and the now defunct San Diego Rockets for evidence of this. One can't dismiss the value of Red Auerbach in the Celtic renaissance, but I'd give Heinie plenty of credit, too.

Tom Johnson is the guy in Boston getting the burn rap. He lost four good hockey players to the WHA and to expansion. (Sanderson, McKenzie, Cheevers, and Westfall). To aggravate the situation the Boston Braves were cleaned out by the WHA as well, leaving Johnson with a depleted supply of adequate replacements. (Bouchard, Peters, Tannahill, Hurley, Williams, and Hyndman are among the ex-Braves now playing for other teams). The other NHL franchises were hurt by expansion too, but when you have the most you lose the most. Isn't that a profound statement.

And even these blows are mere love taps compared to the absence of Bobby Orr. Seeing Bobby behind the Boston bench in street clothes reminds me of seeing the best kid on the block watching the pick-up game from the sidelines. It almost looks like he's so much better than the everyone else that they won't let him play. I think Tom Johnson is making the best of a desperate situation.

Eddie Kasko lacks the leadership ability of a good manager, and this is especially true on a team as young as the Red Sox. My criticism of Kasko in an earlier column was severely jolted by a recent poll that placed him close behind Chuck Tanner in the manager-of-the-year balloting, but I'm still not enthused about his returning next year. Eddie's ability to inspire ballplayers is roughly equivalent to the ability of Wally Cox to inspire Racquel Welch. (Eddie and Wally do sort of look alike, don't they?)

John Mazur has to go. He is almost completely lacking in his ability to handle players realistically, as complex individuals. In pro football this is especially important. I would even argue that it is as important as a coach's overall knowledge of the game. Take one look at George Allen and you'll see it's true. Allen can make a member of the suicide squad feel like Joe Namath. Mazur can make a first-stringer feel as important as an end zone peanut vendor.

So if I were allowed to roll any heads in the hub, they would belong to Kasko and Mazur. Heinie's doing the job and Johnson, the best he can.

WMUA

The University of Massachusetts Minutemen are 6-0 traveling out to Bucknell to do battle with the Bisons. If you can't make it all the way out to Lewisburg, tune in to Kent Best doing the play by play and Don Gorski providing the color commentary on WMUA 91.1 FM. Air time will be 1:15 p.m.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Derek Out

PHILADELPHIA (AP) Derek Sanderson, highly paid center for the Philadelphia Blazers, was undergoing treatment at a hospital here Thursday for what a team spokesman said was "a severe muscular sprain in his lower back." Sanderson suffered the injury in a game with the Cleveland Crusaders Wednesday night.

Dr. Arnold Berman, team physician for Philadelphia's World Hockey Association club, said Sanderson would be confined to bed for a minimum of a week and estimated it would be at least another week before he was back in uniform.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

For those of you who like it: We're glad you came. For those of you who don't like it: well...hello!

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 41 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6 1972

ZOOM, down long white corridors with brown doors that open into desolate offices that hide men in silver masks. THX 1138 anyone? (MDC photo by Steve Smith)

4161 Absentee Votes; Pulse Poll Gives UMass To McGovern

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

Absentee voting in the Student Union ended Friday night, with a total of 4,161 persons voting in the Cape Cod lounge in seven days of voting from October 19 to Friday.

In addition to these ballots, ballots notarized outside of the program and out-of-state ballots not requiring notarization were estimated to bring the total number of absentee voters to around 4,500.

Also, a poll released November 1 by Project Pulse, a newly formed campus polling organization, showed McGovern leading Nixon on campus by 51 percentage points. 67% of those polled said they were voting for McGovern-Shriver, while 8% responded Nixon-Agnew.

According to Bud Demers, a staff assistant with the Student Activities office in the Campus Center, 227 of the absentee ballots were mailed to locations outside of the state.

The biggest single day, he said, was Tuesday, October 31, when over 1,000 people voted. Friday night, however, he said only 41 persons voted from 5 to 9 p.m.

"We had estimated that 4,410 people would vote here, but we could have easily processed 10,000," he added.

Absentee ballots went "all over" the state, he continued, with no significant percentage of the ballots going to any one area.

Demers estimated that some 4,500 UMass students are registered to vote in Amherst.

Last week, Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery vetoed a request from the Student Senate to call off classes election day Tuesday. However, Provost Robert W. Gluckstern has urged faculty members to allow absences from class election day, provided students have "legitimate reasons" connected with the election.

The Student Senate transit service says it will provide transportation to Amherst polling places for students, and that this service will not affect its normal runs.

McGovern still has a strong lead on the UMass campus according to the poll taken by Project Pulse, a polling organization run by UMass students, faculty and administrators.

The Pulse survey reports 67% of the UMass vote going to McGovern, 8% going to Nixon. 1% are voting for either Jenness of Socialist Workers or Gus Hall, the Communist Party candidate. 17% were undecided and 5% would not say who they were voting for.

Pulse polled 130 randomly selected students on campus, of which 107 said they had registered.

16% of those unregistered said they were underage, 16% said they were not interested in voting, 11% forgot to register or did not like the candidates. 47% gave "other reasons" which included not being a U.S. citizen, registering being, "against my religion", a feeling of insignificance due to the electoral college system, and having turned 18 too close to the end of registration for tomorrow's election to register.

Pulse also asked the students polled what they thought was the most important issue in this year's campaign. 67 said the war, 38 the economy, 12 unemployment, 9 general domestic issues, 8 taxes and tax reform, 8 Nixon, 5 welfare, 5 "scandal, corruption, dishonesty, 4 foreign policy, 4 crime and 4 defense spending. 3 said Nixon's dishonesty or the amnesty question.

Three of those contacted by Pulse refused to answer any questions whatsoever.

Each of a large number of other answers was given by one or two students.

The survey was taken by telephone Monday evening, October 30th. Of those registered, 101, or 91%, said they would vote tomorrow, 6 said they would not and 4 did not know.

There will be three transit bus routes Tuesday. The first will cover Sylvan, Puffton Village and Fraternity and Sorority Park, precincts 1 and 7. The second will cover Southwest, precinct 2, the third Central, Orchard Hill and the Quad, precinct 3. Buses will stop at regular campus bus stops at the polling places 15 minutes to the hour and 15 minutes after the hour.

The polling place for precinct 1 is the North Amherst Parish Hall, across from Watroba's store. Precinct 2 is the Fire Station in downtown Amherst. Precinct 3 is the Old Fellows Hall on Kellogg Avenue behind the Amherst post office.

The precinct 7 polling place was changed a short while ago from the Lutheran Church on North Pleasant to the Auction Gallery on Rt. 116 in North Amherst.

The New York Times said yesterday it was likely that Nixon would carry at least 48 states, and that there was a possibility that he would take all 50. A victory of that magnitude would be the greatest sweep in American political history.

The survey of Times correspondents indicated that McGovern held a solid lead in only the District of Columbia, with the outcome of tomorrow's voting in serious doubt in only two states-Massachusetts and Wisconsin. The two states and D.C. only have 28 electoral votes.

The Times survey said the Democratic Party would probably hold onto their majorities in both the House and the Senate, unless, "Mr. Nixon's coattails prove unexpectedly strong."

The Globe yesterday gave Massachusetts to McGovern by 20 points. 59% of those surveyed said they were voting for McGovern while 39% favored Nixon.

On The Inside:

•Election Supplement — see page nine

•White Roots Of Peace — see page two

•A Look At Student Courts — see page three

DVP Presents 'White Roots Of Peace'

"White Roots of Peace", an American Indian culture program, is sponsoring a variety of activities all day today in the Student Union. The highlight of the program will be the main meeting at 8 p.m. in the SUB, at which the audience can participate in Indian prayer, dancing and singing.

By BARBARA SOBOCINSKI

Today, as an all day program, the Distinguished Visitors Program brings "White Roots of Peace" to campus to share with the community "brotherhood, peace and tradition." This program of American Indian culture will begin this morning.

"White Roots of Peace" is a unique experience in American culture. For Indians, their message is one of hope and encouragement for the traditionalists through revitalized Indian strength and unity. For the non-Indian, White Roots provides an opportunity to hear the Indian's views of peace and relationships with the environment.

An exhibit and sale of Indian crafts, arts, photographs and books will be displayed in the Colonial Lounge till midnight.

The Student Union Ballroom will be the center from which films-produced, directed and presented by Indian film-makers will be shown continually from 10 am until 3 pm. The highlight of the film festival will be the presentation of the feature film at 3 pm, "The Blood of the Condor".

A special entertaining program is being offered at 4 pm-5 pm for the younger set. Singing and dancing will be presented for children in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. It is strongly urged that children attend this special hour of entertainment and this learning experience rather than the main meeting at 8 P.M.

From 4:30 P.M. till 7:00 P.M., the Hatch will be serving (as a special feature) a "Traditional American Indian dinner". To get the real flavor of American Indian culture, one should take the opportunity and enjoy this Indian meal.

The high point of the program will be the main meeting scheduled for 8:00 P.M. in th Student Union Ballroom. The meeting, which will be a combination of Indian prayer, dancing, singing, prophecy, religion, history, values, ecology, etc. will include audience participation.

After this meeting involving current issues and traditional messages, a coffee hour will follow. At this point a special art exhibit of Indian ink prints and drawings will see its opening. Walter McCurdy whose works will displayed.

The coffee hour and art opening will take place in the Student Union Art Gallery. McCurdy's art will be available for viewing in this location for the following two weeks.

The "White Roots of Peace" activities are open to the public without charge. The Distinguished Visitors Program committee invites all to share in the experience of this North American Indian communications group.

Student Senate Committee Calendar

For the Week of Mon., Nov. 6--Sun., Nov. 12

Committee & Chairman	Meeting Time and Place	Main Topic of Discussion
Services ---Bob McGrath	Mon., Nov. 6, 7 p.m. Room 903, CC	Reports from Bitch Day
Women's Caucus	Mon., Nov. 6, 4 p.m. Room 903, CC	women senators should attend.
Rents & Fees ---Mike Gregory	Tues., Nov. 7, 6:30 Room 802, CC	Dormitory rents
Academic Affairs ---Nick Apostola	Tues., Nov. 7, 7 p.m. Room 811, CC	Teacher evaluation
Women's Committee ---Mari Earnest	No meeting this week.
Budgets ---Paul Doran	No meeting this week.
Financial Affairs ---Paul Hamel	Wed., Nov. 8, 5:30 Room to be announced.	Financial Policy Act
Student Matters ---Elliot Sherman	Saturday and Sunday afternoons	(Nov. 11-12) will be spent re-writing the Student Code of Conduct. See chairman for the specific times and rooms.
Governmental Affairs ---David Booker	Sun., Nov. 12, 7 p.m. Room 801, CC	Procedure for gaining RSO status. RSO constitutions.

School Of Ed Fall Marathon Seen As 'Symbol Of Goals'

The Fall Marathon of the School of Education is scheduled to begin one week from today. The Marathon will go from November 13-17, for approximately 60 hours during the week.

Regularily scheduled classes for the School of Ed. will be cancelled allowing for greater student attendance at the various workshops, seminars, lectures, group discussions, simulations and film festivals to be held during the week.

The Collegian will publish a schedule of each day's events on the day they are occuring.

As part of their publicity of the Fall Marathon, Coordinators Chuck Schwahn and Jerry Tomas included a letter of invitation from Dean Dwight W. Allen. The following are excerpts of that letter:

"For more than four years our School has been committed to the reform of education in the 20th century world. We believe that the process of learning is the natural right of an exciting gift to every man, woman, and child on the face of this planet. It is the job of the institution of education to facilitate and extend this right, and to a large extent our social health depends on the quality of that job. Unfortunately, education has failed to keep pace with a rapidly evolving humanity. The result is not only that individuals are being deprived of an important element of life, but that our society is festering with a number of illnesses which could be cured with the help of a dynamic and progressive educational system.

"The School of Education at the University of Massachusetts is a diverse community of students, faculty, and staff united only by a common commitment to improving education. It is impossible to ascribe to such a varied group any particular objectives. But it would be fair to say that the work of our institution to date has been characterized by two general thrusts. First, we have demonstrated a committment to change. Second, we have exemplified the strategy of change through the testing of alternatives.

"Our Marathon is simultaneously a symbol of these goals and a way of meeting them. It draws together people and ideas from all over the world and assembles them in one location. The result is an intensive educational smorgasbord of theory and practice, ideas and examples. By simply wandering through our halls you can put yourself in touch with a myriad of educational alternatives."

RoomChoosing In Southwest

Room choosing for spring semester, for SW residents, will take place from Nov. 27-Dec. 1. Therefore, those applying for any type of off-campus housing exemption should come into George Washington lobby and pick up a request form.

This form and supportive material must be returned by Nov. 15. There are a total of 27 exemptions available for SW residents. Due to this small number only serious requests will be considered (Health, Finances, etc.). Those who are eligible to move off campus will be notified by Nov. 27.

From ancient wisdom to modern Africa . . .

THE REIGN OF QUANTITY. René Guénon. This new addition to The Penguin Metaphysical Library is a condemnation of the modern world from the point of view of an "ancient wisdom," once common to both East and West, but now almost entirely lost. Guénon attacks the very basis of contemporary civilization with its industrial societies and its notions of progress and evolution. $2.65

CHECK YOUR OWN I.Q. H. J. Eysenck. A sequel to Eysenck's Know Your Own I.Q., this valuable book enables you to estimate and confirm your I.Q. $1.00

WALL STREET: SECURITY RISK. Hurd Baruch. An eye-opening report on the unsafe and unsound practices of the securities industry. $1.50

FILM AS FILM. Victor Perkins. A unique new set of criteria for judging movies. $2.25

HOUSING CRISIS U.S.A. Joseph P. Fried. Foreword by Mayor John V. Lindsay. A comprehensive review of today's complex housing problems—and the people and agencies involved. $1.45

MODERN GEOGRAPHY OF THE UNITED STATES. Robert Estall. An up-to-date geography—covering population growth and change, land use, economic activity, and more. $3.95

POWER IN AFRICA. Ruth First. A searching look at military interventions in African politics. This is the most important book to date on the realities of power in newly independent states. $2.95

...these new Penguins cover a wide range of topics

PENGUIN BOOKS INC

There's a full selection of Penguin paperbacks at your campus bookstore now.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879; as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Weather (9) 256-6714

Electrology By Ryan

"permanent hair removal"

Established 1969

* Member: A.E.A. & M.A.E. * Eves. by Appt.
* 1964 Mass. State Licensed
* Complimentary Consultations welcomed
* Daily office hours except Mondays
* Downtown location above: Sears Roebuck

JOHN V. RYAN, R.E. Ph: 586-2106

56 Main Street Northampton

FIVE COLLEGE January Flight

December 29, 1972
January 20, 1973
Round-trip

Boston - Paris

$165.00

All UMass students, staff, faculty and dependents are eligible to apply.
Full payment required by November 22.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS OFFICE
238 Whitmore Building
Tel. 545-2710
Amherst

Reginald McGhee, director of the James Van Derzee Institute, New York, spoke with people at the opening of an exhibit of some of Mr. Van Derzee's photographs at the New Africa house Friday evening. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

Committee Plans For Spring Concert

By PAM HYJEK

"Swallow", a Boston jazz-rock group will perform Sunday in the SUB; sponsored by the Concert Committee. If this concert succeeds, the Committee promises more of the same, plus the assurance of an "excellent", free, Spring Concert in the stadium.

The Student Senate has given the Concert Committee ten thousand dollars already for the Spring Concert; more money would, according to the Committee, "get a group that everyone would want to see, and a concert that everyone would enjoy."

Tickets to the "Swallow" concert go on sale this week on the Concourse Level in the C.C. at $1.25. Tickets at the door will cost $1.50.

The Concert Committee will meet Thursday night. Anyone who wants to help organizing concerts in any way is urged to attend. Various committees of interest are Booking, Publicity, and Security. The latter committee is investigating the possibilities of the Cage, and of the Fine Arts Center which may accommodate 2,200 people.

Acting Concert Committee Chairman Mitch Press stated: "We are organizing ourselves so that everybody can participate in as many areas of concert-making as possible without the domination of a few leaders."

He specified that the outcome of the "Swallow" concert is crucial for future concerts. He also added that anyone who has any conplaints of suggestions regarding the running of concerts should drop by the Programs Council Office, room 101 in the Student Activity Area or call at 545-0983.

A Look At The Student Courts

By BOB SCHEIER

If a student is caught stealing from the Campus Center store or throwing something out of his dorm window, it could go to the Dean of Student's, the student attorney-general, to District court in Northampton--or to the student courts on campus.

Of all these, it is the student judiciary on campus that is least known to students and that receives the least response from students.

But it has considerable power. It can recommend a variety of penalties, including suspension, of students for many offenses, to the dean of students. It can also rule on the actions of most student groups--as in the recent senate reapportionment case.

"We have trouble getting students to join," said Larry Smith, chief justice of the General Court of Justice, the highest student court. Cases come to this court from four area courts, as well as directly from student groups and from classroom cases.

The four area courts, are Area East (east of North Pleasant St.), which comprises all the dorm areas except Southwest; Area West (Southwest), the Greek court, and the non-residential court (the Student Union and Campus Center and the area.)

There are five justices on the area courts, and nine on the General Court of Justice.

"People have a preconception about the judiciary," said Bert Emmons, student attorney general, whose job it is to make sure students have proper representation in court.

"They think it's a Micky Mouse court," he added. "The establishment aura of the court tends to mitigate against those with non-traditional views."

According to court records, many of the cases (100 last year) coming before the court are thefts from the Campus Center store. Emmons said 40 persons have already been arrested this year for stealing from the store.

Last spring, the board of trustees authorized the courts to impose a $5 shoplifting fee, but some members of the student judiciary have questioned the use of the fee, and if it is used, just where the fee money should go.

"We're not ever sure fines are a good idea," Emmons said. "They're inherently discriminatory because of the different income levels of different students."

Others feel the fines should be channeled into student government instead of to the university store, as they are now. Among the alternatives suggested has been a low-interest student loan fund.

Emmons says another issue is what role civil authorities (the UMass Security Dept. and the district court in Northampton) should play in UMass affairs.

"I feel they should be used as little as possible," he said, "that we should handle it internally. The security police don't feel that way, though, so students end up in court."

"They don't take the student judiciary, or the concept of a student judiciary seriously," Emmons added.

Gerald T. O'Neil of the Security Dept. said "the law compels us to take a student committing a crime to Northampton."

In the case of a student violating a part of the student code, said O'Neil, the Security Department's dealings were with the student code, said O'Neil, the Security Department's role would be to make a report on it.

"We actually don't deal with the judiciary that much," he continued, adding that most of the department's dealings were with the student senate attorney, charged with insuring a student's rights were upheld.

Even on campus, cases often by-pass the court system.

According to Randy W. Dahl, an assistant to the Dean of Students, more cases have been settled out of court since the student attorney-general was established two years ago.

"Most problems are handled informally," said Larry Smith. "The court has a low profile on campus."

"It is not for us to create the need," said Smith, "but up to the students to create a need for what we can do."

Potential justices are interviewed by a board of present justices and members of the student senate, and are then ratified by the senate.

Smith added a review of the selection process is being started.

In the past two years, said Dahl, the court has recommended suspension to the Dean of Students three times, once in the case of a bomb threat charge, and the other two times for students falsifying add/-drop cards after the deadline for dropping a course had passed.

Other "notorious" cases the court has ruled on in the past several years, added Dahl, were the closing of a bar being run in a dormitory, and forcing a student to get rid of a pet dog he had been keeping in a dormitory in violation of student rules.

One charge the court tended to be strict on, he added, was contempt of court.

A recent controversial case was the reapportionment of the student senate, guaranteing 15 seats to representatives of Third World (blacks, chicanos, and Spanish-speaking) students.

The court upheld the constitutionality of the reapportionment, and opponents of the move have said they will appeal it to the UMass board of trustees.

Provost Explains Admissions, 'Affirmative Action' Program

By SUSAN HUBBARD

Terming admitance requirements as "a situation that should be looked at very carefully," newly appointed Associate Provost, Dr. Zina Tillona went on to explain the changing policies of student admissions, during an MDC interview last Friday.

Traditionally, the admissions policy has been to select a 50-50 ratio of men to women in all incoming classes. But certain adjustments were felt necessary in the past to compensate for the higher drop-out rate of males. Therefore more men were annually admitted, indirectly raising the standards for female admission.

This policy stipulation was stopped several years ago, and the incoming class of '76 reflects the change with a greater number of women than men. At present, the Faculty Senate Committee on the Status of Women, is looking into the University admittance policies.

As Associate Provost, Dr. Tillona still considers herself to be in the "orientation period" of adjustment to her position. A motion passed by the Faculty Senate created the office in order that a woman would be placed in an administrative position and that this appointee could work toward the improvement of women's status and representation, along with that of minority groups on campus.

Currently, Dr. Tillona is working with the various departments on the "Affirmative Action" program. "Affirmative Action" is the name given the execution of federal laws such as the Equal Opportunities Act of 1964, and equal pay laws.

Dr. Tillona feels the University should respond to the concern of society which compelled this legislation in three major ways. First, the University should respond as an employer of both faculty and other staff members in conforming to the federal rulings.

Secondly, the University as a source of products, (namely, educated adults), and as a service to the community should reflect this particular concern of society through admittance, counseling, financial aid and curriculum.

As its third major response to "Affirmative Action," the University should try to reach outside of the campus environment to effect change in the community, according to Dr. Tillona.

Dr. Tillona is also the chairperson of the Italian Program in the Dept. of French and Italian. Her position as Associate Provost was effective September 1, 1972.

MDC Election Staff

All assigned reporters working election:
There will be a meeting TONIGHT in the Collegian Offices at 7:00 p.m.
Attendance mandatory.

MDC Staff Photographers

All photographers available for election night coverage please come to above meeting for assignments.

THIS IS IMPORTANT

VOLUNTEER
Call
Outreach
545-2021

CASIAC counseling in Spanish is now available.

Undeclared majors interested in pre-registration counseling and course selection for the spring semester, 1973, come to Machmer E-22 on Nov. 9 (1 p.m. - 3:20 p.m.) and Nov. 15 (1:30 p.m. - 4 p.m.).

CASIAC will have two Spanish speaking counselors there to help you.

BUILDER WILL SACRIFICE

Unique MODEL HOME

Meticulously built this summer; complete wooded privacy on 2 1/2 acres in Leverett, 5 minutes from UM. Heavy plank floors, beamed cathedral ceilings and a massive central chimney are just a few of the features of this painstakingly detailed, maintenance-free log home. Three large bedrooms and two full baths, including 32 foot master bedroom suite with fireplace. Beautiful pine kitchen with custom cabinet-work and all conveniences; pass-thru to cathedral-celinged dining room. Full cellar with room for expansion and large garage area. Complete privacy with brook, view of the valley, and room for horses. More acreage available — must sell this year. For an appointment please call 549 6239.

$1.50 JEWELRY SALE

All This Week

STERLING SILVER
Rings, Bracelets and Earrings

GOLD FILLED RINGS,
Rings, Bracelets and Earrings

CHOKERS
NECKLACES
WRISTBANDS
F.U. FINGERS
WOOD CARVINGS
HOROSCOPE NECKLACE

MANY MORE ITEMS

In The Nation And The World

U.S. Accelerates Aid To S. Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Sunday, "We are trying to enhance negotiations through acceleration of deliveries" of planes and weapons to South Vietnam.

Laird gave this view after North Vietnam and Communist China accused the U.S. government of stalling on concluding a cease-fire agreement while rushing to build up South Vietnamese military forces. Asked how a speedup in military equipment deliveries to South Vietnam could enhance negotiations, Laird said in an interview:

"It assures the South Vietnamese they will have the capability to provide their own in-country security.

"It also notifies the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong that our commitment to Vietnamization is a firm commitment" and that the United States will carry it through.

A tentative U.S.—North Vietnamese cease-fire agreement, outlined publicly in late October, would bar introduction of any new military equipment into South Vietnam by either side except as replacement for worn-out or destroyed gear on a one-for-one basis.

Laird said, "We are telescoping the program" by about a year in order to get planned additional aircraft and weapons in place before a cease-fire. Thus, he said, the Pentagon is rushing over now equipment which was to have been supplied during 1973.

Laird indicated that the equipping of South Vietnamese forces would have been completed in 1973, regardless of whether there was a cease-fire.

Laird said the Vietnamization plan, laid out in 1969, envisioned building the South Vietnamese air force to about 2,100 planes and helicopters by the end of 1973.

However, he indicated that even with the new speedup that goal will probably be missed by perhaps 100 to 150 aircraft by the time a cease-fire begins.

As of Oct. 1, Laird said, the South Vietnamese air force had about 1,550 planes and helicopters. He did not say how many aircraft were being hurried to South Vietnam during the current accelerated buildup. But the Pentagon acknowledged late last week that it was borrowing some 120 F5 Freedom Fighters from South Korea, Nationalist China and Iran to reinforce Saigon's air force.

Other planes, including four-engine C130 transports and A37 light bombers, are being taken away from U.S. Air National Guard, reserve and regular squadrons for the South Vietnamese.

Laird said the South Vietnamese ground forces are "in pretty good shape" and that most of the speeded-up equipment is for the air force.

"They will have no excuse that they cannot maintain their own in-country security," Laird said of the South Vietnamese.

The Pentagon boss made it clear that when the advanced F5E fighter is finally off the production line, the United States will take the position that it can be substituted for earlier models of the F5 under the terms of the cease-fire agreement. However, other sources expect this to become a matter of dispute with the North Vietnamese.

Laird reported that the North Vietnamese are moving "a lot of stuff" down through the Laotian supply trails into the Cambodian border areas adjoining South Vietnam, into the northernmost region of South Vietnam and staging large quantities in the North Vietnamese panhandle.

He noted that such movements are not unusual at this time of the year, following the monsoon season, but said that North Vietnamese are pushing supplies and equipment southward also in anticipation of a cease-fire.

At the same time, he said there's been a significant increase in the number of Soviet and other Communist-bloc ships unloading supplies for North Vietnam in Chinese ports over the past four to eight weeks.

The Russians, he said, are sending aircraft, trucks, tanks and other gear for North Vietnam.

With North Vietnamese ports still blockaded by U.S. mines, supplies from Communist allies are routed through China down a network of roads and whatever railroads are still functioning.

Since President Nixon ordered the limitation of U.S. bombing to below the 20th parallel, the North Vietnamese now have a free run in getting supplies from sources in China.

In Brief...

Cease-fire In Several Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Sunday it will probably be several weeks before a cease-fire is effected in South Vietnam. But he insisted one "can be worked out in the near future."

Vietnam Will Resume Talks

NEW YORK (AP) - North Vietnam is ready to resume negotiations with the United States to conclude a peace agreement if Washington is "serious," the leader of Hanoi's Paris peace talks delegation said in an interview with the New York Times.

Chilean Strike Suspended

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - The worst strike in Chile's history hasbeen suspended, the government announced Sunday night.

A government message read on nationwide radio said strike leaders had asked truckers, shopkeepers, white-collar workers, small farmers and professional people to return to their jobs Monday morning.

Shriver Encourages Kennedy For '76

NEW YORK (AP) - Sargent Shriver, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, said Sunday he would encourage his brother-in-law, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D—Mass., to run for the presidency in 1976 if President Nixon is re-elected.

Shriver made the comment during the taping of the ABC Television interview program "Issues and Answers."

Shriver called Kennedy "the single most popular person in the Democratic Party today."

Japan Airlines Hijacked

TOKYO (AP) - A middleaged hijacker wearing a mask and packing a gun took over a Japan Air Lines jet early Monday and told the crew he wanted to go to Cuba via Canada and Mexico, airline officials reported.

Indians Continue To Hold Building

WASHINGTON (AP) Negotiations between federal officials and Indians who seized the Bureau of Indian Affairs Building faltered Sunday amid indications the Indians are pulling in reinforcements and preparing physical resistance to any effort to remove them.

"I believe that this building is the only card we have," said Russell Means, one of the leaders of the American Indian Movement which spearheaded the seizure Thursday during opening activities of the Trail of Broken Treaties caravan.

A BIA official said only a handful of the 17 Indian negotiators showed up Sunday for discussions with five federal officials from Justice and Interior departments and the General Services Administration. And he said no real negotiations had resumed by mid-afternoon.

The Indians are demanding that Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, White House assistant John Ehrlichman and Budget Bureau executive Frank Carlucci replace lower-echelon officials in the talks.

"It looks bad," said Means, "We're dealing with flunkies. Everytime we ask them to make a decision they have to go out of the room to telephone someone else. That's one of the reasons I refused to go back today."

The BIA official said many ofthe demonstrators feel the government is interested in talking only about getting them to evacuate the building, not in any of their requests for substantial changes in the way Indians are treated by the federal bureaucracy.

He said this has heightened the likelihood that they may not give up the building no matter what other offers of housing are forthcoming, he said.

BIA employes were given another day off for Monday and a federal judge was reported to have put off until midday Monday a decision on permitting federal troops to rout some 200 Indians from the four-story building in downtown Washington.

The court was to hear the Indians' arguments on permitting spiritual services at the graves of Indian war victims within Arlington National Cemetery. The Army said Wednesday it would not allow such services because it considers the caravan participants to be partisan or politically motivated.

Regardless of the ruling, veterans among the demonstrators and three medicine men have voted to go to Arlington anyway.

Earlier, many of the AIM leaders indicated that if the government would just come through with provision of adequate housing and food, that a joint negotiation board might carry on discussions about the other demands while the Indians evacuated the building.

Means said he thinks a fight with police or soldiers is almost inevitable, adding, "If it had not been election week I think the cops would already have ripped us off.

Chinese Doctors Tour US, Share Ideas

NEW YORK (AP) - In China, "the man once was considered to be all of the sky. Now the woman is half the sky."

This is Dr. Lin Ch'iao-chih's way of saying "women's lib" has come to China, as one of the great social upheavals under the People's Republic of China.

Dr. Lin, 71, a gynecologist-diminutive, spry, grayhaired, almost mischievous-was one of 12 Chinese physicians who last week completed a three-week tour of the United States to learn about American medicine.

They did. But their American colleagues also learned about China's approaches to and solutions for one great common problem - how best to serve a people's health needs.

Americans learned more about acupuncture, about Chinese methods of birth control and about abbreviated training of new doctors to meet the challenge of providing better health care in rural areas where 80 to 85 per cent of China's 800 million people work and live.

They found common cause, too, in personal friendship, with strong emotion apparent in sincere banquet toasts exchanged at journey's end in San Francisco last week.

They laughed with and at each other, in repartee disclosing a rivalry between surgeons and internists in both countires, in Dr. Lin commenting that "if men were more concerned about birth control, the problem would be answered more easily."

Dr. Hsu Chia-yu, an internist and the group's only cigarette smoker, might have been some American doctor when he said, "I know smoking is not too good, but maybe it doesn't do too much harm, either. Of course when I talk with my patients, I advise them not to smoke."

And the lighter moments included Dr. Lin pointing her finger at a tall security officer giving a "let's go" hand signal for the delegation to leave a conference room, and saying "Big Boss!"

Day by day, weekends included, the delegation whipped along a busy schedule of learning about American techniques of medicine and surgery and health care, of heart and cancer research, at medical institutions and health centers in Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco.

The visitors were especially interested in cancer and heart troubles, which have become primary killer diseases in China as longevity has increased.

They watched heart surgery at Montefiore Hospital in New York bringing a new blood supply to a man's heart crippled by a clogged artery, and talked at Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto with three men who had received transplanted hearts - both types of surgery not yet being performed in China.

WHO'S WHO
can be a junior or senior who has contributed to this campus
in his or her own way
Nominate someone for
Who's Who in American Universities & Colleges
submit nominations to David Booker, Student Senate Office, 1st level, C.C.
Deadline — Friday, Nov. 10

KIRBY THEATRE
AMHERST COLLEGE

THE RESISTIBLE RISE OF ARTURO UI
a gangster spectacle by BERTOLT BRECHT
Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays
Nov. 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, 19
8:30 Curtain
ALL SEATS RESERVED
$2.00
Box Office Open
10 a.m.—5 p.m.
Call 542-2278

Jeanne Martin Cisse of Guinea, mother of six, is the first woman president of the United Nations Security Council. She says mothers naturally love peace and security. Not so with men who lack that mother's instinct, she contends. As council president for November, she succeeds the French ambassador, Louis de Guiringaud. (AP)

Big Four Envoys Conclude Talks

BERLIN (AP) -The Big Four victors over Nazi Germany successfully concluded an intensive round of talks Sunday, paving the way for the twoGermany's entrance into the United Nations, provided the Germans can agree among themselves.

It was a conference that lasted 10 meetings and two weeks and which, for the first time, had Soviet agreement on a discussion of lingering four-power rights and responsibilities in divided Germany.

What exactly was concluded was not made public. The scene shifts back to an all-German level of negotiations resuming in East Berlin on Monday.

The West German state secretary, Egon Bahr, informed the Bonn Cabinet on Sunday of his course in what could well be his final meeting with the East German state secretary, Michael Kohl.

If Bahr and Kohl agree on a basic treaty normalizing relations between East and West Germany, then the two states could apply for U.N. membership within the framework of the four-power agreement.

The four powers are the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

It is the goal of Chancellor Willy Brandt's West German government to complete the package by the Nov. 19 general elections. An original timetable called for initialing the all-German treaty late next week in Bonn, if everything worked out.

A concluding communique to the four-power talks said: "The ambassadors successfully concluded their governments on the result of their discussions."

The two essential points in the parallel talks revolved around East German recognition of West Berlin and representation of the western section of the divided city by West Germany.

The Western Big Three were understood at the outset to be fearful that an East Germany in the United Nations might declare itself fully sovereign, endangering allied rights especially in Berlin. A joint declaration with the Russians that those rights continued would head off such an eventuality.

Such a declaration also would endorse West Germany's view of two German states within a national whole.

The Communists have resisted West German representation of West Berlin, which they say is a separte city-state.

Whether these thorny questions will get mention in the four-power draft or in the German treaty was not known.

West German reports said the four-powerdeclaration consists of two sentences and the word "Germany" is never mentioned.

B52s Attack Supply Camps

SAIGON (AP) -Enemy troop and supply concentrations in all four countries in Indochina came under attack Sunday from U.S. B52 bombers in a campaign military sources said was aimed at blunting a buildup before a cease-fire.

More than 100 of the giant bombers dropped 2,500 tons of bombs on targets in North and South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, the sources said.

The B52s ranged across the southern panhandle of North Vietnam to within 22 miles of the big port city of Vinh, then southward across the demilitarized zone. They struck along the Ho Chi Minh supply trail in eastern Laos, then swept southward to attack base camps in eastern Cambodia. A bombing halt above the 20th Parallel remained in effect.

U.S. and South Vietnamese officials consider the troop movements as evidence the Communist command intends to expand its area of control in South Vietnam before a cease-fire goes into effect.

Smaller American fighter - bombers from the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk carried out 120 strikes in the same areas.

The Saigon command reported 102 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks across South Vietnam during the 24-hour period ending dawn Sunday. A communique said most of the attacks were by rockets and mortars.

The command claimed 89 enemy troops were killed in fighting in the Mekong Delta. Government losses were reported as five killed and 29 wounded.

Viet Cong leaders called on their forces to escalate hostilities "on a front wider than ever before" if the United states fails to sign immediately the draft peace agreement.

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

U.N. Asked To Deal With Crime

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.(AP) - General Kurt Waldheim called Sunday for U.N. action to cope with a world "crime crisis of growing proportions."

In a weekend report to the 132-nation General Assembly, he said it might wish to make a commitment to crime prevention, review trends in world crime and ask him for more such reports in future years.

He also said it might be appropriate for the U.N. system to set up meetings of ministers of justice, ministers of the interior or their equivalents to develop international policy on crime fighting.

Without mentioning the U.S. presidential balloting two days off, Waldheim said that in some countries, "the issue of law and order has become an important feature of election campaigns."

"Despite material progress, human life has never had a greater sense of insecurity than it is experiencing today," said his 41-page report on "Crime Prevention and Control."

He spoke of "the ever-rising tide of known homicides, robberies, burglaries and sex offenses which plague so many areas of the world," and cited figures from Canada, Poland, Uganda and Japan, among others.

He said that in the 1960s, crime grew 10 per cent a year in Britain and serious crime 14 times faster than the population in the United States.

"Some of the most affluent countries are most sorely afflicted," he observed, because crime is not "always or necessarily retreating before the quite considerable extensions of health, education, housing and other social improvement programs."

In fact, he said, otherwise desirable social and economic policies "might unwittingly breed delinquency," as in the case of new housing projects with greater delinquency problems, and care must be taken to avoid that.

"The revolution of rising expectations" itself has produced crime, Waldheim said, as some people frustrated in obtaining their expected goals turn to unlawful means.

He stressed that international action was required against those who harmed aliens or crossed frontiers "in seizing foreign diplomats, capturing planes in the air, or kidnaping prominent personalities." He noted that he had put the issue of terrorism before the assembly.

"To prevent delinquent behavior, one has to begin with the forms of care and character development which flow from infancy through childhood to adolescence," Waldheim said.

But he stated that "there is no universal prescription for crime prevention," and he argued that the present system of police, courts and prisons was not working.

"Basic reform is required," he said, with "truly radical departures from outmoded and discredited approaches" and "new methods that involve the total interplay of social and economic forces and institutions to minimize the incidence of crime and to prevent the perpetuation of criminal patterns." He did not elaborate.

Analysis

'Third Force' Could Heal Wounds In Nam

SAIGON (AP)-The draft peace plan for Vietnam has raised an old dream for many in this war-divided country: A "third force" of nationalists and neutralists that would mend the breach, heal the wounds and lead the peace.

But leaders in South Vietnam's political center are pessimistic.

Interviews with a range of politicians who oppose both the Communists and President Nguyen Van Thieu indicate that even if Thieu should suddenly drop his opposition to what he publicly calls "disguised coalition" with the Communists, the "third force" would be unready, unable and not so sure it is willing.

Reservations start with unknowns in the Hanoi-Washington draft as it has been made public. The plan calls for a neutral faction to take equal place with delegates of the Thieu regime and the Viet Cong on a reconciliation council that would maintain a cease-fire and organize elections.

But who are these neutralists?

Presumably the neutral bloc would be drawn from a dozen factions and scores of politicians strung out between the two warring extremes.

Here, reading roughly from left to right between the Viet Cong and Thieu's Independence Palace, are some of its prominent figures:

—The young intellectuals whose first political experience was against the late President Ngo Dinh Diem and include such figures as Au Truong Thanh, exiled former economics minister under Premier Nguyen Cao Ky; youthful disciples of retired Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, and former opposition Deputy Dyong Van Ba.

—Tran Ngoc Chau, former deputy imprisoned in 1969 on treason-charges stemming from private negotiations with his brother, a North Vietnamese army political officer.

—The Roman Catholics, who range from leftists such as exiled former Deputy Ngo Cong Duc and Father Chan Tin, recently jailed for writings critical of Thieu; to moderates like Senate President Nguyen Van Huyen and Nguyen Gia Hien, and vigorously anti-Communist groups of Northern origin.

—The old nationalists, including Tran Quoc Buu, leader of the Vietnam Labor Federation and organizer of a workerpeasant party that seeks to compete with the Viet Cong for popularity in the countryside; several independently minded minority religious sects which tend now to side with the government; lawyer Le Trong Quat, a former Diemist now trying to organize reconciliation with Thieu,' and lawyer Tran Van Tuyen, an opposition deputy and Thieu critic who heads the Vietnam Kuomintang party, and the old-line Dai Viet party.

There also are some fringe groups-students who tend toward anti-Thieu militancy but are very disorganized; the disabled veterans who are themselves factionalized but generally progovernment; lawyer Tran Ngoc Lieng, who has tried with limited success to organize a neutralist movement; and Mrs. Ngo Ba Thanh, the jailed head of woman's committee for the right to live.

If there is a single leader or rallying figure for all of this it would appear to be "Big" Minh,who led the coup that overthrew Diem in 1963 and briefly ruled the country before he, too, was deposed and went into exile for several years until 1968.

Minh tends to be vague and simplistic in a way that causes many Americans to scoff at his leadership potential in time of crisis. But some Vietnamese say his oblique approach to issues is the secret of his wide popular appeal, particularly in the southern part of the country where his roots lie.

Minh last week issued one of his rare public statements, urging "conciliation" on all sides and hinting that he would be ready to serve in some capacity if called upon.

Some observers think the chaotic and fragmented nature of the Vietnamese political scene encourage Thieu's distrust of any middle-road movement. "He doesn't see the middle," a politician said. "You're either for him or against him."

To the University Community

In order to facilitate our election night coverage the Collegian asks that anyone calling the Collegian office election night use the news line, 5-2550, and that line only, so all others may be kept clear for our news gathering operation.

The Daily Collegian

A Traditional American Indian Dinner
TODAY
at the
HATCH
4:30 - 7:00 p.m.
Special!! Come!

LUNCH SPECIALS
HADLEY PIZZA & SUB
next to McDonald's in Northampton King St.
Mon - Wed — Buy 2 get 3 Pizza or Spagetti
Mon - Fri Free Soda with any purchase.
GRINDERS 39¢ and up PIZZA 99¢ and up
584-9602

$305,000 I.O.U. Given To Nixon

WASHINGTON(AP) - A principal donor to President Nixon's campaign distributed personal financial statements omitting millions of dollars in debts before he gave his campaign contribution in the form of $305,000 I.O.U.

The Nixon fund-raising committee, to get cash for the note from Walter T. Duncan of Bryan and San Antonio, Tex., sold it to a Washington bank at a small discount.

The bank won't talk about the deal. The Committee for the Re-election of the President, asked about the financial statement it received from Duncan, said: "We cannot be responsible for responding to the questions you ask. They should be directed to Mr. Duncan."

The Associated Press reported last month that Duncan, a land speculator who has declined attempts to interview him, had given the Nixon campaign $305,000 despite financial, legal and governmental difficulties which included a $2.2 million lawsuit against him partly on behalf of a government corporation.

This report prompted the General Accounting Office and the House Banking Committee to send investigators to Texas. House investigators had a brief telephone conversation with Duncan, but they obtained from other sources a Duncan financial statement which he had given as recently as June to a Houston bank.

That statement covered his affairs through March 31, 1971. But it did not include a $2.6-million debt on a property loan. The debt ultimately led to a land foreclosure this past June at almost exactly the same time Duncan was donating $300,000 to the Hubert H. Humphrey presidential bid. The foreclosure in turn led to the $2.2-million lawsuit.

investigators report said, "then the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President is in the position of having submitted a false statement to the First National Bank to induce it to accept and discount the Duncan note."

The report said such a false statement could well be in violation of U.S. law prohibiting false financial statements to banks. And, it added, regardless of the transactions with the Nixon committee, Duncan already may have violated the law when he used

Campaign '72

The House Banking Committee said the Nixon committee supplied a Duncan financial statement when it sold the Texan's note to the First National Bank of Washington, its regular bank, for $294,799. House investigators could not learn whether the statement was the one he was using as recently as June or was an updated version.

"If the $2.6-million debt, however, was missing from the financial statement," the House the 1971 statement for previous transactions in Texas.

If Duncan did supply a new statement and included the $2.6-million debt, the House investigators report said, then other questions are raised:

Why would the bank buy the note at a discount of less than 4 per cent and why did a Nixon spokesman respond to press queries last month by saying the President's fund raisers were unaware of Duncan's financial troubles when they received the $305,000 note?

Although House investigators found only one omission from the financial statement Duncan was using, examination of that statement shows he failed to include three other debts uncovered by the AP:

-The balance of $200,000 owed to a Milwaukee investor resulting from out-of-court settlement in July 1970 of a lawsuit. The investor said recently Duncan owes him other money as well.

-$1.3 million to Community Savings and Loan Assn. of Fredericksburg, Tex., secured by 98 acres of land on the outskirts of Austin, Tex. The land in the latter deal is next to 220 acres of land involved in the $2.2-million lawsuit against Duncan.

He originally obtained loans on the two properties in 1969 from National Bankers Life Insurance Co. A half-interest in the larger of the two loans was sold by the insurance company to Sharpstown State Bank of Houston.

McG Compares Nixon To 'Roman Emperor'

NEW YORK (AP)-Sen. George McGovern headed into a home-stretch campaign foray Sunday accusing President Nixon of ruling the nation like "a roman emperor and of deceiving Americans deliberately about the likelihood of peace in Vietnam.

The Democratic presidential nominee scheduled a taped nationwide television speech at 10 p.m. Sunday to embellish his accusations that the administration has lied to voters by telling them peace is near.

He told a meeting of labor and party officials in St. Louis earlier Sunday that Nixon has ruled "as a Roman Emperor", waging war without congressional declaration, vetoing acts of Congress and refusing to spend money appropriated by Congress.

Later, at an airport rally in Moline, Ill., he said Nixon's national-security advisor, Henry Kissinger, lied when he said "peace is at hand."

"He knew what he said was false," McGovern said. "He and Mr. Nixon knew it was a deception, designed to fool the American people for the sake of Republican votes.

"Peace is not at hand. It is not even in sight."

He said he has received messages of support from two men, Preston Thomas of Lafayette, Calif., and Charles Stewart of Gladstone, Mich., whose GI sons have died in Vietnam since last Tuesday, the day Hanoi said the administration had agreed to sign the peace agreement.

And he lashed out at a newspaper editorial in the Washington Star-News which said that nothing of substance will be gained or lost by a few days or weeks delay in gaining a settlement.

"Now in all my years in public I've never seen a more sickening statement than that," McGovern said. "I say let Mr. Nixon and his editorial friends tell Preston Thomas and Charles Stewart that their sons amounted to nothing of substance...

"We're only talking about human lives. What a tragic and callous attitude if the editors of some of our great newspapers have finally come to this."

Sunday was a day of rapidly changing plans for McGovern. The evening television statement was announced only a few hours ahead of time, at the St. Louis gathering. Aides said first it would be a replay of McGovern's TV speech Friday in which he first accused Nixon of deceiving the American people. Then it was decided to televise a rewritten speech from New York.

The candidate reshuffled his New York schedule to fit in the television appearance. Thousands of supporters greeted him at a huge apartment complex in Brooklyn before he headed for other rallies and the Manhattan telecast.

McGovern aides also announced plans to head westward Monday, the last full campaign day before election. The candidate is to stop at rallies in Philadelphia and Los Angeles before flying to Sioux Falls, S.D.

'Kennedy Magic' At Work

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)-Sen. Edward M. "Ted" Kennedy was cheered by overflow crowds in Meriden and East Hartford Sunday as he swept through Connecticut in an eleventh hour attempt to rally the voters behind Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern.

Kennedy's visit, preceded by vice presidential candidate R. Sargent Shriver's appearances Saturday, was apparently the last salvo fired by the Democratic big guns in Connecticut before the Tuesday election.

The legendary "Kennedy magic" packed the auditorium at Maloney High School in Meriden with a standing-room-only crowd of some 3,000 and hundreds more listened to his speech from the cafeteria.

Warning that "the hour is late" and "we have to be bound together," Kennedy urged the workers to reject "a President who appeals to fear and frustration" and vote for McGovern, who he said appeals to "a sense of nobility" in people.

In Meriden, Kennedy urged people to ignore the pollsters who have been indicating that Nixon is far ahead of McGovern.

"We're not going to let Lou Harris and George Gallup decide this election," he said.

"They don't vote for the people in Connecticut."

Kennedy said Gallup had been 25 percentage points off the mark in the recent election in Canada. He pronounced it "Canader".

Kennedy arrived at Tweed-New Haven Airport at 12:35 p.m. By 3:10 he had taken off from Rentschler field in East Hartford.

A CULTURAL EXPERIENCE WITH

"White Roots of Peace"

. . . a North American Indian communications group.

DVP sponsors a full day of events - TODAY

EVENTS:

Display & sale of Indian arts & crafts & books — Colonial lounge all day
Film festival SUB — Continuous from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Feature Film ("The Blood of the Condor") SUB — 3 p.m.
Display of McCurdy's Indian art — Student Union Art Gallery opening tonite @ 9:45 to last two weeks
Childrens Hour Commonwealth room — 4-5 p.m.
Traditional American Indian Dinner — Hatch 4:30 - 7 p.m.
Main Meeting SUB — 8:00 p.m.
(Audience participation invited)
All events (except for the dinner) are free!
Come experience peace with us.

UMass Fine Arts Council Events!

Daniel Adni

Pianist

Nov. 9 - 10*

Performing works by Beethoven, Brahms, Ravel & Prokofiev!
Reserved Tickets
$1.50 UM Undergrads
$3.00 others

Street Theatre of Ossining, N.Y.

In their famous Production of "The Black Terror" by Richard Wesley. First time outside of New York! Tickets $1. UM undergrads; $1.50 others

Monday, November 13*

Louis Falco Dance Co.

Friday, November 17*
Saturday, Nov. 18*

Saturday, Nov. 18*
Two different programs by this exciting dance ensemble featuring the "live" rock music of Vertical Burn!
Reserved tickets $1.50
UM undergrads; $3. others

*All performances at 8 p.m. Bowker. For complete program and ticket info contact Fine Arts Council/125 Herter.

FACT OR FICTION?

1

You should avoid exercise during your period.

Fiction! The simple rules of good health are always important, especially during your period. Exercise, a proper diet and a good night's sleep go a long way toward relieving menstrual cramps or preventing them altogether. And remember, you're not "sick." So there's no reason not to follow your normal routine.

2

There's no odor when you use Tampax tampons.

Fact. With Tampax tampons, odor can't form. Odor is noticeable only when the fluid is exposed to air. With Tampax tampons, fluid is absorbed before it comes in contact with air; therefore, odor cannot form.

3

You should not bathe during your period.

Fiction! Contrary to superstition, water can't hurt you. Daily baths or showers are a must throughout your period. Shampoo your hair, too. And don't deny yourself the chance to go swimming. Tampax tampons are worn internally, so you can swim anytime.

4

Single girls can use Tampax tampons.

Fact. Any girl of menstrual age who can insert them easily and without discomfort, can use Tampax tampons with complete confidence. Follow the easy directions in every package.

Our only interest is protecting you.

Shriver Attacks 'Nixonism' In Worcester

By STEVE FINE

Sargent Shriver, the Democratic candidate for Vice-President, speaking before a crowd of approximately 2000 at the Field House of Holy Cross College, in Worcester Friday night, lashed out at President Nixon for introducing "Nixonism" in America instead of fulfilling the promises made during the last presidential campaign and during his administration

"We heard Nixon say, 'I believe in keeping promises I make.'" Shriver sud before the enthusiastic crowd. "But what about the statement he made on October 9, 1968, in the heat of the last presidential campaign? "Those who have had a chance for four years and couldn't produce peace shouldn't be given another cance."

Shriver said that McGovern has promised that he won't go back in Vietnam if a peace agreement is signed, but that Nixon has said he would support Theiu if he should lose power after an agreement were signed "No one knows the truth about what Nixon says," said Shriver He should consult Congress We want a president not a ruler."

The former head of the Peace Corps then questioned the veracity of Nixon's promise to lower crime. "Crime is up 24% since 1968 and the fact is he (Nixon) hasn't eliminated crime in the streets but rather transferred it to the executive suite of the White House," he said

Charging Nixon has made some progress in campaign practices, he compred Nixon's 1952 Vice-Presidential campaign where he was accused of having an $18,000 slush fund, to 1972 which Shriver said has a $10,000,000 slush fund

"Back then," he said, "Nixon has to make his famous "Checkers Speech" because Eisenhower was the conscience of the Republican Party. Now he hides and doesn't say anything since presently he's the conscience of the party

Shriver at times sweated profusely under the hot TV lights, and was interrupted numerous times by the crowd, which was sprinkled throughout with McGovern signs, but few Nixon signs The Secret Service's presence was quite evident at times, particularly when Shriver and his family first entered the gym

After quoting directly from the "Checkers Speech", about Nixon's insistence on telling the truth, Shriver launched an attack on the relationship of Donald Segretti, the man who allegedly hired people to sabotage the McGovern Campaign with the Presidents Re-election committee. "Yesterday there was an article in an Oregon newspaper," he explained, "about how Don Segretti was supposed to have given Harry Chapin, Nixon's secretary, 18 calls in one hour, after the story on him was released.

"Another article, he continued, "Says Segretti and Nixon checked into the same hotel on the same day in Oregon. The next day Nixon left for Alaska, and Segretti went to California to hire the thugs he used," he said

Shriver demanded that the President break his silence, and answer these charges

The final area which Shriver said Nixon failed to fulfill promises was in cutting inflation. "Prices are going through the roof," he said. He listed numerous items such as steak, milk, vegetables and others that had increased in price since Nixon had taken office. The crowd took particular interest in the fact that a six-pack of beer had gone up 28% with most going into half a frenzy.

Shriver suggested that instead of keeping his promises, Nixon has introduced what he termed as "Nixonism" to the country. He said this was most seen by the changing of the make-up of the Supreme Court, Nixon's attempt to place raps on Congress by setting a $250 million dollar spending ceiling, and his vetoing, in the past few days, of legislation that was geared towards helping people. "The vetoed bills have included research funds for sickle cell anemia, and black lung disease," he said, "but the money for the war continues to pass through."

In conclusion, Shriver told the crowd of predominately college students that Nixon's administration is only interested in power, citing the fact that Henry Kissinger only visits the capitals of the world that are the centers of power like Paris, Moscow, and Rome and bypasses countries that have human problems, like Bangla Desh, and countries in Africa. "Agnew has said if you've seen one slum you've seen them all, but did you ever hear him say that about a golf course?"

Sargent Shriver, in a speech at Holy Cross College's Field House on Friday Night, attacked the President for instituting "Nixonism" in this country, and for failing to keep his 1968 campaign promises. (MDC photo by Tom Borkowski)

Collins To Campaign In SW

James G. Collins, Democratic candidate for State Representative, will spend part of Election Eve campaigning for votes in the Southwest Area of campus.

From 6:30 until shortly before 8 o'clock tonight, the 26-year-old Democrat will knock on doors of student voters in John Quincy Adams Tower

The rest of the Southwest area is being canvassed by student supporters under the direction of UMass sophomore Reid Fishman and Coolidge Lower head of residence Cathy Hopkins.

Collins begins his campaign day today at 10 A.M. with a coffee hour at the home of Dann and Alice Sargent, 88 Woodside Ave. The day will end with a coffee hour at the home of David and Sylvia Aronson, 142 Village Park Apts., off East Pleasant St. The candidate is expected to arrive at the Aronsons' shortly after 8 PM.

Students who want a ride to the polls in Amherst may call the Collins headquarters at 549-6963, beginning at 8 A.M. tomorrow.

ELEANOR F
ROBERTS
PERMANENT REMOVAL OF SUPERFLUOUS HAIR
*Member & Past President, Mass Assoc of Electrologists
*Member & Past Pres Amer Electrolysis Assoc
*Member & Past Director Electrolysis Soc. Amer
*State Lic. Electrologist & Instructor
*Past Comm. Board of Reg of Electrologists
*Professional Electrology Consultant
*Dean of E F Roberts Institute of Electrology
*Male and female electrologists in attendance
*By appointment only
*Evening appointments arranged
Other offices at Boston, Framingham, Greenfield, Holyoke, Lowell, Pittsfield, Mass., Manchester, N.H.
14 CENTER ST
SUITE 310
NORTHAMPTON
586-3345

WMUA To Focus On Election

Tonight on WMUA's "Focus" program, commentator Ken Mosakowski will speculate on what is in store for the nation in tomorrow's election

Tonight's commentary, live from WMUA's studios, will include a review of political contests at the local as well as national level. In Hampshire County, hard battles are being fought for the office of Governors's Councillor, County Commissioner, County Treasurer, State Senator, and State Representative

Tonight's program will also include a review of the ten important referendum questions which will appear on Tuesday's ballot

"I like Family Night at Ponderosa® because...

. . . it gives me great pleasure to see lots of people enjoying themselves, while they eat a complete dinner including an excellent steak, a luscious baked Idaho potato, a crisp tossed salad with a choice of four delicious dressings, and a hot roll with butter, all for only 99 cents. I go to Ponderosa every Tuesday night and cry a lot."

A Masochistic Competitor

King Street in Northampton

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Jerry Lazar
NEWS STAFF Sharon Lempicki, Pam Hylek
EDITORIAL Ed Fogarty
SPORTS John Bock
DARKROOM George Withers, Karasu, Steve Smith, Marcia Lappin
AD LAYOUT Nadine Gray

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

Get Out And Vote

Tomorrow is election day, the day in which America chooses what is to be the direction of the country and the world for the next four years. The weight upon every registered voter is a very heavy one indeed. We have a commitment to ourselves, our nation, and the world to make a wise decision, one which we can honestly say that we have given a great deal of thought to, and have found to be not only the politically expedient, but the morally right course to take.

It is indeed a crime if those who have the right to make such crucial decisions fail to do so. We are a select few, a people whose national decisions transcend the borders of the nation. Don't abuse that privilege by not voting. It would be a mockery of the democratic process and an insult to the world if the apathy of the nation resulted in the election of a candidate that is not the people's choice. Is for us to decide if George McGovern is a savior or a menace, if Richard Nixon is a sage or a catastrophe. It is for us to decide if we have a commitment to protect foreign governments from evil outside elements which are trying to subvert the freedom of a people, or if that threat even exists.

It's all in our hands, and for the first time it's in the hands of the age group which makes up the majority of this campus. Don't let this invaluable chance slip through your fingers. Get out and vote.

Bob Medeiros

Take A Good Look

If you are planning to vote tomorrow for two men in the state representative race in the 2nd Hampshire District, you may feel that you are faced with a difficult choice. After all, people have on the most part been saying good things about all four candidates. But the choice is not really that difficult, at least when you consider the contemptible campaign of Republican candidate William "Gerry" Whitlock and the weak legislative record of the Democratic incumbent James Nolen.

In recent weeks, Whitlock has placed more and more emphasis on his role at the Belchertown State School. He cites his role as a Belchertown trustee, but at the same time admits that he recently was appointed to the position only after Gov. Francis W. Sargent called for the abolition of the trustees since they have little or no power anyway over affairs at the school. What he fails to mention is that the only reason he pursued the position was to give himself a power base to speak out on the issues at the school.

An associate of Whitlock recently said: "The school now has its first chance to get its own man in the legislature." This statement is not only absurd, but it is an insult to state Rep. John Olver, who has been a leading advocate for reform at the school. The difference between the two men is that while Whitlock has talked, Olver has acted, and while he has used the school name to further his political career, Olver has refused to make it an issue in his own campaign for state Senator in the Franklin-Hampshire District.

Whitlock's major claim to fame is that he has been the force behind the transfering of funds that has enabled the purchase of several items for the school. I do not doubt Whitlock's sincerity in changing conditions at the school, but the fact of the matter is that the transfering of funds is only an administrative task that involves a few telephone calls. He also claims to have taken an active role in the fight to block the appointment of a new superintendent at the school until an adequate search has been made of possible replacements. Yet, according to Dr. Benjamin Ricci, Whitlock "refused to make a solid stand against the appointment" with Mental Health Commissioner Milton Greenblatt at a meeting Saturday. "Deeds not words," says Whitlock, but unfortunately for the children of Belchertown, his words have not matched his actions.

And then there is the incumbent for state representative, James Nolen. He said he is depending on his record of 14 years in the House for his reelection. Nolen missed almost 25 per cent of the roll calls last year, one of the worst records in the state. The League of conservation voters, a citizens group supporting environmental courses which rates House voting records, ranked Nolen last. On 16 issues ranging from environmental education to abortion liberalization, the league compiled a list of "correct" votes, and ranked each of 240 House members on the basis of their "correct" votes. Nolen's rating was based on eight "incorrect" votes, and eight recorded absenses.

While Nolen said he has supported in his tenure every type of appropriation and program for the Belchertown school, he has never worked to insure that these appropriations and programs are passed and implemented. In fact, in this campaign the incumbent has refused to make any committment that he will work to secure the necessary appropriations and programs that the school needs to escape from its present descripet conditions.

The choice is clear: Whitlock and Nolen, or the Democratic candidate James Collins and Republican Nat Reed.

Robert Medeiros is a member of the Collegian News Staff.

'JUST HOLD BACK THE LANDSLIDE!'

Andrew E. Barraford

A Military Manifesto (Unfinished)★

(What do you do with an army when you have peace?)

This is a manifesto by which the military may try to gain a new perspective. Within lies a philosophy which can change and hopefully evolve these types of machines to accomplish beneficial work for mankind. To begin we will tend towards the traits of elementary theorems, yet this piece intends to set a foundation on which to actually change the ideological foundations of a military unit.

Competence and professionalism is needed to make this manifesto work, for the most damage done in this world is by the incompetently trained man, whether policeman or soldier (Ex. Kent State, Vietnam.).

A truly competent military oganization will gage its victories by the scarcity of death.

The major object of a new unit is to rebuild and replant, as strife is a never ending sickness when dealt solely with the tool of violence. It is as if expecting plants to grow in a field that you have sown with salt.

A military organization has been created for the reasoning of protection (defense) and expansion (offense): Two great motions outward and in. We are arriving in a new era of politics, of thought. The earth is a small grain of sand and man has met man upon its edges. The military entity still maintains its great motions, yet this can only cause harm and misunderstanding to its existence, while it tries to maintain its present philosophy. (EX. As the American military forces have been thrown outward into Vietnam, now it is being returned. Happy days, yet think. What is to be done with all these men; how are they to be employed; how are they to feed their families? How is the defense budget to be defended? The military machine faces a fearful apex, the loss of meaning and place. It is about now that generals will look about at all their money and power and declining statis and in fear choose to be involved in another 'skirmish'. It is obvious that the Vietnamese 'skirmish' has only hurt the militaries own respectability. Why? Because it accepted to be a political pawn.) This manifesto is upon the art of motion, constant motion and change coupled with the extinguishing of the urge to move outward.

Within the new era, the military must recognize that it is to remain in a peaceful society. Its purpose must not be political pawn in the maneuvering for political power but a recognized piece which can only be activated for beneficial activities. (Ex. In the United States, the military "defense" budget is the largest overall, and as such maintains a magnificient amount of possibilities to accomplish. To maintain its budget it will not have to thrive upon the 'bomb' scares of Korea or Vietnam or McCarthyism, but upon putting its budgeted resources to renovating and experimenting with 'peacetime operations'. To supply a hospital in every country of the world as a goodwill gesture for the military has the capabilities to do so right at hand. And what better way to promote "defense", than to make real friends.) A military operation is to soon take the aspects of being truly welcomed as in the helping of people in a flooded area.

I have based this piece upon one assumption, that military organizations exist and will always exist. This is an assumption that may disappear yet it would only be theory. This manifesto is upon the belief of motion, an integrating motion, by which the milirary may exist in this world as a beneficial addition to an international community.

(*to be a true manifesto I believe it should be termed 'unfinished' as it is only a beginning.)

Andrew E. Barraford is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

—Election Supplement—

Vote Nov. 7

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Vote Nov. 7

Candidates For 2nd Hampshire House Seat

James Collins-D

James Nolen-D

Nathaniel Reed-R

(MDC photos by Bill Briggs)

William Whitlock-R

By MARK VOGLER

State representative candidate James G. Collins said yesterday that his opposition for the Second Hampshire District seat makes the error of stereotyping him as a candidate with a predominantly strong youth-student backing.

"I don't have a student vote in my hip pocket any more than anyone else," Collins stated. "I have to work for it just like the other candidates. I won the primary on very few student votes."

Presently assistant director of the Upward Bound Program--an organization established to render educational opportunities for low income youths, the 26-year-old Collins recently concluded a door-to-door canvassing operation to over 2,000 registered voters at the University of Massachusetts.

In so doing, Collins introduced himself to available students on a personal basis and was willing to discuss his policies freely with them.

Collins is a 1968 graduate of UMass with a B.A. in Government. He was also a past president of the University's Student Senate from 1967 to 1968.

"I feel comfortable in saying that I'm a candidate for the whole district," Collins commented. "Essentially what I'll be looking for in the election is a large vote from Amherst. But I also feel that we have time suppwt in all seven towns, a good organization which will help us."

Among some of Collins' major policies are: a graduated and progressive state income tax, increased aid to local school systems, and a new agrarian-based tax to protect the small Western Massachusetts farmer from being taxed into extinction.

Collins also favors welfare reform, various programs for youths, a crackdown on the pushers of hard narcotics, and ecological drives which will help to clear up the environment.

But as he said following his first tour of Belchertown State Mental Hospital last Wednesday, "Belchertown is going to become a top priority for me if elected. I am going to cut through the red tape in Boston and push for reform.

"To do so, I must deal with a bureaucracy which is insensitive to the needs of these people. We can't change things overnight, but we can certainly continue to pressure Boston and work for reform."

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

James R. Nolen (D), after fourteen years in the legislature, is depending on his record in his bid for re-election in the 2nd Hampshire District.

The only incumbent in the two seat district, due to the decision of John W. Olver to seek another office, the Ware resident will seek his eighth term.

During his fourteen years in office, he has served on many committees, as well as being named in 1968 by the Eagleton Institute of Politics, Rutgers University, as one of the country's leading state legislators.

Nolen was one of the original sponsors of the bill to regulate the cable television industry. He has served as chairman of House committees on public safety and state administration.

The thirty-nine-year-old Democrat served as a member of the University of Mass. Fiscal Autonomy Commission, which recommended that fiscal autonomy be granted for all state universities and colleges.

He also served on the Wills-Harrington Education Commission. This commission studied the entire education system of the state, which led to granting the state department authority to set standards for the towns and cities, and the power to withhold funds if they do not comply. Springfield and Boston had funds withheld under this system, when they did not meet the state's integration standards. The board of Higher Education was also established by this commission.

During questioning by a student panel on campus, Nolen was the only candidate who said that he favors a no tuition policy for state universities. He also said that he opposes changing the Massachusetts law regarding freedom of choice in abortion.

Nolen answered the question of absenteeism, by asking that he not be judged on the matter of "skipping school" but rather on "the grades" he received on his report card.

As to the breakdown of funds, Nolen said that he received nothing from the Democratic house leadership. He estimated his expenditures for both the primary and general election to be about $3,880, with about half coming from contributions.

Nolen toured the Belchertown State

(Continued on P. 10)

By JAN AUMAN

Nathaniel Reed, 41, is one of the two Republican candidates for the State Representative's seat from the 2nd Hampshire District. Reed was educated at Yale University and is currently Dean of Freshman at Amherst College and a lecturer in American studies.

Reed, promising full-time representation in the House, says he believes communities should have the right to set their own municipal policies and should have a greater voice in the setting of state policies that affect them.

Reed favors a re-ordering of state funding to provide for more "human services", wants a balance between environmental and social concerns, supports a graduated state income tax and feels the state shold encourage growth of business for more jobs rather than funding more money for welfare.

Reed is currently a member of CSOS (Community and Students Offering Support), an organization working for reform at the Belchertown State School. Reed helped secure a $40,000 transfer last August which is used to pay 70 student interns working at Belchertown.

Reed supports question 1 on the ballot allowing farmland to be taxed at its use value instead of its market value. Reed is also in favor of expanding recreational facilities at Quabbin Reservoir.

Reed says he will resist disproportionate tax burdens on any income group and has pledged to work to reduce the heavy tax burden on real estate. Reed also says he will, "work to make the legislature a watchdog over state spending, so that the taxpayers get maximum service for each dollar spent."

Reed is serving his sixth year as a member of the Amherst and Regional School Committees and is a founding director of the Amherst Committee for A Better Chance. He is a former president of the Amherst Center Schools PTA and a member of the Advisory Board of Holyoke Community College.

Reed is also vice-chairman and finance chairman of the Republican Town Committee and a member of Amherst's Traffic Circulation Committee. He was appointed by Governor Sargent to the recent Legislative Commission on State Fairs.

By JIM DEMPSEY

The Belchertown State School has been one of the main campaign topics for William G. (Gerry) Whitlock, Republican candidate for representative from the Second Hampshire District.

Whitlock, 44, a resident of Belchertown and a Belchertown selectman, and a trustee of the Belchertown State School, was instrumental this past year returning an appropriation of $67,000 to the school.

The money, excess funds from several of the school's operating accounts, had been returned to the state, but re-allocated to the school to purchase equipment for the school.

Whitlock, a native of Maine and a graduate of the University of Maine, has called for increasing the staff-resident ratio at the school, and also at the Northampton State Hospital.

In his second campaign for the office he lost by a narrow margin four years ago, Whitlock has also called for an educational program for welfare recipients to train them for work.

Whitlock has termed the welfare problem the taxpayer's main burden, and has proposed a closer examination of the program for those fraudulently receiving aid.

On the environment, Whitlock has called for ecological projects, including the cleaning up of rivers, parks, and lakes.

The candidate has also endorsed two referendum questions on the state ballot-a graduated state income tax, and allowing farmlands to be taxed based on the land's present value.

Whitlock has advocated the approval of the question calling for the protection of the environment.

He has also expressed support of the UMass Continuing Education program, and greater vocational training programs in the district.

Whitlock has also called for the formation of a water district in the Connecticut River

(Continued on P. 10)

JOB SUMMARY

State Representative

Length of term: Two years.

Salary: $12,026, plus $2 to $32 per day travel and $1200 expenses.

Duties: With the Massachusetts Senate, House of Representatives is the lawmaking body of the Commonwealth. General Court enacts laws on such matters as state appropriations, finance, public welfare, taxation, public works, conservation, housing and education.

Barrus, Olver Running For State Senator

(MDC photo by Sue Goldbaum)

John Barrus-R

By STEVE TRIPOLI

John D. Barrus, 48, a Republican from Stone Road, Goshen, and a three term incumbent from the Franklin-Hampshire district, faces possibly the toughest political battle of his carrer in the fight for a fourth term against John Olver, Democratic representative from Amherst. The main thrust of the Barrus re-election campaign so far has been concentrated on ecology issues and Barrus' avowed concern for the quality of the environment in his constituency.

In the area of transportation Barrus advocates a balance between transportation which is efficient, accessible, and economical, and transportation which will not destroy the quality of life or the natural beauty of the area.

On the welfare question, Barrus advocates the breakdown of the welfare system to the regional level. He is against a federal takeover of the state system. He is also investigating the possibility of work programs for the unemployed.

Barrus has been a firm supporter of the Home Rule concept, where towns would have more power in making monetary decisions that directly affect the town. To quote the Senator: "The smaller a town is, and the more remote and unknown it is to the state government in Boston, then the greater the need is for home rule in that town."

On the critical topic of education Barrus feels that the taxpayer should get results for his money (over 60% of city and town funds goes to education, according to Barus' position paper, published in a number of papers last Friday). His position is that the student who is interested in vocational training and the student interested in higher education should both have the apprpriate programs open to them. On cooperation between communities and colleges Barrus takes a positive stand. He cited many examples of non-political action between a school and a community, among them the Belchertown and Monson programs associated with UMass, in his paper.

Senator Barrus, a World War Two veteran, also claims deep concern for the problems of the veteran. Barrus supported a measure in the Senate last year which guaranteed every veteran a minimum of $175 exemption on his property tax in towns where there is 100% valuation. He has al o spoken in behalf of the veteran in granting special considerations in housing, education, and unemployment.

How They Vote

(Editor's note: The following was prepared by Citizens for Participation Politics, a non-partisan organization working out of Boston. The information is presented to give area voters an idea of how the two candidates for the Franklin-Hampshire State Senate seat have voted on "significant" legislation.

The questions covered were selected by the CPP. CPP considers them "significant".)

SIX SIGNIFICANT VOTES IN THE MASSACHUSETTS SENATE, 1971

The following tabulation shows how members of the Massachusetts State Senate voted on several issues during the first eight months of the 1971 session.

SIX SIGNIFICANT VOTES IN THE MASSACHUSETTS HOUSE, 1971

At the close of each legislative session, CPP produces a complete roll call analysis of significant votes in each branch of the Massachusetts Legislature. In the meantime we present a tabulation of how each state representative voted on six recent issues.

1. LEGALIZED ABORTIONS: vote on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (S. 996 by Sen. Jack Backman et al) to repeal the law prohibiting abortions in Massachusetts. This was defeated, 3 to 37 on April 7. A Yea vote is marked +; a Nay vote -.
2. RIGHTS OF WELFARE RECIPIENTS: vote to defeat the bill (H. 5236) which would eliminate discrimination in credit, services and rental housing for welfare recipients. This motion would have created a meaningless "investigative committee" instead. The motion was defeated, 9 to 24 on April 12. A Yea is +, Nay is -.
3. 19 YEAR DRINKING AGE: vote on passage of a bill to lower the minimum age for buying or selling liquor to 19 years. This was defeated, 15 to 21 on April 28. A Yea vote is marked +; a Nay is marked -.
4. ABOLITION OF THE DEATH PENALTY: vote on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (S. 611) prohibiting use of the death penalty. This was defeated, 9 to 22 on May 11. Yea is +, Nay is -.
5. SPRINGFIELD RACIAL IMBALANCE: vote on passage of the bill exempting the city of Springfield from compliance with the school racial imbalance law. The bill passed 19 to 17 on June 7. Yea is +, Nay is -.
6. COMMUTER RAIL FUNDS: vote to provide funds to continue MBTA run commuter railroad service in metropolitan Boston (H. 6000). The funds were approved 16 to 13 on August 3. Yea is +, Nay is -.

In all cases a (+) means a vote consistent with CCP's views, and a minus (-) means opposed. Paired votes are indicated by a period (.) after the vote, and are not counted as part of the recorded total. An (A) means "absent or not recorded". A (P) means "present".

Barrus
1 2 3 4 5 6

The first vote (April 20) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 1238, by Michael Dukakis) to abolish the state police's Division of Subversive Activities. This failed, 65 159. a Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The second vote (May 11) was on passage of the bill (H. 5534) to suspend operation of the state's racial imbalance law in Springfield. This passed, 118 99, but was later vetoed by the Governor. A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The third vote (May 24) was on recommitting the bill (S. 1193) to require the Mass port Authority to adopt a noise abatement program for Logan Airport. This passed, 147-77. A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The fourth vote (May 24) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 3821, by Rep. Lincoln Cole) to abolish the death penalty. This failed, 72 153. A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The fifth vote (June 7) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 1202, by Rep. William Hogan) to abolish absolute veterans' preference in the state civil service system. This failed, 91 129. A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The sixth vote (June 30) is on adopting resolutions (H. 5868, by Rep. John Businger) memorializing the President and Congress to withdraw all American forces from Vietnam by April 30, 1972. This failed, 80 90, with 38 members voting "present". A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -, and a vote "present" as "p".

In all cases, a plus (+) sign means a vote consistent with the CPP platform and a minus (-) sign indicates a position inconsistent with it. An "a" indicates absent or not voting.

Olver
1 2 3 4 5 6

John Olver-D

By BOB CALLAHAN

Seeking to unseat Sen. John Barrus (R-Goshen) in tomorrow's Senatorial election is State Representative John W. Olver (D-Amherst) a 35 year old UMass chemistry professor who has served four years in the House of Representatives.

In announcing his candidacy last June, Olver called the Franklin-Hampshire District a diversified area which needs new, progressive leadership in the Senate. He said, "This area cannot afford to be represented in the Senate by a narrow outlook betrer suited to a different era."

During his four years as a representative from the 2nd Hampshire District, Olver has been active in environmental affairs, the minority-majority voting issue and the commission investigating conditions at the Monson State Hospital and Belchertown State School.

A strong environmentalist, Olver has drafted two bills in this area which were passed this year. One strengthened the Hatch Act and the preservation of wetland areas while the second involved recycling and solid waste management.

Serving as Chairman of the Commission on lowering the age of majority, Olver says he feels 18 year olds should be considered adults for "all social and economic purposes." He pushed for this measure and blames the Senate for failure to pass this and other measures.

As a commission member investigating the State Hospitals, Olver says he has seen first hand just how backward this state has become in caring for its retarded. Olver was a driving force in the state acquisition of the Northampton School for Girls for a comprehensive center for children and families.

Olver has been active in the campaign to improve conditions at the Belchertown State School. Speaking about the Special Commission Investigating conditions at Belchertown State School and Monson State Hospital, Olver said, "The Commission, which resulted from publicity, exposing the horribly, degrading conditions at Belchertown, succeeded in accomplishing some increase in aid to the school. Before the Commission was formed, Belchertown had the lowest per resident expenditure of any such facility in the state."

James Nolen

(Continued from P. 9)

School with the three other candidates, last Wednesday, and said that he has supported in his tenure every type of appropriation and program for the school.

He has conducted his seven-town campaign by appearing at various functions and by conferring with the Democratic town committees.

Nolen was educated at Deerfield Academy, Harvard University, Columbia Graduate School of Business and Portia Law School.

He is from Ware

William Whitlock

(Continued from P. 9)

Valley as a step toward the proper development and control of Western Massachusetts' water resources.

He says this should be done before serious water shortages develop in the area, and before greater water supply committee commitments are made to Boston.

Voting Transportation

The Student Senate Transit Service will provide shuttle bus service by three different routes to Amherst Polling Places on Election Day, November 7.

Shuttle service hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The three bus routes and the precincts they serve are as follows:

Route #1—serves precincts 1 and 7: Sylvan, Puffton Village and Fraternity-Sorority Park.

Route #2—serves precinct 2: Southwest.

Route #3—serves precinct 3: Central, Orchard Hill and the Quad.

Buses will stop at all regular campus bus stops at each area on the hour and on the half-hour, barring traffic tie-ups and inclement weather.

Stops at the polling places will be made at 15 minutes to the hour and 15 minutes after the hour.

All shuttle buses will be clearly marked "Voter Special" in red, white and blue posters on their windows. The precinct number and the area it serves will also be on the signs.

The addition of voter buses should have little or no effect on the regular schedules of the campus bus service.

Over 4000 Vote By Absentee Ballot

UMass students preparing to vote by absentee ballot last week in the Cape Cod Room of the Student Union. Over 4,000 students voted as of last Friday. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

By DON GLICKSTEIN

More than 4000 students have voted by absentee ballot at UMass as of Friday.

Bud Demers, coordinator of the 33 Notary Publics who helped process ballots, said that 227 out-of-state citizens and 3934 Massachusetts citizens had voted in the 7 days special Notary tables had been set up in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union.

Demers said that ballots from as far away as Hawaii and Alaska had been notarized. Each state had its own regulations, he observed. "Some of the states sent both applications and the ballot itself requiring both to be mailed, some didn't require notarization, one state's ballot was a card which the person had to punch holes out of, another state sent a list of candidates requiring the voter to write-in his choices."

Demers, who normally works in the R.S.O. Office, said that the Administration had been cooperative in allowing employees to either work as Notaries or assist them in the non-partisan effort.

An unknown number of students will be going to their homes on Tuesday to vote. The number of students actually registered in Amherst is unknown, because all figures are listed by precinct only, rather than occupation.

Demers will be issuing a summary report of the activities of all Notary Publics on campus sometime this week.

N.E. Reps Will Probably Stay Dems

New England's heavily Democratic contingent in the U.S. House will probably remain that way after Tuesday's election despite spirited Republican challenges in Massachusetts, Maine and Connecticut.

Most of the incumbents face only token resistance or none at all, but three Democrats-a Connecticut veteran and a pair of Massachusetts freshmen-face strong challengers.

Those races and the three for vacant seats, all too close to call, highlight a campaign year where the issues are the war, the economy and above all, the personalities of the candidates themselves.

The outcome is likely to leave the three northern states dominated by Republicans and the south by Democrats.

Of the troubled incumbents, the most visible is Democratic Rep. Louise Day Hicks, whose South Boston turf has been redistricted to produce a tough fight with John J. Moakley, a Democratic Boston city councilor running as an independent.

The redistricting has severed some pro-Hicks city wards, and the first-term congressman is fighting her anti-busing, pro-Nixon, on-the-war campaign against liberal Moakley in affluent Boston suburbs.

In the 6th District to the north of Boston, another freshman Democrat, Rep. Michael J. Harrington, is getting a strong challenge.

Republican State Rep. James B. Moseley has a well-financed campaign, and a big Nixon turnout in the district, where polls put the President ahead, could put Harrington out.

In Connecticut's closest race, seven-term Democrat John S. Monagan is fending off efforts by GOP challenger Ronald A. Sarasik to link him with liberal causes of Sen. George McGovern.

Monagan says he and Sarasik, a state representative, actually agree on most issues. But the men's age differences-Monagan is 60 and Sarasik is 37-along with a strong Nixon vote, could make the difference in the predominently Democratic 5th District.

Of the battles for vacant seats, the issues are clearest in Massachusetts' 12th District, where the campaign is fought along traditional liberal-conservative lines.

The seat is being vacated by Republican Rep. Hastings Keith, and the race between Gerry E. Studds, a pro-McGovern, anti-war Democrat, and William E. Weeks, a Republican conservative who identifies with the President, is extremely close.

Studds lost narrowly when he challenged Keith two years ago. Weeks is a former state senator.

A second open Massachusetts seat is contested between a nationally-known anti-war leader and an aide to the Republican who vacated it.

Early in the race, polls showed John F. Kerry, a former leader of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, with a broad lead. But in later surveys, Republican Paul W. Cronin, a former aid to Rep. F. Bradford Morse, appeared to be steadily closing the gap.

The race has attracted top-level Washington attention, with Sen. Edeard M. Kennedy campaigning for Kerry and two Cabinet members stumping for Cronin.

The seat has been in Republican hands since the turn of the century.

Another seat up for grabs is in Maine's 2nd District, vacated by Democratic Rep. William D. Hathaway's Senate bid.

The contestants are two young, energetic campaigners, Democratic state Sen. Elmer H. Violette and William S. Cohen, the Republican mayor of Brewer. Observers say the race is too close to call.

In New Hampshire, both the state's Republican encumbents are favored to win.

Rep. Louis C. Wyman, seeking a fifth term, is doing almost no campaigning against Chester Merrow, who served in Congress for 20 years as a Republican and turned Democrat five years after leaving office. Rep. James C. Cleveland is challenged by Democrat Charles Officer, an environmental scientist.

Vermont's only congressman, Republican Richard Mallary, has done little campaigning against William Meyer, the only Vermont Democrat to hold a seat in Congress. He served one term in 1958.

Rhode Island's campaign has been quiet, with Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, a Democrat, expected to win his seventh term over Republican John M. Feeley and independent Walter J. Miska.

Rep. Robert O. Tiernan, another Democrat, was expected to role up a wide margin over Asst. Atty. Gen. Donald R. Ryan, a Republican running a low-budget campaign.

In Maine, 2nd district Rep. Peter Kyros was the only major Democratic candidate favored to win. The three term congressman is opposed by L. Robert Porteous, a former GOP state legislator.

All of Connecticut's other encumbnets were favored to win re-election.

They are Democratic Rep. Ella T. Grasso, running against Republican lawyer Jack Walsh; Republican Rep. Robert H. Steele, opposing Democrat Roger Hillsman; Democratic Rep. William R. Cotter, running against Republican Richard M. Rittenband; Republican Rep. Stewart B. McKinney, opposing Democratic lawyer James P. McLoughlin, and Democrat Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, opposing Republican State Rep. Henry A. Povinelli.

Other Massachusetts races in which encumbents are expected to win pit Democratic Rep. Robert F. Drinan against Republican State Rep. Martin A. Linsky; Democrat Rep. Torbert H. MacDonald against Republican Joan M. Aliberti, and Democrat Thomas P. O'Nueill Jr. against Socialist John E. Powers, Jr

Conte Pretty Much Unopposed, Except...

By DON GLICKSTEIN

First District Congressman Silvio O. Conte (R–Pittsfield) is unopposed for reelection.

Conte, a graduate of Boston College, was first elected to the House in 1958, after serving 8 years in the State Senate. A Republican, Conte has been unopposed for reelection since 1964, a fact which probably reflects his liberal voting record in the predominantly Democratic and independent district.

Conte's Americans for Democratic Action rating (liberal) is 72%. He voted against the ABM, the SST, and selling jets to Nationalist China. He supported the no-knock clause of the D.C. Crime bill which gives police the right to enter homes unannounced, but at the same time, voted for the 18-year-old vote and the Cooper-Church amendment to end the war.

Conte's status as the ranking minority member on the Small Business sub-committee has given him an influential position on many bills that affect the mill towns and cities of the District.

Conte is also a member of the Appropriations Committee.

...By John Miller

By JEFFREY LEVIN

Saying that he is disheartened by the fact that "nobody runs against Congresman Silvio Conte (D,1st)," John D. Miller of North Leverett Road in Leverett, has initiated a write-in campaign in an attempt to unseat the incumbent legislator.

Miller, a 1968 UMass graduate, told the COLLEGIAN "it is necessary from a revolutionary standpoint to challenge Conte, who has run unopposed for the last eight years."

The challenger, at age thirty-two, is politically involved in this area with the Amherst Tea Party, a local political party. Admitting that he does not enjoy the support of any "big money," he said that his campaign activity has consisted chiefly of dispersing literature explaining his candidacy.

An advocate of "true representation," Miller defined the basis of his campaign. "Everyone should have access to their elected officials. If I am elected, I will request federally funded local Congressional offices to handle complaints from my constituents."

Miller's platform includes several proposals that say he would support or introduce if elected to Congress. Among the more notable is his stand on education. "I will introduce legislation to provide free community controlled integrated education from kindergarten through college for all."

On the war issue, he supports an "immediate end to the war in Southeast Asia." In addition, he said he would propose an immediate end to arms production among all countries within the United Nations.

Concerned with the economy, Miller is in favor of raising the minimum wage to $3.00 per hour. He also favors "subsidization of older workers on a pro-rated basis for year of service, so that the work hours created can be filled by the unemployed minorities."

On the drug issue, Miller would like "to see all drugs investigated by a national commission towards the eventual legalization of all drugs, if found "safe"." He said that he favors "ending all United States aid to opium-producing countries, and encouraging the production of marijuana in these countries."

Amherst Polls

open 8 am - 8 pm. Tuesday, November 7

Precinct	Place
1	North Amherst Parish Hall (across from Walroba's Store)
2 (S.W. dorms)	Fire Station (next to Lou's Foods on N. Pleasant Street)
3 (Central, Quad, Orchard Hill)	Odd Fellows Hall (Kellogg Avenue, behind Post Office)
4	Masonic Hall (Main Street)
5	Old Junior High (Lessey Street)
6	Munson Memorial Library (on the green in South Amherst)
7 (Sylvan)	Auction Gallery (Rt. 116, North Amherst)

For further information:

Amherst Town Clerk 253 3885 — Hatfield Town Office 247 5684
Belchertown Town Clerk 323 6901 — Northampton City Clerk 584 0735
Easthampton Town Clerk 527 0818 — Sunderland Town Clerk 665 2989

Candidates Answer 10 Ecology Questions

(Editor's note: The following questions, answers, and ratings were compiled by the Coalition for Environmental Quality. The Collegian presents them here as a public service, and assumes no responsibility for the results of this questionnaire.)

(In presenting these ratings, there is no explicit or implicit endorsement of any candidate. The Coalition for Environmental Quality presents this information solely for the information and consideration of voting citizens.)

The Coalition for Environmental Quality has sent questionaires to candidates who are running in districts which include the University. A series of ten questions were sent with YES or NO options. Not all candidates replied by the deadline, and where neither rival replied, no effort was made to obtain an answer. Where one candidate did reply, we made an effort to obtain the rival's reply. The accompanying chart is the result.

RATINGS

The right-hand column gives two pieces of information. The notation x of 10, tells how many of the ten questions were answered by the candidate. This should be evaluated first, before looking at the rating. Since the purpose of the questionaire is obvious (even though we were identified only as R.S.O. #347), one way a candidate could get a high rating would be to answer only those questions on which he felt both he and the questioner agreed.

The percentage figure indicates the degree of agreement between the most environmentally desirable response and the actual response of the candidate. It is based on the total answered questions. Each desirable response gets 10%; each undesirable response gets 0%.

INTERPRETATION

Where the comments made, did not fundamentally change the response, or were not simply elaborations, but represented an important alteration of the concept, 5% was given to indicate substantial but not complete agreement. Occasionally, while an item response such as YES or NO was desirable, the comment would in effect reverse the intent. For instance, on Question #1 concerning diversion; if the response was no but the comment said something like: "people are more important than animals and if Boston really needs water we should allow diversion," then the comment essentially reverses the NO. On this issue it is precisely the question of a healthy biosystem supporting man as a species of mammels which is at stake–it is not an either man-or-nature choice. Too, the question of "need" is central to the whole diversion issue in that Boston (as in other cities) high water use is not discouraged or restricted and simply supplying further quantities of water will allow further growth, then further demands, etc. Thus, in such a situation, while the actual response may have been NO, the effect would have to be considered a YES, and it would be reported that way on the chart.

TEN ECOLOGY QUESTIONS

Question #		1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	Score:
Ideal		No	No	No	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	No	10 of 10 100%
Nolan	Hadley Rep.	N	N	na	na	na	Y	Y	na	na	na	= 4 of 10 40%
Reed		Y	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	N	Y½	N½	= 10 of 10 70%
Collins		Y	N	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	N	= 10 of 10 80%
Whitlock		Y	N	Y	Y	N½	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	= 10 of 10 65%
Olver	Dem. Sen.	N	N	Y½	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	na	N	= 9 of 10 85%
Barrus		N	na	Y	N	Y½	Y	N	N	Y	N	= 9 of 10 45%
Madsen	Franklin Commissioner	N	N	na	Y	na	Y	N	N	Y	N	= 8 of 10 60%
Brequet		Y	Y	N	Y	na	Y	N	na	na	N	= 7 of 10 40%
Dineen		N	N	N	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	na	= 9 of 10 80%
Banner	Sr. Treasurer	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N	N	Y	N	= 10 of 10 60%
O'Connor		N	N	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	= 10 of 10 100%
Mullane	Rep. Senate	N	Y	Y	Y	na	Y	N	Y	Y	N	= 9 of 10 60%
O'Brien		Y	N	na	Y	Y½	Y	N	N	Y	na	= 8 of 10 45%

na = no answer

INTERPRETATION

Where the comments made, did not fundamentally change the response, or were not simply elaborations, but represented an important alteration of the concept, 5% was given to indicate substantial but not complete agreement. Occasionally, while an item response such as YES or NO was desirable, the comment would in effect reverse the intent. For instance, on Question #1 concerning diversion; if the response was no but the comment said something like: "people are more important than animals and if Boston really needs water we should allow diversion," then the comment essentially reverses the NO. On this issue it is precisely the question of a healthy biosystem supporting man as a species of mammels which is at stake–it is not an either man-or-nature choice. Too, the question of "need" is central to the whole diversion issue in that Boston (as in other cities) high water use is not discouraged or restricted and simply supplying further quantities of water will allow further growth, then further demands, etc. Thus, in such a situation, while the actual response may have been NO, the effect would have to be considered a YES, and it would be reported that way on the chart.

Q #1: DO YOU FAVOR THE ADDITIONAL DIVERSION OF CONNECTICUT RIVER BASIN WATERS TO EASTERN STATE REGIONS (BOSTON METROPOLITAN AREAS)?

C.E.Q.'s position of November 16, 1971 is opposed to out-of-basin diversion of waters. In part it reads, "The decrease in water volume in the source basin and the charactoristics altered; flooding and attendent natural processes, harm that basin's ecological systems and the deterioration which results, over time, become serious." See also the example under INTERPRETATION for further agruments. C.E.Q. feels a NO answer is desirable.

Q # 2: DO YOU FAVOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF INTERSTATE-TYPE ROADS IN THIS AREA?

The violation of natural areas, the destruction of wetlands and their contamination by superhighways, the destruction of neighborhoods, increases in air pollution, the undesirable barrier-like effects of superhighways on cities or towns of whatever size; these effects are amply documented. A more recent realization on the national scene, is that increases in traffic induced by interstate-type roads compound traffic problems rather than aleviate them. C.E.Q. feels a NO answer is desirable.

Q #3: DO YOU FAVOR VARIANCES FOR LOCAL INDUSTRIES CONCERNING THE STATE LOW SULFER FUEL REQUIREMENTS?

The state law requiring low-sulfer fuels was adopted to protect the health of Massachusetts' citizens. The attempts by many industrial firms to take advantage of a provision allowing avriances continues, no balanced transportation system will have a chance against such vested interests as the highway and oil lobbies. Freeing gas taxes for "transportation" uses would allow more balanced transportation policies. But then as long as the M.B.T.A. is virtually the only transit district to get federal and state mass transit funds, the rest of the state is justifiably opposed to such gas tax diversions. If mass transit districts were set up in all areas of the state, however, then movies could be spent more fairly in all areas which would benefit by mass transity systems. C.E.Q. feels a YES answer is desirable.

Q #5: DO YOU FAVOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A MOUNT HOLYOKE UNIT OF THE PROPOSED CONNECTICUT RIVER HISTORIC RIVERWAY AS MODIFIED FROM THE ORIGINAL PLANS BY THE CITIZENS ADVISORY COMMITTEE?

The National Park concept to preserve the Mt. Hokyoke range just south of Amherst from exploitation was modified extensively by a citizens advisory committee headed by Rep. Olver, which drastically dreased the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation's plans for high density recreation areas surrounding the range. The change in name from the Connecticut River Recreation Area to the Connecticut River Historic Riverway mirrors the change in planning emphasis from intensive recreation to an historic and cultural showplace with centers for nature education and appreciation. C.E.Q. feels a YES answer is desirable.

Q #6: DO YOU FAVOR PASSAGE OF QUESTION #1 ON THE BALLOT: IT BEING A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO AUTHORIZE THE LEGISLATURE TO ENACT LAWS ALLOWING AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL LANDS TO BE ASSESSED AT USE VALUE RATHER THAN POTENTIAL DEVELOPED VALUES?

Presently the state Constitution requires that all land be assessed at maximum developed use. The result of this is to drive much land out of farming or horticultural uses into developments–far too often into vast uninterrupted subdivision tracts and shopping centers. Sen. Barrus introduced legislation to alter the Constitution to empower the General Court to set up assessment rules which would tax agricultural lands on their use value rather than their potential developed value. This referenda doesn't avually do the change, it simply would allow the change to take place. The battle over what provisions should be adopted and what effects on land use patterns are desired will be fought out in the legislature over the next couple of years if Question #1 is approved. C.E.Q. supports approval; thus a YES answer is desirable.

Q #7: DO YOU FAVOR THE USE OF GAS TAX REVENUE FOR BICYCLE FACILITY PURPOSES?

Bicycles are a realistic alternative to automobile commuting in many area--especially in conjunction with mass transit facilities. Were bicycling to become a substantial and permentnt part of America's life style (as they seem to be becomming), we would be a much healthier, well adjusted, and nature-oriented people. The use of gas tax revenue for bicycle facilities (as in Oregon) would greatly benefit the transitition. C.E.Q. feels a YES answer is desirable.

Q #8: DO YOU FAVOR A MORATORIUM ON CONSTRUCTION OF CIVILIAN NUCLEAR POWER REACTORS?

Revelations of scientific doubt and contraversy within the Atomic Energy Commission's laboratories and staff concerning the reliability of safty systems and radiation effects on the general population from civilian nuclear reactors have come to light in the national hearings conducted in Bethesda Maryland on the questions of the Emergency Core Cooking Systems (ECCS) and the Lowest Practable Dose (LPD) to the general population from radioactive effluents. Since these uncertainties involve existing technology (such as are being used in the Vernon Vermont Nuclear Power Station on the Connecticut River 30 miles north of the University), the wisdom of building and operating such reactors seems doubtful. Proposals to declare a moratorium on further construction until the large central questions of safety and effects are answered would be prudent course to follow. C.E.Q. feels a YES answer is desirable.

Q #9: DO YOU FAVOR A GENERAL AND COMPREHENSIVE SOCIAL POLICY OF REDUCING RESOURCE USE?

Many social policies and laws encourage wasteful use of rapidly diminishing resources. In many cases, efficiency; getting more done with less, is not rewarded by our political economic or social systems. This is a general policy question on whether we should prudently husband our resources towards the day (in some cases already here) when scarcity will inevitably retard either our, or our children's, ability to sustain high standards of living. C.E.Q. feels a YES answer is desirable.

Q #10: DO YOU FAVOR THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE CONNECTICUT RIVER BASIN COMPREHENSIVE WATER AND RELATED LAND RESOURCE INVESTIGATION (GENERALLY KNOWN AS THE ARMY CORP. OF ENGINEERS' PLAN FOR 200 DAMS IN THE CONNECTICUT RIVER BASIN)?

The Comprehensive Plan is an engineering response to a biological situation which is not generally well understood. Flooding is a natural and vital aspect of riverine (and especially estuarine) biological systems, and by building cities and subdivisions on floodplains, our society is simply asking for trouble. Flood plains were meant to hold flood waters. When dams which "prevent" flooding silt up and no longer work, or when they overflow at roughly the same time during heavy rains, they magnify the damage in downstream areas thought "saie" because of the dams, and thus developed. Connecticut valley cities and towns are now protected by dikes against a flood 25% greater than the 1938 flood (the highest on record) so that further "flood protection" would simply encourage flood plain development at a time when flood plains are becoming increasingly important as recreational and green belt areas. C.E.Q. feels a NO answer is desirable.

Projections Not Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Communications Commission said today it is barred by law from requiring the radio and television networks to stop broadcasting national election projections until the polls in the West close.

Gov. Ronald Reagan of California asked the FCC Wednesday to "use its good offices" to hold up on such projections west of the Mountain Time Zones.

Reagan's letter to FCC Chairman Dean Burch and officials of the four networks said that making predictions while polls are still open "undoubtedly tends, where polls have not yet closed, to influence many potential voters in their decision to vote or not to vote, much like the weather."

The FCC discussed Reagan's request at its weekly meeting Wednesday.

A telegram to Reagan today signed by commissioner secretary Ben F. Waple "by the direction of the commission" said, "The commission is prohibited by Section 326 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, from exercising any censorship over radio communications."

In contrast to Reagan, Oregon Gov. Tom McCall said he didn't think the predictions would influence the turnout in his state.

Record Turnout Predicted

BOSTON (AP)-Secretary of State John F. X. Davoren predicted Tuesday an 85 per cent turnout of Massachusetts' 3.1 million registered voters for next week's presidential election.

Some 2.7 million persons will cast ballots, he said in the forecast.

The predicted turnout would be a record.

The voter percentages in the last three presidential elections were 86.1 per cent in 1968, 87 per cent in 1964 and 91.69 per cent in 1960, according to Norman Gleason, director of the Elections Division.

The estimated number of voters registered for this year's residential election represents an increase of 375,000 over the 2.72 million eligible in 1968, Davoren said.

He attributed much of the increase to the amendment dropping the voting age to 18.

The total voter registration announced by the secretary of state is a 300,000 increase over the stimated total registration for the Sept. 19 primary.

Total voter registration for the state's three largest cities were listed as: Boston, 301,511; Worcester 91,450 and Springfield, 76,656.

'QUIT YOUR MEDDLING AND WAIT OUTSIDE WHILE I DEAL WITH THESE MEATHEADS! ER. . . YOU WILL WAIT, WON'T YOU . . ?'

Letters To The Editor

Belchertown's Clean

To the Editor:

In reply to Mr. John Bay's letter of October 12, I wish to point out the following regarding environmental conditions in Belchertown, where I am Chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

1. Regarding the dump, the Town's sanitary landfill operation is inspected monthly by the Dept. of Air Pollution Control, and when corrections have been required we have always tried to comply. Mr. William Doubleday of the Division recently reaffirmed verbally that we are meeting standards. The town does have 100 acres available for fill but has no expectations of using it all in the foreseeable future. It is my intention to merge the town dump and the State School dump into a larger more efficient facility, but in the long run I favor regional recycling and disposal plants to serve the entire District. All our cities and towns have dump problems for which there are not good local solutions.

2. The sewer plant was built about 8 years ago by the Commonwealth and is owned and operated by the Belchertown State School and the Dept. of Mental Health. The Town now shares it by agreement with the Department, putting in about 54% of the volume, and providing extra manpower for operation and maintenance, raising the number of men from 1 to 3. Upon receiving complaints, the Town Conservation Commission and I asked the Division of Water Pollution Control to inspect the plant and make recommendations; Mr. William Doubleday replied to the Commission on June 11 that the plant is adequate and not overloaded. On a few occasions it has overflowed into the lagoons, not the brook directly, during heavy rainstorms. The Town is now embarked on a comprehensive sewer overhaul program to prevent this infiltration of rainwater into the sewer lines, but as yet the State has done nothing about its lines.

3. In March 1972 the State Dept. of Public Health contacted the Selectmen about rising salt content in the Town water supply. Dr. Angel Iantosca of the District Health Office at UM was requested by the Selectmen to recommend a course of action. He advised immediate removal of the Town salt/sand supply from the Town garage, plus efforts to reduce salting by the State on Jabish Street, as both the garage and the street drain towards the Town well field. The remaining salt and sand have been removed from the garage and, as has been explained at several local meetings, the garage area will not be restocked. This year's salt supply will be stocked on a completely black-topped surface on the State School grounds (the old dairy farm), a move which has been approved by the State agencies. I was also able to negotiate a reduction in the amount of salt which the State will put on Jabish Street in the future, and we anticipate improvement of the water quality.

If there are further questions I suggest that Mr. Doubleday be contaced at 1 Draper Hall, UM, or Dr. Angelo Iantosca, Regional Sanitary Engineer, Public Health Center. UM (545-2610). In closing, I only wish to say that town governments are hard-pressed financially in the face of growing environmental problems, which is why I have been working hard for revenue sharing and for more responsible fiscal and taxation policies and why I hope to go as a Representative to Boston to work more effectively in the Legislature. In the meantime, we do welcome interest, research, and constructive criticism on the part of students and other interested groups.

Gerry Whitlock

Belchertown's Diseased

To the Editor:

Candidates for State Rep. from the 2nd Hampshire Dist. were given a guided tour throughout the Belchertown State School yesterday, Nov. 1. They received a personal view of the decrepit conditions which surround the forgotten lives of the retarded which have been cast into locked wards which reak of the stench of urine and feces.

The same buildings which Gov. Sargent viewed last Spring and promised to improve show only signs of further deterioration.

Open wards with forty beds were the rule rather than the exception. Matresses are saturated with urine, stained and germ infested. Pillows which were on approximately 10% of the beds were without pillowcases, stained with blood, urine, and other undeterminable substances. Dr. Ricci, Pres. of the Belchertown Friends Assoc. tore apart a rotten pillow reveal its urine soaked horse-hair filling. These pillows which only breed disease and ill health are considered token rewards to residents who have nothing.

Wards of forty severely retarded children were supervised by only one staff member. Children and adults are allowed to romp about without clothing because they only urinate and deficate in them when worn. Ward floors which are covered with a sticky film of human waste are layed upon, played upon and lived on by the nude bodies of helpless children.

Bathrooms smell like open septic tanks. Therapists and staff consider it progress when severely retarded residents deficate on the bathroom floor rather than on the ward floor, in their clothes or in their beds. The bathroom floor is one step closer to a desired behavior.

In many buildings there is one makeshift shower per ward of twenty to forty residents without shower stall. In fact the single showerhead is suspended from the ceiling in the center of the bathroom. This innovative design makes it impossible to sit upon a toilet, without toiletseat, without partition, without involuntarily receiving a shower whether desired or not.

At Belchertown there are approximately 1,000 residents, and over 600 employees, yet staff to resident ratios are 1 to 40 within the wards. This years budget is $7,000,000 or approximately $7,000. per resident, yet living conditions reflect those of an indigent society.

Food can best be described as "STUFF", usually in the form of a mash or mush for easy distribution and digestion. Meat and protein foods are drastically lacking from the diet, starch foods dominate the menus. The fact of which is evidenced by the predominance of obese, overfed, undernourished residents.

The responsibility for the retarded is that of society. The society, in turn, invests this responsibility to state governments and elected officials.

The ineptitude of the Comm. of Mental Health, Dr. Milton Greenblatt, the indifference of Sec. of Human Services, Peter Goldmark, and the apathy of Gov. Francis Sargent is only a reflection of the ineptitude, indifference, and apathy of our society.

Before you complain of overcrowded dorms, dirty bathrooms or poor quality food in the dining commons take a ride to Belchertown and view the conditions there. Then judge for yourself the directions of our society of which YOU are a part.

THOMAS BLANCHETTE

Editorial Points

If the President is a frustrated sportswriter, and sportswriters are frustrated athletes, what are athletes? - frustrated students?

***

Will the U.S. withdraw from Vietnam? Will George McGovern win? Will it be four more years? Alas (I fear), we find out this Tuesday.

***

An eternity of Nixon, an eternity of Rhetoric 101. All these programs take time to work out.

Simple Logic

To The Editor:

John L. Fischer's impressive rhetoric of last Friday (Nov. 3) amounts only to another opinion. His "simple logic" does not follow and certainly does not constitute "simple facts." It is too bad that he and so many others on both sides of the election issue try to pass off personal judgments as fact instead of sticking to valid observations (such as paragraph one of his letter). What is worse, however, is that many voters accept such opinions as fact.

Krista Oesterling

A Point Of View

To The Editor:

I read Bob McCarthy's letter of Thursday and to answer his letter, I will clarify my point of view so that he can better understand what I mean.

As for Vietnam, let me remind you that the Communists in Russia or wherever elese they happen to be, are the greatest treaty-breakers history has ever know. I'm not saying that we ought to go and wipe out North Vietnam, but with the way things have been going on over there, there is no way we can win the war and any peace terms that come about will be dictated by the Russians. The real goal of the U.S. is not to win the war. This is so obvious to me because we could've won the war, at any time-even now, in less than a month if the State Depatment and the U.N. allowed us to. As for the POW's remember that the U.S. and the U.N. deserted over 400 Americans that were POW's in Korea after that war was over.

As for what I said about the United Nations in Wednesday's letter, the only way I can clearly explain my point of view is to reprint an article by Robert Welch entitled "Which World Will It Be?" Unfortunately, I can't do that. But, Bob, if you are interested, I can supply you with a copy of that article plus a copy of a book entitled "The Fearful Master" by C. Edward Griffin which is a brilliant piece of work on the U.N.

As for what you stated on busing, you are right in saying that we should use our wealth to do something about the condition existing in these problem areas, but the answer does not lie in busing. I feel that the answer lies in using state and local funds to improve the surrounding areas and improve the quality of education by hiring competent teachers. As far as having children learn to live with each other, remember that prejudices exist in children because of their home environment. Prejudices of any kind are only corrected by time, patience and cooperation from all factors and persons concerned. All busing would do is make these prejudices worse. Look at what has happened in states like Mississippi and Alabama since 1954 to see what I mean about forced integration.

On defense, A-Bombs don't mean shit! We need to maintain our sovereign state and have a strong defense to protect our country from such subversive forces as the Soviet Union.

As far as gun control is concerned, the police cannot protect everyone all the time. I feel that anyone should be able to own a gun to protect his life, family and property from those who would take those things away from him. If McGovern's tough gun controls are enacted, you can bet your last dollar that the crime rate will soar to an unprecedented level.

As for your final comments: You are right in your first sentence. Why is it that Americans won't accept the right-wing point of view? It's for that reason. Keep in mind that I have chosen my candidate with an open mind after reading all the material concerned.

The only way we can save this country is to return to what our Constitution and Bill of Rights originally provided for and get the U.S. the hell out of the U.N.

Bob Estelle

First Response

To The Editor:

To be completely honest, I have no interest whatsoever in what Bob Estelle has to say.

Leighton Thomas

The Best Test

To the Editor:

After more than three years of intensive test taking here at UMass, it becomes obvious that the testing system is hurting. Most tests given at the university have a common characteristic: they don't test the student's proficiency but rather his gaming instinct. More effort is conkcted into second guessing and question interpretation than into actual regurgitation of accumulated knowledge. It seems that some professors could make more money and become more famous if they published decent tests rather than time consuming research.

Most ture-false and multiple choice tests are loaded with more ambiguity than a Nixon re-election speech. If the publish or perish syndrome is so manifest that professors can't spend a decent amount of time teaching, then possibly UMass should be renamed The Western Mass Research Association and the students could be considered by-products of the reserach process. If tests must indicate performance, then all we ask is that they do just that.

Jeff Sherwood

MORE LETTERS NEXT PAGE

Letters To The Editor (Cont'd.)

Take That, Phil Curry

To The Editor:

Three or four years ago a group of people estimated that another group of people would be able to build a major, complicated building by a certain specific date. An estimate was made because no one can calculate the exact time required for construction.

Well what do you know? The building was not finished on the estimated date and therefore PHILIP CURRY in his recent letter in this space exhorts his readers to ACT!!

What action is he calling for? Do we destroy those who made the estimate or those who did not meet the estimate? Do we kill the workers who went out on strike, the subcontractor who went broke, or the architects and engineers who are trying to insure a quality job. Maybe we should crucify the contractor who loses not gains money every day the building is not completed. Perhaps we should have forced the Library to occupy the building on the estimated completion date even if construction was not completed?

I agree that we need action. I suggest that PHILIP C. CURRY act like an adult and not like a ten year old

L. Liberman

Outraged

To the Editor:

As a member of Young Workers Liberation League I was outraged by your article Tuesday on Dining Commons workers stealing. It was an article which while having no evidence to back up its points severely questioned the trustworthyness of the women who work in the Dining Commons.

Furthermore the time of the article was condescending and contemptous of the people who work for the University as well as of all people who work for a living. In this time of high unemployment and speedup (23 dining commons workers have been laid off already and those who still have jobs are doing the work of two to five people) and a government which is a viscously anti-labor one, articles like these serve only to further the divisions between those who work and those who are preparing to work (students). This division does neither of us any good!

Paul Mishler

Save The Marching Band

To The Editor:

For the next few days, there will be a petition circulated throughout campus asking both student and faculty support for the combined funding of the Marching Band here at the University. We urge that you make it a point to sign this petition. It does not state that the student body should fund the Marching Band completely nor does it say that it should be funded by the State or by the Athletic Council completely. It is merely asking for the support of the campus community in our cause for some kind of funding and, ultimately, our survival at the University for the Marching Band.

The more than 100 members of the Marching Band, and we hope the people reading this also, believe that the marching band performs a necessary function here at the University. We attempt to provide entertainment, spirit, and a sense of pride to the football team and the fans that watch and listen to us at the several games we are able to attend each year. This has been especially true during the past few years when the football team did not have the record of success they now enjoy. We like to think that we helped the team through this difficult time by giving as much encouragement and support as we could to them when they were down and in some way helped them drive just that much harder to reach where they are now, the number one team in New England. Next year, we will not be able to help at all...unless you help.

Please take the time during the next few days to sign our petition. We need your support. If you would like to actively help or you would like more information please stop at Old Chapel or call use at 545-0294. You never know how important something is until it is gone...then it is too late.

Carl F. Gordon, Manager
University of Massachusetts Marching Band

The Injustice Of Towing

To The Editor:

On Saturday, September 30, 1972, I was on the UMass campus as a visitor and had my car towed from the grounds. The fees for this amounted to twenty two dollars. However, I do not feel that the police had any legal right to tow from the area I parked in. My car was facing south on the drive which leads up from John Adams Tower to Fearing Street. Because I was on my way up to Fearing Street when I spotted the space, I could not possibly notice the "Tow Zone" sign located on a post about six car lengths up the hill and facing in the opposite direction!

I have taken pictures of the area and sought advice. It seems that the only way to try to right this wrong is by suit against the University Board of Trustees. This means that I must go to Small Claims Court in Northampton and for $3.56 the judge will decide if I have a case, and then if I do have a case, I will be faced with lawyer fees.

The reason I am writing this letter is to get support, comments or help from other students. The North Amherst Towing is making a lot of money because of poorly posted areas. Why doesn't the University post a visible "Tow Zone" sign so that drivers will not park there? If you have received the same injustice I have, please contact me and we can try to right the matter so students in the future will not have to suffer also.

Karen A. Sullivan

Poetry-Campaign And Otherwise

ODE TO.....?

Little Mark V., sitting in the D.C., eating his curds and whey when what should he see but a D.C. employee, stealing as plain as can be Quick as a flash (and near spilling his hash)
To the MDC he dashed on the run
And thru quivering quill and uncorruptible will Did write to see justice was done
In his stroke there was lightning, in his eyes held the fire only contained by the pure
He was bound by his goal, insure evil stopped cold
That this theft would occur ne'er no more
His zealous crusade, a specific point made
Those responsible to receive their due
To be flogged with a horse (nothing serious of course)
After all they're folks like me and you

The fuss that incurred (Momentous protests were heard!)
Never furrowed our sacred one's brow
"Though the skies are cloudy, and the crowds get rowdy Nothing can stop the purge now!"
As for public emotion during this noisy commotion
The answer's a resounding Bronx cheer
No one really cares much who takes biscuits and such
"The issue's hardly our affair."
So hurt feelings don't count and the truth will win out
In this struggle to control Campus Eats
They'll investigate all
Finding naught ill at all

D.C. Workers, Bon Appetite!

Bill Foster

FRAGMENTS FROM ON THE MARGINAL WAY

...high above the shore
On someone's porch, spread wings of newsprint flap

The tidings of some dirty war...

But now the vision of a colder lust
Clears, as the wind goes chill and all is greyed
By a swift cloud that drags a carrion shade.

Richard Wilbur

ELECTIONS '72

Tis the night before voting and how it does drag, few now doubt a great victory for Nixon and Agnew.
The old campaign train's on its way to two terms pulled along by St. Dick and his six pachyderms.

On Mitchell, on Rogers, and General Thieu,
On Spiro, on Connolly and Kissinger too.
Away with a Gallup to the top of the charts crushing McGovern and his bleeding hearts.

What factors account for this dreaded event,
the rise of Dick Nixon, McGovern's descent?
Is it good versus evil as in some shoddy western?
Let's not wait for analyses by Scotty Reston.

Though the harbour was mined with a blockade of sorts
Kosygin was silent and Mao offered "thoughts".
And so Richard was seen as the Man Lion-hearted who knew how to finish what Johnson had started.

Meanwhile voters ignored the "charisma" of Shriver and thought of St. George as a Lady Godiva seducing the young with half-truthes and distortions while lending support for their drugs and abortions.

Nor can we forget McGovern's lament to support Mr. Eagleton 1000 per cent.
Or the sight of the unions embracing rich knaves.
Surely Marx and his "working class" turn in their graves!
The perception of voters was indeed selective.
They took George's preaching as mindless invective.
The bombing of dikes, the corruption of Beard, the wheat deal with Russia. Nobody cared.

Where's the new coalition that seemed to be born and which promised the nation substantial reform?
The Voice of the People solves this mystery:
"What's bugging the Democrats doesn't bug me!"

G. Gordon

FOR GEORGE McGOVERN

A land that knows itself becomes the world.
The man who knows himself may widely roam.
O country of our dreams, O flag unfurled,
Remember this. America, come home!

Joseph Langland

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

ELECT .....
A MAN WITH EXPERIENCE FOR A JOB
WHERE EXPERIENCE COUNTS!
Donald W. (Don) Madsen
For Hampshire County Commissioner

Selectman — 20 years and Former State Representative, Finance Committee Member and Chairman Southampton Industrial Commission.
Past President Amherst Chamber of Commerce Southampton Lions Club, and Hampshire County Selectmen's Assoc.

Member American Legion Post No. 168 and Southampton Grange.
Member of Court House Building Needs Committee.

NORMA FRENCH
Amity St.
Amherst

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

BLUEWALL

NOVEMBER 6 - 12

Mon. T.V. FOOTBALL
TUES. FREE FLICKS
WED. "TEA PARTY"
THUR. "TEA PARTY"
FRI. "TEA PARTY'
SAT. "TEA PARTY"
SUN. "TEA PARTY"

Everywoman's Center Offers Lectures, Workshop

An unique noontime General Awareness Lecture Series for area non-professional women will begin here November 8. Offered by Everywoman's Center, this newly developed five-week program will offer women employees an opportunity to gain information on a variety of subjects, and to share their common experiences as working women.

Mary La Sota, coordinator of Non-professional Sevices at Everywoman's Center has asked women lecturers to offer their knowledge and ideas to women in this initial lecture series in several areas that directly affect the non-professional working woman.

Student-Staff Relationships: What Are We Griping About? leads off the series on Wednesday, November 8, 12:00 to 1:00, Stockbridge 102, UMass. Guest lecturer will be Senator Maggie Houghton of the UMass Undergraduate Student Senate. She will explore some of the provoking areas of conflict and common concerns between students and staff.

Recognition for the Non-Professional Woman will be presented on Tuesday, November 14 in French Hall 102. Chyriene Boyd, a doctoral candidate on the staff of Community Development and Human Relations at the University will discuss some of the ways in which the status of women employees may be improved.

The Meaning of Masculine and Feminine in Different Societies, Wednesday, November 29, in Stockbridge 102, 12:00 to 1:00. The startlingly different kinds of work women and men perform in different cultures, how social definitions may/may not limit a woman's possibilities are a few of the thought-provoking areas to be touched on by Katherine Weinstein of the Valley Women's Center, Northampton.

Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Rescue Breathing, But Were Afraid to Ask, Wednesday, December 6, 12:00 to 1:00, Stockbridge 102. Nina Entrekin, instructor at the School of Nursing, will present a film and discussion on what to do in an emergency, at home or at work, when breathing stops.

Why Natural Foods? Wednesday, December 13, Stockbridge 102, 12:00 to 1:00. Is natural food a fad? or does it really have astonishing benefits for adults as well as children? What are natural foods and how can a working woman with limited time use them practically? will be two questions addressed by nutritionist Michele Bremer who is presently doing research on natural organic diets.

Lectures are free of charge and each will begin promptly at noon and end at 1:00 p.m. Each period will include informal discussion. Women are welcome to bring their lunch with them. Because of limited space, interested women are requested to contact Everywoman's Center, Munson Hall, UMass, as soon as possible to reserve a place. Suggestions from women about future lecture topics and speakers are always welcome.

Everywoman's Center is offering a four-week workshop for non-professional women beginning Monday, November 20th. The series entitled Educational Opportunities for the Non-Professional Woman will be presented by Mary LaSota, Coordinator of Non-Professional Services at the Center. Meetings will take place at the Center during the lunch period from 12 Noon to 1 p.m. Participants will meet in relaxed, informal atmosphere.

Information given during the workshop will be detailed and specificially tailored to fit the needs of the participants. All avenues open on the educational scene in the area will be discussed and reviewed. Each participant's case will be given personal attention so that all enrolled will receive help in course direction and every woman attending the workshop will have her questions answered to fit her particular needs.

Topics discussed will be present job demands, the necessary education for job performance improvement, where to get your education, what kind of courses to take, how to prepare one's self for promotion, College Credit courses, non-college credit courses and personal status as a working woman. additional information regarding careers will be discussed on an individual basis, as well as specific problems related to goal direction.

Ms. LaSota states that all of the positive aspects of education and the opportunities it affords will be emphasized. The workshop is open to all non-professional women whether they are interested in a full Bachelor's program as an ultimate goal, or just a few specific courses that could mean the difference between getting that higher rating or not getting it.

Two of the sessions are expected to be structured and completely informational. Remaining sessions will follow more informal lines where participants will be given the opportunity to explore with one another feelings, needs, goals and potential.

In addition to the workshop for the University women, Ms. LaSota announces that another section will be held for area non-professional women if a sufficient number of women show interest. This workshop will be open to any area non-professional woman who may have been away from the educational scene for a period of time and now wishes to pursue studies.

LSAT WORKSHOP

Classes now forming in preparation for Dec. 16th LSAT. Course will be conducted at Sheraton-Commander Hotel, Cambridge. Course begins Saturday, Nov. 18th. Proven Technique & Methodology.

Verified record of outstanding achievement.

Course created by noted professor.

Staff of experienced, dynamic teachers who have scored WELL OVER 700 in the LSAT.

for Registration & Information Contact:
Law Boards Institute
450 7th Ave.
New York, NY 10001
212-549-1970

Music of Armenia

1255 B.C. — 1972

Free - 8:30 p.m.

Rm. 227 Herter

REFRESHMENTS

'Fearless Fly' To Present 2 Films On Election Eve

Who but that intrepid band of radical funmakers "Fearless Fly" and Project 10 would think of showing one of the world's great revolutionary films as a pre-election returns perspective Tuesday night at 6 p.m.?

The film is Burn, made in 1969 by the same director (Pontecorvo) who filmed The Battle of Algiers, the haunting "documentary" of the Algerian revolution that became a film text for the New Left in America. Burn, which stars Marlon Brando, is a swashbuckling adventure depicting the colonialism in 19th century Latin America and the revolutionary movement which struggles for freedom. The "burn" comes when the government forces set fire to the countryside to destroy the base for the guerrilla army.

There will be two showings Tuesday at 6 p.m., in Pierpont main lounge, and Wednesday at 8:00 in Webster. Admission is free. Any early election returns Tuesday will be announced at the change of reels. The film is sponsored by the radical studies group of Project 10 and Orchard Hill Residential College.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

ELECT THE BEST VOTE DEMOCRATIC

State Senator — John W. Olver — Presently state representative, 2nd Hampshire Dist. Ran-sselaer (B.S.), Tufts (M.S.), M.I.T. (Ph.D.). Faculty member, U. of Mass., on leave.

State Representative — James G. Collins — Asst. director, Upward Bound, U. of Mass. Graduated U. of Mass. (B.A.). Member, Amherst Democratic Town Committee.

State Representative — James R. Nolan — Incumbent (6 terms). Harvard (A.B.), Colombia (M.S.), Portia Law School (L.L.B.).

Governor's Council — Edward M. O'Brien — Incumbent; attorney, past Hampshire County commissioner, secretary to Gov. Foster Furcolo 1956-57. Yale (B.A.), Boston College (L.L.B.).

County Commissioner — Paul R. Dineen — Control analyst for Milton Bradley, graduate of Holyoke Community College. ASVT, treasurer Hampshire Democrats, member Hampshire County Courthouse building committee.

County Commissioner — John Bresnet — Incumbent, chairman, businessman. 35 years town moderator in Williamsburg. Attended Boston University. Past elector and trustee of Oliver Smith Fund.

County Treasurer — William F. O'Connor — Present assistant register of deeds, Hampshire County. Hampshire County Commissioner 18 years on Northampton Planning Board, past chairman Northampton Democratic Committee.

The Amherst Democratic Town Committee endorses these candidates for the above offices. They are men dedicated to the best interests of Hampshire County citizens. We urge you to vote for them November 7th! They deserve your support.

Thank you!

Signed: George Como, 23 Kamina Circle, Amherst

Some of the mystique of India was revealed to the public Saturday evening, as the India Association presented "India Nite." In a humorous and colorful manner, aspects of Indian culture delighted a packed Campus Center Auditorium audience. (MDC Photo by Steve Smith)

'Manpower Planning' Subject Of Speech

The Economics Department and the Labor Relations and Research Center are sponsoring a special colloquium featuring Mr. Nickolai Savenko, Director of Manpower Planning for the city of Springfield. Mr. Savenko will talk on "Manpower Planning in Massachusetts." The colloquium will be held at 2:15 p.m. on Thursday, November 9 in Room 813 of the Campus Center.

Mr. Savenko has had extensive experience in the areas of manpower economics, planning and development. In his present position, he is concerned not only with jobs in the Springfield area but also serves as an advisor to the Area Manpower Planning Council which includes Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire Counties.

He has supervised extensive surveys, developed job projections and cooperated with educational institutions, including the University, in analyzing the job placement possibilities for students. After his address, he will answer questions. He will be introduced by Professor Solomon Barkin of the Economics Department.

Tarzan Is 60, Going Strong

TARZANA, Calif. (AP) - Tarzan is 60 years old and going stronger than ever.

The Edgar Rice Burroughs creation of the ape man is in the midst of a revival that started in France, spread to other European countries, to Japan and back to the United States.

New reprints of the 26 Tarzan books in 16 languages, an art book edition of "Tarzan of the Apes," comic strips, merchandising toys and advertising gimmicks will push the royalty payments to Burroughs' heirs to several million dollars this year. In addition, numerous magazines are published by Tarzan cultists.

The 1972 income will be the highest ever since the first Tarzan book in 1912, said Bob Hodes, general manager of Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., located in a section of Los Angeles named for the ape man in 1930.

The company is housed in an old Spanish style building Burroughs built on the 550 acre Tarzan Ranch-since broke up-and is controlled by his children, John Coleman Burroughs, Hulbert Burroughs and Joan Burroughs Pierce, and a grandson, Danton Burroughs. The copyright would have expired in 1968, but Congress in the process of reviving the Copyright Act, has extended all copyrights.

Not only is the myth of Tarzan undergoing a revival, but Burroughs himself is being elevated to a critical position he never enjoyed before his death in 1950.

In his lifetime Burroughs was regarded as a pulp writer of escapism and many libraries banned his books. Hulbert Burroughs said, "During the important years of his life when he was writing, Dad had the hell panned out of him by the critics. He never took himself seriously but I felt the things the critics said hurt him."

But critics are beginning to find new meaning in his works. Some French critics have compared Tarzan to Rousseau's concept of "the natural man." The works of Burne Hogarth, who drew the Tarzan comic strip from 1937 to the mid 50s and was the artist for the new art book, have been displayed at the Museum of Decorative Arts at the Louvre in Paris.

Burroughs also is being taken seriously as a writer of science fiction books. Sam Moscowitz, writing in his book, "Under the Moons of Mars," said Burroughs humanized science fiction, brought story telling qualities to it and turned it away from the "flashing light" school of science fiction.

'Rain' Tonight

A free concert, featuring "Rain" will be held tonight from 8 p.m. until 1 a.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The concert is sponsored by Students for McGovern. "Rain" has donated their talents to the McGovern campaign in hopes that the concert will rally Election Day support for McGovern.

Any one wishing to work for McGovern, should sign up at the McGovern table in the Campus Center today, or call Ed Scully at 65730.

Hassles about AUTO INSURANCE

SEE THE MAN WHO CAN HELP

Frank D. Lawrence

Insurance Agency

584-0164

304 King St. Northampton

Go To Europe In January

For the first time the UMass academic calendar leaves most of January free. Students will therefore have the possibility of getting involved in an enormous variety of activities and projects. Why not take advantage of the January period to go to Europe?

A Five College charter flight has been organized by the International Programs Office for students, faculty, and staff wanting to go to Europe for the January period. Leaving Boston for Paris December 29 and returning January 20 to Boston, the charter costs only $165 round-trip.

Although procedures have not yet been fully worked out defining how students might obtain academic credit for projects they undertake during January, it seems likely that arrangements will be established for this. Thus, for example, a student majoring in art might spend January in Paris visiting the Louvre and other museums and art galleries and auditing lectures on art, and on the basis of a report or other project agreed to by an appropriate faculty member, earn a credit. Students in education might observe the "open classroom" in action in British infant schools. For majors in theatre, January is often the height of the theatre season in Paris and London. For imaginative students the possibilities for interesting and worthwhile projects in Europe during January are innumerable. January is also a great time to be in Europe because there is no flood of American tourists as in the summer.

Students (and faculty and staff) wanting to spend January in Europe should sign up soon for the Five College charter flight. The deadline is mid-November. The price is considerably less than student fares to Europe. For details contact the International Programs Office, 239 Whitmore.

Television Tonight

5:00 JIM AND TAMMY (18)
MISTERROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD (24) (57)
SUPERMAN (27)
HOGAN'S HEROES (30)

GOMER PYLE (40)
5:30 HOGAN'S HEROES (22)
ELECTRIC COMPANY (24) (57)
GOMER PYLE (27)
BEVERLY HILLBILLIES (30)
NEWS (40)

5:55 WHAT'S HAPPENING (3)
6:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (8) (22)
12 O'CLOCK HIGH—"The Jones Boys" (18)
HODGEPODGE LODGE (24) (57)
PETTICOAT JUNCTION (27)
TO TELL THE TRUTH (30)
WILD WILD WEST—"Night of the Bogus Bandits" (40)
6:30 NEWS WITH WALTER CRONKITE (3)
ABC EVENING NEWS (8)
NBC NIGHTLY NEWS (22) (30)
DESIGNING WOMEN (24)
MOVIE—"Merrill's Maurauders" (27)
NURSING PROCESS (57)
7:00 MOVIE—"The Reluctant Astronaut" (3)
TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES—Bob Barker, host
DICK VAN DYKE—"Big Max Calvada" (18)
NEWS (22) (30)
OPEN LINE (24)
ABC EVENING NEWS (40)
STATE HOUSE CANDIDATES (57)
7:30 LET'S MAKE A DEAL—Monty Hall, host (8)
MOVIE—"Last Train From Bombay" (18)
HOLLYWOOD SQUARES (22)
MOUSE FACTORY—Host, Ken Berry (30)
POLKA—Frank Knight, host (40)
THE REPORTERS (57)
8:00 POLITICAL TELECAST FOR THE INDEPENDENT PARTY (8) (40)
ROWAN'S AND MARTIN'S LAUGH-IN—Guest: Don Rickles. (22) (30)
HOLLYWOOD TELEVISION THEATRE—"Awake and Sing" (24) (57)
8:25 COMMUNIST PARTY POLITICAL TELECAST (8) (40)
8:30 McGOVERN POLITICAL BROADCAST (8) (40)
LAUREL AND HARDY (27)

9:00 HERE'S LUCY (3)

NFL FOOTBALL (8) (40)
700 CLUB (18)
MAGIC CARPET (22) (30)

9:30 DORIS DAY (3)
9:40 STATE OF CONNECTICUT (24)
10:00 McGOVERN POLITICAL BROADCAST (3)
HARTFORD CHARTER REVISION (24)
NEWS (27)
NEWS (57)
10:30 NIXON POLITICAL BROADCAST (3)
MOVIE—"Home of the Brave" (27)
HOW DO YOUR CHILDREN GROW (57)
11:00 NEWS, SPORTS, AND WEATHER (3) (18) (22) (30)
ELECTION '72: AS THE VOTERS SEE IT (24)
ELECTION PROGRAM (57)

Lawyer Claims Jury Picked For Leniency

BOSTON (AP) - A defense lawyer in the Harrisburg conspiracy trial said a team of psychologists was employed to help pick a jury favorable to the Rev. Philip Berrigan and six other anti-war defendants.

The jury last April voted 10-2 for acquittal on government charges of conspiracy to kidnap presidential advisor Henry Kissinger and blow up Washington, D.C., heating tunnels.

Tom Mannaker, one of the defense attorneys, sud Saturday at the annual meeting of the New England Psychological Association that the jury would have been less favorable toward the defendants if the scientists had not aided in jury selection.

The researchers, aided by about 50 volunteers, interviewed a cross section of registered voters in the Harrisburg, Pa. area to determine the relationship between political attitudes and such demographic characteristics as age, occupation and religion.

Menaker said the material collected was used by the defense lawyers, including former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, in negotiating with Judge R. Dickson Herman on questions to be asked prospective jurors.

Menaker said the scientists involved were Jay Schulman, assistant sociology professor at City College of New York; Richard Christie, psychology professor, and Philip Shaver, assistant psychology professor, both of Columbia University; Robert Coleman, assistant psychology professor, and Barbara Emrich psychology graduate student, both of Pennsylvania State University.

ELECTION HOTLINE 5-2550

Amherst Seafood Market

103 No. Pleasant

FRESH FISH DAILY

SCROD BLUEFISH
SOLE SWORDFISH
FLOUNDER HADDOCK

FRESH MAINE STEAMERS

Northampton
Jerry Lewis Cinemas
Rt. 5 586-3209

Bicycle Thief

(1949)

directed by Victorio De Sica

Presented by

C. C. Program Council Director's Series

TONIGHT CC163

Mon., Nov. 6 one show at 8:00

Leopold Teraspulsky, cellist on the UMass staff will give a recital tonight at 8:00 P.M. in Bowker Auditorium.

Boy Enters Beauty Contest

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP)-Andrew J. Josephs, 17, who has long hair but little else that would qualify him as a beauty queen, says he will enter the city's winter carnival queen contest this year.

"The contest's object should not be to choose a queen but to pick a representative of the city's young people-male or female," said the six foot, 215 pound high school student.

"General appearance shouldn't make any difference."

Josephs said he has filled out an application blank but has not yet submitted it to the sponsoring city Parks and Recreation Department.

"I hope they'll accept the application because it's illegl to discriminate by sex," he said.

Adni To Make US Debut Here

Daniel Adni, whom many of the world's leading pianists have described as one of the most promising, young artists, will make his American debut with two recitals here.

Concerts in Bowker Auditorium are scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 9, and Friday, Nov. 10, at 8 p.m. and are under the auspices of the University's Fine Arts Council's Celebrity Series.

Mr. Adni is a native of Israel and received his musical education there under the tutelage of Prof. Enrico Barenboim (father of the noted conductor/pianist, Daniel Barenboim) In 1967 Yehudi Menuhin visited Israel, heard the young 15-year-old Adni perform, and arranged to send Adni to London for study at the Royal College of Music and to Paris for lessons with Vlado Perlmutter at the Paris Conservatory of Music.

Mr. Adni made his London debut in Wigmore Hall on his 19th birthday, and on the basis of that performance, was asked to perform as soloist with The New Philharmonia Orchestra under Otto Klemperer's direction, in Royal Festival Hall. Since these two events, Mr. Adni has continued to perform throughout Great Britain as a recitalist and soloist with other leading orchestras and has just recorded two albums for E.M.I., one of which is devoted to the works of Debussy and has been heralded as one of the finest recordings of that composer's music.

Daniel Adni will offer two completely different programs when he visits UMass, including works by Beethoven, Prokofiev, Ravel and Brahms.

Reserved tickets are available at $3 ($1.50 for full-time UMass undergraduates) and may be purchasd through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall in Amherst, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium one hour prior to each concert.

Legal Offices Merge

Effective November 1, the three Western Massachusetts legal service offices (Neighborhood Legal Services of Springfield, Community and Regional Legal Assistance of Holyoke and Chicopee, and Berkshire Legal Services, Pittsfield) became one regional office, to be known as Western Massachusetts Legal Services, Inc.

Attorney William Fitzgerald, presently Director of the Community and Regional Legal Assistance Program in Holyoke, will be acting Executive Director until the Regional Board of Directors names a permanent Director. The directors of the other branch offices are Mr. Gary Fenton in Springfield and Mr. Philip Vachon in Pittsfield.

The three legal services offices previously provided legal aid, advice and counseling to persons of low income in the above-mentioned areas. They sought out on an individual basis unique problems effecting primarily indigent people and attempted to solve them through the legal system. They also sponsored many legal education programs in their areas, but many times their attempts lead only to frustration.

According to Fitzgerald, the regionalization was undertaken "to give Western Massachusetts legal services more leverage in funding and implementing programs, to develop access to legal services for more Western Massachusetts residents, especially in Franklin and Hampshire counties, and to cut down on administrative expenses."

Except for small changes in the internal operation of each office to make them compatible with each other, no major changes in any of the three offices are expected before 1974.

For Alternatives to Abortion

CALL

LIFELINE - 584-8816

or write

LIFELINE

P.O. Box 6

Florence, Mass. 01060

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Chevy Impala 65, 4 bbl 283, 3 speed Hurst 200, needs new tires, fall sticker. Call 549-3706 and leave name and number.
tf11-7

1970 VW Bus, exc. cond., sun roof, new eng. & clutch, 5 exc. tires. 1967 Honda 160 street bike, best offer. 545-0268, days, or 665-1160 eve.
tf11-4

69 Triumph GT-6, after 6, 323-0541 or 788-7919 days.
tf11-7

1963 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cupboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window. $550. 546-6555.
tf11-7

68 Oldsmobile 442 gray/blue, 4 spd., posi., mags, excellent engine, new clutch, very good body, sell or trade for 68-70 van. $1250, Eric 545-2304.
tf11-4

1971 Honda car, excellent cond. 40 mi. per gal. $1,100, call 546-6827.
tf11-8

1970 VW, excellent condition, snow tires included. $1250, call Ed at 367-9375 or 665-1921.
tf 11-7

'68 VW '63 engine - snow tires - good funky car - needs battery and muffler, $100 - 665-1921.
tf 11-7

69 MGB with Radial tires, new valves, alternator and water pump. Needs new clutch. $750. Call 584-3219.
tf11-8

66 Chevy, Belair, V8, pow. steer. Needs some work. Good condition. $250. 665-2093 keep trying
tf11-10

1960 Ford, Falcon dependable. Will get you anywhere you wanna go. Fall inspection sticker $75, or B.O. Bruce 323-7800.
tf11-10

TO SUBLET

68 Cougar, V-8 auto. ex. cond., new radials, valve job, many extras, call Ray 256-6017.
tf 11-4

1960 Chevy, Belair, in good condition only $100. Also 1963 Volkswagon bus, needs some body work, call 665-3217.
tf 11-9

Exc. all-afound trans. 1968 Chevy van tape deck, sink, ice box, stove, snows, automatic, barnboards. Must see, hear, feel. Chris Kath, 545-2119.
tf 11-4

Honest M, 63 Buick special, wagon PS, PB auto V8, good front end, and brakes, needs muffler and tune up, $85. 1-628-3294.
tf 11-9

DRIVING ENTHUSIASTS! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with less than 5,000 miles and still on and Semperet steel belted radials, all with less than 3,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2020, after 5.
tf11-6

MISCELLANEOUS

Make the fat cat pay his fair share. With a graduated income tax. Vote YES on question 6.
tf11-6

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548.
tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math. Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3601.
tf12-13

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-523-4436.
tf11-17

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1440.
tf11-9

Passport photos, fast fast service, LANG'S photo, 197 N. Pleasant St., Amherst — 253-5607. Located in center of town near Wearhouse.
tf11-6

ROOMMATE WANTED

Won't discriminate M. or F. roommate wanted, own room, open minded ungrad, pretty clean $85/mo. $100 dep. 345 Puffton 549-0657, Frank.
tf11-8

Female roommate wanted, for house in Northampton. Own room. $58/mo & utls. Car necessary. Call Patricia 586-2942 or 545-0065.
tf11-7

Roommate needed for apt. rg Sunderland, own bedroom, util. included, $92.00, call Bob 665-3216.
tf11-7

APT. FOR RENT

Sunderland, new 2 bdrm., incl. util., dw, a/c, disposl, pool, lease to Aug. 31, or less w/r to sublet, $200 Skibiski 253-7222 or 2626 eve.
tf 11-9

Seeking 3 bedroom apt. Jan. 1. Puffton, call 253-5821 between 5 & 7.
tf11-6

LOST

Lost, gold rimmed eyeglasses, reward, call Russ, 253-5677. Lost in vicinity of G. Washington.
tf11-8

A Tissot watch, black leather band, square face, lost Fri., Oct. 27 in Southwest area. Please call 4-8507.
tf11-7

ENTERTAINMENT

WOODY ALLEN'S FIRST "WHAT'S UP TIGER LILY?" IN COLOR & "MISSION TO MOSCOW" STARRING D. NIXON — SAT., NOV. 11, MAHAR AUD., 7-9-11.
tf11-10

Tonite! See Howard Cosell and football on the giant screen at The Bluewall.
tf11-4

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1972 Norton 750 Roadster with full fairing. 1100 mil, $1600. Call 253-3021.
tf11-7

HELP WANTED

Anyone interested in working for John Miller, Election Day, please attend informal reception. Van Meter, No. Rec. Room, Fri. 7:30 p.m.
tf11-12

Friendly Ice Cream, King St., N'Hamp, has openings part/full time days/evenings. Weekend availibility/own car required. Call 584-0555.
tf11-8

Students needed. Hours & wages neg. Apply in person Hadley Pizza & Sub, next to McDonalds in Northampton.
tf11-8

Wanted R.N. or L.P.N. one nurse 2 days a week, 7-3 shift, and one nurse 2 days, 3-11 shift. Cozy Corner Nursing Home, Sunderland, 665-2740.
tf 11-13

Help wanted — Liberal commissions working for us, car is necessary, apply at The Hungry — U 256-6350.
tf11-17

Models needed — for photo essay — figure studies, etc. No exp. neec. — Strictly prof., situation 510 per hour. Call 584-9797 Bet. 5-5:30 p.m.
tf11-8

Do you know Spanish? And do you type? Excelient opportunity for working during next two months. UMass grc. Tele phone 545-2820.
tf11-8

HOMES FOR SALE

10 minutes from cmmpus, 2 bedrooms asking $3,000. Call 253-5534 after 5 p.m.

WANTED

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-4716, 202 Chadbourne House.
tf12-13

Wanted: 2 bedrm. nppt., to lease or sublease Jan - June, within 10-12 mi from campus, call Dick or Joe 546-6207 or Ted 546-6279.
tf11-9

FOR SALE

Ski equip. - 2 pr. Head metal, (210-215 cm) skis, 1 pr. Northland Wood (210 cm), Molitor boots, size 11. All fine cond. Call Bob 367-2340.
tf 11-7

CD great coat. Good, heavy wool. In new condition. Honest! Men's size 40, women's size 9-11. $20 or best offer. Call Ronna 549-0063.
tf 11-7

For sale — 1970 VW Bug, snow tires, excellent condition, 18500 miles. $1150 firm. 256-6350 evenings 253-7945.
tf11-10

Ovation acoustic guitar, excel. cond. $175. Heathkit combo amp. Top. 250 wts. new — $150. Pair for $300., pickup and cord free. 253-2949.
tf11-10

M & F Meal Ticket for sale. Best offer, call Dwighhouse, Tom in 301 keep frying or leave message.
tf11-10

Lady Rosemount ski boots, size 7, worn twice. $90, value $150. Call Noella 546-4148.
tf11-10

Ambassador stereo, 2 mth. old was $300, will sell for $200. Includes 2 air suspension speakers, serious calls only. I need money 6-8610.
tf11-8

Struggling artist must sell 135mm f2.8 Nikkor lens, to pay rent, top condition, want $150, perhaps trade for wide angle. Clark 628-3817.
tf11-7

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Mnny fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1704.
tf-oem.

Try these Shaklee products, new concept, toothpaste, proteinized shnmpoo, basic 1, - laundry granules, 100% biodegradable, Carol, 253-2841.
tf11-6

1970 Rosemount ski boots, excellent condition, fnstback model, size 10 w, asking only $90.00. Call Bill @ 367-9586.
tf11-6

1971 Fender reverb nmp, good for guitar and harp and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279.
tf11-7

Book: "Modern Portugese" for Portugese 126. Excellent condition. Free Port. & Eng. dictionary. Al Cook, 404 MacKemmie, 546-8816.
tf11-7

Revox A-77 Mark II reel-to-reel tape deck. $500. Call 253-5812 days, 253-3351 evenings.
tf11-6

Kodak Ektacolor, professional film type S, ASA 100, CPS 135-36 $2.20 per roll, call Tim, 301 Greenough 5-2842.
tf11-6

Special new tenor recorders, $48, also excellent sopranos, altos at Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Greenfield, 774-2831.
tf12-1

New accoustic guit. from $24. Special 30% off list. on new shipment of classical guitars, Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Grnfld.
tf12-1

Magnatone guitar amp, 100 watts, 4 10" spkrs, 4 channels, rev tremelo on wheels, 1 yr old, list 475-225 or haggle. Eric 545-2304.
tf11-6

Going out of life sale, must sell all possessions, record, leatherwear, 1967 Fiat Squareback. Ask for Hudson Bay No. Hampton 586-2578.
tf11-6

New Univox guitar & bass amps 20% off list, from $100. Creative Endeavor, 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2831.
tf12-1

FOR RENT

4 Bedrooms and 2 baths in Northampton. Now vacant. Call 584-2426 Skibiski. Realtors between 6:30 - 7:00 p.m.
tf11-6

Ski people, bedrooms avail. in warm house near Mt. Snow, Vt. For Season. Fire place, etc. $200., covers all. Call 549-6426 Scott.
tf11-7

Farmhouse to rent, 65 acres, 5 rms, washer - dryer, util., furnished or unfur. S. Chesterfield Rd., Goshen, Call 268-7193 Nites 5-7.
tf 11-7

1 g. rm. in farmhouse apt. $80/mo. for 1 person, $100/mo. for 2, all utilities, kitch. priv. loc. S. Deerfield. Off rt. 116, call 546-6366.
tf 11-7

PERSONAL

Rural Gny Commune near Amherst wants 12 Beautiful Freak people. Box 723, Amherst, Mass.
tf11-14

Chimney sweep from elevator land — do you really jump from towers with a magic umbrella? Death.
tf 11-6

Tim: Happy Birthday to a dedicated charter member. Best wishes for a great year. Love, The Friday Night Smokers Club
tf11-6

Thanks to the Yonua man who drove me to the infirmary and those that assisted. — My nose is O.K.
tf11-7

? Dominas el espanol? ? Sabes escribir a maquina? Oportunidad de trabajo durante los siguientes dos meses UMass grc tel, 545-2820.
tf11-8

FREE

Kittens 8 wks old, black & multi, 549-6070.
tf 11-6

EMPLOYMENT

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2089-MB, Port Angeles, Washington
tf11-22

WANTED

Tutor for Math 114, 665-3216 Ask for Bob.
tf11-7

Private Collector wishes to buy German WW2 Helmets, daggers, hats, medals, uniforms, etc. Top prices pd. Call Split., collect 732-9781
tf11-10

FOR RENT

Beautiful rooms for students, faculty or staff. A stonethrow from campus. Av. Nov. 9/1/73 and/or beyond. Call 549-6397.
tf11-10

Notices

ANIMAL SCIENCE CLUB
Meeting Mon., Nov. 6 at 6:30 in Rm. 803 CC.

CAS PRE NURSING STUDENTS
Two sessions scheduled for open discussion, planning for second semester course selections and whatever your questions are. Mon., Nov. 6 and Tues, 7, at 7:00 p.m. in Morrill IVN 406.

CHEMISTRY CLUB
Discussion on Career and Graduate opportunities tonight in Rm. 151 Goessman, 7:30-9:30.

CHRISTIANS
Fellowship meeting tonight, 811 CC, 7:30 p.m. Everyone welcome.

CULTURAL EXPERIENCE
DVP offers a cultural experience with "White Roots of Peace". Check posters and ask for schedule. All are most cordially welcome.

ENVEDS MAJORS
Of Sylvan Area forming discussion and study groups to help each other out, if interested, come to McNamara 406 at 7:30 p.m. or call Richard 546-4320; Russell, 546-5626.

HUNGRY?
The Hatch is offering a traditional American Indian dinner tonight (4:30 to 7:00) in cooperation with DVP's White Roots of Peace program. Come join us.

INTER VARSITY CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP
Business meeting tonight at 9 p.m.

KOREAN KARATE
Meetings for Tae Kwon Do Club will be held in WoPE Mon. 8-10 p.m. and Commonwealth Rm. S.U. Thurs. 8-10 p.m.

MIRKWOOD
Anyone interested in performing Nov. 11-Sat., please contact Nancy, 546-6658.

MUSIC OF ARMENIA
Open lecture on Armenian Music from earliest times to the present. Lecturer Rouben Gregorian, prof. of music, Boston Conservatory. Rm. 227 Herter at 8:30.

ORCHARD HILL BUS
The campus shuttle bus that runs on Orchard Hill route will NOT be run Tues., Nov. 7, so that the "Voter Special" Shuttle service can go to the Amherst Polling Places. The O.H. bus will be back on route as always Wed.

OUTING CLUB
Pre-trip meeting and exec board meeting tonight at 6:30 in 165 CC. If you are going on the Adirondacks trip, please attend the meeting or contact Bob 6-5391.

SCUBA CLUB
Lesson lecture meeting tonight at 7:00 p.m., 805 CC. Regular pool meeting on Wed. Bring deposit for Fla. trip.

SENATE WOMEN'S CAUCUS
Student Senate Women's Caucus meeting today at 4:00 p.m. in the Senate office. Please come.

SF SOCIETY
All members must bring their membership cards to "Thing" tonight in Mahar.

TONIGHT AT MERKABAH
6:30 Encounter with Jewish Mysticism; 6:30 Basic Judaism; 7:30 Tradition mimi-course; 7:45 Genesis, 8:30 Kuetchin: "American Jew or Jewish American".

VOTER SHUTTLE BUSES
Running from 8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. Tues., Nov. 7 to polling places for elections. Stops to be made at regular transit service stops, on hour and half hour.

WOMEN'S SKI TEAM
There will be a meeting tonight in the WoPE Lounge at 7:00. All those interested are welcome. No previous experience necessary.

DOG HIT BY CAR
Golden retriever hit on N. Pleasant (outside GRS) 12:30 p.m. Fri. Leather collar, no tag. Taken to Dr. Alan Vogel, 185 Locust St., Northampton, 584-9477.

FOUND
One ladies' watch on Oct. 31st in Herter Hall. Please call 545-0202 with description of watch.

One season subscription to Chamber Music series, Thurs., p.m., Nov. 2. Call 546-5488.

Veteran's Seminar

Many rumors have surrounded the passage of the 1972 amendments to the veterans educational laws. The Veterans' Office on campus has had numerous inquiries about the exact contents of the legislation.

Due to these many inquiries the Veterans' Office has provided for a question and answer seminar to be held Wednesday, November 8th from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 163 of the Campus Center. At that time a representative from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Boston will be more than willing to answer any and all questions about the amendments.

All veterans who have any questions about the new Bill should plan to attend.

Why RECYCLE THE SENATOR

John Barrus was writing environmental legislation long before it was popular.

He has written legislation ranging from Save Open Space Referendum #1 to about half of the wording of the Hatch Act.

Earlier this year while other area legislators were arguing the fate of the Montague Plains, John Barrus made his objections to the landfill proposals known through personal correspondence with the Governor and through his membership in the Comm. Natural Resources Committee.

Then he traveled to Franklin Ohio to inspect the Black-Clawson companies solid waste recycling center. He came back with a proposal which would solve Boston's waste problems — and prevent future Montague situations from happening.

This is why we say
RECYCLE THE SENATOR

ALAN MARCUS
17 Prospect St.
Easthampton, Mass

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

The Libra man can be the most physically attractive and the least aggressive of the zodiacal signs. The Libra woman is sensuous but the opposite of vulgar. Women pursue the Libra man. It's difficult for men to break through the Libra woman's apparent detachment. But it can be done and when it occurs there are fireworks and zooming rockets. Some famous persons born under Libra include Brigitte Bardot, Rita Hayworth, Juliet Prowse and Walter Pidgeon.

...

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on getting what you want—do so through social contacts that lead to solid information. Pisces can play important role. See through individual who makes promises, promises. Insist on results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Responsibility is keynoted. You get promoted, perhaps honored. But it all amounts to more work with chance for greater reward. Flattery is fine, but check source. Don't be talked into giving up something for nothing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You go beyond expectations. You can travel or make plans for journey. Long distance calls, messages now could prove of special importance. Finish project. Strive to reach more people with your message.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Aries message. Someone may want to take risks with your money. Insist on having a say about procedure and policy. Don't give up independence. Leo can help clear away emotional debris.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cooperate with Cancer individual. Share knowledge and be compassionate. By giving now, you will reap ultimate benefits. Let others have spotlight. Use this to absorb knowledge. Sharpen tools.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Pace quickens. Don't neglect essentials, including health. Social whirl is featured and you are apt to be in the middle. Sagittarian is featured. Ask questions, answers are available. Check with one in another locale.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct. 22): Cycle is such that creative endeavors are likely to succeed. You break barriers to progress. You accelerate steps toward ultimate goal. Young persons become allies. Be open, receptive and enthusiastic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Changes occur in domestic area. These are changes for the better. There is the excitement of self expression. What was restrictive is replaced by greater freedom. Gemini, Virgo persons are involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You get message which enables you to harmonize special relationship. Speak up, state views, expectations. Others now will be receptive. Make conciliatory gesture to family member. Taurus, Libra persons are in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful with money, more so than you ordinarily might be. Temptation is put before you. Get rich quick scheme might look good. But it would not work. Know it and respond accordingly. See in light of reality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take initiative. Be independent in thought, action. Make new starts in new directions. Your judgment, intuition are on target. Know it and be confident. What had eluded you becomes available. Grab opportunity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What had caused fear is erased. You are free to pursue goal. Aries can aid. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. New vistas open: you feel dynamic, vital and capable. Make something of it!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY recent residence change or domestic adjustment will prove beneficial. You have fine sense of humor. You are magnetic and draw to you members of opposite sex. One you are concerned about bounces back soon from financial setback.

(To find out who's lucky for you in money and love, order Sydney o

(To find out who's lucky for you in money and love, order Sydney Omarr's booklet, "Secret Hints for Men and Women." Send birthdate and 75 cents to Omarr Astrology Secrets, (name of your paper), Box 3240, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.)

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Simian
4 Negative prefix
6 Puzzle
11 Warning
13 Click beetle
15 Man's nickname
16 Fully
18 Sun god
19 Negative prefix
21 Space agency (abbr.)
22 Twirl
24 Sewing case
26 Mother of Apollo
28 Label
29 Commemorative disk
31 Danish island
33 French article
34 Shield
36 Declared
38 Compass point
40 Spanish pot
42 South American animal
45 Dine
47 European
49 Stalk
50 Penpoints
52 Rage
54 Printer's measure
55 Old Testament (abbr.)
56 Bearer
59 Note of scale
61 Feast
63 Fell short
65 Evaluated
66 Teutonic deity
67 Cyprinoid fish

DOWN
1 Collection of facts
2 Courteous
3 Latin conjunction
4 Sacred image
5 Substance
6 Tells
7 Cloth measure
8 Bodies of water
9 Guido's low note
10 Continued story
12 Pronoun
14 Roam
17 On the ocean
20 Impolite
23 Liquid measure (abbr.)
24 Printer's measure
25 Shakespearian character
27 Spoken
30 Rhythmical swing
32 Lubricates
35 Disparaged
37 Tropical fruit
38 Spanish title
39 Restaurant employee
41 Sandarac tree
43 Repaired
44 Part of "to be"
46 Tuberculosis (abbr.)
48 Cutting instrument
51 Command to cat
53 Rip
57 Beverage
58 A state (abbr.)
60 Poem
62 A state (abbr.)
64 Chinese mile

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Pro Football Roundup

Giants Break Broncos

NEW YORK (AP)-New York's long-distance Giants marched 92, 80 and 65 yards for touchdowns Sunday and Jim Files scored with an interception to sock Denver 29-17 in the National Football League.

The Giants stockpiled a 19-0 first-half lead and held off a flurry by the Broncos that included a 55-yard scoring burst by Floyd Little.

New York, 5-3, remained in contention in the National Conference East.

Tight end Bob Tucker sailed 13 yards on a reverse to give New York a 6-0 edge and, after starting running back Charlie Evans suffered a broken leg, rookie Joe Orduna scored from one yard to make it 13-0.

Twenty seconds after Orduna's touchdown, the 240-pound Files intercepted a Charlie Johnson pass and rumbled 37 yards to make it 19-0 just 15 seconds before the half.

Denver, 2-6, got its first real chance when cornerback Charlie Greer stole the ball from Tucker after a 10-yard completion. Greer's theft ignited a march that wound up in a 14-yard scoring pass from running back Bob Anderson to rookie tight end Riley Odoms.

But it wasn't enough and the Giants went on with win.

Dolphins Win Again

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)-The undefeated Miami Dolphins rolled to their eighth National Football League victory Sunday, getting 12 points from Garo Yepremian and two touchdowns from Mercury Morris, as they whipped the Buffalo Bills 30-16.

Yepremian booted three field goals, from 33, 17 and 16 yards, and kicked three extra points. Morris' touchdowns came on runs of 22 and five yards.

Miami struck early, scoring at 4:44 on Yepremian's 33-yard three-pointer. After 12 Buffalo plays on the next sequence, the Dolphins were down for the only time in the game as Buffalo rookie Randy Jackson took a 14-yard scoring pass from Dennis Shaw.

The Dolphins needed only five plays to set the stage for Morris' 22-yard TD jaunt on the last play of the first period.

In the second, Miami pushed the Bills from their 35 back to the 22, aided by a holding penalty. There, Spike Jones received a poor pass from center, punted on the run and the ball traveled only six yards.

Yepremian followed with his second field goal and, a short time later, his third.

Just before the first half ended, Buffalo's Tony Greene intercepted an Earl Morrall pass and raced 39 yards into the end zone.

In the third period, Morrall hit Marv Fleming with a seven-yard scoring pass and John Leypoldt put three points on Buffalo's scoreboard with a 28-yard field goal.

Miami cosed out the scoring in the fourth as Morris, who carried 11 times for 106 yards, raced five yards.

Steelers, 40-17

PITTSBURGH (AP)-The Pittsburgh Steelers took a 26-0 halftime lead with the help of two of Terry Bradshaw's three touchdown passes, then went on to trounce the Cincinnati Bengals 40-17 Sunday and take sole possession of the lead in the Central Division of the American Football Conference.

Both teams entered the game tied for the lead with 5-2 records, but Pittsburgh got a break early when Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson lost a funble on his first snap from center.

Defensive end Dwight White recovered at the Bengal seven-yard line and John Fuqua burst off tackle for the first Steeler touchdown on the next play.

Two series later, Glen Edwards returned a punt 54 yards to the Cincinnati 13, setting up a 15-yard field goal by Roy Gerela that staked Pittsburgh to a 10-0 lead at 12:49 of the opening period.

Gerela added a 22-yard field goal early in the second quarter, and the Steelers drove 84 yards in just four plays for a touchdown on their very next series.

Franco Harris ran twice for 27 yards and caught a Bradshaw pass for 29 before the Steeler quarterback hit Lewis with a 28-yard scoring toss that put pittsburgh ahead 19-0.

Cincinnati made its first penetration beyond the 50-yard line on its next series, but linebacker Henry Davis intercepted an Anderson pass and returned it 28 yards to the Steeler 47.

With just 1:35 left in the half, Pittsburgh put together a six-play scoring drive that ended when Bradshaw found tight end Larry Brown in the end zone on a 14-yard pass.

Hill Wins Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Mike Hill calmly and methodically turned back the challenge of Lee Trevino with a carefully constructed 69 and won the $25,000 first prize Sunday in the Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Hill, who held the lead from the second round on, refused to falter in the growing pressure of the move by Trevino and finished with a 72-hole total of 273.

This is 15 under par on the 7,011-yard Woodlake golf club course and secured Hill's second tour triumph by two shots over Trevino, the British Open champion and pre-tourney favorite.

Trevino, winner of four titles this season, closed out his season's play with a final round 67-matching the day's best round-for second at 275.

He picked up a total of $14,800 and notched his seccnd consecutive $200,000 season at $214,805.

Phil Rodgers also had a 67 and took third in this tournament that was being revived after a two-year absence from the pro schedule. He had a 277 total.

Tied at 210 were Canadian Ben Kern, Brad Anderson, Bobby Nichols, Puerto Rican veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez and former Masters champion Charles Coody.

Coody was alone in second three strokes back of Hill when the final round started but went to a 71, while Rodriguez' challenge went by the boards when the wiry veteran pumped one in the water on the 16th hole. He still had a 68, Kern took a 67 and Anderson and Nichols also notched 68s.

Billy Casper, still looking for his first victory of the year, managed only a par-matching 72 for 282, well back.

Hill, younger brother of controversial Dave Hill, saw his lead shrink to two strokes at the end of nine holes when Trevino, one of his playing partners, made a charge with a front nine 33, three under par.

Skins, 35-17

NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Kilmer connected on touchdown passes covering 45, 70 and 89 yards and the Washington Reskins blunted Joe Namath's aerial attack with three interceptions to beat the New York Jets 35-17 Sunday in National Football League play.

Kilmer, restored to the position of Redskins' No. 1 quarterback following the achilles tendon injury last week which sidelined Sonny Jurgenson, had little trouble finding wide-open receivers both nearby and deep in the Jets' secondary.

He got the Redskins on the scoreboard barely two minutes into the game. With the ball on the New York 45-yard-line, he lofted a pass that Roy Jefferson caught on the five between Earlie Thomas and Chris Farasopoulos and took into the end zone.

The Jets tied it 7-7 with 50 seconds remaining in the period, marching 40 yards in seven plays, with John Riggins plowing over from one yard out.

In the second period, New York went ahead on Bobby Howfield's 13-yard field goal-but the Redskins grabbed the lead for good just two minutes later at the 12:20 mark.

With a third-and-one situation on the Washington 30 and the Jets blitzing, Kilmer found Charley Taylor behind a badly beaten Farasopoulos and Steve Tannen at midfield, hit him perfectly and the wide receiver literally loped into the end zone.

Lions Roar

DETROIT (AP) - Quarterback Greg Landry guided two first-half touchdown drives as the Detroit Lions topped Chicago 14-0 Sunday in a battle of two National Football Conference Central Divsion rivals in which Bears quarterback Bobby Douglass set a rushing record.

Landry threw four interceptions in the second half but they made little difference as one-yard plunges from Steve Owens in the first and Landry in the second period held up for the Lions fifth triumph against three losses.

It was the first shutout by Detroit since the final game of the 1970 season, and kept the Lions at least tied for first in their division of the National Conference. The Bears are now 3-4-1.

Douglass went into the game needing 27 yards to eclipse the record of 530 yards set last year by Landry. Douglass ran for 28 yards in the first half and finished with 52 for 556 yards this season.

But Landry, running the option like a college wishbone-T quarterback, ended up with 71 yards in eight carries, including a 38-yard keeper which set up his touchdown in the second quarter.

Owens' touchdown climaxed a 16-play, 78-yard drive late in the first period.

Cornerback Joe Taylor of Chicago intercepted two Landry passes in the second half, one on the Bears' eight and the other in the Bears' end zone.

But Douglass was unable to get the offense in gear when Chicago had the ball and numerous Bears' illegal procedure penalties hurt.

JV Harriers at Boston

By WALT POWERS

The junior varsity Cross-Country team hopes to cap a successful 6-2 season this afternoon, with a victory in the New England J.V. championship meet, which will be held at Boston's Franklin Park. Last year in the New Englands, a veteran UMass team finished second to Providence.

This year's team is young. Tom Wilson, the only sophomore on the team, ran primarily with the varsity this season, and won his only two J.V. starts. The other six runners are freshmen. Mike Conlin was the ninth runner on the varsity team, and this is his first J.V. race. Mike Gillen finished strong, winning his last two J.V. races, and Phil Broughton, Joe Martins, and Eric Ruth have been consistently among the leaders throughout the year.

Most of the competition should come from Northeastern, Providence, and possibly Dartmouth. N.U., led by Kevin Hartford, and Mike Hickey, handed UMass its second defeat early in the year, and Providence lost to UMass by a small margin in the opening meet of the season.

Bolstered by Conlin and Wilson, the UMass J.V.'s should make a strong bid for the New England title.

Frosh Gridders Rip BC Frosh

By GEOFFREY KURINSKY

Everything went right for the Minutemen frosh on a cold, windy, and rainy Sunday afternoon at Chestnut Hill as the men from Massachusetts went Eagle-hunting at BC's Alumni Stadium and came out a 45-26 crunching victory over the disorganized BC freshman squad.

The Minutemen were hungry, the Eagles simply were not. They looked like they would rather have been someplace else on this raw afternoon, as they blew assignments, had busted plays by the handful and turned the ball over to the Minutemen time and time again.

The Minutemen, on the other hand, were spectacular at times and nothing less than good the rest of the game. Take the first thirteen minutes for example, when the frosh could do nothing wrong as they ran up a 19-0 lead.

Apparently the frosh do not like seeing a "O" hung next to their name on the scoreboard. Billy Gelsomino almost took the "O" down on the first play of the game as he busted up the middle and took the opening kickoff 78 yards before he was tripped up at the BC 18. Quarterback Larry Harriman wasted no time and on the first play from scrimmage he found wide receiver Mark Finnerty in the end zone and the "O" on the scoreboard was gone after only 17 seconds of play (it took 22 seconds last week against Rhode Island.) The Eagles couldn't figure out what hit them. After Mark Kneeland's PAT it was 7-0.

On the next sequence of downs the Eagles proved they were not dead as they drove all the way down to the UMass 20, only to be stopped on downs by the stingy UMass defense which did everything well on this miserable afternoon.

Harriman then led the Minutemen back up the field with fullback Bob Wolfe doing most of the work before Jim Torrance went over from the two. Kneeland's PAT was blocked, the score staying at 13-0.

It would be an injustice to go any further without mentioning the name of Bob Wolfe again. Wolfe did everything but drive the team bus back to Amherst as he continuously picked up good chunks of yardage and ignited the crowd with an electrifying 85 yard run in the second half. On the day all Wolfe did was pick up 201 yards on 24 carries and set the precedent for the offense which moved the ball at will against the Eagles until the late stages of the game.

The third UMass score was a thing of beauty. After the Minutemen had moved the ball to the 22 yard line, following a short BC punt, little Jerry Mondalto went through about six BC tacklers and sniffed his way into the end zone on a great individual effort. Again the PAT was muffed and the Minutemen were in command by 19-0.

Something went wrong here; the Eagles did something right, something that wasn't in the script. Eagle quarterback John Sullivan, who along with Harry Rosa, was harassed all afternoon by the frosh defense, found his wide receiver Dave Zumback who hauled in the pass at the UMass 30 and outran the secondary into the end zone.

The Eagles were unsuccessful in the two point conversion attempt and they were in contention, 19-6. Zumback was one of the few bright spots for the Eagles as he snared five passes for 120 yards.

The Eagles came out fighting in the second half and actually scored again as they took the second half kickoff and moved down the field with quarterback Rosa going over from the two. An unsuccessful conversion left the score at 19-12 UMass.

Mistakes proved costly to BC in the next few minutes of the third quarter as the UMass frosh went on to score 19 points in a short period of time and put the escaped Eagles back where they belonged.

The dice rolled correctly for the Minutemen as after a UMass fumble recovery, halfback Mondalto was going into the end zone when the ball popped free. Fortunately for the Minutemen, split end Mark Finnerty was in the right place and he pounced on the ball for his second touchdown of the day. After a blocked PAT, the score was 25-12, UMass.

The lightning struck. After the Minutemen got the ball on a BC punt, Bob Wolfe streaked 85 yards on the first play in scoring what proved to be the winning touchdown. The two-point conversion failed but on the following kickoff UMass recovered a BC fumble and three plays later Jim Torrance went in for his second TD, from the three. Kneeland converted, making it 38-12.

To round out the scoring the Eagles came up with a couple of TD's against the UMass subs. UMass' final tally came when quarterback Tom Rohan found Gary Tabis in the end zone for a 19 yard TD pass.

The defense had another good day as they took the ball away from BC eight times; three by interceptions and five by fumble recoveries. Leading the way for the unit was defensive back Dave Temby who picked off two passes and pounced on a fumble.

The frosh play the UConn Huskies JV squad at Alumni Stadium Friday at 2 p.m.

INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL PLAYOFF action shows Baker hitting on a pass against Hills. (MDC Photo by Frank Morra)

Unbeaten Streak Ends at Six

UMASS QUARTERBACK MARK TRIPUCKA gets a pass away under heavy pressure from the Bucknell defense on Saturday. Tripucka replaced Peil Pennington in the third quarter. (MDC Photo by Dan Kamal)

By EARLE BARROLL

LEWISBURG, Pa. - The residents of this small town have added another dimension to their already impressive list of everyday topics that includes the imprisonments of Jimmy Hoffa and Daniel Berrigan.

It comes at the expense of the UMass football team as Bucknell University (5-2) knocked the Minutemen (6-1) from the ranks of the undefeated--as well as giving the pollsters a chance to dish out some of their medicine--with a stunning 28-15 upset here on Satuday.

In the process the Bisons were winning "one of the greatest victories in the history of Bucknell," said head coach Fred Pender.

In the same process the Minutemen ran the gamut of just about everything you wouldn't expect from a team that has performed as well as they have so far this year.

Not only did Peil Pennington have the worst day of his career (9 for 31 and four interceptions). Not only did the offensive and defensive lines perform in practically non-existant fashion. Not only did the defensive secondary look like it had never seen a pass before.

But on top of all this "They just plain beat us," said head coach Dick MacPherson after the game in a lockerroom that was in dead silence. "You (the press) saw it as well if not better than we did."

The Bisons tried something that no team outside of Harvard has tried with any wealth of success and consistancy this season. And it paid off.

"We felt from the scouting reports and the game films that we could take the ball right at them," explained Pender. "We used a lot of motion and action passes as well as running the ball up their middle".

On the otherhand the Minutemen could only muster a one-play first half, a one series third quarter (after Pennington was benched in favor of Mark Tripucka) and a five minute period in the fourth quarter that represented the only time in the game that UMass had the tempo on their side.

Behind the passing of sophomore Don Rubright who was getting his first start (13 for 23) and the running duo of Bob Langan (88 yds) and Mitch Farbstein (113 yards) the Bisons opened up an unbelievalbe 21-0 lead after only 21 minutes of action.

Langan scored on runs of 16 and ten yards (the first through a whole big enough to fit a Mack truck) and Farbstein tallied from four yards out.

The only UMass counter in the entire half came on a Pennington to Schubert 66 yard play ala the UConn game as Steve split two Bison defenders with a burst of speed to paydirt.

The Minutemen closed the gap to 21-15 at 13:52 in the third quarter after the appearance of Tripucka at the 7:30 mark of the same period. This also marked the first time in Pennington's career that he's been benched. Nine plays and 42 yards later Mark found Paul Metallo with an eight-yard strike and followed with a two-point pitch to Tim Berra.

On the very next series the defense held the Bisons were forced to punt and Tripucka and company on another scamper down the field that ended on a gamble that MacPherson wants to blame himself with.

The situation was this: It was fourth and four at the Bucknell 41 with still eleven minutes to play. MacPherson went for the first down, but a Tripucka pass attempt was batted down and from then on the momentum swung back to Bucknell, and a resultant Farbstein score in the waning moments.

"We had the momentum with us," said MacPherson. "We finally had it turned around and we should have kept it. I violated the rules of good football. It was my decision and I took it away from them. We were operating out of a well from there on, I have no excuse. I feel awful bad that I did it. It's not good coaching."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Bruins Start Fast; Take Canucks 4-2

VANCOUVER (AP) - Boston bombed Vancouver goalie Ed Dyck for three quick goals Sunday and the Bruins coasted to a 4-2 National Hockey League victory.

Johnny Bucyk, Ken Hodge and Carol Vadnais built the fat lead for the Stanley Cup champions and Phil Esposito tacked on an insurance goal before a crowd of 15,576.

Gerry O'Flaherty and Richard Lemieux whacked shots past Bruin goalie Ed Johnston, but the Canucks never got within two goals.

Bucyk's backhanded rocket gave the Bruins a 1-0 edge and Hodge's slow roller made it 2-0. Vadnais scored from center ice to make it 3-0 before O'Flaherty hit for Vancouver. Esposito coasted in from the left wing for his eighth goal of the season to make it 4-1 and Lemieux scored on a slap shot for the Canucks, who are mired in seventh place in the Eastern Division.

Booters Tie

The UMass varsity soccer team played a surprisingly tough Vermont team to a 0-0 draw at Burlington Saturday morning. Carl Vercollone turned in a fine job at goal, while Co-Captain Dave Ouellette and Joe Cerniawski assisted him with good efforts at their fullback positions.

"This was a well fought game," commented Coach Gerry Redmond, "and considering the large home crowd, and the cold, wet weather, they played very well. The Vermmont defense was a lot better than Connecticut's and we just couldn't seem to penetrate for a score."

The Minutemen had several opportunities for a score, but just could not connect. Ceriawski came the closest to getting the game winner when his head shot bounced off the cross-bar with just two minutes left in the game.

URI and UNH played to a 1-1 tie in Durham in the only other YanCon game this past weekend. Connecticut continues to lead the league with a 4-1 record, followed by UNH and URI at 3-1-1. UMass has a chance for a second place tie if it beats UNH and URI loses to UConn in the final games of the year.

Harriers Vie For NE Title

By WALT POWERS

This is it. The race. The meet the Harriers have been training for all season long: The New England championship meet.

Thirty-six schools will be competing in this meet, which will be held this afternoon in Boston. The field is very strong. Eight teams appear to have at least an outside shot at winning it, and nearly every team boasts at least one strong frontrunner.

This is a meet where won-lost records have little meaning, and where the winner is usually a team that can combine strong potential with psychological preparedness. A team cannot afford an off-day from a single runner, and hope to win the meet.

Last year, Providence got outstanding performances from each member of the team, and upset the favored Northeastern team. An inexperienced UMass team did not run its best race, but just missed taking the runner-up spot. Dartmouth, the 1970 champ, was fourth.

This year, Northeastern, on the basis of its stunning upset over Harvard in the Greater Boston meet, is favored again. N.U., however, has never won the New Englands, and they'll be running against a UMass team that has improved markedly since the beginning of the season, when N.U. defeated UMass by a score of 25-30.

The meet could turn on the team split. In that earlier meet, UMass took both first and second place, but 69 seconds separated the first and fifth UMass finishers. N.U.'s team split was 29 seconds in that race. Last week in winning the Yankee Conference championship the UMass split was only 22 seconds, and both teams have a powerful, nearly evenly matched, top five.

Providence, the defending champ, isn't as strong a team as they were last year, and have not been overly impressive in the last few weeks. Dartmouth is strong, and should do well, but doesn't appear capable of challenging a strong effort by N.U., or UMass.

After that, there are a number of good teams, Springfield, Cent. Conn., U.R.I., all conceivably have a shot at winning it. More likely, however, they will be battling for third or fourth.

The race should produce a good battle for the individual championship. Last year's champ, Dan Moynihan of Tufts, will be back to defend his title. He is favored to repeat, but he'll face competition from a number of runners, led by last year's runner-up, Charley Duggan of Springfield. Steve Ellis of Cent. Conn., Bill Cantin of UConn, and Tom Cappazutto of B.C. should be up there, as well as a good portion of the UMass and N.U. teams.

UMass will run almost the same team that won the conference meet a week ago. Sophomores Randy Thomas and Bill Gillin have been running one-two for the team all year, and have been consistent frontrunners. Freshman Tom Maguire has held down the No. three position for most of the season, and last week, battled the leaders all the way, to finish fifth in the conference meet. Doug O'Connell and Rick Barry haven't hit their peak yet, and Chris Chambers, the veteran road runner competing in his first full season of intercollegiate cross-country, ran his best race of the year last week. Pete Crisci joined the top seven only recently. In two consecutive races he's lost only to Charley Duggan of Springfield, and Cent. Conn's Steve Ellis. "Peter is experienced and extremely competitive, especially in the big meets. He'll add a lot to the team", said coach Ken O'Brien.

Its' going to be a fast, tough, race. O'Brien knows it and so does the team. Beating Northeastern won't be easy. When asked about his team's chances, O'Brien just smiled.

Frank Antosiewicz

Some Thoughts on the YanCon

By FRANK ANTOSIEWICZ

In New England, the major conference is the Ivy League. Then there is that other league--The Yankee Conference. The Ivies have over the years proven themselves as an exciting, well-matched league. On any given afternoon, the man in the street has an upset to marvel about, as no one runs away with the title. This weekend, Yale surprised Dartmouth and Penn upset Harvard, to rearrange the standings with the Bulldogs leading by a 1/2 game.

The Ivies are known for a certain type of football. A typical game is usually decided by the bounceof the ball, as the underdog manages somehow to either beat or tie the favorite.

On the other hand, stands the Yankee Conference. UMass is usually battling UConn, or perhaps Rhody for the title. These are usually respectable games and there is a rivalry factor.

These two schools have comparable athletic ability in the major sports. In some sports, such as cross country the competition serves as a springboard to the New England scene.

Next comes Vermont and Maine. In the past ten years in football (1963-72), Maine has beaten UMass only once, while losing nine. Vermont is in tougher straights, as they have not beaten the Minutemen, since 1954.

In basketball it is the same story, with the same threesome vying for the title. Vermont and Maine just do not have the funds available for a good program. Maine relies on small colleges such as Bates for its competition.

Vermont has very good hockey program, but the Yan Con label is not used, rather teams are classified in divisions according to their ability.

The Ivy League is perfect for the participants, as there is a certain amount of agreement and the various schools base their goals on the winning of the league. The Yankee Conference does not provide the same type arrangement for its members. The goals of the schools involved, especially in the major sports are incompatible.

In basketball, Maine surrounds itself with area colleges, while UMass looks toward playing the best in New England, such as Providence and Boston College.

The goals of the football team this season has been primarily to beat Boston College and Harvard, while the Yan Con title was a secondary goal. If you have trouble believing this, then just look at the attendance figures. The biggest crowd and the greatest amount of student interest is for these games (UConn is a traditional rival and also draws well).

The same thing is true for basketball. Try finding a seat when Providence or Boston College comes to the Cage. Vermont and Maine just do not draw the interest.

UMass sports are not compatible with Yan Con interests. UMass has the coaches and the material to be New England powers in such sports as football, basketball, and baseball. The football team has gone to the Tangerine Bowl, Doctor J took the dribblers to the NIT twice and the baseball team has advanced in the regional tournament.

Last year, the Yan Con leaders talked of adopting scholarships only on the need basis. If the conference does accept the proposal, which President Wood has said he agrees with and the NCAA does not, then UMass may retrogress back to the days of the "Aggies".

Now that UMass has the coaching and the material, it is time to think about the student interest, i.e., the games that draw the biggest crowds. If the Yankee Conference does not fit the need, then there is no need for the Yankee Conference.

Boston College, Syracuse and Providence are just a few of the highly regarded independents. An independent schedule, still including games with rivals, UConn and RI, may be more in line with student aspirations and the coaches goals.

The Yankee Conference has too many varied interests. If we want to stay in the conference, then we should not travel to Detroit to play basketball or take a southern swing to play baseball. Winning a league is usually cutting out the faraway trips and concentrating on the conference. Then, again, if we did, what guarantee would we have that the coaches would care to stay, or the players would come to play?

Vote Today

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Vote Today

Election Day 1972

[V. C, issue 42]

Election Day 1972, Cast of Characters: Top Left, Linda Jenness, Top Right, Andrew Pulley, Middle from Left to Right, John Olver, Spiro Agnew, Richard Nixon, George McGovern, Sargent Shriver, John Barris; Bottom Left to Right, James Collins, Nat Reed, Gerry Whitlock, and James Nolen. (MDC Collage by Cindy Gonet)

Voters Urged To Go Early To Polls

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

Voters should get out to vote as early as possible today, and should study the ballot carefully before going to vote, according to Amherst Town Clerk Estelle Matusko.

City and town clerks report voters may have trouble voting within the five minute time limit prescribed by state law because of the questions on the ballot.

Secretary of State John F.X. Davoren is predicting a record turnout in the Commonwealth as Hampshire County voters will cast ballots for President, U.S. Senator, U.S. Representative and six state and County Offices. Voters will also be asked to answer 10 ballot questions, seven of which are constitutional amendments.

The polling places for the seven precincts in Amherst will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The state Senate race in the Franklin-Hampshire District, and the state representative race in the 2nd Hampshire District are both rated tossups with Amherst's 11,389 registered voters playing a decisive role in the final results.

In the Senate race, the incumbent John D. Barrus, 48, R—Goshen, faces possibly the toughest political battle of his career in his fight for a fourth term against Rep. John W. Olver, 35, of Amherst.

During the campaign, Barrus has emphasized his commitment to small rural and agricultural communities while Olver has described himself as a "liberal Democrat in the Kennedy-McGovern tradition."

In the representative race, two seats are being contested with all four candidates given the chance for victory. The incumbent James R. Nolen, 39, D—Ware has waged a low-key campaign against his three opponents: James Collins, 26, D—Amherst, Nat Reed, 41, R—Amherst and William "Gerry" Whitlock, R—Belchertown.

Nolen, during his 14 years in office, has served on the Wills-Harrington Education Commission, which led to granting the state department authority to set educational standards for the towns and cities and the commission responsible for giving UMass fiscal autonomy.

Collins has spoken out in favor of a graduated and progressive state income tax, welfare reform, increased aid to local school systems, and a new agrarian-based tax to protect the small Western Massachusetts farmer.

Reed said the state should encourage growth of business for more jobs rather than finding more money for welfare. He also favors a re-ordering of state funding to provide for more "human services."

Whitlock has called for an educational program for welfare recipients to train them for work. He has also proposed a closer examination of the program for those fraudulently receiving aid.

According to several national surveys, Massachusetts is one of only two or three states in which Sen. George S. McGovern is favored by polls to defeat President Richard M. Nixon, who was soundly defeated in this state in 1960 and 1968.

A poll released this past weekend showed McGovern leading in the running for . ssachusetts' 14 electoral votes wi. 9 per cent of the vote to Nixon's 5. per cent.

A survey of UMass students released last week revealed that students favor over the President by more than a 3-1 margin. According to the organizers, the Ferber-Bloom poll's statistical margin of error was 3 to 4 per cent, or the same as such national samples as the Gallup Poll.

But, the dean of pollsters George Gallup Sr., said in an interview: "The public will never understand the workings of the laws of probability. If you flip 100 pennies he said, "most often they will come out 50 heads and 50 tails.

"But there's the odd chance - one in a hundred - they'll come out 80 heads and 20 tails. You never can be dead certain. That's one good reason why polls will never take the place of elections."

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R—Mass., the nation's only black senator and the first of his race in the Senate since Reconstruction, is a heavy favorite to win re-election over his Democratic opponent, Middlesex County Dist. Att. John J. Droney.

U.S. Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R—Pittsfield, is expected to easily defeat John D. Miller of Leverett, who is waging a low-budget write-in copaign.

The student vote in the 5-college area is expected to have a great impact on the local races. Registered voters in Precincts 2 and 3, where most UMass students vote, is now at 1,651 and 1,871, respectively, compared to 585 and 957 in the 1968 presidential election.

As expected all the candidates spent yesterday campaigning, including Reed, who handed out campaign literature in the Campus Center and Collins who indicated that he would canvass the Southwest area of campus.

On The Inside:

•Indian Cultural Investigated see page three

•Campaign Trail Ends see page four

SW Construction Stirs Controversy

By KEVIN KEVIT

Controversy surrounding the site of Southwest's proposed combination hockey rink and basketball courts has been growing among the residents of that area since construction started on the "horseshoe" location early last Thursday. At least one student has started a petition drive aimed at halting work on the project while it is on that land.

Marty Rutberg, a resident of Moore House, recently circulated this petition among the people of his dorm, Emerson House, and Pierpont House in the belief that many students share his convictions on this matter. These are: 1) that the horseshoe, as one of the only sizable grassy areas left to Southwest, ought not to be developed in this way, 2) that the residents of Southwest were not properly consulted about the location of the project before it was started, and 3) that the quality of the environment for those dorms near the horseshoe would deteriorate with such a facility closeby.

John O'Connell, Business Manager and Director of Administrative Services for Southwest, in answer to a point contained in Rutberg's petition, explained that there is presently no alternative site for the recreational complex, since no other area in Southwest, whether undeveloped or under concrete, can comfortably accomodate it.

When asked whether the fields across University Drive from the horseshoe might be considered as an alternate location, O'Connell replied that this wouldn't be possible since those fields are not building authority land and the rink and courts, being built with building authority funds, can only be constructed on building authority land.

Commenting on Rutberg's accusation that the residents of Southwest were not properly consulted about the site of the complex, O'Connell stated that the Southwest Internal Planning Committee (SWIP) had originally requested a basketball court for Southwest last year, and that the Executive Committee of the Southwest Assembly knew construction was to start on the project even if they weren't informed of its proposed location.

O'Connell claims that his contacts with students concerning the horseshoe facility were mostly favorable before his meeting with Rutberg. O'Connell went on to say that the recreational complex will be a plus for Southwest, since "it will keep people from tearing up their dorms during the winter months" by providing a constructive outlet for student energies.

It is Rutberg's feeling that even if there is no alternative to the facility's present location, it should not be built on the horseshoe, and, therefore, shouldn't be built at all. O'Connell, however, explained that the University might find it difficult to extricate itself from legal agreements already reached with the construction company; adding that the university is simultaneously building similar complexes in the Central and Sylvan areas under a "package deal" with the construction company so that if the facility in Southwest dies the whole program might go with it.

O'Connell stated that students could conceivably halt construction at the Southwest site, but that "the price to pay might be high." This price, he said, might be the permanent cancelling of the project in Southwest, an action "not only affecting the students here now, but also those that will be here in the future."

Both O'Connell and Rutberg, however, agree that the residents of Southwest should have a voice in this matter, and that voice will most likely be expressed in the Southwest Assembly meeting, at which Rutberg plans to present his petition. The meeting will take place tonight at 7:30 in Hampden Dining Commons.

Amherst Polling Places

AMHERST POLLING PLACES open 8 a.m.-8 p.m., Tuesday, November 7.

Precinct	Place
1	North Amherst Parish Hall (across from Watroba's Store)
2 (S.W dorms)	Fire Station (next to Louis' Foods on N. Pleasant Street)
3 (Central, Quad, Orchard Hill)	Odd Fellows Hall (Kellogg Avenue, behind Post Office)
4	Masonic Hall (Main Street)
5	Old Junior High (Lessey Street)
6	Munson Memorial Library (on the green in South Amherst)
7 (Sylvan)	Auction Gallery (Rt. 116, North Amherst)

For further information:
Amherst Town Clerk - 253-3685
Belchertown Town Clerk - 323-6901
Easthampton Town Clerk - 527-0818
Hatfield Town Office - 247-5684
Northampton City Clerk - 584-0735
Sunderland Town Clerk - 665-2989

FOLLOW the '72 NUMB3RS GAM3
★ 5-2550 ★
for election returns

DC Food Thieves May Be Fired

By MARK VOGLER

The Food Services Department can be expected to fire employes caught stealing food.

Director Joel Stoneham indicated in a Collegian interview last night.

There has never been an arrest and court action, but employees have been discharged for food thefts Stoneham said.

As a result of Collegian stories last week, the Food Services Department has asked the Campus Security to investigate the allegations. No reports are being issued until the police have completely reviewed the matter.

When asked in the interview whether there were ever any arrests made, Stoneham replied: "Well, there's been disciplinary action taken in the past...I'll put it that way."

He clarified himself when asked the same question later. "As far as court action taking place, somebody booked and sent to jail, to the best of my knowledge, this has never before happened."

Stoneham said that there have been investigations of the dining commons.

"We have in the past turned up employes who have taken food and property from the dining commons. These people were subjected to disciplinary action in the sense that their employment was terminated."

Asked how the current investigation into the alleged thefts of food has affected the Food Services Department in general, Stoneham replied, "No comment."

When asked if he thought a major crackdown would prove effective against food theft Stoneham said, "No comment."

Mass. Legislature Voting Tabulations

(Editor's Note: The following voting charts which were in yesterday's election supplement were misprinted. Below are the accurate charts.)

The following tabulation shows how members of the Massachusetts State Senate voted on several issues during the first eight months of the 1971 session.

At the close of each legislative session, CPP produces a complete roll call analysis of significant votes in each branch of the Massachusetts Legislature. In the meantime we present a tabulation of how each state representative voted on six recent issues.

1. LEGALIZED ABORTIONS: vote on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (S. 996 by Sen. Jack Backman et al) to repeal the law prohibiting abortions in Massachusetts. This was defeated, 3 to 37 on April 7. A Yea vote is marked +; a Nay vote -.
2. RIGHTS OF WELFARE RECIPIENTS: vote to defeat the bill (H. 5236) which would eliminate discrimination in credit, services and rental housing for welfare recipients. This motion would have created a meaningless "investigative committee" instead. The motion was defeated, 9 to 24 on April 12. A Yea is -, Nay is +.
3. 19 YEAR DRINKING AGE: vote on passage of a bill to lower the minimum age for buying or selling liquor to 19 years. This was defeated, 15 to 21 on April 28. A Yea vote is marked +; a Nay is marked -.
4. ABOLITION OF THE DEATH PENALTY: vote on overturning an unavorable committee report on a bill (S. 611) prohibiting use of the death penalty. This was defeated, 9 to 22 on May 11. Yea is +, Nay is -.
5. SPRINGFIELD RACIAL IMBALANCE: vote on passage of the bill exempting the city of Springfield from compliance with the school racial imbalance law. The bill passed 19 to 17 on June 7. Yea is +, Nay is -.
6. COMMUTER RAIL FUNDS: vote to provide funds to continue MBTA run commuter railroad service in metropolitan Boston (H. 6000). The funds were approved 16 to 13 on August 3. Yea is +, Nay is -.

In all cases a (+) means a vote consistent with CCP's views, and a minus (-) means opposed. Paired votes are indicated by a period (.) after the vote, and are not counted as part of the recorded total. An (A) means "absent or not recorded" A (P) means "present".

Barrus
1 2 3 4 5 6

The first vote (April 20) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 1238, by Michael Dukakis) to abolish the state police's Division of Subversive Activities. This failed, 65-159; a Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The second vote (May 11) was on passage of the bill (H. 5534) to suspend operation of the state's racial imbalance law in Springfield. This passed, 118-99, but was later vetoed by the Governor. A Yea vote is marked -, a Nay vote +.

The third vote (May 24) was on recommitting the bill (S. 1193) to require the Mass port Authority to adopt a noise abatement program for Logan Airport. This passed, 147-77. A Yea vote is marked -, a Nay vote +.

The fourth vote (May 24) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 3821, by Rep. Lincoln Cole) to abolish the death penalty. This failed, 72-153. A Yea vote is marked +; a Nay vote -.

The fifth vote (June 7) was on overturning an unfavorable committee report on a bill (H. 1202, by Rep. William Hogan) to abolish absolute veterans' preference in the state civil service system. This failed, 91-129. A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -.

The sixth vote (June 30) is on adopting resolutions (H. 5868, by Rep. John Businger) memorializing the President and Congress to withdraw all American forces from Vietnam by April 30, 1972. This failed, 80-90, with 38 members voting "present". A Yea vote is marked +, a Nay vote -, and a vote "present" as "p".

In all cases, a plus (+) sign means a vote consistent with the CPP platform and a minus (-) sign indicates a position inconsistent with it. An "a" indicates absent or not voting.

Olver
1 2 3 4 5 6

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

Cultural Explorations

A weekend on Nantucket to discuss problems of intercultural communications, stereotyping and other aspects of dealing with people from cultures other than one's own is planned for this weekend November 10-12.

The weekend is a part of a series initiated through members of the Center for International Education, Human Relations Center and the International Programs staff.

The aim of this small group approach is to meet on a friendly informal basis to learn about other cultures by discussing issues with people from these cultures. Exercises designed to stimulate discussion and bring about learning experiences and cultural awareness are also planned. There will also be plenty of free time to enjoy the island.

Food, rent and transportation by bus to Woods Hole and then by ferry to Nantucket Island is included in a $10 fee for the weekend. For residents of Southwest the fee is only $5 and one colloquia credit is available. Due to the limited capacity, anyone wishing to sign-up should do so as soon as possible, at the International Programs Office, room 239 Whitmore. For more information call Ann Silva at 545-0019.

Veteran's Info

Many rumors have surrounded the passage of the 1972 amendments to the veterans educational laws. The Veterans' Office on campus has had numerous inquiries about the exact contents of the legislation.

Due to these many inquiries the Veterans' Office has provided for a question and answer seminar to be held tomorrow from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 163 of the Campus Center. At that time a representative from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Boston will be more than willing to answer any and all questions about the amendments.

All veterans who have any questions about the new Bill should plan to attend.

Campus Center To Be Open All Night

Upon request of the Campus Center Board of Governor's the management of the Campus Center has agreed to keep the concourse level of the Campus Center open all night tonight. Two 23 inch TV's will be located in the CC Auditorium from noon on.

D.C. ELECTION '72 HOTLINE
5-2550 C 5-2550
for current voting returns

LSAT WORKSHOP

Classes are now forming in preparation for Dec. 16th LSAT. Course will be conducted at Sheraton-Commander Hotel, Cambridge. Course begins Saturday, Nov. 18th. Proven Technique & Methodology.

Verified record of outstanding achievement.

Course created by noted professor.

Staff of experienced, dynamic teachers who have scored WELL OVER 700 in the LSAT.

for Registration & Information Contact:

Law Boards Institute

450 7th Ave.
New York, NY 10001
212-549-1970

Tom Porter of the White Roots of Peace organization spoke last night in the Student Union Ballroom as part of that group's evening program. The talk was part of a series which went on all day. (MDC Photo by Mark Majeski)

Indian Heritage Kept Alive

By ROBERTA MARTONE

The American Indian is alive, but not so well. This was the thought conveyed in a talk given by Tom Porter, a member of the American Indian organization White Roots of Peace. Porter discussed the heritage of the American Indian, in relation to where the Indian is today. The talk took place last night in the Student Union Ballroom.

It was part of a series of events which went on all day. These events included an exhibit and sale of Indian arts and crafts; and a "Traditional American Indian dinner" served yesterday at the Hatch.

The meeting was opened by a Mohawk prayer of Thanksgiving. Porter stressed the fact that this prayer was a sacred ceremony. He said, "A spirit is going to come into somebody; good things are going to come here." The prayer, said by Alec Fox (another member of the White Roots of Peace) was first recited in his native language. He then went on to explain its meaning in English.

This prayer was followed by a speech on the heritage of the American Indian, given by Tom Porter. He opened with a statement about American government: "US government is pretty good, but it's not good for me because I'm proud; my people are proud."

Porter went on to state statistics made by the US government. According to the US government, life expectancy of the American Indian is low; the alcoholism rate, the suicide rate, and the drop-out rate in education are all high. Porter agreed this is all true.

Porter talked about his personal experiences in a Mohawk school. He said the trouble with the school was that there was nothing Mohawk about it. Porter went on to explain various ways his people's heritage was stunted through the educational system.

The next topic of discussion was related to the Indian religion. Porter explained that it wasn't pagan, as most believed. He said, "We have our own religion and we thank what is good on earth. We thank the land because it is good land and because it is my mother and your mother too."

Porter closed his talk with these words: "There is something wrong some place. God made me an Indian and I'm going to be one."

The final activity of the meeting consisted of dancing and singing of certain tribal songs. The audience joined in with the various Indians present to dance the Dance of Life.

Parking Meters To Be Installed

By ROBERT L. SCHEIER

A total of 254 parking meters are being installed at 12 locations around campus, a Physical Plant spokesman says.

According to William Lambert, a landscape architect at the Physical Plant, half the receipts from the meters will go to the firm which is installing them, and the rest will go to the university.

The UMass funds will take care of collection and other administrative costs, he added, with any UMass surplus going into a fund for the building and repair of parking lots.

He said the meters will replace parking stickers in some of the areas, which include the Haigis Mall (in front of the administration building), the "horseshoe" mall in Southwest, along Fearing St. on university property, and by the Women's Physical Education Building.

UMass will make no investments in the meters, he said, which will become the university's after an amount of time that would depend on the size of the receipts from them.

If the meters are successful, he indicated, they may be installed in other areas around campus.

The meters are designed to give more mobility for students, he continued, allowing the visitor to campus to park near his destination instead of having to park in the campus center garage.

Lambert said the meters will be anchored in an 18 inch cylinder of concrete three feet deep, and if they are broken, a violation will register making it impossible to deposit any money.

If a meter is broken, he continued, it would be a violation to park in that space. He said the recommended fines would be $2 for failure to deposit money in a meter, and $5 for parking illegally.

Enforcement of the fines and the receipts from the meters would be up to the Security Dept., he added, estimating that the meters should be installed within about three weeks.

The list of meters, with the time limits and rates are:

Haigis Mall, 52 meters, one hour time limit, 10¢ per hour.

Fearing Street, 35 meters, two hour limit, 10¢ per hour.

Southwest Mall, 20 meters, one hour limit, 10¢ per hour.

Lot #2, 26 meters, one hour limit, 10¢ per hour.

Arnold House, 13 meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

Lot #7, 22 meters, one hour limit, 10¢ per hour.

Lot #4, 8 meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

Skinner Hall, six meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

Infirmary, 40 meters, two hour limit, 10¢ per hour.

Physical Plant, eight meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

Lot #5, 10 meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

Women's Physical Education, 14 meters, half hour limit, 10¢ per half hour.

The meters will be in effect Monday through Friday, from 7 a.m. through 6 p.m.

UMass Police 5-2121

Prof. Bragg Dies

The UMass faculty suffered a personal tragedy over the weekend, as death took one of its members.

John Howard Bragg, a 47-year old professor of agricultural economics, died unexpectedly Friday in Ibadan, Nigeria, a university spokesman said Sunday.

For the past year he had been on special assignment for UMass working as one of a team of specialists on a United States Agency for International Development project in Nigeria. Before leaving for Nigeria, he had done extensive consulting in management development.

Bragg was a 1948 graduate from the University of Maine and was alumni president of his class at the time of his death. He also received an M.S. from the University of Maine in 1949 and a D.B.A. from Indiana University in 1966.

He worked for six years at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston before coming to the university in 1965. He was an associate professor in the department of agriculture and food economics.

He was a member of North Congregational Church in North Amherst where he had served as moderator and senior deacon. Bragg was also affiliated with the Northeast Agricultural Economics Council and the American Agricultural Economists Association

Two State Groups Analyze Barrus, Olver Voting Records

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

The voting records of John Barrus and John Olver, the two candidates for Hampshire/Franklin State Senate seat have been analyzed in two reports recently released by Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts (CLUM).

Barrus is currently representing the Franklin/Hampshire district in the state Senate, and Olver is the representative in the House from the 2nd Hampshire district.

The ADA report picked 19 House bills and 12 Senate bills which they considered "key" legislation to rate representatives and senators. The house bills included a racial imbalance law which would have required written consent from parents before children chould be busses, a bill giving feteuses the rights of all citizens, passed

The ADA report picked 19 House bills and 12 Senate bills which they considered "key" legislation to rate representatives and senators. The house bills included a racial imbalance law which would have required written consent from parents before children could be bussed, passed; a bill giving feteuses the rights of all citizens, passed; a bill giving public school students basic constitutional rights, defeated; and two bills providing for reform in state youth institutions, defeated. Those two bills would have closed two schools and placed the youths elsewhere.

Olver voted in line with the ADA's recommendation, (the reverse of the above bills disposition by the legislature) and on twelve of the other bills.

The two exceptions were state assumption of costs of superior court, which was vetoed by the governor and a motion to keep taxing on savings bank interests. This motion to save the tax passed.

Other bills included tenants rights, passed; Highway funds for mass transportation, carried over into next session; a bill to prohibit corporal punishment in the schools, passed and a motion to repeal an anti-snob zoning law which failed. Olver voted for tenants rights, for mass transportation funds, for the bill to prohibit corporal punishment, and voted to repeal the snob-zoning law.

Barrus in the Senate voted with the ADA once, on a bill concerning home rule in Cambridge. Among the votes Barrus did not follow the ADA recommendation on were bills permitting parolees to marry, drink, drive and associate with friends with the parole officers approval, which was defeated; a bill supporting a statewide building code, which was passed, a bill ordering a referendum on allowing voluntary prayer in public schools pased.

The vote the CLUM considered significant were concerned with citizens civil liberties. Olver voted consistent with the CLUM recommendation in each of the thirteen cases. Barrus voted for one in 10 Senate votes, was paired and absent on one, was paired and present on one, was absent or abstained on one, and voted against the CLUM recommendation on the other seven questions.

Pocket Billiards Champion Here

Pocket billiards world champion Jimmy Caras will give a free exhibition with UMass champion pool player Paul Brouillette at 8 p.m. today in the Student Union Ballroom.

Sponsored by the Program Council, Caras will also give a demonstration with Gregory Falson UMass runner-up, at noon in the Ballroom, and will conduct a clinic from 2-3 p.m. in the Games Area next to the Hatch.

Jimmy Caras has been the World's Pocket Billiard Champion five times since 1936, when he won the title at the age of 26, the second youngest in the tournament's history. He has starred in two MGM documentary movies, and has appeared twice on ABC's Wide World of Sports" program.

Caras played his first game of pool at the age of 5 on a miniature table. At 17, he earned the title of "Boy Wonder of the Billiard World".

The champion will first demonstrate billiard fundamentals, and conclude with an exhibition demonstration of his skill and trick shots. After the exhibition, he will give personal instruction to those who request it.

UMass students will be admitted free of chage. There is a general admission charge of one dollar for non-students.

DAILY COLLEGIAN HOTLINE
5-2550
for voting returns

THE DUKE MBA PROGRAM

prepares students to design solutions to problems in the operation and organization of complex economic systems. The curriculum develops mastery of the theory relevant to both solving management problems and avoiding professional obsolescence. The final semester is distinguished by the solution of a significant and contemporary problem of the student's own selection, usually in a participating company.

A representative of Duke's Graduate School of Business Administration will interview prospective applicants at the Career Planning and Placement Office, November 6th. Interested persons should sign up for interviews prior to this date.

Business, Engineering, Mathematics, and Physical Sciences majors are particularly encouraged to apply.

De Sica's

UMBERTO D

C.C. 163 TUES.
8:00 NOV. 7

CC Program Council Director's Series

In The Nation And The World

Campaign Trail Ends For McG And Nixon

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern spanned the continent Monday in a final, election-eve effort to beat the landslide odds against him. President Nixon spent the last day of his last campaign in the isolation of his Western White House.

It was a finale in keeping with the campaigns waged by the White House rivals.

For the weary McGovern it was the final sprint in a long-distance run.

For the heavily favored Nixon, hoping for his first landslide in what he has said is his last election campaign, there had been no rigorous campaigning, only rationed, limited series of appearances in 15 states.

Today, the voices of the candidates-for the White House, for 33 Senate seats, for the 435 House of Representatives places and for 18 governorships-will be hushed by the verdict of the voters.

Nixon's only scheduled campaigning Monday was in a taped, election-eve statement to be televised nationally-and even that was only five minutes long.

But for McGovern, the time zones blurred in a jet-propelled windup that took him from New York City to Philadelphia to Wichita, Kan., to Long Beach, Calif., and then home to South Dakota for a midnight rally in Sioux Falls.

"I believe we are going to prevail," he said.

If he loses, McGovern said, "I'll be a member of the loyal opposition. I love this country and I want to uphold its ideals..."

In Philadelphia, as he had on well over 150 campaign platforms before, McGovern summoned the voters to help him make America again "the great and good and decent country that it can be."

"...I believe we want, and indeed must have, a President who will summon this nation to a higher standard, ...nd rekindle the American promise," he said.

The Democratic nominee stressed issues that have become a litany; the demand for peace in Vietnam, for an end to inflation, for tax reform, jobs for every American who wants to work, defense budget cuts to reduce what he said was wasteful Pentagon spending.

McGovern's running mate, Sargent Shriver, paid an election-eve call on Lyndon B. Johnson at the former President's Texas ranch.

Johnson endorsed the Democratic ticket last summer, and met with both McGovern and Shriver.

Johnson extended the invitation to Shriver during what was described as a courtesy telephone call from nominee to former president.

Nixon spent much of the day in the office of his oceanside retreat in San Clemente, Calif. A spokesman said the President was in "a calm and positive mood."

For McGovern, it was a campaign that covered well over 200,000 miles, touched down in 26 states-many of them over and over again.

Nixon had put in parts of 12 days, campaigning in 15 states.

Not since the wartime re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 had an incumbent conducted so limited a campaign.

He delivered 13 network radio broadcasts, and one half-hour nationally televised speech.

In record number 80 to 85 million were expected to cast ballots Tuesday in what Nixon described as the "choice of the century." McGovern said that description was one of the few in which he could concur with the President.

An estimated 108 million Americans are registered to vote in the first national election that opened the polling booth to all U.S. citizens 18 and over.

Chileans Mark End Of Strike

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) Chileans overflowed buses, jammed stores and bumped into each other on Santiago's yellow-tiled sidewalks Monday to mark the end of Chile's worst strike in history.

"We're expecting an avalanche of shoppers," said the owner of a downtown men's store as he unlocked his establishment, shuttered nearly a month during the nationwide strikes.

Some stores opened early to meet the expected rush to workers, who received mandatory 100 per cent pay increases during the strikes to keep up with a doubling of the cost of living this year.

The only remaining signs of the crippling strikes, which included the shutdown of stores and shops, the halting of truck transport and work stoppages by doctors, were the army sentries posted at filling stations.

Gasoline was in short supply and rationed during the strikes, which began Oct. 10 when the truckers went out.

"It's going to take a couple of days to get gasoline supplies back to normal," said a filling station employe.

The strikes ended Sunday night after Chile's new interior minister, Army Gen. Carlos Prats, and strike leaders reached an accord.

Both sides will continue talks for another month to solve minor areas of disagreement.

The leftist government of President Salvador Allede, who said the strikes cost Chile more than $100 million, gave in on a number of strike-related demands.

But political issues, which the Marxist president said he could not accept, were ignored.

Prats gave guarantees that there will be no reprisals taken against the strikers and all property requisitioned during the nationwide walkouts will be returned.

He also promised that the Allende government, in its program to bring socialism to Chile, will leave the trucking industry in private hands.

Enemy Shells Pleiku Base; Other Viet Action Light

SAIGON AP - Enemy gunners shelled Pleiku air base in the central highlands Monday night but elsewhere action was light as Vietnamese on both sides of the war seemed to await Tuesday's U.S. presidential election.

Field reports said 20 to 30 high explosive rockets and motars hit Pleiku air base in the second significant shelling there in less than a month. First reports said three government troops were wounded in one area of the base.

The North Vietnamese accused the Nixon administration or jeopardizing the draft peace agreement worked out in secret last month.

The Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan accused President Nixon of a "breach of faith" in speeding deliveries of war materials to South Vietnam.

It also complained of intensified B52 bomber strikes in both North and South Vietnam. It said such acts "run counter to the spirit and contents of the concrete provisions of the agreement which should have been signed by now. They also threaten the breaking of the agreement."

U.S. military sources said Monday's B52 raids against the North struck closer to Hanoi's heartland than any since a raid in April during full-scale bombing.

The eight-jet Stratofortresses struck 156 miles south of Hanoi as part of an effort to check a North Vietnamese buildup of war material.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird says stepped-up shipments of airplanes and weapons which Hanoi complains of are intended "to enhance negotiations" by bolstering South Vietnamese military strength and serving notice that the U.S. commitment is still firm.

Two American helicopter crewmen died and three were wounded Sunday by enemy forces, who shot down three choppers within 14 miles of Da Nang, the command reported.

One Cobra gunship crashed in flames after it was hit by smallarms fire south of the port city, a U.S. spokesman said. One crewman was killed and one wounded.

A light observation helicopter was shot down with one crewman wounded as it tried to reach the two crewman. A second observation helicopter picked up the dead and wounded.

In Brief...

Polio Reported In Conn.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)-Eleven cases of polio recently reported in a private school in Connecticut was the first outbreak in the nation outside of south Texas in seven years, the Center for Disease Control CDC, said Monday.

Eleven cases of paralytic polio occurred in late September and October at a private Christian Science School at Greenwich, Conn.

Bernstein Returning to Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)-Leonard Bernstein, Harvard '39, returned to his old school Monday to learn, to teach and condemn "the takeover of mediocrity."

The Lawrence, Mass., native was named Sunday was Charles Eliot Norton Professor of Poetry, and will spend six weeks in the spring lecturing his students about music and poetry.

B52's Step Up Attacks

SAIGON (AP)-U.S. B52 bombers concentrated attacks Tuesday around the northern city of Quang Tri in a continuing attempt to frustrate enemy troops and supply build-ups before a cease-fire.

Nearly 40 Stratofortresses dropped up to 1,200 tons of bombs to the northwest, west and southwest of Quang Tri, 19 miles below the demilitarized zone.

VOTER SHUTTLE BUSES:
CAMPUS TO POLLING PLACES
November 7 - - - 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Route No. 1 — precinct 1 and 7: Sylvan, Puffton Village and Fraternity-Sorority Park

Route No. 2 — precinct 2: Southwest

Route No. 3 — precinct 3: Central, Orchard Hill and the Quad

Buses stop at campus bus stops in each area: on the hour and on the half-hour

Buses stop at polling places: 15 minutes to the hour and 15 minutes after the hour.

Great Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath ordered a wage and price freeze yesterday. The move, designed to curb rising inflation in Britain, was strongly condemned by the opposition Labor Party. (AP)

Heath Freezes Wages, Prices

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Edward Heath ordered a wage and price freeze Monday to curb Britain's inflation and to keep the weakened pound sterling from causing a new international monetary crisis.

His announcement in Parliament brought jeers and shouts of "Resign!" from the Labor party opposition benches.

Heath told a packed House of Commons the freeze on wages, prices, dividends and rents would take effect immediately, run 90 days, and may be extended an additional 60 days. He said there would only be "a limited number of exceptions."

The second stage, he added, would run for a longer period and involve ceilings on wage and price rises. Cabinet sources said this stage would involve a maximum of voluntary restaraint and a minimum of statutory curbs.

The sources conceded Heath's package borrowed heavily from President Nixon's inflation control program announced in August 1971.

British inflation, the worst in Western Europe, is now running at nearly 10 percent a year. It took 7 cents off the purchasing power of the pound in the last week of October alone, threatening to weaken other currencies as well and touch off a new international monetary crisis.

Heath's program is designed to cut British inflation to 5 per cent or less, government sources said. The pound, strengthened by the news, regained about a cent on the dollar. It was quoted at $2.3210.

Parliament must still approve the terms of the wage and price bill. Government sources said they expected passage in the next few weeks. Heath has a 27-seat majority in the 630-seat House of Commons and approval is not in doubt.

The freeze on prices and wages will start officially after final parliamentary approval. But any wage or price increases before then can be reversed by government order when the bill becomes law. The effect is to make its provisions apply now.

The bill provides for unlimited fines for any company or trade which violates the freeze.

Heath ordered the freeze after talks with union and industry leaders on voluntary restraints broke down last week.

The prime minister had campaigned in 1970 against controls, calling them unworkable.

Former Prime Minister Harold Wilson, speaking for the jeering opposition Labor party, said Heath's measures represented "the biggest reversal of position on any subject since he broke his 'at-a-stroke' promise." Heath pledged in his successful 1970 campaign to cut rising living costs "at a stroke."

Heath said that after the talks on voluntary restraints broke down "there was no alternative but to bring in statutory measures."

Unions rushed through a series of wage settlements last week in anticipation of the freeze, and industry responded with last-minute price increases.

Supreme Court To Decide On Aid To Church Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday agreed to decide whether states may provide direct aid to church-run schools as reimbursement for keeping attendance records and giving required achievement tests.

The issue was raised in appeals by New York state officials and a group of Roman Catholic and Orthodox Jewish parochial schools from a ruling by a district court in New York City that the assistance is prohibited by the First Amendment.

A New York aid program was authorized by the 1970 Mandated Services Act. The state paid out $28 million last year and $14 million this year. Further aid was enjoined by the three-judge panel, which last April declared the law to be unconstitutional.

Arguments will be held on the appeals in late winter and a final decision announced by the end of June 1973.

Last year the court barred Pennsylvania and Rhode Island from paying part of the salaries of parochial-school teachers. Last month the court struck down an Ohio program of reimbursing parents for books, bus fares, laboratory fees and other expenses.

Still, a lawyer from the New York state Senate, Louis P. Contiguglia of Auburn, N.Y., said he is optimistic about winning approval of the New York program.

The religion of the person teaching is not material when the subject is a secular one or he is taking attendance, Contiguglia said in a telephone interview.

New York law bases the aid to parochial schools on the fact that all schools, public and private, must keep records to insure that the state's compulsory-attendance law is being complied with and must give tests to measure students' progress.

The district court, in a 2-1 decision, ruled that the law impermissibly entangled church and state.

Court Stays Indians' Arrest

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court Monday stayed until Wednesday a lower court order for the arrest of Indians who have occupied the Bureau of Indian affairs building here since Thursday. Some Indians, however, threatened to blow up the building.

A three judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court for the District of Columbia said the lower court order would be stayed 51 hours-until 9 p.m. Wednesday.

It also ordered that the lower court could not bring contempt proceedings against any person who left the BIA building before 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The stay, which was debated before the three judges in closed conference room, will automatically expire, the circuit court said. No extensions will be granted.

An Indian source who refused to be identified told reporters that the protesters would reject the stay and would blow up the building early Tuesday unless they are permitted to talk to President Nixon directly about their grievances.

The order by the Circuit Court states that after 9 p.m. Wednesday police may move to evacuate the building at their discretion.

One Indian source said the four-story building had been wired for destruction by explosives Sunday night but the system was defused. He indicated that it had been reactivated and was ready again to be touched off.

None of the Indians would elaborate on how they had wired the building but they said that at least four Black Panthers reported to be specialists in demolition met Monday in the building.

In addition, many boxes of what were supposedly groceries were funneled into the building Monday.

The Indians said they were prepared to make a formal announcement soon about their intentions, including their rejection of a court extension of the time they are allowed to remain in the building, and their ultimatum to Nixon.

Justice Department information officer John C. Hushen told a newsman following the appeals court decision, "as far as I can ascertain the government does not plan to appeal this decision to the Supreme Court."

A Justice Department spokesman said at 4:30 p.m. that U.S. Deputy Atty. Gen. Ralph Erickson was in command of the federal response but had not yet decided how to proceed if the Indians refused to leave the building voluntarily.

This appeared to indicate the department was considering more than one possible tactic.

One obvious choice might be to send police to clear the building with force; but another alternative could be to lay siege to the building, cut off water and lights and try to force the demonstrators to walk out.

As the legal maneuverings continued, about 300 Indians were gathered outside the BIA building apparently awaiting a move by police.

Attorney Jim Heller, a lawyer for the Indians, said he would appeal. He had told Judge Pratt the BIA building "has no other purpose but to serve these people."

Both sides have indicated a confrontation will end in violence and the Indians have threatened to gut the building they have held since last Thursday if police attempt to recapture the structure.

"They can have the building after it is gutted," said Russell Means, a leader of the Trail of Broken Treaties Caravan, "when we go, the building goes."

And he said more than 200 Indians, including himself, had taken a vow to fight to the death.

The Indians Sunday night unanimously rejected the government's offer of housing in a nearby building if they would leave the BIA. Then began preparing for a confrontation with police.

IF YOU HAVE AN ANALYTICAL MIND, ANALYZE THE FOLLOWING CAREERS AT ÆTNA.

We're looking for securities analysts. Actuaries. Accountants. Computer programmers. And people who like the challenge of figures, finance and money.

But we're also looking for people who have a bit more than analytical skills to offer. Because though we're a big company, we've made quite a few departures from the "big company" way of doing things.

For one thing, we've made action our byword. Not only action in terms of our relations with the public, but also action in recognizing and promoting talent within our own company.

Stop by your college placement office and read our brochure "The Whole Truth." It spells out how Ætna works, and the many specific opportunities we have for people of all talents.

Then think about what you want from a career. If it's something more than the average, think about Ætna.

After all, we're not your average insurance company.

Ætna
LIFE & CASUALTY

You get action with Ætna.

An Equal Opportunity Employer.

LUNCH SPECIALS

HADLEY PIZZA & SUB

next to McDonald's in Northampton
King St.

Mon - Wed — Buy 2 get 3 Pizza or Spagetti
Mon - Fri Free Soda with any purchase.

GRINDERS 39¢ and up PIZZA 99¢ and up

584-9602

MEETING THE PEOPLE IS QUITE HANDY–Everybody wants to get into the act of shaking hands with President Nixon during a campaign stop at O'Hara airport military field in Chicago. The First Lady is accompanied by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy. (AP)

N.E. Votes Decide Fate Of Many 'Pols'

New England voters go to the polls Tuesday to mark their preferences for president and vice president, as well as decide the fate of 25 seats in the U.S. House and four in the Senate, three governorships, 31 referenda questions and scores of other state and county offices.

Democrats are worrying about the coattail power of President Nixon-the man heavily favored to sweep five of the six New England states.

In the close races-six contests for the House, three for the Senate and two for governor-a big turnout for the President could tip the outcome in favor of the Republicans.

The only senator who appears assured of easy victory is Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, a Republican running in the only one of the six states where Sen. George McGovern is given a chance of winning the presidential contest.

★★★

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF James E. Gold
MANAGING EDITOR Nathan Gorenstein
BUSINESS MANAGER William L. Manburg
EXECUTIVE EDITOR Stephen G. Tripoli
NEWS EDITOR Donald J. Bishop
SPORTS EDITOR William E. Ballou
PHOTO EDITOR Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR Robert Nesti

ASST. MANAGING EDITOR Steve Fine
ADVERTISING MANAGER Jeanne Bauge
ASST. PHOTO EDITOR Alan Chapman
ASST. SPORTS EDITOR Roy Lyons

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR Tom Borkowski
NEWS STAFF Christine Olthoff, Cindy Gonet
SPORTS Geoffrey Kurinsky
AD LAYOUT Shelley Sack
DARKROOM Al Chapman, Mark Majeski
EDITORIAL Randy Shuldiner

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administrators read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the view of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, cartoons, and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

The Collegian subscribes to the Associated Press and the Liberation News Service. Publication of their material does not constitute endorsement.

All-Inclusive Process

Governor Sargent, in his "exclusive" message to UMass students, has called for educational reform to be started on the campus. He concludes, however, "it should be prosecuted by students, faculty members, and trustee's, not by administrators or politicians acting on their behalf."

Students and faculty should take part in educational reforms and reorganization. But the student turnover process is often faster than the reform process and the faculty are just usually too self-interested.

Students desire educational reform and are quite conscious of the inadequacies of the current system. Those active enough start the move for needed reforms. Since they have not been in higher education for very long, usually four to five years at most, they often get overzealous in their drives.

Faculty members, on the other hand, have never been known as the vanguard for change around here. Look how they treated the rhetoric requirement issue this year and the athletic council last year.

Governor Sargent is selling the administration short when he says that they should not take part in processing change. It is often the administration which has to make the decision at the correct moments in order to insure quality education and good reformation. It was an administrator who decided to keep a teacher who was not appreciated by his colleagues.

The administration must help to lead educational reform and implement the proper policies to insure ongoing change and improvement. The other segment, must join the administration in this all-inclusive process of reformation.

"ITS GETTING WORSE, NOW THE ENVIRONMENTALISTS ARE SCREAMING... SAVE THE POLYESTERS!"

Don Glickstein

On Neanderthals and Intellectual Fascists

When a people's aspirations are squashed by a totalitarian body, that people becomes apathetic, violent, or resorts to futile name-calling.

It should surprise the Faculty Senate very little, therefore, what those old men hear themselves called in the next few years. Single-handedly, the Faculty Senate has preserved the most backward forms of education.

They voted not to abolish the rhetoric requirement, a requirement that is generally believed to contain the greatest amount of bullshit and least amount of learning on campus. This is due to the fact that most of the people who teach it are literature majors and do not know how to communicate, let alone teach communication. A special thanks to Joe Frank, English Department head, who watched out for his own interests--the budget of and teaching assistant positions in his department.

The narrow-minded, old men of the Faculty Senate believe that just because a student pays for his or her education is no reason to give that student a choice in what he or she learns.

The Faculty Senate has consistently upheld outdated requirements; they believe that requirements can substitute for good advising.

The Faculty Senate has consistently refused to recognize that education is a continuous process--or at least, it should be. The Senate has refused to institute a year-round calendar.

The Faculty Senate has refused to recognize that learning and competency cannot be measured by credit hours. They have refused to change the credit system so that learning can be judged with performance criteria.

Yes, the old men have approved several educationally sound programs--BDIC, Honor, Project 10. But what about the vast majority of the 20,000 students on campus? It's easy to ignore them.

So the Faculty Senate remains an anachronism in the UMass of the 1970s. Instead of being at the forefront of pedagogical improvement, the old men have been the resistors. They talk about unions and preserving their power.

It's too bad. There could be a lot of fine Faculty Senators. The way things are going, however, no amount of unionizing can stop the changes for the better that the Trustees, the students, the administration, and the taxpayers have been advocating.

Southwest Urban Renewal Talking about the decision-making process, take a look, will you, at the ditch being built in Southwest to hold a basketball court and skating rink.

The Southwest Assembly had voted last year to build a court and a rink. When technicalities arose about where to build them, the Southwest Master's Office made the arbitrary decision to dig up the horseshoe--the only plot of grass in the Southwest Complex. Even that wouldn't have been so bad if it had been approved by the people living in Southwest (Area Dean Hunt lives in Montague). No, "there wasn't time", and the contract had already been drawn up.

So when you try to play Frisbee on the horseshoe and fall into a pool, or when you sunbathe on that soft blacktop, remember how wonderful it is that the administration is trying to decentralize and expand the decision-making process.

Citizen Bill Bromery I promised Chancellor Bromery not to be vicious, but after canvassing dormitories all weekend, asking people to work and vote on Tuesday, I see where the educational and political process has been hurt by the non-cancellation of classes. About 1 out of every 5 students I spoke to were going to drive home to vote--if they had the time. Many teachers were giving midterms on Election Day--Provost Glickstern's request appears to be going unheeded. Well, thank you, Dr. Bromery. You've really made it easier for citizens to get involved in their government.

Eddie Haskell and the Beaver

Item: Jerry Mathers who played "the Beaver" in the TV series "Leave It To Beaver" was shot and killed in Vietnam.

I'm trying to start a revival of Eddie Haskell jokes. You know Eddie Haskell--he was that super-polite, obnoxious friend of Wally Cleaver, Beaver's brother. The jokes run something like this:

"Good afternoon, Mr. Cleaver. Good afternoon, Mrs. Cleaver. I'm awfully sorry to hear about Theodore's accident with the window." ----"Hey, Squirt! Why'jd chuck that rock through the window?"

Another example:

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Cleaver. Good afternoon, Mr. Cleaver. I'm awfully sorry to hear about the trouble Theodore's been having with his teacher."----"Hey, Squirt! That was a dumb thing you did flunking your test and slipping that frog in old lady Hennessey's desk."

And a final example:

"Good afternoon, Mr. Cleaver. Good Afternoon, Mrs. Cleaver. I'm awfully sorry to hear about Theodore."----"Hey, Squirt! Why didje have to get killed in Vietnam?"

Today is election day.

Vote. It's time. Now.

Don Glickstein is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

Steve Anderson

Annual Battle

The annual battle between UMass, the governor and the General Court will begin in just a few months. Tuition, and UMass' budget will probably be the main topics of conflict as they have been in past years. During the course of the debate many people will suggest or wish that the General Court would meet one day a year and just vote itself pay raises.

The misfortune about the state legislature is that it has an important role to play in the state government and that few people take it seriously. Some of the problems that plague the General Court are its tarnished image, and its limited power and effectiveness. Some basic changes in the organization of the General Court would improve the image and effectiveness of the legislature.

First, cut the size of the House from 240 to 160. Two hundred and forty legislators are too many to keep count of. The House is almost too big to be a good legislative body. Second, end two and three seat districts. Legislative districts that are represented by more than one person are problem for the voter. More money is needed to run a campaign in a multi-legislator district than is needed in a single seat district. Incumbents seem to do better in multi-member districts than they do in single member districts. Finally, in multi-seat districts it is possible to defeat a candidate that you voted for by voting for one of his opponents, also.

Each legislator should be provided an office and some secretarial aid. This will be costly but it will increase the professionalism of the General Court. It would be even more expensive if offices had to be provided for 240 legislators instead of 160. Next increase salaries. That's right increase salaries of our legislators. If we want to attract the best people to the General Court and make them full time legislators we must pay them good salaries. This would mean, I hope, that lawmakers wouldn't be lawyers, teachers and mayors on the side.

The General Court should be provided with a service that as a research unit. This body should be able to study the effect of legislation and give legislators data on alternative programs. The powers of the General Court should be expanded. The ballot this year is a good example of the limited power of the lawmakers. They must pass a constitution amendment to give paupers the right to vote. This is a waste of time money and effort. The General Court's powers should be expanded so it can deal with questions like tax reform, the graduated income tax and loans to college students without putting it on a referendum, unless they want to.

The next proposal for improving the quality of the state legislature is for each legislator to improve his own image. Getting caught in scandals does not improve the image of the lawmakers any. Scenes like the vote on the House cut make the General Court look like the meeting of a Jr. High School Student Senate. Members of the General Court should pay close attention to their constituency which most of them do anyways, it only makes good sense. But sometimes strange things come out of the State House. Like when my mother writes you and says she disagrees with you don't write back and ask for a donation to your re-election campaign. The structural problems of the General Court are complex. They must be solved before the legislature can become the type of body it should be, however.

Steve Anderson is an MDC Editorial Columnist.

'TELL ME I'M DREAMING . . .'

Letters To The Editor

Rhetoric's Rhetoric

The Editor:

The Faculty Senate having resoundingly and judiciously rebuffed the proposal to expunge the rhetoric department, that motion's proponents have retired snarling to their dens, there to utter sundry sullen and silly things.

Chief token of the surly simple-mindedness at work was the Collegian's own contention that the Faculty acted only to protect its, and numerous TA's, economic interests. Jobs can always be found for graduate students, as indeed they are in the many departments holding no required courses. Nor do faculty depend upon dragooned enrollments for their daily bread; they would simply been freed to offer other courses. At any rate, the prevailing sentiment of the Faculty Senate vote necessarily consisted of many faculty opinions from persons who had no economic stake at all in the outcome. The Collegian's suggestion is naive, to say the least.

The other species of mental fog was evident in the letter that bemoaned coercion and complained of the attempt to make its writer well-rounded. No one has yet argued the question of the desirability and importance of verbal facility. The critics seem chiefly to resent being required to take the courses, which can involve a deal of work requiring some pains and offering little fun or "relevance". Well, rhetoric isn't macrobiotic or Day-Glo colored, and it isn't as much fun as horseback riding and sensitivity sessions. But no one has demonstrated that all education must or can be fun, or that the only important subject is the study of the day's fads and headlines. Rhetoric, by which term I understand the power to express ideas logically and persuasively, and to adapt expression to the particular occasion, is applicable to any subject matter whatever at any time, and so does not compete with, but supplements, the student's course of studies. Rhetorical skill helps us win support and cooperation by bringing others to agree with our reasons. We are no longer restricted to name-calling, villification, and emotionalism, as certain editorialists appear to be.

But the best reason for keeping the rhetoric requirement, assuming that more care is given to train the TA's and keep classes small, is that the average UMass student needs the instruction. No evidence has been adduced, and no one has argued, that the studentry are so proficient in writing and speaking as to remove all need for further exertions. On the other hand, tons of exams and themes attest that too many students have no notion at all of organization, economy, effect, argument, or appropriateness, not to mention grammar, spelling, and syntax. Of course one year won't rescue the sadder cases, but it can at least help and show the way to self-improvement. And it certainly can't do any harm.

So, the rhetoric requirement remains compulsory. But so do schooling, auto insurance, adherence to the law, and so forth. Some qualities are so strongly in the interests of the individual and society that the human tendency towards inertia, immediate gratification, and self-indulgence needs to be checked, so that quality may be instilled. "So," the critical may inquire, "the Faculty will go on forcing us to take rhetoric because they have the power and think they know what is best for us better than we do?" Precisely. And I think they are right.

Clark Irwin

No Correlation

To The Editor:

Why is it that the Five College Bus Service is so undependable? There is absolutely no correlation between scheduled and actual arrival times. There is nothing to distinguish a pay bus from a Five College Bus or, between the Five College busses. The drivers (save one) refuse to stop at any point except the boarding points at the colleges, while the pay busses will pick up and discharge passengers anywhere.

On Thursday, November 5, the Mount Holyoke bus arrived at UMass 15 minutes before scheduled; while the Smith bus arrived 20 minutes late. You can imagine the confusion. People waiting for the Smith bus got on the Mt. Holyoke bus, while many of those waiting for the Mt. Holyoke bus did not get on. Some people wanting to take the Mt. Holyoke bus made the mistake of arriving only 10 minutes early and had to wait 2 hours and 15 minutes for the next bus. I was one of the lucky few. I arrived 15 minutes before the scheduled time, waited 35 minutes. I was not allowed to get out in Northampton but went to Smith, walked 1 mile to my home, arriving a mere hour and five minutes later. Not bad for a twenty minute trip! When asked why he was late, the driver replied, "You complain when we're early, you complain when we're late."

Edward J. McGrath

Over The Weekend

To The Editor:

Over the weekend, 20 faculty in the Psychology Department contributed more than $200 to the McGovern campaign so that UMass students could rent buses yesterday and travel out-of-state to work for the Democratic presidential nominees.

We would like to publicly thank those faculty for their contribution.

Sincerely,
Jo Ann Dominick
Bonnie Arons

Notices

NOTICE: CHANGE OF POLLING PLACE PRECINCT VII

Voters in Precinct VII who have formerly been voting at the Lutheran Church on North Pleasant Street will cast their ballots in the November 7, 1972 Presicential Election at the Amherst Auction Galleries on Meadow Street. The polls will be open from 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Board of Selectmen
Town of Amherst

Editorial Point

Considering November 7 to be a day of National Emergency, more or less, and considering the reasons many of us use to justify skipping classes; the fact that an important campus politician decided that we should be in classes (and vote in our spare time) shouldn't deter anyone from voting-even if it conflicts with classes.

In Memoriam

The University and especially the Department have suffered a great loss with the recent death of Dr. John Bragg on Friday, November 3, in Ibadan, Nigeria. It is a loss for those who have known Dr. Bragg and perhaps more so for those who have not known him.

Dr. Bragg had been a faculty member of the Department of Agricultural and Food Economics since 1955. He graduated from the University of Maine in 1948 and was the most recent alumni president of his class. Dr. Bragg also received an M.S. from the University of Maine and his D.B.A. from Indiana University in 1966.

For the past year, Professor Bragg had been on a special assignment for the University, working with a team of specialists on a United States Agency for International Development project in Nigeria. In addition to teaching courses at the University and advising graduate students in their research study, Professor Bragg did extensive consulting in management development. He was a member of the Northeast Agricultural Economics Council and the American Agricultural Economics Association.

Dr. Bragg lived in North Amherst with his family. His wife Phyllis, two daughters Elizabeth and Judith, and his son, John, were in Nigeria with him. Dr. Bragg has two other daughters, Mrs. Barbara Johnson of Newton Centre and Carolyn Bragg, a student at the University of Rhode Island.

Words can only cast a shadow of what a man was. Only those who knew Dr. Bragg are really aware of the depth and the dimensions of his character and of his life; of what the real person was and of what he still is to his family, his friends and his students.

It has been said that if you make one real friend during a lifetime, you may consider yourself lucky. How fortunate are those students who were privileged to have been associated with Dr. John Howard Bragg; for in him, students achieved both ideals-a good teacher and a good friend.

Professor Bragg was one of those rare individuals who was a teacher not solely by training, but by his own personal stature. He was able to inspire his students with goals and ideas a little beyond their vision, but never beyond their grasp. At the same time, he never put himself beyond the needs of his students. His door was constantly open and he was always willing to listen and always ready to give assistance as requested.

Dr. Bragg shared not only his knowledge and his skills, but he gave of himself: his time, his energy, his understanding. The ideal rapport between teacher and student, of which you read in textbooks and for which teachers strive, was a natural reality in the relationship he had with his students. Students worked with, learned with, and grew with Dr. Bragg. Students believed in themselves because of him. He gave much more than he received, for he really gave of himself. No one can ever measure what he was so willing to share, however, those who were fortunate enough to hav been associated with him, will never forget what they have received.

Dr. John Bragg was humanly concerned and actively involved with others: his family, his friends, his students and his colleagues. What greater statement can be made of a teacher and of a man, than that he cared? As a teacher he made you believe in giants. He stood tall in front of the classroom, but never above learning or life.

Sydney S. Schmitchel

In Protest

To The Editor:

The decision of the UMass Athletic & Physical Education administration to prevent baseball players Mike Flanagan and Ed McMahon from participating in International competition for the U.S. is deplorable and disheartening.

It is another case of shortsightedness that will probably result in the creation of more bitter UMass alums, families and friends.

UMass has the dubious honor of becoming the first school in the tourney's 20-year history to refuse to allow officially selected players to compete. The precedent of this decision is very ominous. It literally means that any future Olympic, Pan American, etc. hopefuls will be unable to represent UMass if these events take place during the academic year. The reasons for not allowing Flanagan & McMahon to compete, i.e. the amount of time away from classes, would have to hold true in the future. If not, then a tremendous case of discrimination has been perpetrated upon two outstanding young man.

Any event of international flavor, whether athletic or not, has significant educational value. It is a rare chance for what should be one of the great thrills of anyone's life. The opportunity to travel abroad, meet prople from other nations and compete against them has more meaning than the few weeks of missed classes. Especially when permission can be granted to allow the individuals to make up the missed work.

Flanagan and McMahon have good academic standing. They probably will be high draft choices by professional baseball next June. Playing for the U.S. against top competition will help develop their abilities and could also enhance their financial positions in contract negotiations with pro ball next June.

UMass is fortunate to have Dick Bergquist as baseball coach. He is a man of high ideals and total dedication to his school and its students. The decision must be a disservice to him also & won't help his recruiting efforts in Pittsfield and Manchester, N.H., perennial baseball hotbeds.

If the coach, students and their parents all wanted the right to represent the U.S., how can permission be denied? Why not make UMass students proud of their University and congratulate them on such a rare honor.

If the administrators who made the decision really believe this is the proper action to take, I as an alumnus am disgusted and saddened.

The strength of UMass athletics is its fine coaches and the quality athletes they've been able to recruit. It would be a senseless waste of good men if more decisions of this nature caused any of them to leave.

My real sorrow is for Flanagan & McMahon. November 1972 should be a month of wonderful remembrances for the rest of their lives. Instead it will be only a bitter memory of frustration.

Can anyone expect them to continue to give their "all" for good, old alma mater and become staunch alumni?

Richard L. Bresciani

Maybe the way to change the world is to join a large corporation.

We don't make a lot of noise, but this is where it's really happening. You see, a large corporation like Kodak has the resources and the skill to make this world a little more decent place to live. And we intend to do what we can to see that this is exactly what happens.

Take our home city, Rochester, New York for example. We cut water pollution in the Genesee River by using natural bacteria to dispose of unnatural wastes. We cut air pollution by using electrostatic precipitators in a new combustible waste disposal facility. We helped set up a black enterprise program in downtown Rochester, and we've been experimenting with film as a way to train both teachers and students—including some students who wouldn't respond to anything else.

And we didn't stop with Rochester. Kodak is involved in 47 countries all over the world. Actively involved.

Why? Because it's good business. Helping to clean the Genesee River not only benefits society...but helps protect another possible source for the clean water we need to make our film. Our combustible waste disposal facility not only reduces pollution...but just about pays for itself in heat and power production and silver recovery. Our black enterprise program not only provides an opportunity for the economically disadvantaged...but helps stabilize communities in which Kodak can operate and grow. And distributing cameras and film to teachers and students not only helps motivate the children...but helps create a whole new market.

In short, it's simply good business. And we're in business to make a profit. But in furthering our business interests, we also further society's interests.

And that's good. After all, our business depends on society. So we care what happens to it.

Kodak

Kodak
More than a business.

The Street Theatre of Ossining, N.Y.

"Street Theatre" To Perform

The Street Theatre of Ossining, N.Y., will present one of its most noted productions. Richard Wesley's "The Black Terror" Monday, Nov. 13, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium at UMass.

This engagement is the second event of the new Third World Cultural Series being presented this year by the Fine Arts Council in conjunction with the University's Third World Alliance.

Currently, the Street Theatre is presenting several plays in New York, including Mr. Wesley's revolutionary adventure, and last summer was selected to participate in the Lincoln Center Community Street Theatre Festival. Writing of Richard Wesley's "The Black Terror", the noted New York Times critic Walter Kerr described the performance as "...verbal heat...not just jawing, genuine heat...Must blacks force protest to the point of violent revolution now, even at the price of being exterminated, or is it wiser for an assassin to live to assassinate, if need be, another day? But when Mr. Wesley comes to an ultimate narrowing down, to the ravaging two scenes in which a reluctant young killer and his fiercely committed mistress thrash out the issue with teeth bared and love abandoned, he delivers more than polemic. The contest becomes personal, it affects flesh, slogans give way as the people catch fire."

Sing-Sing Prison is one of the various Eastern locations where the company has performed. The company makes its UMass debut with its Nov. 13 performance. Tickets to "The Black Terror" are available at $1.50 ($1 to full-time UMass undergrads) through the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202.

Quad Colloquium

Bob Zelman will be offering a one credit Northeast Area colloquium course in "Philosophy of Personality." The course will meet in the Thatcher dorm Main lounge at 8 p.m. tonight.

The course will deal with the writings of people such as R.D. Laing, Hermann Hesse etc. The topics to be covered will be alienation, sanity/insanity, who is "normal", the mind/body split, us vs. them etc.

New Spanish Courses To Be Offered

Services

The Spanish-speaking component's main concern this year has been the establishing of contacts within individual departments in this university that will lead to the setting up of courses in Spanish. This has been done through professors or graduate students that are bilingual. Due to this effort, the following courses are now available to Spanish-speaking students:

Spanish for Spanish Speakers	Prof. Pedro Algarin
CASIAC 101: Study Skills in Spanish (Monografia)	Prof. Pedro Algarin
Anthropology 104 in Spanish	Ms. Helen Norman
Introduction to Biology in Spanish (Sept.)	Prof. Francisco Scudo
History 120 (2 semesters) Lecture in English; Discussion section in Spanish.	Prof. Roberto White
Geology 100 Lecture in English; Discussion section and textbook in Spanish.	Prof. Donald Doehring
Physics 100 in Spanish	Mr. Angel Lopez

In conjunction with the Skills Component, the following courses are offered for Spanish-speaking students:

English as a Second Language (2 semesters)	Ms. Elba Rivera Ms. Aida Beekman
CASIAC 111 Math in Spanish	Mr. Fernando Colon
Math 110 in Spanish	Mr. Fernando Colon

Due to the small number (50) of Spanish-speaking students enrolled in this university, no more classes can be set up at present. More classes are being negotiated for September.

It is very important to explain that the setting up of courses in Spanish, even if they are to be offered on a permanent basis, is, at best, a beginning. In order to meet the growing needs of Spanish-speaking students, this component is planning for the future with heads and chairmen of the individual departments. The goal is to recruit Spanish-speaking graduate students and eventually to hire Spanish-speaking professors so that each department can offer bilingual classes. This step would not only help the Spanish-speaking population at the university, but would greatly enrich the educational future of all Spanish majors.

On an everyday basis, this component helps any student that walks in with a problem. If the nature of the problem permits, the student is channeled to the CCEBS component that is in charge of that specific area (counseling, tutoring, etc.)

Together with the organization "Ahora," this component helps to disseminate all the information necessary to enable more Spanish-speaking people to apply to this university.

Undeclared majors interested in pre-registration counselling and Course Selection for the spring semester come to Machmer E-22 on November 9, from 1:00 p.m. to 3:20 p.m., and November 15, from 1:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. CASIAC will have two Spanish speaking counselors there to help you.

Who's Who Nominations Due

Nominations are now being sought for this year's Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

All juniors and seniors are eligible as nominees, and anyone in the campus community is welcome to submit a nomination.

Included in the nomination (with the student's name, class, major, etc.) should be a short resume of why he/she deserves to be named.

The basis for nomination should be a contribution the nominee has made to the campus or to campus-related activities. Off-campus community work is as important to the campus as activities taking place at the University and should be considered as such in the nominating process.

Academic achievement should also be considered a part of the nominating criteria.

The deadline for all nominations is Friday, November 10. Names should be submitted to David Booker (mailbox) in the Student Senate office, Student Activities of the Campus Center.

FONDUE SET
in red, green, yellow, or orange Includes 6 Forks $9.95 complete at Baker-Winn
Jewelers
"...everyone's favorite jeweler..." 31 So. Pleasant St.

CARL ANDERSON'S
WINDJAMMER
restaurant & lounge Belchertown Rd., Amherst
Daily Luncheon Specials 11:30 — 2 p.m.
★ ★ ★
WEDNESDAY NIGHT is Steak Night
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: Choice of potatoe, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. — 10 p.m.
THURSDAY NIGHT is Roast Beef Night
ROAST PRIME RIB of HEAVY WESTERN STEER BEEF: Choice of potatoe, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad bar included. $3.95
Served 5 p.m. — 10 p.m.
... LIVE ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY ...
253-2013 for reservations

the concert committee presents

student union ballroom
sun., nov. 12, '72
7 & 10 p.m.
$1.25 advance (C.C. Concourse) $1.50 at door

Baha'i To Mark 155th Birthday

On November 12, the Amherst Baha'i Community will join millions of Baha'i's around the world in observing the 155th anniversary of the Birth of Baha'u'llah, Prophet-Founder of the Baha'i Faith.

The public is cordially invited to a multi-media presentation of the Baha'i Faith at 8:00 in the First Congregational Church of Amherst. Jenais Brodie, student and poet of Hampshire College, will speak on the theme "Baha'u'llah-The Divine Peacemaker."

Pattabi Raman, Chairman of the Amherst Baha'i Community stated, "over one-hundred years ago, Baha'u'llah proclaimed the chairman of the Amherst Baha'i Community stated, "over one-hundred years ago, Baha'u'llah proclaimed the need for collective security and the establishment of universal peace, man must abandon his prejudices and learn to see himself as a world citizen. Bah'u'llah said that the earth is one country and mankind its citizens.

Baha'u'llah stated that the world, with its conflicting groups, the hostilities of race, nation, and class, would have to give way to a new and dawning world civilization. To achieve peace requires a change of human nature--there must be a transformation of the moral values and instincts of man. We must be ready as the pioneers who built America to reconstruct society and self. Baha'u'llah calls for us to let our vision be world embracing rather than confined to ourselves. He gave us a blueprint of a world society in which peace, unity, and justice would prevail. He told us the price of world peace is world faith--men united under the banner of one God, working to bring about the Kingdom of God on earth.

The Baha'i Faith, which originated in Persia in 1844, has not spread around the world and to over 4,800 cities and towns in the United States. Its teachings revolve around three basis principles: the oneness of God, the oneness of religion, and the oneness of mankind. Baha'u'llah asserts that all religions come from the same Divine Source and that religious truth is continuous and relative, not final and absolute.

Collegium Musicum To Perform

The UMass Collegium Musicum, under the direction of Alan Harler, will begin its fourth year of performances with a concert of 15th Century music, Monday, Nov. 20, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall, the alumni building.

Formed in response to student interest in performing Medieval and Renaissance music, The Collegium will include "Glorias" by Binchois, Dufay, and Power; the first polyphonic setting of a St. Luke Passion, medieval English carols; and a Dufay motet written for the dedication of the Florence cathedral in 1436. The krumhorn and recorder consorts will perform a group of Spanish tientos and villancicos.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

Health Services

Bloodmobile Coming To C.C.

Help a friend by donating a pint of your blood to the Massachusetts Red Cross Blood Bank. It will only take a small amount of your time and will give you added protection too. When a person donates blood at least once a year at one of the Red Cross Bloodmobiles, he or she becomes a member of the Red Cross Blood Insurance Program. This insures the donor and his immediate family to all blood needs for one year following date of donation.

Anyone 18 through 65 years of age, in good health and weighing more than 110 pounds is eligible. If one has had malaria or hepatitis during his lifetime, he is not eligible.

The Bloodmobile will be located in the Campus Center Auditorium on:

November 13-10-2:45 p.m.
November 14-9:30-3:14 p.m.
November 15-same as above
November 16-same as above

Blood is perishable and does not last longer than 28 days. Therefore, a constant renewed supply of whole blood is needed. Be sure that blood will be there when you need it. Through our previous efforts, the University has become the largest source of whole blood in Western Massachusetts. Give blood now and bring your friends with you too.

HUNGRY AT NIGHT?
FREE Delivery
Kentucky Fried Chicken
256-8745
Try the
Student Special 99¢

LANGUAGE MAJORS

NSA speaks your language

And furthermore, if you are especially adept in certain foreign languages, the National Security Agency is ready to give you immediate language assignments, advanced, refresher, or special vocabulary training or may even train you in an entirely new language.

Career language positions are available in the fields of translation, transcription, analysis and documentation. Fluency in speaking is not essential, but knowledge of idiomatic, colloquial and dialectal variations is desirable.

At NSA you will be joining an Agency of national prominence—a unique civilian organization responsible for developing "secure" communications systems to transmit and receive vital information.

NSA offers you this opportunity to further broaden your knowledge of modern language or area studies, and to use your talents in a challenging and rewarding career while you enjoy also the broad, liberal benefits of Federal employment. In return, we ask that you not only know your language, but that you be flexible, naturally inventive and intellectually curious. That's a lot to ask.

Do you fit the picture?

Where to go . . . what to do: Language applicants must take the Professional Qualification Test (PQT) as a prerequisite to NSA interviews for employment. Pick up a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office, the sooner the better. It contains a brief registration form which must be received in Berkeley, California by November 28 for the December 9 test.

College Relations Branch, National Security Agency, Fort George G. Meade, Maryland 20755. Attn: M321. An equal opportunity employer, M/F.

NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY

Political Advertisement

ELECT JOHN OLVER FOR THE STATE SENATE
VOTE FOR THE FUTURE NOT THE PAST

John Olver has effectively represented you as a State Representative. He has successfully sponsored legislation lowering the age of legal adulthood to eighteen. He has successfully sponsored a number of comprehensive environmental bills, including legislation protecting our fast diminishing wetlands and inland streams from random development. He has formulated legislation to better define and protect the rights of both tenants and landlords. John Olver was recently cited by Sen. Edward Kennedy for his "devoted efforts on behalf of the people of Western Massachusetts," in striving to preserve 14,000 acres of the nearby Mt. Holyoke Range, as a national park.

John Olver has been supported by such diverse groups as the State Labor Council, the Civil Liberties Union, the League of Women Voters, and Common Cause.

HIS OPPONENT? He has spent his time saying no. NO to the eighteen year old vote. NO to equal rights for women. NO to ten of eleven issues backed by the A.C.L.U. NO to those amendments calling for an end to the Vietnam War.

It is time for Amherst and the Franklin-Hampshire District to have a State Senator who can keep pace with the changing problems of the times.

WHEN YOU CAST YOUR BALLOT TODAY, VOTE FOR THE FUTURE...NOT THE PAST.
ELECT JOHN OLVER, DEMOCRAT TO THE STATE SENATE.
IT WILL MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

Steve Howards
28 Columbia Circle
Amherst, Mass

Talk On '43 Bengal Famine

Paul R. Greenough of the University of Chicago South Asia Language and Area Center will speak at Amherst College Thursday, November 9 on "The 1943 Bengal Famine: a Crisis in Distribution."

The third in a fall-winter series of lectures on "New Approaches to the History of Modern China and India," being sponsored by the Amherst College department of history, the lecture will be given at 8:00 p.m. in the Converse Hall Assembly Room.

The lecture series will continue through February of next year. The lectures are addressed to students of social science in general, and to those with a special interest in China and India. They are open to the public without charge.

Greenough, trained in Anthropology and Peasant Economics as well as in South Asian history, specializes in the famine as a social phenomenon with both cultural-symbolic and economic-technoligical aspects. He holds a BA degree from Columbia University and an MA degree from the University of Chicago, where he is presently a candidate for a PhD degree in history. He has studied at the Visva Bharati University in India and is currently completing, under the auspices of the School of Nursing at the University of California, Berkeley, a study of health problems in communes.

His lecture will be based upon a comprehensive and cross-disciplinary study of the 1943 Bengal famine, which is estimated to have resulted in the death of at least one and one-half million people. His research deals with the ecological origins of the famine, market and non-market mechanisms of food distribution, and innovative organizational remedies in response to it. He will treat the famine in the context of World War II and as a case study of the interaction between traditional and modern social forces.

The series is intended to demonstrate some of the innovative approaches being devised and employed by young specialists to further understanding of these two areas. Urbanization, rural change, economic development, and political modernization are among the topics to be considered and the comparative, cross-disciplinary perspective will be highlighted.

ATTENTION!
VW AND OTHER IMPORTED CAR OWNERS!
Tom Saylor, Master Mechanic, has joined SPENCER'S MOBILE SERVICE (next to Amherst P.O.): 253-9059.
RELIABLE WORK • REASONABLE PRICES
MOST CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

'4 Chevy Impala 65, 1 bbl 283, 3 speed Hurst 200, needs new tires, fall sticker. Call 549-5206 and leave name and number. tf11-7

60 Triumph GT-6, after 6, 323-6541 or 788-2919 days. tf11-7

1961 Ford Window Van, new Ford remanufactured engine, body excellent, cupboards, ice box, fold down couch, roof window. $550. 548-1555. tf11-7

1971 Honda car, excellent cond. 40 mi. per gal. $1,100, call 336-6827. tf11-8

1970 VW, excellent condition, snow tires included $1250, call Ed at 367-9175 or 665-1921. tf11-7

'60 VW '63 engine - snow tires - good funky car - needs battery and muffler. $100 - 665-1921 tf11-7

69 MGB with Radial tires, new valves, alternator and water pump. Needs new clutch. $750. Call 586-3219. tf11-8

65 Chevy Belair, V8, pow. steer. Needs some work. Good condition. $250. 665-2092 keep trying tf11-10

1960 Ford Falcon dependable. Will get you anywhere you wanna go. Fall inspection sticker $75. or B.O. Bruce 323-7808 tf11-10

1960 Chevy Belair, in good condition only $100. Also 1963 Volkswagon bus, needs some body work, call 665-3217. tf11-7

Driving Enthusiasts! This 1967 Volvo 122S may be one of the best handling Volvos available. Equipped with heavy duty sway bar, Koni shocks, and Sempere & steel belted radials, all with less than 5,000 miles and still on warranty. This car has been owned and maintained by an experienced Volvo mechanic. $950. Call Pete at 253-2038 after 5. tf11-0

MISCELLANEOUS

Summer in Vermont? Think Middlebury College. Advanced study in French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish. Beginning and advanced study in Chinese, Japanese. Begin work toward the M.A. as an undergraduate. Write Room 121, Sunderland Language Center, Middlebury, VT. 05753 tf11-21

SERVICES

The Exec. Hair Salon, 151 State St., Northampton, Mass. Hairstyling: We begin where others leave off. For appt. call 584-2548. tf12-13

Typing — theses, term papers, office work, etc. Experienced, accurate. Have Math, Science symbols. $3.00 per hour. 253-3001. tf12-17

Free pamphlet on "Problems of Women Today." Call toll free 800-323-4136. tf11-17

Future CPA's learn how to prepare for CPA exam. Becker CPA review course, call collect: 617-536-1140. tf11-9

Attention! VW & other imported car owners! Tom Saylor, master mechanic has joined Spencer's Mobile Service (next to Amherst P.O.); 253-9059, reliable work. Reasonable prices. Most credit cards accepted. tf11-10

ROOMMATE WANTED

Won't discriminate M. or F. roommate wanted, own room, open minded ungrad, prefts clean $85/mo. $100 dep. 345 Puffton 549-6057, Frank. tf11-8

Female roommate wanted, for house in Northampton. Own room, $58/mo & utils. Car necessary. Call Patricia 586-2942 or 545-0065. tf11-7

Roommate needed for apt. in Sunderland, own bedroom, util. included, $92.00, call Bob 665-3216 tf11-7

APT. FOR RENT

Sunderland, new 2 bdrm. incl. util., dw., a/c, dispos!, pool, lease to Aug. 31, or less w/ rt to sublet, $200 Skibiski 253-7222 or 2626 eve. tf 11-9

1 bedroom apartment in private house, fireplace, garage, separate entrance, share kitchen, unfurnished. $165, utilities included. 253-7940. tf11-9

One 3 foot cubic ref. at reasonable price & good condition. Call 546-9607. Keren or Nan. tf11-8

LOST

Lost, gold rimmed eyeglasses, reward, call Russ 253-5677. Lost in vicinity of G. Washington. tf11-8

Lost! Fri. 27th red leather key case w/ VW keys. Call Kathy or Nancy at 545-6721, 545-6725, Rm. 108, Emergency. No spare keys. Please!! tf11-3

A Tissot watch, black leather band, square face, lost Fri., Oct 27 in Southwest area. Please call 6-8507. tf11-7

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE

1972 Norton 750 Roadster with full ferring, 1100 mil. $1600. Call 253-2923. tf11-7

'70 Honda CB450, ex. cond. Buy now and save $. Must sell to stay in school. $650 or best offer. Call Bob, 546-7336. tf11-7

HELP WANTED

Wanted R.N. or L.P.N. one nurse 2 days a week, 7-3 shift, and one nurse 2 days, 3-11 shift. Cors Corner Nursing Home, Sunderland, 665-2740. tf 11-13

Anyone interested in working for John Miller, Election Day, please attend informal reception, Van Meter, No. Rec. Room, Fri. 7:30 p.m. tf11-12

Friendly Ice Cream, King St., Allamp, has openings part/full time days/evenings. Weekend availibility/own car required. Call 584-0555. tf11-8

Students needed. Hours & wages neg. Apply in person Hadley Pizza & Sub, next to McDonalds in Northampton. tf11-8

Help wanted — Liberal commissions working for us, car is necessary, apply at The Hungry — U 256-6350. tf11-17

Models needed — for photo essay — figure studies, etc. No exp. necc. — Strictly prof., situation $10 per hour. Call 584-9797 Bet. 5-5:30 p.m. tf11-8

Do you know Spanish? And do you type? Excellent opportunity for working during next two months. UMass grc. Tele phone 545-2020. tf11-8

HOMES FOR SALE

10 minutes from campus, 2 bedrooms asking $13,000. Call 253-5351 after 5 p.m.

WANTED

Coins and stamps US and foreign bought, sold, traded. Estimates and appraisals. Call Bob 546-1716, 202 Chadbourne House. tf12-13

Wanted: 2 bedrm. appt., to lease or sublease Jan - June, within 10-12 mi from campus, call Dick or Joe 546-6293 or Ted 546-6259. tf11-9

FOR SALE

Must sac $600 Rickenbacker elec. guitar for $275, Fender Bandmaster amp., $100. Both in ex. cond. Call Dave, 628-3012. tf11-9

Strategy game — Gettysburg. For anyone with or without war gaming experience. Excellent condition. Al Cook, 401 Mackimmie, 6-8616. tf11-13

Photo buttons!! 1in pin or mirror, now only one dollar.! Send photo and dollar to Paul Stamps, Box 378, North Amherst, Mass. tf11-9

Assorted Xmas & note cards, designed by wounded Viet children. Total proceeds spent for medical care. Call 546-9227. Ask for Stan. tf11-8

1 new Ansen 5 1/2 x 13 mag wheels, for Pinto, Vega, Cricket, Capri, Toyota Celica & Corona, Datsun, 510, Opel GT, others. $120. Jeff, 665-2111. tf11-9

Ski equip. - 2 pr. Head metal, (210-215 cm) skis, 1 pr. Northland Wood (210 cm), Molitor boots, size 11. All fine cond. Call Bob 367-2180. tf 11-7

For sale — 1970 VW Bug, snow tires, excellent condition, 18500 miles. $1150 firm. 256-6350 evenings 253-7145. tf11-10

Ovation acoustic guitar, excel. cond. $175. Heathkit combo amp. Top, 250 wts. new — $150. Pair for $300., pickup and cord free. 253-2949. tf11-10

CD great coat. Good, heavy wool. In new condition. Honest! Men's size 40, women's size 9-11. $20 or best offer. Call Ronna 549-6063. tf 11-7

M & F Meal Ticket for sale. Best offer. Call Dwighhouse, Tom in 301 keep trying or leave message. tf11-10

Lady Rosemount ski boots, size 7, worn twice. $90, value $150. Call Noella 584-4148. tf11-10

Ambassador stereo, 2 min. old was $300, will sell for $200. Includes 2 air suspension speakers, serious calls only. I need money 6-8618. tf11-8

Struggling artist must sell 135mm 12.8 Nikkor lens, to pay rent, top condition, want $150, perhaps trade for wide angle. Clark 628-3012. tf11-7

Guitars — new and used at discount prices. Many fine instruments and acc. in stock. The Guitar Workshop, 98 Main St., North. 586-1708. tf-sem.

1971 Fender reverb amp, good for guitar and harp and also a Altec-Lansing P.A. system. Call Charlie 584-6279. tf11-7

Book: "Modern Portugese" for Portugese 126. Excellent condition. Free Port. & Eng. dictionary. Al Cook, 401 MacKemmie, 546-8616. tf11-7

Special new tenor recorders, $18, also excellent sopranos, altos at Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Greenfield. 774-2931. tf12-1

New acoustic guit. from $21. Special 30% off list, on new shipment of classical guitars. Creative Endeavor, Miles St., Grnfld tf12-1

New Univox guitar & bass amps 20% off list, from $100. Creative Endeavor, 22 Miles St., Greenfield 774-2931 tf12-1

FOR RENT

Farmhouse to rent, 65 acres, 5 rms, washer - dryer, util., furnished or unfur. S. Chesterfield Rd., Goshen. Call 268-7193 Miles 5-7. tf 11-7

Lg. rm. in farmhouse apt. $80/mo. for 1 person, $100/mo. for 2, all utilities, kitch priv. loc. S. Deerfield. Off rt. 116, call 546-6366. tf 11-7

Ski people, bedrooms avail. in warm house near Mt. Snow, Vt. For Season. Fire place, etc. $300., covers all. Call 549-6426 Scott. tf11-7

PERSONAL

Rural Gay Commune near Amherst wants 12 Beautiful Freak people. Box 723, Amherst, Mass. tf11-14

Thanks to the Yonua man who drove me to the infirmary and those that assisted. — My nose is O.K tf11-7

? Dominas el espanol? ? Sabes escribir a maquina? Oportunidad de trabajo durante los siguentes dos meses UMass grc tel. 545-2020. tf11-8

Andy — Happy 19th birthday! The day should be dynamite! The partying — far out, the sparkle will always be ours!! I Love You. Shell tf11-7

Happy birthday Bannuck. Isn't it nice to be 18 again? Gayle. tf11-7

EMPLOYMENT

Men Women — Work on a ship next summer! No exp. nec. Exc. pay world travel. Send $2 for info. Seafax 2030-MB, Port Angeles, Washington. tf11-22

WANTED

Tutor for Math 116, 665-3216 Ask for Bob. tf11-7

Private Collector wishes to buy German WW2 Helmets, daggers, hats, medals, uniforms, etc. Top prices pd. Call Splitd, collect 732-9781. tf11-10

HOUSE WANTED

To rent: rural desired. Running water, electricity, etc., not nec. Can do repairs. Call 774-3012. David tf11-8

INSTRUCTION

French native. Experienced teacher alliance Francaise. Will tutor French, all levels, conversation, grammar call 253-7940. tf11-9

ENTERTAINMENT

WOODY ALLEN'S FIRST "WHAT'S UP TIGER LILY?" IN COLOR & "MISSION TO MOSCOW" STARRING D. NIXON — SAT. NOV. 11. MAHAR AUD. 7 & 11 tf11-10

FOR RENT

Beautiful rooms for students, faculty or staff. A stonethrow from campus. Av. Nov. 1 '72 and/or beyond. Call 549-5791 tf11-10

Notices

CEQ PROJECTS
7 p.m., 176 CC. We will be discussing present and future projects. Everyone invited.

CHRISTIANS
Prayer meeting every day, 11:30 1:00 p.m. Join us in praising Jesus!

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
Things not going just the way you expected? Funny, how they go a lot better when you express love in your daily experience. You can find out how. Come to 803 CC at 6:45 tonight.

COMMUNITY SERVICE MAJORS
Meeting for all PS majors to form a liaison committee. Will discuss requirements and what's happening in the dept. Please come — student input is needed. Skinner Lounge, tomorrow at 5.

ECOLOGY GROUP
Meeting tonight, 7 p.m. Student Activities area, new members welcome.

ELECTION RETURNS MOVIE
Project 10 and Orchard Hill will show free tonight at 6 p.m. the revolutionary feature film "Burn", starring Marlon Brando, in Project 10 Main Lounge. Election returns during reel changes.

EMERGENCY MEETING
Important meeting for members of group. New members may attend. Several urgent matters to be discussed. Meeting to be held tonight at 6 p.m. Hillel Complex. Be there!

EVERYWOMAN'S CENTER
On Thurs., Nov. 9, at 12:00 there will be a meeting at the Everywoman's Center to further plan Everywoman's Free U. All interested women welcome.

G.S.S.
Meeting tonight at 6:30 in CC Rm. 905 909.

HEYMAKERS
Lessons will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Governor's Lounge.

HILLEL
Pick up nomination papers in office. Elections next week. Thurs. is the deadline for the conclave. Don't miss it.

NAIADS
Meeting today in dance studio, Rm. 11, at 5:15 p.m. Wear something comfortable.

NORTHEAST COLLOQUIA
A one credit "Philosophy of Personality" course on R.D. Laing, is offered by Bob Zelman. Tonight, 8 p.m. Thatcher Main Lounge.

PARACHUTE CLUB
You may have missed our last meeting but you can still find us weekends at Turners Falls Airport-not Orange, 253-3335.

PEOPLE MEETING PEOPLE
There are other people than the ones you know. Call People Meeting People at 545-1551, Sun.-Thurs., 8-11, Fri. and Sun., 8-12 p.m.

REVELERS
There will be a mandatory meeting of all Revelers tonight at 9:00 at SAM.

SIG EP
Open rush at Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, tomorrow 7-9:00 p.m. Call 5-0090 for rides. All U. men invited.

SKI CLUB MEETING
Club meeting tonight at 8:00 in Mahar with movies, memberships and trip info. Watch for our used ski sale Nov. 30 in CC Aud.

TABLE TENNIS TOURNAMENT
Applications are available at Student Activities for UMass Table Tennis Tournament to be held Nov. 17-19, at Boyden. Undergraduates and graduate men and women are eligible for singles and doubles. Sponsored by Program Council.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM
All candidates for the Women's Basketball Team should report to WOPE gym tonight at 4:30 p.m. If you cannot make it please contact Miss Farr, 5-2324.

WTOY MEETING
Tomorrow elections to be held for treasurer and secretary. Old members meet at 7 p.m. in WTOY office. Open meeting for old and new members begins at 8 p.m.

ZEN CIRCUS
Be there. This weekend will be an exhibition of all lively and living art. Come one, come all and ENJOY.

FREE
Kittens - all kinds, shapes, and sizes. Call 546-9803.

LOST
From my room, 2nd Dickinson, black midi coat. Please return or dump in bathroom, please, it's getting cold. Katy, 6-6556.

Brown wallet lost last weekend, possibly in Puffton. Keep the money, I need the papers. Call Paul,253-7559.

Brown purse, Fri. while hitchhiking. Call 546-7078, Leslie Freschet.

Whoever ripped off my brown leather jacket from the Blue Wall Fri. night (Nov. 3), please return my wallet to the lost and found.

Textbook Annex Notice

By Friday, November 10, the Textbook Annex will begin its fall semester returns of unsold textbooks to the publishers. As such, we can no longer guarantee that your text will be on our shelves. If you have a particular book that for some reason you have avoided purchasing, and it is required reading, we recommend that you purchase it now to be assured of its availability.

Remember, we will remain open throughout most of the semester, weekdays from 8:30 to 4:30; however, due to our returns, many texts will not be on our shelves after November 10.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

In purchasing gifts for Taurus, select items that are sturdy and serviceable. If one wants really to please practical Taurus, give security bonds or shares of stock. Taurus would not turn away from a cash gift, either!

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sudden changes due in areas of partnership, marriage, public relations. Cycle remains high, but some associates tend to act in eccentric manner. Aquarius and Scorpio appear to be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be analytical. Means perceive reasons. Don't be satisfied merely that something happened. Find out what occurred and discern reasons. A friend, usually reliable, may go off on tangent. Be prepared.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home influence is stronger than you might imagine. Family disagreement about one of your friends could be featured. Some desires are revised. Don't force issues. Diplomacy is required if you are to achieve goal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Maintain aura of mystery. Don't tell all you know. Discretion now is a necessity. Pisces person could be involved. Changes occur at home base. Obtain valid hint from Gemini message. Put prestige on line in defense of principles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on practical aspects heed voice of experience. Don't veer too far from what is familiar. Journey could be postponed and this would work to you ultimate advantage. Respond accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial stability can be achieved if you get rid of outmoded procedure. One you think you are helping would actually like to be left alone. Don't carry another's burden. It only creates resentment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Young person is enthusiastic but lacks experience. Heed your own counsel. New avenue of expression is due to become available. Leo can play key role. Be creative, not impulsive. You will know difference.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Trust hunch. Expound views. You will find others receptive, even enthusiastic. One behind scenes removes roadblock to progress. Aquarian plays key role. Check medical, dental appointments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be flexible. Versatility now becomes your ally. Social contact could lead to business profit. Be open, receptive. Accept challenge. Sagittarian is in your corner. Relax. You will get what is required.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid actions based on impulse. Thorough study is necessry for success. One who advocates otherwise does not have your best interests at heart. Steady pace now is required for real progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain hint from Leo message. Check messages. Reservations are apt to go astray. Gemini, Virgo individuals are involved. Plans are subject to abrupt change. Ride with tide. Don't battle relative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some undercover activity indicated in connection with legal papers involving funds. Family is involved. Legacy could be cause for dispute. If diplomatic, you are likely to gain. Otherwise, costly delay ensues.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are attracted to law, medicine. You can care for people who have trouble, handicaps. You have been on the move, but conditions will settle. You will be more secure and could come into cycle which enhances values of property. April should be your most significant month of 1973.

Copyright, Gen. Fea. Copr. 1972

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Fondle
4 A washing
8 Chestnut speckled with white
12 Man's name
13 Site of Taj Mahal
14 Great Lake
15 Title of respect
16 32nd President
18 Poplar tree
20 Man's name
21 Hypothetical force
22 Simian
23 Parcels of land
27 Pale
29 Bitter vetch
30 Open to view
31 Conjunction
32 Stroke
33 Poem
34 Maiden loved by Zeus
35 Boundary
37 Mournful
38 Mohammedan chieftain
39 Level
40 Deface
41 Man's nickname
42 Sense
44 Measured duration of 47 Leave-taking
51 Be in debt
52 Sacred image
53 Solar disk
54 Unit of Japanese currency
55 Skin of fruit
56 Conduct
57 Attempt

DOWN
1 City in Italy
2 Goddess of discord
3 Game fish
4 Farm building
5 Time gone by
6 Bodies of soldiers
7 Hurry
8 Spin
9 Native metal
10 Be ill
11 Openwork fabric
17 Latin conjunction
19 Man's nickname
22 Skill
24 Faroe Islands whirlwind
25 Tidy
26 Portico
27 Animal
28 Seed coating
29 Dine
30 Unusual
32 Trap
33 Paddle
36 Parent (colloq.)
37 Greet
38 Nearly 40 Substance
41 Three-toed sloth
43 Teutonic deity
44 Care for 45 Pitcher
46 Negate
47 Plunge
48 Dutch town
49 American essayist
50 Brown kiwi

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 7

ALL THESE VEHICLES CARRY A 50-50 GUARANTEE FOR 30 DAYS.

CAMPER CLOSE-OUT
1971 V.W. Camper, White $3195
1970 V.W. Camper, Red $2895
1970 V.W. Camper, Red $3395
1970 V.W. Camper, Red $2895
1970 V.W. Camper, White $2495
1969 V.W. Camper, Red $2295

SQ. BACK CLOSE-OUT
1970 V.W. Sq. Back, Green $1895
1970 V.W. Sq. Back, Blue $1795
1970 V.W. Sq. Back, Auto. Orange $1795
1969 V.W. Sq. Back, Green $1295
1969 V.W. Sq. Back, Auto. Beige $1695
1968 V.W. Sq. Back, Blue $995

DOMESTIC'S
1966 Pont. Lemans V-8 Auto $595
1966 Ford Mustang V-8 Std. $495
1965 Chrysler New Yorker $395
1965 Ford Custom V-8 Auto $395

Complete sales, service parts, body dept. and towing.

OPEN EVES. 'till 9.

NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN
Your Authorized VW Dealer
246 King St., Rte. 5 Northampton
FREE Shuttlebus Service for Amherst Customers
Call 584-8620

What Ever Happened To The Redmen?

By STEVE CROWE

Now that the assault of racial mudslinging, brought on by the changing of the UMass athletic name, has come to a cease-fire and the "racist" muck has been cleaned (or at least wiped) from our eyes, it might be interesting to know just what really happened. How and why was the name changed? Who was responsible for the action; the students, the Athletic Department, or the Administration? Just how far back does the "Redmen" tradition go, anyway? And, now that it is all over, what is the general reaction to the change and to the new selection, "Minutemen"?

The first official action to repeal the name "Redmen" was actually taken by the Student Senate on May 3, 1972. It was a bill introduced by Alex Vachon and Nick Apostola stating:

"Whereas there is a growing American consciousness deploring the perpetration of racist, sexist, and ethnic discrimination and mystification, and whereas the use of Indian references on this, e.g., "Redmen on the Warpath" gives a false, distorted, and racist picture of our American Indian Heritage be it resolved that the Student Senate condemn the continuation of symbolic reference to Indians, and be it further resolved that the Student Senate support a proposal to establish a new school design."

It has been rumored that the Administration received letters from Indian interest groups over the summer and that this is what really forced the change.

On May 4, 1972 (the day after action had already been taken in Student Senate) President Wood received a letter from an attorney representing the Association on American Indian Affairs Incorporated. The attorney, Mr. Hirsch, had recently spoken at the University and had noticed the "Braves" and "Squaws" signs on the bathrooms outside the "Hatch". He felt that this type of think was degrading to the Indians because it only corroborated the stereotype of the Indian of the past. Wood then sent the letter to Chancellor Bromery.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Gage wrote a letter to Mr. Hirsch for Chancellor Bromery saying that "action has already been taken to remove 'Braves' and 'Squaws' from the bathroom doors" and that it would probably not be long before the athletic name, "Redmen" was also supplanted.

Hirsch, however, had not been aware that the UMass nickname was "Redmen". He praised the University and Administration for their actions and urged them to continue their efforts in that direction.

Frank McInerney, newly appointed Head of the Athletic Department, recalls that he read something in the letter to the effect that, "the American Indian perceives the term, 'Redmen' as the American Negro perceives the term, 'nigger'." "If this is the case," says McInerney, "I don't think any university can do any less than go along with the change."

At the beginning of this semester, Dr. Gage sent a copy of Hirsch's letter to Student Senate President Larry Ladd, saying that "the letter speaks for itself" and urging the Student Government Association to take action to repeal the "Redmen" designation and replace it with a more appropriate name. "I feel strongly," wrote Gage, "that we should take the initiative in this situation and not wait until we are obliged to react to pressure, legal or otherwise, from an Indian interest organization."

President Larry Ladd on September 13 and again on September 20, announced a need for people to help in the screening of new names for the athletic teams.

The screening committee finally met on Monday, September 25. There were nine members on the committeee, including the sports editor of the Collegian, sports director of WMUA, a member of the Alumni, a representative of the Commuter government, a member of the Athletic Council, a student senator, an ex-UMass athlete, a present UMass athlete, and a representative of the UMass team captains. They voted on the names that had been submitted anonymously by the student body. There were ten suggestions in all, some of which were of the caliber of "Wasps" or "Purple People Eaters", etc...(Which might be one reason why the best three nominations were "Baystaters", "Statemen", and "Minutemen".)

Some people feel that the name "Redmen" should have appeared on the ballot in order to get the general feeling of the student body. However, the screening committee, after conferring with Chancellor Bromery's office, decided that if "Redmen" should win, we would be right back where we started...the old vicious circle.

This issue came up as a referendum in the Student Senate elections on Thursday, September 28. The result of the election was, to no one's surprise, "Minutemen" by a landslide.

(Editor's note: This story, and the cartoon on the back page, constitute the first part of a three-part series about UMass sports and the various nicknames that have been associated with the UMass sports scene.)

Yesterday's Sports Head featured Don Kessinger of the Chicago Cubs.

UM Swimming and Diving Team

The UMass Swimming and Diving Team will begin official practices yesterday at WOPE pool. The practice schedule is as follows; Tuesday: 5:30-7; Wednesday: 4:30-6; Thursday: 5:30-7; and Friday: 4:15-5:15.

All University women undergraduates who are interested in participating should either come to a scheduled practice or contact Coach Pat Griffin, (5-2324) for further information.

The team is expecting to improve on last seasons dual meet mark of 2-4. The meets will begin in December and continue into January and February. This years schedule has ten opponents on it including: Vermont, UNH, URI, and Springfield.

WOODY ALLEN
"WHAT'S UP TIGER LILY?" in color
SATURDAY, NOV. 11
MAHAR AUD.
Plus
"MISSION TO MOSCOW" and "CHANNEL 1 NEWS"

Denverites To Vote On '76 Olympics

DENVER AP - The fate of the 1976 Denver Winter Olympics will be decided Tuesday when an anticipated record number of Coloradians go to the polls.

Nearly a million persons are expected to cast ballots in the general election and decide whether further state money will be spent for Denver to stage the Games in 1976.

The measure is Amendment No. 8, a proposed change in the state constitution "to prohibit the state from levying taxes and appropriating or loaning funds for the purpose of aiding or furthering the 1976 Winter Olympic Games."

The wording is confusing, with a "Yes" vote required to stop furthering spending. A majority of "No" votes would continue state financing.

FAT
Wednesday
CUCKOOS NEST
"PENNY NITE"
Thursday
NO EXIT
Friday
ENDLESS KNIGHTS
Saturday
The Rusty Nail Inn
RTE. 47 SUNDERLAND
665-4937

Some of the best legs we know are wintering in Scholl Exercise Sandals this year.

They belong to the U.S. Ski Team, but they could belong to you.

Hardly anyone cares more about legs and feet than a skier. And the Ski Team knows how Scholl Sandals relax your feet, when you want to keep going after a day on the slopes.

And Scholl's exclusive toe-grip encourages your toes to grip firmly, helping to tone and firm your legs—whether you're a skier or not.

So if you'd like to get through winter in beautiful shape, put on some Scholl Sandals the way the U.S. Ski Team does.

After all, what's good enough for their legs and feet should be good enough for yours.

Scholl exercise sandals

Photographed at The Inn of the Seventh Mountain, Oregon.

Colts Edge By Pats 24-17

FOXBORO (AP) — Rookie Bruce Laird set up a pair of third period touchdowns with a fumble recovery and a long kickoff return and the Baltimore Colts snapped a four-game losing streak Monday night in a 24-17 National Football League victory over the hapless New England Patriots.

Laird, a former all New England standout at American International College, recovered a fumble at the Patriots' 25 to help the Colts to a 17-3 lead.

Then, after New England's Jim Plunkett scored his first pro touchdown, Laird paved the way to another Baltimore score with a 73-yard return of the ensuing kickoff.

The Colts, scoring only their second victory in eight games and providing John Sandusky his first triumph since taking over as head coach from Don McCafferty last month, were capably directed by quarterback Marty Domres while all-time great Johnny Unitas watched from the sidelines.

Domres, promoted to the starting job when Sandusky took over, led an 11-play, 79-yard march for the Colts' first touchdown in the opening period. He fooled the Patriots with the old end-around play, wide receiver Sam Havrilak taking a handoff from Don McCauley and sprinting 32 yards for the score.

The Colts moved into a 10-3 halftime lead on a nine-yard field goal by Jim O'Brien. It was set up by a 44-yard pass interference penalty and a roughing the passer call, both on third down and long yardage situations.

Don Nottingham raced two yards into the end zone for a score which was nullified as an official had called time because of debris hurled on the field by fans. Two plays later O'Brien kicked the field goal.

Domres passed to Tom Mitchell on a 17-yard scoring play after Laird recovered the fumble in the third period.

The Patriots then marched 66 yards in a drive that Plunkett capped by keeping on fourth down around his right end for a touchdown run that covered two yards.

Laird returned the kickoff to the New England 25 but the Colts were nailed for illegal use of hands and pushed back to the 41. Five plays later Norm Bulaich plunged one yard for what proved to be the decisive touchdown.

After O'Brien had an 18-yard field goal attempt blocked in the final period, the Patriots moved 87 yards for another touchdown. Carl Garrett covered the final yard.

UMass Sportsweek

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 8

SOCCER: Springfield College at UMass. Game time 2:30 p.m.

CROSS-COUNTRY: UMass at Coast Guard in tri-meet with Central Connecticut. Meet starts at 4:00 p.m.

THURSDAY, NOV. 9

SOCCER: UMass JV's at Westfield State. Game time is 2:30 p.m.

FRIDAY, NOV. 10

FOOTBALL: UMass JV's play at Alumni Stadium vs. Connecticut JV's. Game time is 2:00 p.m.

SATURDAY, NOV. 11

FOOTBALL: UMass at Holy Cross. Game time is 1:00 p.m.

SOCCER: UMass plays last home game of season as New Hampshire comes to town. Game time is 1:00 p.m.

And The Winner Is..

How and why was the team name changed from Redmen to Minutemen? See the first of a three-part story on Pg. 15 for all the details.

Harriers Finish Second As NU Wins New Englands

By WALT POWERS

The UMass Cross-Country team was sullen and silent. Coach Ken O'Brien was in no mood to talk. You wouldn't have guessed that his squad had just beaten some twenty-odd cross-country teams in the New England meet. But this was a team that had staked out almost an entire season on the results of this one championship meet, and had been defeated in it by Northeastern. There was little solace in taking second place.

They tried hard. Randy Thomas and Bill Gillin of UMass forged into the lead early in the race. Though Dan Moynihan of Tufts, and Chuck Duggan of Springfield passed them later in the race, it was unimportant, because these two runners ran for weak teams. But when Ken Flanders of N.U. passed both Gillin and Thomas in the last half mile, it hurt. Both Gillin and Thomas had beaten Flanders earlier in the year.

Moynihan won in the New England meet record time of 23:51. He was followed by Ken Flanders of N.U., Chuck Duggan of Springfield, and Randy Thomas and Bill Gillin of UMass. N.U. then took sixth through eighth, and also twelfth. Pete Crisci was next for UMass, in 20th, Doug O'Connell took 22nd, and Chris Chambers finished 29th, but it was not enough to beat Northeastern.

Both Rick Barry and Chris Chambers were stricken with cramps in the last mile. Tom Maguire was tripped up near the start, and his recovery sprint disrupted his whole race. These factors seriously weakened UMass.

But even if the Harriers had been perfectly healthy, it seems doubtful that they could have beaten Northeastern. The N.U. team ran as a unit, and the effect of the whole team running up in front was devastating. Other than the performances of Gillin and Thomas, the UMass team has been able to muster only token opposition to the N.U. pack this year, and this is where Northeastern wins its meets.

O'Brien was visibly disappointed. "I thought we'd win," he said. "I felt that Gillin and Thomas would beat their No. 1 runner, and that our third, fourth, and fifth men would break their top five. But our fourth and fifth runners weren't aggressive enough, and didn't go after the Huskies early in the race. If you want to win the big races, you've got to push yourself through the pain and agony until you know what your body can take, and what it takes to win. That's what Northeastern did, and they won."

The second place finish of the team overshadowed the gutsy, frontrunning performances of Bill Gillin and Randy Thomas. Gillin was exhausted, and barely able to speak at the end. "I couldn't possibly have run any faster today," he said. Thomas was disappointed in the loss, and shrugged his effort off, "We knew we'd have to run all out to beat N.U.," he said.

So the New Englands, once again, have eluded the Minuteman grasp. This is a strong team, and they beat out third place finisher Providence, by 57 points. But this is a team that ran to win, and felt that it could win. In this situation, looking good just wasn't good enough.

The cross-country team winds up its season next Monday in the I.C.A.A.A.A.'s in New York City.

*****

In a happier note, the UMass junior varsity won the New England Championship, 29-62, over B.C. full story in tomorrow's Collegian.

The Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Marty Kelley

It's Not The End Of The World

WEST ON 84, LEWISBURG, PA. — "You know," said a rather mild-mannered Italian hostess, "everyone seems to be so depressed. Why you people are just too young and too much alive and just too much to see to feel like this." And although the hostess went on to put disaster into perspective, and although she tried to help, and with no matter what she was to tell us, our table tried to tell her that for but one small moment the world suddenly stopped turning for the University of Massachusetts football team in a remote Pennsylvania village.

Although UMass shared a bit of pestilence that day in the surroundings of Lewisburg, the hostess told me not to forget the Wilkes-Barre floods of that June. "Do you see this beautiful room that you have before you? Well, in June there was water up to the ceiling and we were closed for about three and a half months and only after $75,000 were we able to open again."

Now what possible connection does the hostess have with the plight of the UMass football team? Well she tried to tell us that the future isn't that bleak and that we, as well as all the football players in that room, are young and have so much more to experience.

Yes, she was right. She was so right. It isn't the end of the world for the Minutemen, 1972.

You see, there's a tremendous lesson to be learned at Bucknell and as far as I'm concerned, going to Lewisburg to seek and find the answer is perhaps the toughest way to look at fact and truth.

These football players, belive it or not, have just been handed a tremendous opportunity to grow as men. That is the beauty of the sport experience. Through the medium of the sport experience, we are all given a tremendous personal opportunity to learn about ourselves. And one may ask, just how good is this football team?

You see, there are only two options to any athletic contest, of course that's winning and losing. Now, no one, and no one in their right mind will hand you victory. You have to earn it. And you have to want it. And someone who both wants it more and performs better on a given day, will get victory, that's the story of and the saga behind Lewisburg, 1972.

Earle Barroll captured it perfectly after the game. He said it distinctly and assertively as hell. "We can't jump into the tank now." And although a shroud hung over the affair, the cheerleaders and the players as well as the media, gave the man his 42nd birthday party at dinner that night. At that party I told myself that whether a winner or a loser, I'm with Mac and this team, I'm with them to the end. Now the students at Massachusetts have to answer that question. But I think you'll see a matured group of football players answer that for you at Fitton Field in Worcester this Saturday afternoon.

Mac wanted to take the blame for this one. But I won't let him. And yes, the locker room resembled a wake at half mast, but it was there that the wound took its first dressing.

"It's just not good coaching," said a near choked up MacPherson. "I went into the well once too often. You can't do it, it's just not sound coaching. It's a cardinal sin but I thought we were hot and perhaps maybe we could do it. Now I've got to live with it right here." (pounds his mid-section)

Mac was alluding to the fact that with 11 minutes to go he parlayed good field position on a coffin corner punt (UMass had poor position all day) and tried for a first down on the fourth and three from the Bison 40. Mark Tripuka's pass was tipped at the line of scrimmage and victory, for the first time all year, began to look uphill.

So Massachusetts ended up with a first and 95 with four minutes left as a result of the tables being turned.

The Bisons punted and Mac possibly made a mistake by not using Pennington on the next to last series, because maybe Peil could have come to life. Maybe he couldn't have, but without the effort that Tripuka turned in, there would have been no 11th hour rally.

But to reiterate to MacPherson, he hit it on the head. "They just plain beat us." Did they ever.

As I sat high above Harvard Stadium I first could sense that we were to click that afternoon; there was fluid present. There was none such at Memorial Stadium in Bison Country. And when you consider that they flooded the zones against us on offense, ran right through our middle, punted away from Schubert and Metallo, picked off six passes, and were mentally ready to play football, yes, misery at Memorial was ought to avert.

Yes, ABC Sports called Lewisburg five times during the course of the travesty. To this date we still don't know what's going to happen, but there was a handsome chance that if UMass got by the Bisons, UMass-Holy Cross would have been ABC's regional game of the week this Saturday. Our cut out of the deal--try $100,000 as clear profit that would have gone directly into the scholarship fund.

Yes, our credentials for the Lambert, New England and Small College ratings were severed a bit, but let's not think of that or TV money, let's think about this football team and where to go from here. They learned a lesson, a valuable one for them, and on top of that a costly one.

But it's not like those damned Olympics, you don't have nearly four years to think about. UMass simply has a tough week in practice to let the sting of "West 84" settle, and when it's over you can bet that the Crusaders will wish they weren't the scapegoats.

So it remains to be seen just how the Minutemen will react. Only time will tell.

And although there was a time in the locker room when the Minutemen wished they had started again, it doesn't take a kind, concerned hostess to let them know that the world didn't stop turning.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

A hard reign's gonna fall.

Recyclable

VOLUME C, ISSUE 43 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1972

NIXON RE-ELECTED

Sweeps Nation

Ticket Splitting Blunts Impact Of Victory

By WALTER R. MEARS (AP Political Writer) - President Nixon swept to towering re-election Tuesday night, burying Democratic challenger George McGovern in one of history's greatest landslides.

But widespread ticket-splitting appeared to be blunting the impact of Nixon's triumph on the fortunes of some other Republican candidates.

The pattern was mixed in an array of close Senate contests.

Illinois' 26 electoral votes pushed Nixon's electoral vote count to the 270 votes he needed for his "four more years" in the White House.

He led for 161 more electoral votes.

In all, Nixon held the lead in 40 states, McGovern in four and the District of Columbia, where he had gained his three electoral votes.

Amid the tight Senate Contests, there was a good omen for Democrats in Kentucky, where they gained what had been a Republican seat.

The victory of Democrat Walter Huddleston diminished what hopes Republicans had that they might ride the Nixon landslide to Senate control for the first time in 18 years.

In the House, where the Republicans needed 39 seats to take over-and never really thought they could do it - partial returns gave them a net pickup of only one.

That was in contrast to the massive margin of the Nixon triumph. The popular vote read this way with 26 per cent of the nation's precincts counted:

Nixon 13,771,158 votes or 64 per cent.

McGovern 7,580,132 votes or 35 per cent.

And despite his triumph, Republican Senate seats were in jeopardy in states such as Maine, Delaware and South Dakota.

In a prime example of the split ticket, Democratic Gov. Robert B. Docking won re-election while Nixon was rolling up 71 per cent of the presidential vote. That was in Kansas.

On the other hand, Nixon's landslide appeared to be helping Republican Senate challenger William Scott in Virginia, where he led Democratic Sen. William B. Spong.

The picture was similar in South Carolina and Oklahoma, for seats now Democratic.

The national picture:

Popular vote, 26 per cent of the voting units: Nixon 13,771,158 or 64 per cent; McGovern 7,580,132 or 35 per cent.

Electoral vote: Nixon carried 24 states with 270 electoral votes and led in 16 states with 161 electoral votes; McGovern carried the District of Columbia with 3 electoral votes and led in 4 states with 33 electoral votes. Needed to win: 270 electoral votes.

Senate at stake 33, majority 51: Republicans won 5 and had 26 holdovers, for a total of 31; Democrats won 2 and had 41 holdovers, for a total of 43. Net gain 1 Democrat with 26 races undecided.

House 435 seats, majority 218: Republicans won 65 seats, Democrats won 121 seats. Net gain 1 Republican with 249 races undecided.

Ironically, Illinois, which assured Nixon's narrow victory over Hubert H. Humphrey four years ago, and sealed his trouncing of McGovern, was a state in which the Democratic nominee had concentrated his campaign.

Nixon was polling 55 per cent of the vote there.

And the pattern was similar in other states that topped the McGovern target list: for example, Ohio, where the President was gaining 60 per cent of the vote, and Pennsylvania, where he was gaining 57 per cent.

Republicans were ahead in Senate races for currently Democratic seats in Virginia, New Hampshire and Oklahoma but their margins were thin.

Democratic nominees led in early returns from three seates with Republican seats up for grabs-Illinois, South Dakota and Delaware.

Elsewhere Republicans and Democrats were leading for Senate seats their parties now hold, except in Louisiana where an independent was ahead in a race for a Democratic seat.

In the House, it was a standoff; neither party had gained seats in the early tabulations, and continued Democratic control was a virtual certainty.

Governors were being elected in 18 states.

Early returns put six Democrats and six Republicans ahead, with no votes tabulated in the other contests.

Even as the votes were counted, Republicans assembled for their anticipated victory celebration at a Washington hotel and claimed a sweep of historic proportions.

Nixon flew back to the White House from California to await the outcome.

As always, there were the election day breakdowns. Voting machine trouble led to court-ordered extension of the polling hours in Butler County, Ohio, and Hudson County, N.J.

The Nixons voted in San Clemente, Calif.

McGovern was in Sioux Falls, S.D.

President Richard Nixon

Local Races At A Glance:

Collins, Reed, Lead In 2nd Hampshire Race, Nolen Close Third

see page six

Olver Leads Barrus In Franklin-Hampshire Senate Race In Early Returns

see page seven

McG, Brooke, Olver, Coolins, Reed, Take Amherst Vote

see page seven

Details page 6-9

'Worthwhile Candidacy': McGovern

Senator George McGovern told a Sioux Falls crowd Tuesday night not to "shed tears" over his defeat. He was speaking in a concession speech after returns showed incumbent President Richard Nixon ahead 66 percent to thirty four percent.

The democratic presidential candidate, smiling to a coliseum full of supporters, called his organization the "loyal opposition."

"If our efforts brought peace just one day sooner, then it was well worth it," he said.

McGovern stressed the reforms in the democratic party and the move toward peace in Vietnam as major accomplishments of the 22-month campaign.

He praised his staff workers by quoting William Butler Yeats: "My glory is to have such good friends."

The first presidential concession speech he ever heard, said McGovern, was one by Adlai Stevenson who quoted an Abraham Lincoln story about a boy who stubbed his toe in the dark. "It hurts too much to laugh," he said, "but I'm too old to cry."

Last week it was reported that McGovern would not ask his supporters to rally behind President Nixon. But he changed his mind over the weekend.

"We won't rally behind policies we abhor," he said. We will support a lasting peace in the world and justice in America, he added.

He said that he hoped that those who were taking part in the election process for the first time were encouraged.

He gave thanks for all who helped him in the campaign.

McGovern, apparently at peace with himself after a 22-month campaign for the presidency, returned to his boyhood home Tuesday to cast his ballot.

Addressing some 500 students and other visitors at Dakota-Wesleyan University McGovern said the one thing that had sustained him through the long campaign was something he saw in the faces of tens of thousands of people with whom he talked.

He said he saw a glow, a hunger for peace, and a longing to make America a better nation.

McGovern cast his ballot in late morning in a tile-floored Sunday-school classroom of Mitchell's Congregational Church. He marked the old-fashioned paper ballot in a two-sided booth while dozens of cameramen and reporters looked on.

McGovern said he had voted a straight Democrat ticket. "I think I exercised good judgment," he said.

TV Watchers Have The Blues

As the Presidential election results came over the television last night, Bluewall beer was purchased in large quantities. (MDC photo by Gib Fullerton)

By BRIAN COYNE

For the most part, the people watching the election returns in the Campus Center last night were an unhappy lot. By 9:30, the networks had projected a Nixon landslide and all the anticipation was over.

There were about seventy-five people watching the returns on the televisions on the first level of the Campus Center. The two sets usually found on that level were in use, plus two sets especially installed in the CC Auditorium for this occasion.

This reporter talked to about twenty-five persons, most of whom were students. All except two were McGovern supporters.

John Maloney, a student, said, "I'm totally, unbelievably shocked. I didn't believe people could be so misguided...I'm worried about what Nixon's mandate will mean for the next four years."

Probably the most popular words used in describing reactions to the election were "disgust" and "disappointment". Another sentiment expressed many times was best put by one who preferred to remain anonymous: "For the first time, I'm proud of Massachusetts." Many people derived consolation from the fact that McGovern carried this state.

One person said she did not vote and now regretted it. "I didn't vote because I didn't feel there was a good enough choice. I wish I had now...I sympathize with the Senator."

Joyce Gillis, a McGovern worker, was disappointed in seeing all the work put in by many people gone to waste.

Some of the more disconsolate spoke of leaving the country. Cynthia Matteus, a UMass graduate, said, "I don't know whether to be totally depressed or move out of the country...McGovern was real...All the rich people are going to stay rich with Nixon...Anybody who is a working-class person knows it is not going to get better."

Others expressed the opinion that the race was decided long ago and never had any doubt as to who would be the victor, Bob Johnson, a McGovern voter, said, "It happened a long time ago with the Eagleton affair. About what I expected." An unidentified Nixon supporter added, "It was more or less the way I thought it would go."

Matt DeVerdi was a student who encountered difficulties at an Amherst polling place and wasn't able to vote. He was greatly disappointed, but looked on the brighter side of life with, "One good thing, he didn't take over the Senate."

James Kelly saw the elections as a reflection of the American people. "It just shows how unenlightened the people are...The vote justifies Watergate."

Obviously, the ratio of McGovern backers to Nixon backers that this reporter found last night in the CC is not truly indicative of the entire campus. It is just a reflection of the many different moods felt by onlookers to the unfolding of Election Day, 1972.

Driving Pony Carts Can Get You Credit

By JAN ELLEN SIMONDS

For those of you who have seen ponies and carts trotting around campus, and have thought (A) it was a hallucination (B) Stockbridge was starting a circus (C) you should watch where you were walking, the only thing you would be right about would be (C).

The ponies are being used by the Animal Science majors for a modular credit course in pony driving. They were originally here being used for research, but two years ago when that project fell off, Mr. Bernard Hilton, the farm superintendent, decided to use them to give students practical experience in working with animals.

Most of the students taking the course are Animal Science majors. Others are urged to sign up for it. However, as Ms. Terry Byrne, an Animal Science major, stated, "Other kids can take it just for the fun of it, provided they sign up in time."

Non-majors (who, by the way, cannot receive modular credit for the course), are not usually aware when the sign-up sheet is posted. However, it is possible to call Mr. Hilton at 5-2452 to see if they are signing people up.

The first question that comes to mind about a course in pony driving is, "Why teach it?" In interviews with Mr. Hilton and his drivers, many reasons were brought out.

Ms. Byrne said, "It's really fun for me because I love working with animals." Another student, Ms. Kace Cavanaugh, said that she felt the class provided a good break from the University routine.

They took me out for a ride and I recommend the course for anyone who wants to just enjoy themselves for an hour or so.

If you aren't terribly good at, or interested in pony driving, Mr. Hilton also gives hayrides for a nominal fee. There are two huge Belgian horses that are used for these and a great big wagon that will take you almost anywhere you want to go. Contact him at 5-2452.

Campus Carousel

Babes, Headlines and Columns

FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES...the lead editorial of Ah La Ha Sa of Albert Lea (Minn.) High School was headlined: "Staff Stresses Desire for Student Participation."

Last lines of the editorial informed that "The Ah La Ha Sa is censored solely by the editor-in-chief. Students are invited to participate in the paper - to exercise their right to communicate as a (sic) citizen and a (sic) human being."

• • • •

HEADLINE OF THE WEEK was discovered in the UTexas Daily Texan: "Modern Panty Raids Leaving Victims Cold."

• • • •

SPEAKING OF WHICH brought us to Randey Schau's column in the Western Herald of Western Michigan U. Stimulated by a visit from the local Community Chest, he wrote, Mr. Schau made a "humble offering' which he entitled "Facts-You-May-Have-Missed-While-Sleeping-On-My-Couch."

His potpurri of goodies included the fact that the Japanese are harvesting testicles of the sperm whale, sold as a delicacy. He also reported the "world's first testicle transplant, performed in Lebanon," on an impotent 28-year-old. And that $37,000,000 was spent in 1971 to advertise the many brands of feminine hygeine.

The most non-sequitur of all, one guesses.

• • • •

LIBERATED? The headline in the Texas A & M Battalion read, "Coeds Feel Like 'Brothers'." It was a sampling of opinion of coeds who are on the former military college campus for the first time.

And on the same page, a female addition to the newspaper staff made her debut with an advice column. Her name? What else but Janet Landers. And the name of her game? "Miss-Information."

How coincidenty can one get?

• • • •

Small Towns

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The four small towns in northern New Hampshire that traditionally report their election returns ahead of everybody else in the nation went 41-8 for President Nixon Tuesday over Democratic Sen. George McGovern.

The breakdown: Dixville Notch - Nixon 16, McGovern 3. Hart's Location - Nixon 12, McGovern 1. Millsfield - Nixon 3, McGovern 0. Ellsworth - Nixon 10, McGovern 4.

U.Mass. Theatre presents
Ronald Ribman's
THE JOURNEY OF THE FIFTH HORSE
Bartlett Aud. 8:30 p.m. Nov. 9-11, 16-18
call 545-2579

Seven Amendments On Ballot

BOSTON (AP) - Seven proposed amendments to the Massachusetts Constitution, including one authorizing the legislature to implement a graduated income tax, were on the statewide ballot in Tuesday's general election.

Other amendments which have generated some controversy include a proposal which would require judges to retire at age 70, and another which would permit horticultural land to be assessed for taxation purposes according to its agricultural use.

Two amendments of a technical nature - one permitting paupers to vote and another writing the 18-year-old vote into the state constitution - also appeared on the ballot.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is on the second floor of the Student Union on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, zip code 01002. Telephones: 545-2550 (news); 545-0344 (sports); 545-0731 (business).

Second class postage is paid in Amherst. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacation, exam periods or holidays. Accepted for mailing under the authority of an act of March 8, 1879, as amended by an act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester or $10.00 per year.

THE ART SHOP
IN THE AMHERST
CARRIAGE SHOPS

"Next to the Pub"
Supplies for the Fine Artist

Amherst Polls Report Heavy Voting

7:30 last evening at the Amherst Fire Station as local voters got their last licks in on the machines. Lines were long all day. (MDC Photo by John Neister)

By PAM PIMPAO

Democrat, Independent, and Republican Headquarters all reported a heavy day at the polls in Amherst. As of 7:45 last night, Democratic Headquarters were still sending cars to bring voters to the polls-though the Republican Headquarters received their last ride calls around 6:00 P.M. Both parties reported 95-99% voter turn-out judging from their respective call-lists; and the Republicans said there were complaints from people who had gone to the polls and waited in 2-1/2 hour lines. A spokesman from Republican Headquarters said, "I met my dentist, he'd been waiting for over an hour, but he had an appointment so he had to come back for a third time."

Along with the driving services offered by Democratic and Republican Headquarters, the Student Senate Transit Service ran a three bus program to cover the area in search of would-be voters. Each bus made approximately 18 runs covering precincts 1, 2, 3, and 7. Sylvan, Puffton Village, Fraternity and Sorority Park, Southwest, Central, Orchard Hill and the Quad were all covered in the Transit Services' bus route.

There was no notable increase in sales at the Peter Pan ticket office due perhaps to the largg number of absentee voters this year. The Student Senate reported 4161 absentee votes in the Cape Cod Lounge over their 7-day voting program which began Oct. 19. The predicted number ran to 4500 when absentee ballots notarized outside the program and out-of-state votes not requiring notarization were included in the count.

Class attendance was normal because most professors did not cancel classes following Chancellor Bromery's veto of the Student Senate recommendation that class be cancelled on election day. Chancellor Bromery acted on the recommendation of the Faculty Senate Rules Committee and Provost Office which voted 4-1 against cancelling.

Budget Office Gets New Head

Dr. Warren W. Gulko has been named director of a reorganized Office of Budgeting and Institutional Studies at UMass, Amherst, Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery announced today.

As the Amherst campus budget director, Gulko acts as the chancellor's representative in all budgetary matters and participates with other principal administrative officers in decision-making on campus budgets and the allocation of campus funds. He has responsibility for the development of the annual Amherst campus budget request and the development of improved data for campus budget planning and management. In addition, he will assist Chancellor Bromery in coordinating all planning areas as they relate to campus program planning and analysis.

Gulko comes to UMass from the National Center for Higher Education Systems in Boulder, Col., where he was director of the development and applications program. Before that he was assistant to the vice-president at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. He is a graduate of San Diego State College with M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from Minnesota and is author of several publications in the area of planning and analysis in higher education.

According to Bromery, "One means of improving the efficient operation of the campus is the integration of the budget process with all programs and objectives on campus. The new Office of Budgeting and Institutional Studies will aid in the integration of planning and budgeting and the improvement of our management capability through timely analysis in accordance with the recommendations of both the Faculty Senate report 'Direction for the Seventies' and the President's 'Future University Report'."

The Chancellor added that "In order to avoid future administrative expansion in Whitmore, we will seek to combine our present closely related administrative functions within the central offices of the campus. We will also make every effort to provide additional administrative support for the various operating units of the campus. We hope to depend more on the capabilities for de-centralized campus administration in the schools, colleges, and other operating units.

Long Silk Scarves A1's In Thailand

NAKORN PHANOM AIR BASE, Thailand (AP) - Long silk scarves trail from the pilots' parachute harnesses as they taxi their planes into position for take off.

With smoke and oil pouring from the engine cowling, the ancient A1 Skyraiders roar down the runway and lift off over the muddy Mekong River toward the North Vietnamese border 65 miles away.

Before long they rendezvous with the squat HH53 Super Jolly Green Giant helicopters, the second partner in what has been called the most daring flying job of the Vietnam war.

The slow-moving Skyraiders and helicopters team up to rescue American pilots shot down in Laos and North Vietnam. Nearly 200 pilots have been saved from prison camps by the rescue team's seat-of-the-pants flying.

Most of the pickups occur over dense jungle, often with intense anti-aircraft fire around them.

The helicopters lower a sling to the grounded pilot while the propeller driven Skyraiders protect the helicopter and downed pilot.

"We usually fly at tree-top level and entice them the enemy to shoot at us. Almost every mission we encounter ground fire," says Lt. Col. Jim Harding, 38, Brookville, Pa., a former Penn State tackle who now commands the 1st Special Operations Squadron at Nakorn Phanom.

"We use a lot of smoke and try to isolate the area with CBU cluster bomb units which are small bomblets, like a grenade.

"We put white smoke white phosphorus on three sides as close to the pilot as possible," Harding explains. "When it's safe, we bring the Jollies in."

"In North Vietnam," he said, "we've lost some pilots we've been talking to on the survival radio. The last you hear is the survivor saying: 'They're coming after me'."

The lumbering, prop-driven Skyraider first came into use in 1945. Many of the pilots on the present rescue operations are younger than their planes.

CARL ANDERSON'S
WINDJAMMER
Restaurant & Lounge Belchertown Rd., Amherst
Daily Luncheon Specials 11:30 - 2 p.m.
★ ★ ★
WEDNESDAY NIGHT is Steak Night
NEW YORK CHOICE SIRLOIN: choice of potatoe, vegetable, hot rolls & butter. Salad bar included. $3.75
Served 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.
. . . LIVE ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY . . .
253-2013 for reservations

ROOM TO MOVE
Campus Drug Drop-In Center
CALL 5-0400
24 HOURS A DAY
7 DAYS A WEEK

Ziff Speaks Tomorrow Night

Mr. Howard Ziff, professor of journalism at UMass, will speak on the topic of "Whither Journalism Education?", tomorrow night at 7:30 in Room 162 Campus enter.

A former investigative reporter for the Chicago Daily News and professor of English at the University of Chicago, Mr. Ziff joined the UMass faculty in 1971, and is presently chairman of the journalism department here.

A meeting of all Alpha Phi Gamma members will immediately follow the program. All APG members, as well as the general public, are invited.

NEW SHIPMENT
PLAID 'BAGGIES'
WEAR HOUSE

WHO'S WHO
can be a junior or senior who has contributed to this campus
in his or her own way
Nominate someone for
Who's Who in American Universities & Colleges
submit nominations to David Booker, Student Senate Office, 1st level, C.C.
Deadline — Friday, Nov. 10

In The Nation And The World

Yesterday Was For The Voters

(AP)-In the hush of the polling booth, the campaign clamor past, America's voters yesterday chose between President Nixon and Sen. George McGovern, his Democratic challenger for the White House.

The polls read: Nixon by a landslide.

But Tuesday was not the day of the pollsters, or of the candidates. It belonged to the voters, perhaps 80 million or more.

And despite advance talk of apathy in the electorate, they were turning out in heavy numbers to record their verdict on the presidency, in 33 Senate contests, in the election of 435 members of the House and of 18 governors.

Some, in the South and sections of the Midwest, made their way through heavy rains to cast their votes.

President Nixon and his wife, Pat, cast the first two ballots at a schoolhouse polling place two blocks from their San Clemente, Calif., home. Then the Nixons flew back to Washington for what Republicans were confident would be an election-night victory celebration.

In Mitchell, S.D., McGovern, who had campaigned until the early morning hours of election day, voted with his wife at the Congregational Church.

"I voted the straight Democratic ticket," McGovern smiled. He also picked up a $20 campaign contribution from an admiring onlooker.

From the brisk November chill of New England to the rains of the upper Midwest and sections of the South to the high plains of Colorado, the voter turnout reports were generally the same: heavy.

The first trickle in a record tide of presidential ballots came shortly after midnight in Dixville Notch, N.H. The count in that mountain hamlet: Nixon 16, McGovern 3.

Republicans hoped for a landslide in which Nixon's coattails might exert enough pull to give them a net gain of five Senate seats, enough for control in a re-elected GOP administration.

But that was a longshot prospect. And even most GOP strategists acknowledged there was no chance they could capture the House, where they needed a net gain of 39 seats.

Ten states with Democratic governors, eight with Republicans, held gubernatorial elections.

Outside the spotlight of the presidential and congressional races, there were thousands upon thousands of other decisions made. In five states, for example, the voters decided whether to alter or eliminate the system of property-tax support of public schools in order to equalize educational financing.

The ballot Nixon marked was two feet long: the process took him more than five minutes in the polling booth. It covered 22 referenda as well as offices from president down.

There were five separate ballots covering all the races and issues at McGovern's polling place in Mitchell, S.D.

For McGovern, it was the end of a 22-month campaign from obscurity to the pinnacle of his party. He said in advance that if defeated, he would not again seek the White House.

To the end, McGovern insisted that he would overturn the pollsters' forecasts and win the election.

He hammered at demands for an end to the war in Indochina, promised a job opportunity for every American, accused Nixon of mismanaging the economy and called the Republican administration the most corrupt in American history.

Nixon did relatively little campaigning-McGovern accused him daily of "hiding in the White House, sitting on top of his Gallup poll."

His only election-eve activity was a taped, 13-paragraph televised pledge to end the war. "We will soon reach an agreement" to that end, he said, telling the voters that Hanoi would be watching to see whether Americans wanted peace with honor or surrender.

English Price Freeze Gets Cold Reception

LONDON (AP) - British housewives flooded a special government watchdog bureau with complaints about price hikes Tuesday as the country's 90-day freeze on wages and prices got off to a troubled start.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government dug in for a dogfight with the Labor party in Parliament over the freeze, which Heath announced Monday as the first phase of a program to put the brakes on Britain's runaway inflation.

Thousands of calls from angry women and confused shopkeepers swamped the hot lines at the Trade and Agriculture ministries only hours after newspapers splashed the telephone numbers on front pages and before a special 30-man team even set up shop.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber warned the hot lines may be busier yet.

"There can be no guarantee of keeping food prices down," he said on television. "It is not possible because we import a lot of our food."

The big markup in stores, with some hikes as high as 20 per cent, came hard on the heels of Heath's clampdown, which carries stiff penalties for violators - shopkeepers who hike prices to make a killing or labor unions which strike for more money - once the freeze becomes law.

But policing prices will be done by consumers themselves. Heath, who still hopes for a voluntary deal with industry and the unions, set up no machinery to monitor prices.

The freeze is expected to become law within a month, after it is approved by Parliament and given the Royal Assent by Queen Elizabeth II.

But even so, the standstill was already in force.

The freeze was expected to bolster the ailing pound sterling and restore Britain's leaky economic structure as the country enters the European Common Market on Jan. 1, but it will hit wage-earners who will be unable to match price rises with higher wages.

Germanys End Cold War

BONN, Germany (AP) — East and West Germany agreed Tuesday to initial a treaty ending their cold war, giving a likely boost to Chancellor Willy Brandt's re-election fight.

The treaty normalizing the two Germany's relations closed a bitter chapter in European history and climaxed Brandt's Nobel Peace Prize-winning policy of easing tension.

Brandt's Cabinet approved the treaty draft and announced it probably will be initialed in Bonn on Wednesday, 11 days before the West German election. East Germany announced acceptance later.

The treaty provides a legal basis for relations, clears the way for the two nations to enter the United Nations, and provides for humanitarian ways of easing the hardships of a divided German people.

"With this treaty we are breaking the ice in which our relationship with the GDR was frozen for many years," Brandt said in a statement.

GDR stands for the German Democratic Republic, East Germany's official name.

Under a compromise treaty formula, Brandt said, Bonn will recognize East German sovereignty but will undercut this by refusing to recognize East Germany as a foreign state.

And the goal of eventual German reunification is kept alive, Brandt said, by an accompanying Big Four declaration reaffirming their rights and responsibilities for all of Germany by virtue of defeating Hitler's Nazi regime in World War II. The U.S.-British-France-Soviet declaration is expected to be published soon.

Informed sources said the still-secret treaty gives a general framework for later, detailed agreements on trade, press, cultural and other exchanges designed to bring the two Germanys closer. Germans living near both sides of the death-strip border will be able to visit each other for the first time.

CBS Strikers Vow Not To Impede Election Coverage

NEW YORK (AP) - Striking technical employees of the Columbia Broadcasting System agreed last night not to intefere with the network's on-the-scene televised coverage of President Nixon's and Sen. George McGovern's election night headquarters.

Earlier, McGovern's headquarters in Washington had announced that the Democratic presidential candidate had decided to bar CBS from his Sioux Falls, S.D., headquarters because of the strike.

But the union of 1,200 cameramen, technicians and engineers said pickets would not appear at either of the presidential candidates' headquarters because of the "importance of the election.

CBS had said during the day that it would forego any "remote" camera-microphone coverage of election sites except for Nixon and McGovern. This included pooled coverage by NBC and ABC.

With the union's decision, the network apparently was free to cover Nixon at the White House, Republican headquarters in Washington and McGovern at a Sioux Falls hotel and a coliseum rally.

In Brief...

CHARGE AGAINST DORCHESTER JUDGE

BOSTON (AP) - The state Supreme Court Tuesday ordered a hearing by one of its justices into charges of "gross judicial misbehavior" made by the Boston Bar Association against Dorchester District Court Judge Jerome P. Troy.

The high court order did not name the justice who will hear the case, but speculation centered on Justice Robert Braucher who is sitting as the court's single justice this month.

The association said Troy had abused bail procedures and violated rules established by District Court Chief Justice Franklin N. Flaschner.

McGOVERN TO REST

THOMAS (AP) - Win or lose, Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern and his wife will travel to St. Thomas Thursday for a post-election rest, a spokesman said. The length of the stay was not announced.

WOMEN PRIESTS

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Leaders of the Episcopal Church in western Massachusetts have voted to abolish obstacles to the ordination of women as priests.

Lay delegates to the 71st Annual Convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Western Massachusetts last weekend voted 64-60 in favor of the resolution, while priests voted 29-28 in favor.

The resolution will now be forwarded to the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, scheduled next fall in Louisville, Ky.

MAMIE VOTES

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) - Mamie Eisenhower arrived at the polls two minutes before they opened Tuesday and, after casting her ballot, told newsmen: "Nothing is certain until all the votes are in."

PAUL McKINLEY
plays at
THE CHEQUERS
TUES. thru SAT. No Cover 9:30 til close

For Alternatives to Abortion
CALL
LIFELINE - 584-8816
or write
LIFELINE
P.O. Box 6
Florence, Mass. 01060

THE DUKE MBA PROGRAM
prepares students to design solutions to problems in the operation and organization of complex economic systems. The curriculum develops mastery of the theory relevant to both solving management problems and avoiding professional obsolescence. The final semester is distinguished by the solution of a significant and contemporary problem of the student's own selection, usually in a participating company.

A representative of Duke's Graduate School of Business Administration will interview prospective applicants at the Career Planning and Placement Office, November 6th. Interested persons should sign up for interviews prior to this date.

Business, Engineering, Mathematics, and Physical Sciences majors are particularly encouraged to apply.

War Continues While Peace Is Delayed

Two 17-year-old girls, arrested as part of what police said was a Viet Cong terrorist ring, are driven through Da Nang streets on the back of a truck recently. Around their necks hang signs with names and circumstances of their arrest as well as a belt of grenades allegedly found on them. (AP Wirephoto)

SAIGON (AP) - Enemy and allied forces maneuvered Tuesday with airlifts and ambushes, broadcasts, battles and bomb strikes while Vietnamese waited for word of peace developments and the U.S. presidential election results.

Giant military and civilian cargo planes swarmed in and out of Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport continuing what sources aid was shaping up as the biggest airlift of the Indochina war.

The planes delivered more than 700 tons of parts such as aircraft engines and propellers and support equipment aimed at stocking the South Vietnamese air force for the months after the United States withdraws.

U.S. B52 bombers and tactical jets struck in all four countries of Indochina in an effort to thwart enemy troop and supply buildups.

The Air Force announced the loss of the third $15-million F111 fighter-bomber in less than six weeks.

The swing-wing F111 went down before dawn Tuesday at an unknown location after starting its computer-guided low-level run at a target in North Vietnam, the U.S. Command said.

The command also announced that a Navy A7 jet was shot down Monday in the northern part of North Vietnam's panhandle.

All three crewmen of the two planes were listed as missing.

Hanoi's official new agency complained that U.S. warplanes have been attacking populated areas in the panhandle of North Vietnam. Hanoi radio broadcast its first comment on the presidential election. Quoting the Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan, the broadcast said President Nixon "shows himself the representative of the most perfidious and bellicose forces of agression."

In South Vietnam, U.S. sources said North Vietnam is rushing troops into South Vietnam and rebuilding base camps across the border in Cambodia in a bid to strengthen its negotiating hand.

As many as 5,000 soldiers of a North Vietnamese division that withdrew to Cambodia after taking heavy losses in earlier fighting are believed to have moved back into the region around Saigon and the Mekong Delta to the southwest, the sources reported.

The North Vietnamese apparently are concentrating more on importing and stockpilling supplies near the border than on moving in mass toward Saigon, the sources added.

However, enemy forces staged two ambushes about 25 miles north of the capital. Field sources said they knocked out one armored personnel carrier and one truck carrying a score of men.

Government troops were on the move too, striking near and across the Cambodian border in a joint air-ground operation and pushing westward from the South Vietnamese foothold at Quang Tri, 19 miles below the old demilitarized zone.

USSR Marks 55th Anniversary

MOSCOW (AP) - Tanks, missiles, troops and brigades of citizens filed through Red Square in a well-rehearsed demonstration Tuesday of the Communist Party's political monopoly and military might.

General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev and other top party leaders stood in a light snow atop the red-granite mausoleum of Vladimir Ilych Lenin to review the traditional parade, highlight of the Soviet Union's most sacred holiday.

It marks the 55th anniversary since Lenin's Bolsheviks seized power Nov. 7, 1917, and set up the Communists as the sole political power and overseers of virtually all activities in this authoritarian state.

"All power to the Soviets," proclaimed a huge poster on the State Department Store fronting Red Square. It served as a backdrop for the soldiers, sailors and marines of the Moscow garrison goose-stepping across the broad square.

Then came the clattering, olive-drab parade of military hardware, ranging from tanks and armored personnel carriers to intercontinental ballistic missiles.

The parade stepped off as millions of Americans were heading to the polls to vote for the candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties and a couple of lesser ones - including the Communist party - in the quadrennial presidential election.

The coincidence of dates of these two national events demonstrated some of the marked differences between the world's two superpowers, pledged recently to better mutual relations.

The Soviet defense minister, Marshal Andrei A. Grechko, took note of these differences in a six-minute speech before ordering the parade to begin. But his denunciation of unnamed "imperialists" was relatively mild and in keeping with the Soviets' policy of relaxation with the West.

Ruled Unfair Labor Practice

WASHINGTON (AP) - A unanimous Supreme Court Tuesday ruled that it is an unfair labor practice for an employer to fire a worker solely for taking part in a strike.

Four men dismissed from the International Van Lines outlet in Santa Maria, Calif., were ordered reinstated with five years' back pay.

At issue is a distinction between workers who strike for economic reasons and those who walk out in protest of what they believe are unfair labor practices.

When the Teamsters Union began a widespread organizing effort in Santa Maria, Robert and Manuel Vasquez, Richard Dicus and Salvador Casillas, all employes of the moving company, signed up to join.

Underworld Financier Arrested In Miami

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Reputed underworld financial genius Meyer Lansky, denied asylum by six countries was released Tuesday on $650,000 bond after his arrest by FBI agents.

Lansky, 71, was met by agents who boarded a Braniff airliner when it arrived at Miami International Airport from Panama, ending a two-day aerial odyssey.

The agents escorted Lansky from his first-class seat through customs and to the FBI office for fingerprinting.

Several hours later Lansky appeared with his attorney, David Rosen, before U.S. Magistrate Michael J. Osman who set the bond.

"He is not a well man," said Rosen. "It becomes rather apparent there is no place for him to go now."

Dougald McMillan, head of the U.S. Justice Department's organized crime strike force here, told Osman that the circuitous route Lansky took from Israel to Miami indicated "he did not return voluntarily" and thus warranted a heavy bond.

Osman ordered Lansky to post a $200,000 bond on a federal tax evasion charge and $50,000 on a criminal contempt charge, both indictments returned in Miami.

The magistrate then set recognizance bonds of $200,000 each on indictments returned against Lansky in Las Vegas and New York involving charges of interstate transportation in aid of racketeering.

In setting bond, Osman required as one condition of Lansky's possible release that he stay within Dade and Broward counties.

Rosen told the magistrate that Lansky sought asylum through South America "because, I imagine, a man his age just did not want to face up to the charges."

Lansky left Tel Aviv, Israel, where his application for citizenship was rejected on Sunday, five days before the government-set deadline for his expulsion on grounds his continued presence "might endanger public welfare."

He flew from Tel Aviv to Zurich and then to South America, reportedly offering $1 million to any country which would grant him asylum.

But Lansky was turned away in succession by officials in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Asuncion, Paraguay; La Paz, Bolivia; Lima, Peru; and Panama. He did not carry the $1 million when he was searched here, officials said.

Lansky went to Israel in July 1970.

LUNCH SPECIALS
HADLEY PIZZA & SUB
next to McDonald's in Northampton
King St.
Mon - Wed — Buy 2 get 3 Pizza or Spagetti
Mon - Fri Free Soda with any purchase.
GRINDERS 39¢ and up PIZZA 99¢ and up
584-9602

Collins, Reed Take Lead In Rep Race

Second Rep. Hampshire Race

Town	Collins D	Nolan (x) D	Reed R	Whitlock R (x) incumbent
Amherst	5,601	2,871	4,290	2,564
Belchertown
Granby	891	1,120	697	983
Hadley
Pelham	217	163	228	253
South Hadley
Ware
	Total 6,709	Total 4,154	Total 5,215	Total 3,800

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

Democratic candidate James G. Collins, 26, of Amherst and Republican Nat Reed, 41, also of Amherst, took an early lead last night in unofficial returns for the two state representative seats in the 2nd Hampshire District, but the Democratic incumbent James Nolen was expected to make a strong run for one of the slots.

Unofficial returns including Amherst, Granby, Pelham, and one precinct in South Hadley and Belchertown reported: Collins, 7,511; Reed, 5,637; Nolen, 4,928; and William "Gerry" Whitlock, 44, of Belchertown, 4,284.

The 2nd Hampshire District includes Amherst, Belchertown, Granby, Hadley, Pelham, South Hadley and Ware.

Collins and Reed, both newcomers to the political arena, ran one-two in Amherst picking up 5,814 votes and 4,469 votes, respectively, while Nolen, 39, of Ware and Whitlock trailed 3,049 and 2,700 votes, respectively.

Collins said he was confident of victory while Nolen, who is looking for his eight consecutive term in the House said, "Reed is going to run short," and added that he and Collins would be the eventual victors.

Nolen said South Hadley and its some 9,000 registered voters, who are heavily Democratic, would prove to be the deciding factor in the election.

With only one precinct reporting in South Hadley the count read: Nolen, 500; Collins, 467; Whitlock, 240; and Reed, 189.

Nolen, an attorney, had been conducting his seven-town campaign for support with signs, appearances at various functions and conferences with Democratic town committees.

Nolen said throughout the campaign that he was sticking to his record and challenging his opposition to develop issues concerning his legislative record.

Collins is assistant director of the Upward Bound Program, and organization established to render educational opportunities for low income youths.

He is a 1968 graduate of UMass with a B.A. in Political Science. He was also a past president of the UMass Student Senate from 1967 to 1968.

Collins has spoken out in favor of a graduated and progressive state income tax, welfare reform, increased aid to local school systems, and a new agrarian-based tax to protect the small Western Massachusetts farmer.

Collins has spoken out in favor of a graduated and progressive state income tax, welfare reform, increased aid to local school systems, and a new agrarian

Collins conducted a door-to-door campaign including a canvassing operation to over 2,000 registered voters at UMass. "I don't have a student vote in my hip pocket any more than anyone else," he said during the campaign. "I have to work for it just like the other candidates."

Reed is serving his sixth year as a member of the Amherst and Regional School Committees and is a founding director of the Amherst Committee for A Better Chance. He is a former president of the Amherst Center School PTA and a member of the Advisory Board of Holyoke Community College.

He is also vice-chairman of the Republican Town Committee, and a member of Amherst's Traffic Circulation Committee. He was appointed by Governor Francis W. Sargent to the recent Legislative Commission on State Fairs.

The Amherst resident supported the re-ordering of state funding to provide for more "human services," and added that the state should encourage growth of business for more jobs rather than finding more money for welfare.

He said he favors a graduated income tax, but said he will resist disproportionate tax burdens on any income group and has pledged to work to reduce the heavy tax burden on real estate.

Massachusetts Stands Alone

By MARTY KELLEY

Northampton-Massachusetts stands pretty much alone in the nation today. The thought of it and the reasons for it don't seem to bother both Russ Carrier and Lisa Baskin, coordinators for the McGovern campaign in this city. To be specific both are quite proud to be residents of the Commonwealth.

"Well, we might as well secede from the Union," said a tired but still humorous Carrier last night at a post election gathering at the residence of newly elected State Representative Edmund McColgan, on South Street. But both politicians expressed that although their candidate George McGovern was dealt if not the worst political defeat in history, they were still proud to be residents of the state that stood behind the South akota Senator.

Carrier and Baskin both proceeded to go over and to analyze the overwhelming McGovern defeat.

"It was the biggest piece of political chicanery that this country has ever seen," sad a near bitter Carrier. "Nixon convinced the Blue Collar worker, the Grain market, and the Bankers that he would help them." Carrier went on to say that he thought that the average Democrat voter "puked" when he got to the polls. In other words he felt that this election more than any other election proved that the real hard line Democrat had reservations about the ticket.

This was partly due to the pre-election polls. Said Baskin, "It became obvious that the polls were having a tremendous affect on the integrity of the average Democrat." A strong Drive for the Democrats for Nixon also hurt McGovern but Baskin went on to explain the role of welfare and the American pocketbook in the campaign.

"Nixon was easily able to channel and easily threaten those that are most easily hurt in the pocket. He played for this angle in the campaign and he got it," said Miss Baskin. But a distortion of McGovern's stand on welfare by the media was another crucial issue that went before the American public.

"McGovern's welfare proposal, reiterated Carrier, is rather reminiscent of the WPA. He wanted to create jobs. He wanted Americans to have dignity. He didn't want people to jump on the welfare wagon." Apparently many Democratic voters thought he did. Carrier added that the media circulated the statistic that McGovern was advocating that 47% of our nation's families go on welfare. The statistic was in vogue until it became too critical to erradicate.

But why was the McGovern campaign so successful here in Massachusetts? Lisa Baskin, the former Chairwoman for the McCarthy campaign in this city four years ago, said that in the Commonwealth, because of the large labor force of college and high school students, the campaign was able to be taken to the people. Because of time and money, it was not as successful in other states. Also she added that the aura and the re-election image of the President were forceful factors.

Miss Baskin, who has now suffered over a decade of political degregation, ushered a plea of hope for tomorrow. "Thank God for the high school students of the day, for there is hope for the future." She went on to praise the high school students over the collegians because of the difference in interests.

Baskin implied that the college student has too many directives which do in fact prevent him from becoming a full-fledged politician. The high schoolers definitely have more time to get involved with the political issues of the day. This generation now has automatically grown into the political arena of its time.

Carrier again added a few examples of just how he thought that Nixon was the master politician that he has proven over the years that he is. "He made people afraid of McGovern. He used such sidetracking issues such as amnesty and abortion to the emotional voters. Americans weren't voting with they're head, but with their gut," stated Carrier.

So it's another four years of waiting for the Democrats who assembled to talk politics here last night. But both Baskin and Carrier admitted that time, and only energy within time, will bring the Democratic Party back to more lofty heights.

Amherst Results

President	68
Jenness-Pulley SW	6346
McGovern-Shriver D	2915
Nixon-Agnew (x) R
U.S. Senator
Brooke (x) R	5890
Droney D	2147
Gurewitz SW	509
U.S. Representative
Conte (x) R	5449
State Senator
Barrus (x) R	2146
Olver D	6472
State Representative
Collins D	5814
Nolan D	3049
Whitlock R	2700
Reed R	4469
Councillor
James A. Mullane (x) R	2000
Edward M. O'Brien (x) D	4967
Register of Probate and Insolvency
Frank Tuit (x) D	4711
County Commissioners
Donald Madsen R	3044
John Breguet (x) D	4184
Paul Dineen D	4398
County Treasurer
Howard Banner (x) R	2465
William O'Connor D	4798

(x) incumbent
D Democrat
R Republican

Referendum questions

	YES	NO
1) Tax revaluation of farmland according to use.	7415	669
2) Amendment to bring the state constitution in line with the national constitution allowing 18-year-olds to vote.	8037	739
3) Amendment to remove prohibition against paupers voting.	7724	792
4) To permit the state legislature to permit the state to make loans to state residents attending any institution of higher education.	7348	1385
5) Environmental bill of rights.	7894	806
6) Graduated income tax.	6123	2596
7) To require judges to retire at age 70.	7080	1549
8) To approve lowering the drinking age to age 18.	6711	1926
9) To permit prayer in state schools.	5164	3383
10) To cut the size of the legislature from 240 to 160	5613	2254

Franklin-Hampshire Senate Race

19 out of 42 towns reporting
x incumbent

Barrus-	R	x	-8,815
Olver-	D		-12,578

McGovern Brooke, Olver, Collins Carry Amherst

By STEVE SECHE

Senator George McGovern led a strong Democratic showing in election returns from the town of Amherst yesterday; Democrats John Olver and James Collins carried their respective state Senator and Representative races, while incumbent Republican U.S. Senator Edward Brooke emerged with a commanding lead in his attempt to retain his senate seat. Republican Nat Reed, ran second behind Collins in the race that will elect two state representatives from the Second Hampshire District, which includes Amherst.

Amherst residents voted in favor of all referendum questions on the ballot.

In other local races, Democrat Edward O'Brien led James Mullane in the contest for Councillor; Paul Dineen (D) held a slim lead over John Breguet (D) in the race for County Commissioner; and William O'Connor (D) led Republican Howard Banner in the race for County Treasurer.

